The speaker, in referring to the late Pope Pius IX, used such terms as "narrow" and "stupid." He spoke of the "pretense to holiness and nastiness" of Rome; blamed the priests for illiteracy among the inhabitants, and said that the government and Protestant schools were enlightening the people there.

Dr. Tipple took up "Italy of the Italians." He said that it was on September 20, 1870, when power was wrested from the church, that Italians first came to own their country. Before that time, he stated, it was owned by the people of different countries and the Popes. Speaking of modern Rome he said:

"There are plenty of little things to annoy and plenty of big things to captivate. But after you have left the city with its pretense to holiness and its hotbed of nastiness, you will find that your heart strings are tied to her and you want to go back."

Travelers are startled, the doctor said, at the great changes that have been wrought, not only in Rome, but throughout the country. Modern Italy was struggling to realize itself, he stated, and added:

"Thirty-five million souls are facing not the past, but the future, and when we realize what that past is we do not wonder at it."

The speaker then went on to tell something of the history of the country, leading up to the events of 1870. He said: "Pope Pius IX, kindly, childishly pleasing, narrow, shrewd about little things, stupid about big things, was writing charades when the soldiers were battering down the walls."

"Up to 1870 the schools were in the hands of the priests. Illiteracy ran from sixty-five to almost 100 per cent. Commissioners appointed found that the ignorance of the people was appalling. But now all is changed. Italy has intellectually alive. The government and Protestant schools are lifting the country out of its petty provincialism."

The Methodist pastor referred to the King as being "worthy of his illustrious father," and "wise in his administration." Then he went on to say: "The most serious situation in Italy today arises from the fact that she has no religion. The country is menaced by this condition."

Dr. Tipple told of outbursts against the Vatican and of the alleged large losses in membership in the Catholic Church, in the smaller districts, he said, the people were more or less ruled by priests, but in the larger cities, he declared, few men are left in the church. The worst of the situation, he declared, was that the people were becoming atheists. Rome, the speaker stated, ascribed losses in the Catholic Church to "the fact that Italy is progressive, while the church is stationary."

"Italy says to the church," the speaker went on, "You must come up to us in the twentieth century; the church says to Italy, 'You must come back to us in the middle ages.' Neither side obeys; so there you are.

"The Methodist church is not in Italy primarily to fight the Roman church. The Methodist church is not in Spain, and the Roman church is having her troubles there. Neither is the Methodist church in other countries where the Roman church has her troubles. Her trouble is intelligence—scientific investigation challenging the virtue of her mediaevalism. Another reason for antagonism against the Catholic church in Rome is her own antagonism against Italy's government. An Italian flag is never displayed in a Catholic church. The King is an excommunicant. The Italians, feeling that they had to make a choice between church and State, have chosen the latter. Italy is to have a religion if she is to fulfill the destiny of which she is dreaming. This is the opportunity of Protestantism."

Dr. Tipple declared that Italy has between 25,000 and 30,000 Protestants and that his church numbers between 200 and 400 members.

EMPLOYEES OF P. S. C. ENJOY ANNUAL OUTING

When Ed Britton finished his little speech after the coffee had been passed at the outing of the P. S. C. Association on Saturday afternoon, Judge William H. Runyon's name was wildly cheered. The occasion was the annual social event of the employes of the Public Service Corporation. In the 100-yard sprint on Saturday afternoon Frank Evans, of the main office on Park avenue, won in the excellent time of 11⅘ seconds, but when it came to burning up the ground with their automobiles it was hard to tell which was the master between the drivers of Henry Apgar's "Git Thar" or Ed Varian's "Bin Thar." All time records for the park were knocked out.

In a baseball game played between nines representing the Second street office and the Park avenue management the Second street contingent won out by a score of 6 to 4. The feature of the afternoon was the bake. Irving Neighbor was its author and some fifty of the employes of the P. S. C. joined in a few cheers for Irving and for Timbo's restaurant.

RALLY DAY EXERCISES AT TRINITY REFORMED

A new record in attendance was made Sunday afternoon at the Trinity Reformed church Sunday school, when 510 members took part in the dedication and rally day exercises. There were about ten classes with a perfect attendance when he roll call by classes was called.

The dedication of the two new rooms in the Sunday school was made by Rev. John Y. Broek after invocation had been offered by Rev. Edward Read. The dedication was read by Rev. Mr. Broek and the responses were made by those present.

Following the dedication, Miss Adele Freeman sang a solo. The other features of the exercises were an address by Rev. Royal A. Stout, a cornet solo by Rev. Stout, roll call by class and the distribution of gifts. When the roll call was called, every class responded.

Superintendent F. E. Smith assisted by Horace J. Martin were in charge of the exercises and it is due to their efforts that the success of he exercises is due.

Graduation exercises of pupils from the different departments will be held next Sunday.

PYTHIAN GRAND LODGE TO HOLD SESSION HERE

Grand Chancellor Commander Lewis Drucker, of Elizabeth, has called a session of the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, to be held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., this city, Friday night, when he and his staff will confer the grand lodge degree on the past chancellors who present themselves at that time. This is the first time that such a session has been held here, but as there are a number who cannot attend the Grand Lodge session to be held at Trenton in February, Mr. Drucker has divided the State into four sections and Plainfield has been selected as one of those places for a meeting.

The fact that the grand lodge will meet here, will attract a large number of knights from this section of the State and Perseverance Lodge will entertain the visitors in its usual generous style. After the work of the evening there will be a banquet and an entertainment. Already plans for the Grand Lodge session in Trenton are being perfected and it is predicted that it will be the largest gathering in the history of the order.

I. H. BOEHM BUYS VALUABLE BUSINESS SITE

The Catherine Brower estate at 114-122 Park avenue, which is now occupied by Frank Casey, the undertaker; Alfred Seidel, the barber, and other tenants, has been sold to I. H. Boehm, who was formerly engaged in the dry goods business here. The deal was made by Albert Lederer. Although the purchase price cannot be learned, it is said to be a record one for business property.

When the leases of the present tenants expire, Mr. Boehm will tear down the old buildings and erect in their place one large handsome modern business block. This property adjoins other property owned by Mr. Boehm and which is leased by Tepper Bros. as a dry goods store. The leases have two or three years to run.

P. C. C. PLAYERS TIE IN "SWATFEST" CONTEST

The "swatfest or elimination" contest at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, was a novel event, and more than 30 players engaged in the competition for a cup offered by Stuart H. Patterson. The rules were that the players making the highest scores were eliminated at the various holes, until the one making the lowest score at the eighteenth hole was declared the winner.

There was a tie for first honors between Leighton Calkins and H. R. Stockton, and they will play off the tie probably before next Saturday. The event proved a most unusual one and excited great interest as the different players were eliminated at one hole or another during the competition. The competition proved to be so popular that it is likely similar ones will be arranged in the future.

The course was thronged with players throughout the day, and the clubhouse was also the scene of much gaiety, where a large number of members and friends remained for luncheon or dinner and the dance in the evening.

The names of the entrants, their handicaps and the holes at which they were eliminated, are as follows: Dudley H. Barros, 3, W. F. Merrill, 17, 1st hole; Percey Stewart, 8, A. A. Tilney, 11, 2d hole; E. J. Patterson 13, T. W. Ashewell, 0, 3d hole; L. H. Miller, 18, Graf, 17, 4th hole; 4th hole; D. G. Weems, 18, G. F. Earl, 12, 5th hole; A. W. Kleinecke, 17, S. P. Wood, 13, 6th hole; J. R. Greason, Jr., 11, H. S. Brown, 17, 7th hole; H. J. Cochran 17, H. F. Fox, 12, 8th hole; S. H. Patterson, 10, 9th hole; W. Kings, 18, 10th hole; J. A. Lane, 10, George M. Holstein, 14, 10th hole; E. P. Goodwin, 10, D. W. Taylor, 13, 11th hole; C. B. Morgan, 5, F. C. Talmadge, 4, 12th hole; H. D. Hibbard, 6, J. E. Erickson, 7, 13th hole; W. Lester Glenney, 3, C. C. Bird, 10, 14th hole; R. G. Morse, 9, W. T. Kaufman, 11, 15th hole; G. S. Clay, 13, Wylie Brown, 13, 16th hole; W. F. Glenney 3, M. J. Dumont, 6, 17th hole; H. R. Stockton, 7, Leighton Calkins, 5, tie.

FAULTY CONSTRUCTION CAUSES HOLES IN STREET.

Excavations for the new sewers on East Front street between Berckman and Second avenue have revealed the cause of holes which have made their appearance in this much traveled thoroughfare. In some places it has been found that the macadam for resistance should be at least six or more inches deep.

During the next few days Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett will put a force of men to work filling in the holes which have increased in number on this street and hopes to have them filled in and rolled level within two weeks.

One who noticed this rather shallow top surface and in order to satisfy his curiosity as to why the stone was only two or three inches deep put the question up to the commissioner with the result that the above explanation of holes in one of the most traveled roads in the city became plain.

Several of the streets and avenues were laid with macadam years ago notably Park avenue and the work was done so shoddy that today it is practically level, only an occasional depression being met with. Considering the great traffic on this avenue the surface has worn remarkably well. On East Front street depression of depression may be found between Watchung avenue and the scene of the present sewer operations, but these will soon be fixed to the satisfaction of those who have to travel along that route.

SOMERSVILLE WAS EASY

"WARRY" IN FINE FORM.

McLaughlin Gave a Great Exhibition as a Slab Artist, and He also Made a Home Run.

The Plainfield baseball team smothered the Somerville nine in the first battle of the four-game series between these two teams at the Somerville aggregation's grounds Saturday afternoon. There was a large crowd of rooters from this city and Somerville and their expectations of seeing a fight for blood were entirely visionary, for the local boys played like leaguers and the opposing team had an off day. But the victory of the Plainfield team was largely due to the great twirling of Warry McLaughlin, who had everything that the Somerville boys couldn't hit and then some. Warry also distinguished himself by pounding one of Clinton's dope balls over the right field fence for a homer in the second inning.

Doerflinger's great southpaw used his head as well as his arm and bat, and pitched himself out of several tight holes. One of these embarrassing situations came in the second round, when he let two men walk and McDonald singled, thus filling the bases. Grimes, the next batter up, hit a speedy one to Warry, who threw the runner out at the plate and Nelson doubled up Grimes at first. Warry then struck the next man out. Jack Martin was the other distinguished star for the local bunch. The speedy short stop gobbled up eleven chances in his territory without making a blunder, and nearly all of his opportunities were hard ones.

Clinton was as wild as a hawk in the opening round, and Plainfield started off with three runs. Brit Martin got a pass, Boyd sacrificed him to second, Emery walked and Jack Martin got a life. Then Clinton tried to catch Emery off second and the ball went into centerfield, thus letting three men come home. In the second inning, the boys from the city beautiful tacked another count on their score when Warry made the circuit on a walk after clouting the ball over the fence.

With two down in the third, Carlstrom singled, stole second, and added another tally for the Plainfield team when Schott singled through second base. The next scoring done by the local bunch was a cluster of three runs in the sixth. Warry made the Somerville fans sit up and take notice when he sent the ball sailing toward the left field fence, but the spheroid hit the obstruction only six inches below another home run. As it was, the Plainfield twirler got only two sacks. The Barnes brought him home on a single to right. Schott sacrificed him to second and Brit Martin got a life on Felder's choice. Two errors by Torpey then let Barnes and Brit come galloping across the pan. Three clean singles in the ninth added another tally to the Plainfield score.

It looked like a shut-out for the opposing team, but in the third inning they got on from a Felder's choice and Swanson stepped in the way of one of Warry's fast inshoots. The Plainfield slab artist passed McDonald to take a chance of Craig, but the Plainfield boy was there with the necessary hit and brought home the bacon to the Somerville team.

MISS BUGDEN'S WEDDING

WAS A DOUBLE CEELBRATION.

Her Parents Observe Their Thirty-Fifth Wedding Anniversary the Same Evening at Their Home.

Miss Mary Tilden Bugden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Bugden, and Daniel Angus Scurry, of Carbondale, Pa., were married at 7:30 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents, 68 Randolph road, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from Albany, N. Y., New York, Rahway, Plainfield and Carbondale, Pa. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Mrs. William Poeller, of Orange, as matron-of-honor, and the best man was Robert McMillan, of Carbondale. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Immediately following the ceremony, the couple received congratulations and supper was served.

The bride was gowned in chiffon bride over mesaline satin, trimmed with baby irish lace and carried a bridal bouquet. The matron-of-honor wore an embroidered gown over green silk, and she carried white asters. The flower children were Jack and Mary Head, of Rahway, former pupils of the bride, when she taught school at Rahway. The ushers were Frank McCullough, Willard W. James, William D. Houghton and Leon M. Hannford, of this city.

A feature, making the affair of double interest, was that the bride's parents also celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of their wedding yesterday, and they, too, received congratulations. Mr. Scurry's gift to the bride was a pearl and diamond necklace, and the wedding march, from Mendelssohn, was played by Miss Matilda Geise-High, of Rahway.

The home was elaborately decorated for the occasion. In the parlor there was an attractive arrangement of screens and autumn leaves, forming a bower beneath which the couple stood during the ceremony. This decorative scheme was carried out in the dining room.

The bride received a large number of gifts, including silverware, cut-glass, furniture, linen, etc. Later in the evening the couple left on a wedding trip, after which they will reside at Carbondale, where the groom is engaged in the jewelry business. He is one of the prominent residents of that city. The bride was a teacher in the Rahway public schools for several years and is popular in a large circle of friends.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF JAMES W. RALPH HELD.

The funeral services of James W. Ralph were he'd yesterday afternoon from the late home at Mt. Bethel and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including many of the older residents. Mr. Ralph was well known throughout Somerset county, having been a member of the county Democratic committee. He was a mason by trade. He died on Saturday after an illness of several months.

Rev. Peter Gibb, pastor of the Baptist church, Millington, conducted the services yesterday, during which he spoke of the exemplary life of the departed. The burial was at the cemetery in Mt. Bethel, the bearers being chosen from among Mr. Ralph's neighbors.

Miss Hagan Surprised.

Miss Alice Hagan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hagan, of 417 Spruce street, was tendered a surprise party Monday afternoon in honor of the fourth anniversary of her birthday. Twenty-five of her young friends were present to enjoy a program of music and games. Miss Hagan received a number of gifts. Refreshments were served during the afternoon.

Bride and Groom Visiting Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goeller, who were married at Greensburg, Pa., last Monday, were guests of friends and relatives here yesterday. Mr. Goeller, who is the son of Mrs. H. A. Bergen of Arlington avenue, formerly lived here. He is now connected with the State constabulary of Pennsylvania. His bride was Miss Mabel May Connell, of Point Pleasant.

Removes to New York.

W. J. Counihan bade adieu to the city as a resident yesterday by removing his household goods to New York. His home will be at 149th street and Riverside Drive. Mr. Counihan has leased his Park avenue residence to M. S. Homan, of New York.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS NEAR TROLLEY TRACK

James Caulfield Jr., of Johnston avenue, was found lying unconscious beside the trolley tracks at Second street and Jackson avenue at 11 o'clock last night, and was taken in that condition to his home. A cursory examination of the man at his home did not reveal any bruises nor did he appear to be suffering from any injuries this morning when Captain Frederickson, of the police department, saw him. No physician was called.

According to the story told by two men who were with Caulfield on the car, there was some trouble with the conductor regarding the payment of fare. All three men, the police say, were more or less under the influence of liquor, and it is the supposition that Caulfield fell off the car unnoticed by his friends or the conductor. George Scribner, of 611 East Sixth street, found the prostrate figure and notified the police. It was said by the police that Fred Gutman and Edward Heath, of Scotch Plains, were Caulfield's companions.

FONDNESS FOR LIQUOR GETS THREE IN TROUBLE

There was an array of prisoners at police headquarters this morning all of the overnight variety and a considerably mixed collection. First there was Margaret Baker, of Paterson, who has been here before and always has had an excuse for her condition. This time she came to visit friends, but they moved away and in the absence of the latter the disappointment she drank freely. She was first found in the women's room of the North avenue station partially disrobed. At 8 o'clock she was found helpless on North avenue and Plainfield avenue and her removed to police headquarters. She was given another chance to get back to Paterson by Judge Runyon this morning.

Edward Washington, colored, who has the record of not missing a year in the past five years of getting into the clutches of the police on the charge of drunkenness, was up before the judge again this morning. He promised the court that he would never offend again, and the judge promised him a trip down to the county jail if he did. William G. DeMeza, who was referred to by the judge as his probable successor, was present and took a note of the two guarantees.

Jacob Saylor, who claimed to hail from Fineville, Pa., and who was walking home after a debauch in Newark, became insolent when he was refused food at some houses in East Third street yesterday afternoon and when he applied at the home of former Patrolman Theodore Martin, he declared that he wanted some tea and cake and wanted it quick. He was escorted to headquarters in the patrol wagon, where his appetite was not satisfied. He was arraigned this morning and Judge Runyon permitted him to go on to Fineville.

MISS E. V. DeCAMP NOW MRS. JOHN RALPH EVANS.

Miss Everette Virginia DeCamp, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo DeCamp, formerly of North Plainfield, and John Ralph Evans, of East Orange, were quietly married at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents in Westfield, by Rev. William Irwin Sterling, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of that place. There were no attendants, and the ceremony was witnessed by only the relatives and a few friends.

The bride and groom formerly resided at Chester, Morris county, and the former has many friends here where she has visited frequently and where her parents lived for many years. After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in the Oranges. Mr. Evans is engaged in business in New York.

Y. M. C. A. Concert October 20.

Announcement is made that the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, under the leadership of Martin A. Korff, will give its first concert at the association hall, Thursday night, October 20, and admission will be free. An offering will be received during the evening, according to the usual custom. The orchestra is now holding frequent rehearsals and a fine program is assured.

Will Hold Rally Day Exercises.

The Sunday school teachers of the Temple Baptist church met last night and decided to hold rally day exercises Sunday afternoon with a special program. There will be graduation exercises and presentation of diplomas. L. W. Randolph, as superintendent of the school, will have charge of the program.

WALTER J. TRAVIS HERE TO ESTABLISH AUTO CONCERN IN SO. AMERICA

Golf Champion on the Plainfield Country Club Course Today.

ATTRACTS LARGE GALLERY.

Guest of Leighton Calkin, Local Club President, at Luncheon and Resumes the Game this Afternoon.

Walter J. Travis, winner of the British championship, and winner of the American national event three times, is the guest of Leighton Calkins, president of the Plainfield Country Club, today, and will try to beat the best record for the course. He played a round of 18 holes this morning and is going over the course this afternoon again. As was to be expected, Mr. Travis attracted a large gallery, more than fifty golfers following the well known player on his rounds. This is the first time that Mr. Travis has visited the local links and his presence here has aroused considerable interest.

This morning Mr. Travis was joined in the play by Mr. Calkins, R. S. Rowland and J. Whitney Baker. The totals for the morning round did not offer any great surprises in the way of breaking records. Mr. Travis and Mr. Calkins were tied for the first eighteen holes with a score of 77, while Mr. Rowland's card showed an 81 and Mr. Baker's card an 84. It was an ideal day for the game, the weather being a trifle cooler and more conducive to good golfing. It is expected that Mr. Travis will do his best work this afternoon, having become better acquainted with the course on his morning round. He made some remarkably fine drives this morning and his putting was the admiration of the gallery.

Following the morning round, Mr. Travis was the guest of Mr. Calkins at dinner. There were a number of friends present to meet the champion player during the intermission. Mr. Travis expressed himself as well pleased with the course and commented upon its excellent condition.

Considering that Mr. Travis was not acquainted with the course, his playing was considered excellent. He had a little hard luck coming in, requiring six strokes on the thirteenth hole. He made a total of 36 going out and 41 coming in. The record score for the course is 70 His card follows:

Out . . . 4 4 4 3 5 4 4 4 4—36
In . . . 4 4 4 6 5 4 5 5 4—41—77

'WILL SAY SOME THINGS' AT MOY MASS MEETING

The Bi-partisan Municipal League will fire the opening gun in its mayoralty campaign on Thursday night, Oct. 6, at Reform hall. Some hot shot is promised by George W. V. Moy, the Bi-partisan-Democratic nominee for mayor. The other speakers are not announced. It is expected that Richard Hedley Depew, president of the league and president of the New Jersey People's Lobby, will preside.

According to the notice published today Mr. Moy "will say some things which will cheer folks." The league slogan is "No party lines in municipal politics."

The executive committee of the League holds meetings every Saturday night at Mr. Moy's law offices.

Activity in the A. O. U. W.

Past Grand Master Workman Nash visited Hackettstown Lodge, A. O. U. W., Monday night. The meeting was the most interesting held by this lodge for many months and a large increase in membership is looked for in the near future. Grand Master Workman Hopper is doing great work in the upbuilding of the order. In this city he is being assisted by Grand Inside Watchman J. W. A. Baursachs and Mr. Nash, of Columbia Lodge; Chairman William Newcomb of the finance committee and Past Master Workman H. R. Thorn, of Central Lodge, who are also very active in the order.

In Honor of Guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey F. Stout, of the New Madison, entertained a dozen friends at their home last evening, in honor of Mrs. William Rockefeller, of New York. Cards, music and refreshments were enjoyed. Mrs. Rockefeller has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Stout for the past two weeks and returned home today.

Will Ride at Trenton.

George Simons, who has been doing some bicycle racing in this city and vicinity will ride at the Trenton fair today, and later at the fair to be held at Buffalo.

BIBLE CLASS CHEERS RUNYON AS CANDIDATE

The "Whites" entertained the "Reds" the rivals in a recent contest to increase the membership of the William N. Runyon Bible class of Hope chapel, in the chapel rooms last night and it was a merry feast and significant of the feeling among the members, both old and recent, toward Judge William N. Runyon who was the organizer of it. Judge Runyon at the conclusion of a speech to the class was given three hearty cheers and a tiger and hailed as the next Congressman from the Fifth district.

Howard McWilliams, the leader of the class, who succeeded Judge Runyon as the leader, was taken suddenly ill with pneumonia yesterday afternoon and this fact had a tendency to keep the spirits of the young men under restraint or the enjoyment would have been much keener. An orchestra furnished some fine music and before the feast some of the members enjoyed games.

After the supper speechmaking was in order and Ben Evans, the toastmaster, introduced the speakers. J. H. Manning, G. H. Condict, Dr. D. G. Atwood, John Leal, Arthur Fluck, Russell Randolph, James Penny and Harry Kartscher, all spoke, their themes being based on loyalty to the chapel and the class and to uphold and encourage the pastor, Rev. L. H. Howard. Harry Kartscher also contributed one of his inimitable recitations which was hugely enjoyed.

Judge Runyon in speaking of the class said that it was a class which could do much as they had attended the Sunday school for a good purpose. He urged the members to stand by the Sunday school, the pastor and the chapel even though at times sacrifices were necessary. He also pleaded with them to be loyal to Mr. McWilliams, more especially while he is ill as the knowledge that the class is going on in good shape would have a tendency to buoy him up and help toward his recovery. The young men rose up and cheered the speaker ending with a tiger.

The committee having the supper in charge was composed of Charles J. Vincent, Adam Schaefer, S. Terry, Gordon Broadbent, Allen Snyder and John Lindsley.

The orchestra, made up of five pieces, was composed of Charles Fisher, first violin; William Comes, second violin; John Emery, first cornet, Edward H. Guest, second cornet, and LeRoy Guest, pianist. The class was increased in the contest which occupied a month, from 48 to 86 members.

Slight Fire.

A small shed in the rear of Mrs. Elizabeth DeForest's home at 435 West Second street, caught fire in some unknown way last night. The fire department responded to an alarm from box 46 at 8:07 and put out the blaze with extinguishers. The damage was trifling.

AUXILIARY OF PYTHIANS

Temporary Organization Effected by Plainfield and Rahway Knights.

WILL HAVE A CLUB ROOM.

V. W. Nash, Jr., Chairman, and Joseph E. Baker, Secretary—Committee on Charter Roll Appointed.

At a meeting in the rooms of Union lodge, No. 102, K. of P., last night, steps were taken by representatives of Pythian organizations in the district to form a Pythian auxiliary. Temporary organization was effected by the election of V. W. Nash, Jr., as chairman and Joseph E. Baker secretary. The charter list starts with a membership of fifty, and will be kept open for a month.

The attendants at last night's meeting included delegations from Union lodge, Perseverance lodge and Crescent company, uniformed rank, of this city, and Reliance lodge and P. Frank Shanley company, both of Rahway. The plan is to have an organization in which all the Pythians in the district may become interested and by unification promote social affairs to mutual advantage. It is also hoped to eventually have both the local lodges and Crescent company meet in the Unity rooms, thus making the place somewhat of a Pythian home, keeping it open at all times and installing pool tables and perhaps a set of bowling alleys. A committee composed of William Cass, chairman, James Anderson and V. W. Nash, Jr., was appointed to arrange for by-laws and organization, and details will be gone into at a meeting to be held the second week in October.

The charter list was placed in the hands of the following committee of six: Frank Putnam and Alfred Cansebrook, of Unity lodge; A. J. Robinson and J. B. Higgins, of Perseverance lodge, and Captain John Cook and Sergeant Fredergast, of P. Frank Shanley company. At the conclusion of last night's meeting the attendants enjoyed refreshments and euchre.

TO TAKE HIS HEARERS THRU AFRICA'S WILDS

Arrangements were made last night at a meeting of the board of trustees of the Park Avenue Baptist church for a lecture to be given by the pastor, Rev. Charles E. the Maguire. It is scheduled for Thursday night, October 13. Dr. Maguire's subject will be "With an Irishman Through the Wilds of Africa."

The meeting was held at the home of John H. Doane and was presided over by George W. V. Moy, president of he board. Various reports were read, showing an encouraging condition in all departments of church work. Particularly gratifying was the report submitted by the treasurer, L. R. Schofield. Since Pastor Maguire took charge of the church, the revenues, particularly the Sunday offerings, have greatly increased. Other reports showed that the membership of the church has increased rapidly and that the congregatonal attendance at both the Sunday services and the prayer meetings are larger than ever.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERAN DEAD AT COONTOWN.

George R. Gildes, aged 37 years, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, died yesterday morning at his home in Coontown from tuberculosis with which he had been afflicted for several months. He was born and always lived at Coontown, where he followed the pursuit of farming. He was the son of the late Noah Gildes, who was well known throughout Somerset county. He is survived by a mother, three brothers and a sister.

The funeral service will be held at Mt. Horeb M. E. church tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, and the pastor, Rev. Mr. MacRorie, will officiate. The burial will be in the cemetery adjoining the church at Mt. Horeb.

"Is Matrimony a Failure?" Coming.

"Is Matrimony a Failure?" David Belasco's great success, will be presented at The Plainfield theatre, Monday, Oct. 17, by the original company. On Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the stock company will present "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," to be followed on Thursday and Friday by "Lady Windermere's Fan." Later "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Wolf" will be produced by the local company.

DR. WILSON TO SPEAK HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

The committee being unable to obtain a larger auditorium, Reform hall was secured this morning for the mass meeting to be held tomorrow night under the auspices of the Plainfield Democratic club and the Woodrow Wilson club. Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, the Democratic Gubernatorial nominee, will be the chief speaker. The candidate will arrive here at 6 o'clock and will dine with a few prominent Union and Somerset county Democrats at Truell Inn.

In the party for dinner will be former Mayor William L. Saunders, president of the Woodrow Wilson club; LeRoy J. Ellis, president of the Democratic club; Brigadier General Dennis P. Collins, of Elizabeth, and County Chairman William E. Tuttle, of Westfield, the party's nominee for Congress in the Fifth district.

Former Mayor Saunders will preside at the mass meeting. The vice-presidents will be announced by him tomorrow. The seating capacity of the hall is about 800, but if necessary an overflow meeting will be held in front of the building.

ARMY HERO TO WED TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock Patrolman George K. Dobson and Miss Ada Alice Bright, of 427 West Seventh street, will be married in Mr. Dobson's new home, 1235 Cameron avenue, by Rev. Elory G. Bowers curate of Grace Episcopal church. Thomas H. Leggett will give the bride away.

Patrolman Dobson has an enviable record both in the service of Uncle Sam and with the local police department. While with the army in the Philippines he received recommendations for bravery and when with the flying squadron of the 8th United States Army Corps he did distinguished service in the "Fighting 14th" regiment. For a time he was one of the scouts attached to the flying squadron and made good there.

At the time of the Boxer uprising in China in 1900, the 14th was sent to the scene of the trouble and the men of Uncle Sam's army, as is well known, were sent over to Peking to aid against the hordes of opposing Chinamen, finally scaling the walls of the city in a manner to command the respect of the entire world. The company of which Mr. Dobson was a member was the first to scale the wall and hoist the stars and stripes there at the peril of their lives. Calvin Titus, a musician, was the first man up with Edward E. Davis, who will be best man at the wedding tomorrow, and Mr. Dobson was close behind him. The flags thus planted are now at the Military Academy at West Point. The rest of the story is now history, and Mr. Dobson is justly proud that he helped to make it. He fought under General Lawton in the Philippines and participated in every battle of that memorable campaign against the little brown men.

The cosey cottage on Camden avenue has been tastefully furnished by the groom and the couple will return to live there after a honeymood trip.

Police Court Note.

As Rachel Lumm, of Westfield, failed to appear this morning in police court to press her charge against William Jones, of Liberty street, for obtaining money from her on what appeared to be a bogus check, the case was dismissed by Judge Runyon when the amount claimed, $1.90, was turned over to Jones' counsel, William G. DeMeba, by Undertaker Henry DeMott. Mr. DeMott was Jones' bondsman in the case. Both complainant and defendant are colored.

Infant Daughter's Funeral.

The funeral of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Farrell, of 907 West Third street, took place at the home yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery. The sympathy of a large circle of friends was extended to the parents of the child. Mr. Farrell is president of the Plainfield branch of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Dr. McCrea's Son Operated On.

Frank G. McCrea, the two-year-old son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of Jersey City, was operated on at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday for adenoids and tonsilitis. Drs. Endicott and Probasco were the physicians and the little fellow was doing well today. Dr. McCrea was formerly pastor of the First M. E. church.

AUTO CLUB'S QUESTIONS

Plainfield Automobilists to Quiz Candidates for the Legislature.

WANT THE LAW AMENDED.

Favor Reciprocity Between States, Good Roads and No Personal Taxes on Cars—Wood and Bonnell Speak.

Some political significance is attached to the mass meeting of automobilists held last night under the auspices of the Plainfield Automobile Club as some candidates for the Assembly and Senate will discover before long. About forty automobile owners were present and the resolutions were carried unanimously. One which the autoists consider the most important offered by F. O. Ball, authorized the appointment of a committee of five to get the views of candidates for election for the Assembly and Senate so that their attitude on six questions to be submitted to them may be placed before all automobile owners for their consideration on November 8. The clubs all over the State are taking similar action in trying to have the law changed regarding non-resident automobilists. What is wanted is a reciprocity bill which will permit owners from New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts entering this State for a period of eight or ten days without being forced to pay a license. This once obtained would let down the bars now up against New Jersey in those States.

Road conditions also came in for much discussion. J. H. Wood, president of the Association of Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, and H. A. Bonnell, secretary of the association and treasurer of the American Automobile Association,spoke at length on this subject. The former declared that the Edge bill, which he worked so hard for at the last session of the Legislature, was killed in the Senate through the influences of Senator Frelinghuysen, but it cannot happen again in view of the work now being done by automobile owners to get a similar measure through during the coming winter. Mr. Wood said that the automobile question was a serious one and it would be a good thing to find out where the trouble lies and apply the remedy. He said the automobilists of this State are paying a million dollars a year in taxes and there was no reason why they could not have a reciprocity law.

Mr. Bonnell, who spoke first, said the owners wanted laws: First, one for reciprocity between States; to enforce the law covering lights on vehicles at night; remove the personal tax on cars, and for road signs, recommending that $2,000 a year be taken from the license fund for the latter purpose. He also suggested a tribunal higher than the road commissioner to which appeals might be made by those who had had their licenses revoked.

F. O. Ball, president, Harry Marshall and Dr. F. C. Ard all spoke briefly and an open discussion took place on the merits of the resolutions.

The two resolutions introduced by Alexander Milne had for their objects first, the devising of ways and means to secure proper automobile legislation as in the judgment of the officers and directors of the club seem wise, having due regard for the wishes of automobilists of this vicinity. And second, that the Commissioner of Highways be requested to adopt some system whereby the roads can be constantly supervised and repaired before being allowed to get in such condition that it is necesray to rebuild and re-surface them.

The other set of resolutions were copies of those passed in Newark by the Newark Automobile club and other clubs in different cities. They consist of seven articles and their contents follow:

That amendments to the present law be made to provide, first, that non-resident automobilists be allowed to visit the State for a limited time without expense to them; second, that the law requiring all vehicles to carry lights at night be amended so that it can be enforced; third, that the horse power of cars for license purposes shall be rated A. L. A. M. and not upon the manufacturer's rating; fourth, that in consideration of the large sums paid to the State for license fees that the tax on automobiles be discontinued; fifth, that $2,000 per year, for at least three years, be set aside for the erecting of guide and guiding signs upon the highways where required; sixth, that motorists shall have the right to appeal to the Supreme Court from the decisions of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles; and last, that a law be enacted requiring gates at all grade crossing where the railroads operate over a private right of way, crossing a public highway.

PLAYGROUNDS POPULAR

Total Attendance, Secretary Reports Was 11,944 Since Opening on July 6

PLAN ONE FOR THE WEST END.

Two Supervisors Re-appointed—Another to be Named for Parker Field—Flag Speaks.

Plans for opening another playground next season in the West End of the city, together with reports of this season's work, were discussed at a meeting of the Playground Association held in Mayor Fisk's office Wednesday. All the members of the commission, George P. Mellick, Charles B. Morse, H. W. Marshall, Joseph W. Gaskell, Lindsey Best, and Secretary H. E. Parker, together with Mayor Fisk, were present. Mr. Fisk stated that it would probably be the last time he would meet with the comulission.

Speaking informally, Mr. Flak expressed his appreciation of the work of the commission and hoped that its influence would be extended in the years to come. Mr. Mellick, as president of the commission, voiced the appreciation of the members for the impetus given the movement by Mr. Fisk.

At a later meeting the question of appointing a supervisor for the "Parker Field," given to the city by Andrew McClean Parker, as an athletic field, will be taken up, and plans for the use of the field will probably be announced at the November meeting of the commission. The list was also readiness for his next season. It is also the intention of the commission to re-engage Miss Harriet E. Moe and Miss Mary Leonard Childs as supervisors for the Bryant and Franklin playgrounds Next season. Their work this year was very satisfactory to everyone.

"The figures showing the attendance at the two playgrounds are as follows: Bryant School playground, open 48 days, total attendance 6,009 children; average daily attendance, 125. Franklin School grounds, open 51 days, total attendance, 5,935 children; average daily attendance, 109. Grand total of 11,944 children in atendance at both playgrounds, daily average at both grounds, 234. The children in attendance ranged in age from infants of one year, in charge of 'little mothers' to those of fifteen years. The average age was about eight.

"The playground population at Franklin School playground was cosmopolitan, at least eight nationalities being represented as follows: American, English, German, Italian, Hebrew, Swedish, Irish, Negro. Despite this condition discipline was never a serious problem with the supervisor. This proves I think, not merely the efficiency of the supervisor, but also the universality of he appeal of the playground. No serious accidents were reported. In fact, there was a remarkable freedom from injuries. But one case calling for the attention of a physician was reported and the boy thus treated soon returned to the playground. The intense interest of parents in the movement is reflected in the report showing that over 300 visited Franklin School ground and more than 200 Bryant School.

"As to results without theorizing, it can be said that these things have been accomplished:

"First. Scores of restless children have been saved from two months of idleness with its attendant possibilities of vice and crime.

"Second. Through a varied and interesting program of out-door games and exercises, increased physical power, carrying with it protection against disease and greater ability to work and endure, has been made possible to these children.

"Third. The mental training received in the school has been continued on the playground where the child is constantly provided with opportunities for self-expression and self-activity.

"Fourth. The best moral and spiritual influence has been thrown around the children at the playgrounds through personal association with the supervisors, the Misses Harriet E. Moe and Mary Leonard Childs.

This means beter children in the home, better scholarship in the schools and a higher grade of citizenship when the boy and the girl shall have come to years of maturity."

Gym to Open Saturday.

The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium opens next Saturday for the fall and winter work. Plans for the opening are now being completed by Physical Director Whittaker and Boys' Secretary William Bingeman.

New Market Mill Closed.

Owing to the drought at New Market and the scarcity of water in the lake, the mill there has had to shut down. It depends wholly for its power on water from the lake, and since the water in the lake has sunk beneath the level of the sluice which leads into the raceway, the mill had to be closed.

LEWIS CLEAN AND ABLE IS ACKERMAN'S OPINION

"I am confident that the more the people learn about Vivian M. Lewis," said State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman yesterday, "the stronger he will become among the voters. Every public trust he has executed with ability and faithfulness. His record is clean and clear.

"He was a member of Assembly for three terms and leader of the Republican majority during his last term. His record as clerk in the Court of Chancery and as Banking and Insurance Commissioner indicate that he is a man of force and capacity.

"He is intimately familiar with the needs and details of the State Government, and I am sure if elected he will give the people of the State one of the best and most economical administrations they have ever experienced.

"Above all, Mr. Lewis is not an unknown quantity in public affairs. Theories will not control his actions, for he has the benefit by which the people will profit of long years of training and experience."

PEACH FESTIVAL AT TRINITY REFORMED

The hand-omely decorated Sunday-school rooms of Trinity Reformed church were the scene of brilliant activity Thursday when the members of the Ladies' Christian Work Society were busy serving peaches and cream to the multitude who attended. While it is impossible to state the exact amount earned by the society for the carpet fund, it may safely be said that it was considerable.

Assisting Mrs. Edward T. Van Winkle, who was chairman of the entertainment committee, were Mrs. J. Angerbaur and Mrs. Virginia Chichester. The decoration committee consisted of Mrs. E. A. Parse, president of the society, and Mrs. B. D. Newell. Those in charge of the cake table were Mrs. Edward Cooley and Mrs. Theodore VanZandt. The candy table were the Misses Leonore Miller, Margaret Leggett, Marguerite VanZandt, Helen Smith, Edna Bird, Jeanette Neal, Olive Bird, Gertrude Enander, Henrietta Enander, Marguerite Neal and Edna Cole.

The candy table was in charge of Miss Minnie Williams. Mrs. L. B. Van Camp and Mrs. J. T. MacMurray, while Mrs. Frank Storr and Mrs. Edward Miller served the cream.

RED CROSS STAMPS TO RAISE A MILLION

"A million for tuberculosis" is the slogan of the 1910 Red Cross Christmas staump campaign. The familiar little seals that are seen on letters sent over the Christmas time proved such a success that this year about a hundred millions of them will probably be printed. Already twenty-five millions have been struck off and will soon be placed on sale.

The Red Cross has in a new scheme this year for the sale of the seals. It will sell them to local associations and these associations will receive 87½ percent. of the profits, the other 12½ per cent. going to pay the expenses of getting them out. What is left will be divided equally between the Red Cross and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The stamps, which are of an attractive design this year, may be placed on the backs as well as the fronts of letters. The reason that the Red Cross desires to have them known as "seals" is that last year the dead letter office of the Postoffice was packed with missives bearing only the Red Cross stamps. Many ignorant persons and some not so ignorant believed that the seals prepad postage. About forty millions of them were printed last year, and the sum realized amounted to about $250,000

Stamps of this character were used in Brooklyn and Boston as far back as 1862 in connection with Civil War bazaars and fairs. They disappeared for a time, but Jacob Riis, finding them used in Norway in a tuberculosis campaign, wrote an article about them which induced the Delaware State Association to adopt them in 1907. About $3,000 was raised in three weeks in Delaware and Eastern Pennsylvania. They were first used nationally in 1908 and $125,000 was raised by the Red Cross.

County Superintendent Savitz, of Westfield, has made application to the Board of Freeholders for a room in the courthouse in which to conduct the duties of his office and at the same time applies for an appropriation for clerical hire. The board has the matter under consideration and it is quite likely that the requisition will be granted. The limit of clerical expenditure is $500.

39 PROPERTIES SOLD BY THE CITY FOR TAXES

Thirty-nine properties, chiefly residential, out of a total list of 277 were sold for taxes in the office of Tax Collector William R. Townsend Wednesday afternoon. In a majority of cases the mortgagees secured the several properties in which they were interested, while in other instances E. Francis Cahill, of Newark, representing a syndicate, purchased a number of properties. The sale netted $1,000, the lowest price being $66 and the highest price, $134.86.

Half-dozen properties out of the entire list comprised vacant lots, while the balance were residential. Mr. Townsend is rapidly clearing up the delinquent list and an early settlement is anticipated on those remaining to be sold. These sales relieve the tax collector's work and collector is always anxious to dispose of the properties on the advertised day of sale.

THE GRYOSCOPE COMPASS.

How many readers of the Daily Press, if given an ordinary magnetic compass, and were then asked to walk across the room in a given direction, could do it? Most people imagine that the compass needle points north and south, and the instances recorded of were hunters have perished in the woods because of this error. The fact is that the needle points west of north about eight degrees in this locality, at the present time. To use a compass the proper thing to do is to turn the compass around until the needle point eight degrees west of north, and then bear off to the right of the needle that many degrees. Any direction you wish to take will then be correctly indicated on the compass when the needle is kept over the point of the true local "declination." Before going into the woods the declination should be ascertained from some nautical almanac or some almanac, or from a civil engineer. For additional safety, a little practise with your backyard will be excellent precaution. To make sure of accuracy, carefully note the direction of the north star any clear night and draw a line on the window sill pointing toward the star. Then place the centre of the compass on this line and find the declination; that is, how many degrees the needle points to the west or east of this north line. To find the north star, select the two stars on the side of the big dipper opposite the "handle," and follow with the eye in the direction they indicate, and the eye soon notes a star standing alone which will easily be seen to be the star desired. In the Rocky Mountains the needle points anywhere from true north 20 degrees east of north, while all points west of a line running nearly north and south through Ohio the declination is east instead of west at the present time.

Thanks to this wobbly old earth of ours the needle also shows not only daily but also annual variations, but the main swing of the needle occurs once every century or two.

For example, in London in 1580 the needle pointed eleven degrees east of north. A hundred years later it pointed true north; then it swung to twenty-five degrees west and is now back to about sixteen degrees west of north.

Hence, it may be seen that "a little knowledge is dangerous." To become familiar with the compass not only must all these things be known, but the effect of magnetic iron in the vicinity must also be taken into consideration.

The compass on the board ship is sometimes surrounded with a shield of soft iron and magnets are placed near the needle to counterbalance local magnetism.

Recently the gryoscope has come into use on some warships instead of a compass. This consists of a heavy little wheel so balanced on almost frictionless bearings that when once set in motion the wheel will spin for weeks. It is a peculiarity of such spinning motion that the wheel always remains true to its original plane, and if set in motion in a true north and south direction and then carried aboard ship and placed in position like the ordinary mariner's compass, it is said to maintain its direction under all conditions, and no amount of shock due to firing of heavy guns or pitching of the ship will make it deviate in the least.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. THOS. J. NICHOLL.

The funeral services of Mrs. Thos. J. Nicholl were held from her late home on Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, at 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including many of the older people of the village who had known Mrs. Nicholl during her residence at that place. There were also many beautiful floral tributes.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, this city, of which Mrs. Nicholl was an attendant for many years, conducted the service, and after reading appropriate Scripture selections, made a short address of eulogy. The burial was in the cemetery at Scotch Plains.

REPORT W. C. T. U. WORK

Interesting Accounts Given of What Has Been Done by Temperance Union.

MRS. T. H. TOMLINSON PRESIDES.

17,000 Pieces of Literature Distributed—Décrease in Membership

—Prizes Awarded for Essays.

The work of the year of the local W. C. T. U. was reviewed in reports submitted at the afternoon session of the annual meeting Thursday. In all departments successful and encouraging work has been done. The afternoon session was opened with an address by Mrs. R. C. Bodine, after which Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, the president, took the chair.

The banner report was from Mrs. M. J. Staats, superintendent of the work among railroad, firemen, police and trainmen. It showed indefatigable work in the distribution of 17,000 pieces of literature among men in the foregoing occupations in Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Mrs. Carrie L. Bennett, the corresponding secretary, read her report. The Union numbers 188 members, a decrease of 28 from last year. Forty regular meetings, fifteen public and four social, and parlor meetings were held. The work was carried in twelve different departments and all showed effective results. She said in part: "Never in all the history of our Union has there been such great need of workers as there is today, and never has there been greater opportunity for service; but the laborers are so few, if every member of this Union would realize her responsibility and opportunity and help just a little' the influence which would go out would be felt all over this city.'

Mrs. Henry Thomas, superintendent of the Royal Legion, was away on her vacation, so her report was given by Mrs. Tomlinson. Now there are 34 members in the Legion, and one of the features of the year was the closing picnic at the Old Farm. Speaking of this, Mrs. Tomlinson said: "If Mrs. Thomas had done nothing else but arrange this picnic, she would have done well."

Mrs. Emily Coard, superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction, reported that the Plainfield schools had responded well to the prizes offered for themes on the subject. The essay of Margaret Leggett, which won the High School prize, showed careful investigation, as well as did that of Royal Cottrell, who won the eighth grade prize. A renewed effort will be made next year to interest boys in the prizes.

Mrs. Mary Winter read a report on Sabbath Observance and Sunday-school work. Requests to pastors to preach on the subject of temperance were met with responses from twelve.

Mrs. M. C. Dobbins read the report on Work among "Soldiers and Sailors." She said: "Boxes of literature, testaments, candy, etc., had been sent to Captain Ben of the Mission Yacht for distribution among needy sailors where they would do the most good."

The Literature report by Mrs. Lotta A. Udell showed that numerous pamphlets, etc., had been distributed by the various departments. Mrs. Ira West reported on Social Meetings. Four meetings of this nature were held throughout the year and one was devoted to the topic of Equal Franchise, when a paper was read by Mrs. Isaac Miller. One public meeting was held and Wilbur Dalley gave a talk on "Christian Citizenship and Franchise."

A feature of the afternoon session was a talk by Miss S. J. Keron, of Elizabeth, county superintendent of prison work and penal reform. She described the life of the inmates of the county jail at Elizabeth. "Nine-tenths of them are there because of drink!" she said. "The results of my weekly visits are hard to determine, but these people need help and sympathy as much as any others."

A rising vote of thanks for courtesies during the past year was then given to the Plainfield newspapers. An Aaronic benediction closed the session.

But when I told her of it, she much was vexed at me.
Not that she was so modest, as she

It seemed I hadn't noticed her stylish bathing suit!

Some Doubtful Transactions

"I'm a little mixed up about this church business," said Mrs. Adgate with a puzzled frown. "Of course I want to help the church building fund as much as I possibly can, but I must confess that it's a little wearing."

"You've done so much work! should think you would be worn out," said the caller sympathetically. "I've wondered how you stood it."

"Oh, it isn't the work," declared Mrs. Adgate. "It's the bargaining."

"The what?"

"Well, you see, when all the members of the aid society pledged themselves to raise a certain sum of money, I wanted to help. We decided, you know, to work as individuals, rather than all together, so each one has been doing her best to sell something."

"It's the best way," said the caller. "It keeps every one interested."

"I suppose it does," sighed Mrs. Adgate, "but it's dreadfully annoying to have Mrs. Stoddard boasting that she's earned $10, when I haven't secured even one dollar."

"How does it happen? You are such a worker, I should think you'd have more than any one else."

"Well, you see, I'm selling jellies. I put up a great many, too, this year. Mr. Adgate spoke of it at the time, and reminded me that we don't need so much, now that Sarah's married Jack, even when she was at home we never ate half I made."

"We never eat up our jellies, either," acknowledged the caller. "My husband insists that it tastes better than the kind we buy, but, considering what it costs to pepper and throw away, it's lots more expensive."

"Of course it is," agreed Mrs. Adgate. "So, as I had so much of it, I decided to offer it at 25 cents a glass, the proceeds to go to the building fund."

"That was good of you."

"The first person I asked," said Mrs. Adgate, "was Mrs. Bushnell, who is selling pickle recipes at 15 cents each. When we finished our talk I was ten cents ahead, because she had given me a pickle recipe and ten cents for a glass of jelly."

"That recipe makes good pickles," said the caller. "I made some."

"Then I'm not out a penny," said Mrs. Adgate. "The next person I met asked me to buy a loaf of cake to help the church fund before I had time to ask her to buy my jelly. It was good cake, selling for only 50 cents, so I had enough for a glass of jelly and 25 cents for one of the loaves."

"Was it cocoanut cake?"

"No; chocolate."

"The cocoanut is better. I bought a loaf and we ate it all at one meal."

"We did, too, for loaf Sunday evening. There are only two of us and things last so long. The cake was quite stale by that time."

"Mrs. Huntington is selling pincushions," said the caller.

"I bought one," said Mrs. Adgate. "She charges ten cents for the small ones, so she gave me 15 cents and a pincushion for a glass of my jelly. It's red and my room is pink, so I gave it to my sister, who likes it immensely. Old Mrs. Clark is knitting mittens, and I bought two pairs at 15 cents each, giving her five cents and a glass of jelly."

"What did you want with children's mittens?"

"That's what I don't know," laughed Mrs. Adgate. "But I gave them to the janitor's little girls, and they were as pleased as could be. My next bargain was with Mrs. Newberry. She had grape jelly for sale at 20 cents, so she gave me a nickel and a jar of it in exchange for my jelly. I dropped the jar on my way home and it was smashed. The grape juice watered the whole jelly, incidentally sprinkled my light skirt, which had to go to the cleaner's at once. Miss Sophie Flint came out to see what had happened and remarked that if I was buying things she had painted pictures for sale, so she hurried in to get one for me."

"She does such beautiful work," said the caller. "Her paintings make lovely Christmas presents."

"They do if you care for mottoes," said Mrs. Adgate, dubiously. "I don't. The one I bought is 'A Penny Saved Is a Penny Earned.' Somehow, it is almost too appropriate."

"Mrs. Smith is selling ribbon bells and Mrs. Bliss has aprons," said the caller. "I haven't heard what the others have for sale."

"There are 60 of them!" groaned Mrs. Adgate. "And I don't see where I am coming out. I have now sold five glasses of jelly, receiving 30 cents, with absolutely nothing to show for it."

"I'm sorry, but I came in to ask you to buy," said the caller, hesitatingly. "I make old ladies' caps for 50 cents, but I'm willing to take two glasses of jelly for one cap."

Uncivil Englishmen.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont thinks that both sides of a story should be told, and gave an account recently of brutal treatment of young women by a number of English gentlemen interfering the rosettes of the Liberal stewards. They cut the tires of the automobiles, ripped up the hood and tried to strangle one of the young women by wrapping a scarf around her neck. They had actually fight for their lives and yet there was not a word upon the subject in the English papers, nor was any account of it telegraphed to the United States.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 2, 1910.

Topic.—Self centered or Christ centered. —Phil. i, 21; iii, 7; iv, 11-13. (Consecration meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Every human life has some center—some supreme motive or purpose around which everything else in the life revolves. In the natural world we see this fact illustrated in our solar system. The sun is the center, and around it revolve its eight planets and three moons and even the comets that belong to the sun system.

Sometimes power is the factor in a man's life around which all else centers. He may not care for riches and for position only as they extend his power. The center of another's life may be money. He will sacrifice everything else for money. Other lives are fame-centered. Riches, power and position may play a small part in their lives. They want fame. They want the world to know of them, to seek after them and to acclaim their every word and action. All of these may be good in their place if, when attained, they are used properly.

But there are two life centers which are in constant conflict and struggle—self and Christ. This is especially true of Christians. Not but what it plays a part in the life of those who are not Christians. Self is the stumbling block to Christ in many cases. Men will not surrender their wills to Christ and take His salvation. This, however, is necessary if one becomes a Christian. "If any man," says Christ, "would be My disciple, let him deny himself [put self out and let Christ in], take up his cross and follow Me." But many will not give up self. They will not surrender their wills for theirs and therefore He says in another place, "He will not come unto Me that ye may be saved." The will, the supreme attribute of man's mental power, will not give up to Christ, and such persons are not being saved, are lost.

The question now is as to what the proposed Christian should do, but how often we fail to do what we ought to do. Even after we have proposed to surrender self and all to Christ self still often asserts itself. Forgetting that we have made a surrender all," our perverse wills strive still to gain the mastery over us. But they should be kept down and Christ given the supreme place in our life, as we have promised.

Like Paul, for us to live should be for Christ to live—to live in us—our lives completely centered about Christ's. What things we consider personal gains without Christ we should give them up—"count them loss for Christ." Thus only can we live a true Christian life, strengthened by Him. We cannot make self and Christ both our life centers. "No man can serve two masters." Which will it be —self or Christ?

Zealous Christian Endeavorer.

Rev. E. A. King, a zealous Christian Endeavorer of the days of enthusiastic culture, was born in Providence, R. I., Dec. 24, 1870. He early joined the Christian Endeavor society and was sent as a delegate to the tenth anniversary of the society at the Williston church. After his collegiate education he entered Y. M. C. A. work, becoming general secretary and physical director at Chicopee Falls, Mass. Then he graduated from the International Y. M. C. A. Training school and carried on Y. M. C. A. work in Kansas and Kentucky, desiring to enter the ministry, he studied in Lane Theological seminary and in Oberlin Theological seminary, graduating from the latter in the class of 1903. After serving as a Congregational pastor for several years in Marysville, O., and Sandusky, O., he went recently to North Yakima, Wash., where he has greatly strengthened the church.

During all this time Mr. King was conducting classes in physical culture, organizing gymnasium classes for boys and girls, conducting athletics in summer vacations and doing similar work. He was also serving Christian Endeavor in many helpful ways, becoming denominational vice president of the Ohio union in 1903 and being elected president of that strong union in 1904. During his term of office he especially emphasized the junior work. He has already been made a member of the state executive committee of the Washington union.

TRADE BOARD'S PLANS

Civic Body to Take up Garbage Disposal Question at First Meeting.

AND FIRE DEPT.'S NEEDS.

Ministers and Teachers to be Invited to Attend—Rev. Dr. J. W. Shearer to Speak on "Anglophonics."

At the opening meeting of the Plainfield Board of Trade which will be held early in October, President William Jeffery expects that among the people present he will have all the school teachers and many citizens to hear the interesting things which will be brought prominently before the meting.

Among the interesting things to be discussed will be the question of the needs of the local fire department, as mentioned in President Jeffery's speech at the June meeting of the board. It is considered by Mr. Jeffery that some improvements can be made in the apparatus as well as in the system and for this reason alone the meeting will be of interest to property owners in the city.

There is no possible doubt that the school teachers will have an uncommon interest in the speech to be delivered by Rev. Dr. J. W. Sherer, of Virginia, who will lecture on the topic, "Anglophonics, or the Phonetic English Alphabet." The other question, and one of the most needful ones to be brought before the meeting will be that of a municipal system of collection and disposal of garbage. This subject has had the attention of the taxpayers for many years, and it goes without saying that every householder in the city is concerned in the question of "why pay twice."

According to present plans all the ministers in this section will receive invitations to be present and this includes some who do not reside in Union. Teachers as well as principals of the public schools will be present including those from this city, North Plainfield, Westfield, Elizabeth, Cranford, Roselle, Rahway, Somerville, Dunellen, Bound Brook and other places. In fact the meeting promises to be one of the most important ever held by the local Board of Trade.

MISS MARGARET O'NEILL RICHARD FARRELL'S BRIDE.

The marriage of Miss Margaret O'Neill, of this city, and Richard Farrell, of Bayonne, took place at St. Mary's church, Wednesday afternoon Father Hogan, the curate, performing the ceremony. A reception was held afterward at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sarah O'Neill, 173 North avenue. There were guests from New York Brooklyn, Bayonne and this city.

The bride was attended by Miss Bessie O'Donnell and the best man was Edward O'Connor, both of this city, and the ushers were Lawrence O'Neill, James A. Buckley and John F. Casey, of this city.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Lawrence O'Neill, who was prominent in this city forty years ago and who was highly esteemed. The groom is also well known here, where he has a large number of friends. After a trip the couple will reside at Bayonne.

UNION COUNTY BONDS ARE SOLD AT PREMIUM

County Collector N. R. Leavitt has sold one hundred and ten $1,000 county road bonds to the highest of several bidding concerns. The firm to buy the bonds is the John D. Everitt Investment Company of 6 Wall street, New York, the price being 102.17. The N. W. Harrison Company, of New York, was lowest bidder, offering 100.494 for the bonds. The price received by Mr. Leavitt is considered exceedingly satisfactory, considering the present condition of the bond market.

Director Cady and Mr. Leavitt were authorized at the September meeting of the Board of Freeholders to prepare and float the bonds. The bonds are payable in thirty years from the date of issue with interest at the rate of four and one-half percent. per annum, payable semi-annually, principal and interest at the National State Bank, Elizabeth.

The money raised by the bonds is to be used in paying for road work contracted by the county during the past year. The county has contracted for work amounting to about $160,000. As procedure is taken under the State Aid Road Act, the county pays but two-thirds of the actual cost of the work, the State paying the other third. The bonds will bring the county enough to pay for the county's share of the work.

DEMOCRATS RAP TARIFF

FOR A REVISION DOWNWARD.

Demands Retrenchment of Expenditures and a Strict Regulation of Corporations—Endorses Wilson.

By a vote of 157 to 68 Union County Chairman William E. Tuttle, Jr., was nominated at the Fifth Democratic congressional convention at Elizabeth Sept. 20, as Judge William N. Runyon's opponent to succeed Charles N. Fowler. Isaac P. Barbey of Warren county, polled 68 votes, and the nomination of Tuttle was made unanimous.

The platform adopted is as follows:

"The Democrats of the Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey, in convention assembled, do ratify the platform adopted by he Democratic State convention at Trenton September 15, and indorse the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson for the office of Governor.

"We believe that tariff revision is the vital question before the public today.

"We charge that the Republican party by the enactment of the Payne-Aldrich bill has failed to keep its pledges to the American people. We condemn this law as unjust and as being chiefly responsible for the present high cost of living.

"We are opposed to tariff legislation which protects trust-controlled products from competition, and which enables American manufacturers to sell their goods more cheaply abroad than at home.

"We demand an honest revision of the tariff downward, particularly upon the necessaries of life, in the interest of all the people, and to this end we pledge the nominee of this convention.

"We pledge our support to the enactment, maintenance and enforcement of a comprehensive law against the use of money for corrupt and improper purposes at elections, and insist that there shall be no evasions of its provisions—whether its violators be high or low, rich or poor.

"We pledge our support to the enactment of laws, both in the State and nation, which will secure proper protection to life and limb, and to the enactment of an employers' liability act—drawn in accordance with humane and equitable principles.

"We believe in the passage of such laws by Congress and by our State Legislature as will hold mercantile and other corporations to a strict accountability in the conduct and mangement of their affairs within and without the State, and to this end we believe that the public service commissions, or the boards charged with the duty of supervising public service corporations, should be invested with such further powers as may be necessary to bring all corporations under their supervision.

"Retrenchment in public expenditures should be effected in all directions, and the extravagances of the Republican party in national as well as State affairs should be eliminated, root and branch, and to the accomplishment of this work we pledge our party and its candidates.

"We believe with Jefferson in the support of the State governments in all their rights as the most competent authorities to look to domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies, and in the preservation of the general movement in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad. And we pledge the people of the Fifth Congressional District to a faithful performance on our part of the several objects set forth in this declaration of principles."

William E. Tuttle, Jr., was born at Rosehedge, Chemung County, New York, December 10, 1876, and received his early education in the local schools of that place. He was afterward graduated at Elmira Academy and entered Cornell University when he was sixteen years of age. After a time he was a successful canner, he went in the lumber business at his former home. Mr. Tuttle removed to New Jersey in 1897, and organized the firm of Tuttle Brothers at Westfield. This firm, composed of W. E. Tuttle, Jr., and Arthur D. Tuttle, has had a successful career in the coal and lumber trade, and their plant is now the most important industry in the town of Westfield.

Soon after becoming a citizen of New Jersey Mr. Tuttle was recognized as a factor in the civic affairs and social life of the town of his adoption, and at the present time no man in Westfield is more thoroughly respected. That he has the full confidence and esteem of the people who know him best intimately is indicated by the fact that he has been the president of the Westfield Board of Trade since its organization. He is also a trustee and the treasurer of the Free public Library, a director in the Peoples National Bank of Westfield, a director in the Mutual Building and Loan Association, and a trustee of the Congregational church of Westfield. He has the unique distinction of being a member of the Exempt Firemen's organizations of both New York and New Jersey, having qualified for this honor by serving the full period as a volunteer firemen in both States. For a number of years he was President of the old Westfield Club which was the leading social organization in the town, he was also one of the founders of the Westfield Golf Club. He is a member of Atlas Lodge F. & A. M. and a charter member of the Westfield Driving and Riding Club.

Politically Mr. Tuttle has always been a consistent and active member of the Democratic party, and shortly after he became of age served as a member of the Democratic County Committee in Chemung County, New York, when David B. Hill was the leader of political affairs in that section. Upon his removal to New Jersey he continued his activity in the Democratic ranks and has served for many years as a member of the Union County Democratic Committee. For the past three years he has been chairman of this organization. Mr. Tuttle has never held any local political office, he was the candidate of his party for the Assembly in 1907 and received the highest vote given any Democratic candidate on the ticket in Union County that year. In the town of Westfield he ran over five hundred votes ahead of his party ticket and his total vote in the county was over ten thousand, being the largest vote ever given a democratic candidate in Union county with but one exception. This indicates to some degree the confidence and respect felt for Mr. Tuttle by the voters of Union county regardless of party lines. In 1908 he was a delegate from the Fifth New Jersey District to the Democratic National Convention held in Denver. He opposed the nomination of Mr. Bryan but yielded to the wishes of the majority of his party and in the succeeding campaign worked loyally and zealously for the success of the national ticket. At the Congressional convention held in 1908 at Phillipsburg, N. J., the name of Mr. Tuttle was presented by Union county for the nomination, but he withdrew for the sake of harmony in favor of Dr. Isaac Barber who was the choice of Warren county delegation. In his political career Mr. Tuttle has contended consistently for clean political methods, and his earliest political activities were in behalf of Grover Cleveland; his democracy has always been of the conservative and sound type so thoroughly taught by that great leader of his party. Mr. Tuttle is a bachelor. His private library is one of the most complete in Westfield. He has found time during his active business career for traveling quite extensively throughout h's own country, Europe and South America. A close student of public affairs, few men are better posted as to the needs and possibilities of the American people.

EXPERT TO SELECT SITE FOR TUBERCULOSIS CAMP

The committee from the Board of Freeholders having charge of the work of establishing a tuberculosis hospital in the county, of which J. Hervey Doane, of this city, is chairman, in making progress, it is noted awaiting the return of Dr. H. O. Carrington, of New York, from a European trip. He has general supervision of all tuberculosis work in New York, more particularly as regards construction work of camps, and is a recognized authority on the subject.

Immediately upon his return he will come to Union county and meet the committee for the purpose of selecting a site for the camp. There are several sites in view, but one that appeals most favorably to the committee is on the mountains back of Scotch Plains, where the elevation will permit of certain things that are absolutely necessary in the maintenance of such a camp.

The county has appropriated $50,000 through the Board of Freeholders for this work and later on an additional sum will be given to complete the work of construction and equipment of the camp. All the physicians throughout the county are urging haste in the establishment of the camp. One physician in this city informed Freeholder Doane yesterday that to his own knowledge there are at least 1,000 cases of tuberculosis in the villages in Plainfield and vicinity, and it is said that in Elizabeth the number is far greater. The committee hopes to have the camp ready for patients early next year.

C. E. UNION PLANNING FOR AN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN.

The September congress meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the Y. M. C. on Thursday night, September 29, at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be in charge of Frank Stewart, president of the local union.

There will be severa short addresses by the chairman of the committee. Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will address the Endeavorers upon "Lookout Work that Our Local Union can do During the Coming Year." Walter Firstbrook will also speak upon "Personal Work."

BOROUGH TAX RATE $2.06

The Total Amount to be Raised in North Plainfield is $26,300.

AS COUNTY TAX $24,906.

State School Tax $11,206, and Special School Tax $27,000—Rate Nine Points Lower Than City's.

The borough rate of assessment is $2.06 on the $100. It has fallen 12 points from the 1909 rate, nine points more than the city rate fell in the same time. This new rate is based on the following items: County tax, $.58; State tax, $.26; Borough and Contingent fund, $.58; and special school, $.64. Last year the rate of assessment was $2.18. The chief drop occurs in the Special School tax, which is ten points lower than last year, while the Borough and contingent fund dropped three points.

Police Department, $4,000; Fire Department, $3,500; Street Department $6,900; Lights, $5,500; Bonds and Interest, $2,025; Water $1,500; Sewer, $400; Poor, $1,200; Board of Health, $600; Borough general fund, $5,500.

The total is $31,925. This with the contingent fund of $1,000 brings it up to $32,925, but with the estimated Fourth Class Receipts, etc., $6,625, the total amount to be raised by taxation for borough expenses is $26,300.

The County tax is $24,906.50; the State School tax is $11,206.92; and the Special School tax, $27,000. It is on these figures that the new rate was computed.

One new item appears on the schedule this year. This is for sewers, $800.

FREEHOLDER'S COUNSEL SETTLES ROAD DISPUTE

There is no doubt now as to ownership of the north side of Westfield avenue from Elizabeth to the Cranford line. County Attorney Codington of this city, at a meeting of the Road Committee of the Board of Freeholders, at the courthouse, Elizabeth, Wednesday afternoon, stated that after a careful examination of the records he is convinced that the north side of the road thoroughfare belongs to the county.

The decision settles a long dispute between the county and the borough of Roselle Park and is a victory for Freeholder Aaron D. Crane, of Roselle Park, who has long contended that the county owns the north side of the road.

There has been considerable agitation of late regarding the ownership. Letters on the question have reached the county board from various sources. One was from Attorney Samuel Koestler in which he endeavored to prove the county's ownership. The Borough Council and Mayor of Roselle Park also took up the question.

As a result of the communication the Board of Freeholders at its last meeting referred the matter to the Road Committee and the County attorney for an investigation.

Attorney Codington said yesterday that when the road was widened the deeds for the widened part were made to the county and that the franchise to the trolley company over the road was given by the county. He said that there is no doubt but that the county accepted the north side of the road and has never relinquished its ownership.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK WILL SING IN THIS CITY.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, who will give a recital in Plainfield on Dec. 2, under the auspices of the Musical Club, is perhaps the most discussed and most justly admired singer of the day, and she should be of double interest to New Jersey because she has chosen to make her home in this State. Her cottage is one of the most picturesque of the country houses in the Montclair region, up in the Orange mountains near Signac, and is just such an ideal spot as the former home of Emma Eames on the slopes of the Appenines.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is probably the highest paid singer in the world today. Her earnings run up into the neighborhood of a quarter of a million dollars per year, temperment is so humorous, so intelligent, and so sympathetic, and her personality is so magnetically interesting and compelling that she could command fame if she had no voice at all and simply spoke her lines. As it is her voice has a splendor and depth which is a revelation to the uninitiated and a never-failing spring of delight to the critic.

A prominent writer said recently: "American audiences are in love with the singer Mme. Schumann-Heink. She is so thoroughly democratic and so kindhearted. She is ninety-five per cent. heart! Hence her concert tour is a series of ovations."

LEWIS AN EASY WINNER

Republican Gubernatorial Choice's Nomination is Made Unanimous.

ADOPT STRONG PLATFORM.

Favors Extension of Utilities Commission Powers—Approves Tariff Law—Praises Taft and Fort—For Conservation.

Vivian M. Lewis, the present State Banking and Insurance Commissioner, was nominated unanimously late September 20, as the standard-bearer of the Republican party for Governor, when the vote between himself, William F. Martin, of Essex county, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, and Pierre P. Garven, of Hudson, showed that Lewis had 801⅝ votes. Only 487 were necessary to a selection. Hudson county threw Garven's votes to Lewis before the count was over and on behalf of Union county Senator Ackerman also threw its solid vote to Lewis, and the convention broke up in a love feast.

When the vote was finally announced, Lewis polled 801⅝ votes, William P. Martin, of Essex, 135¼, and Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, 56. Pierre P. Garven, Public Prosecutor of Hudson county, received the vote of 83 of the 175 Hudson county delegates, but immediately after they had been recorded they were transferred to Lewis, as stated. Union gave Lewis 54.

LITERARY

The leading story in the Red Book Magazine for October is entitled, tersely, "Steel." It is a story of an old man's hope for his ne'er-do-well boy and is by James Opuenheim, whose stories have, within the past two years, placed him in the front rank of American fictionists. It is rarely that magazine readers are offered so tremendously gripping and human a story as "Steel." In it an entire novel is compressed and it breathes the spirit of the great steel mills where its scene is laid.

Forty years ago there were not, comparatively speaking, many magazines—and it was forty years ago that The Century issued its initial number. Many popular periodicals have risen and disappeared, while some have continued within that period and even trace their origin to an earlier date. As a rule, each of these magazines addresses itself to supply some particular need in the world of current literature. In commenting editorially, in the October number, on the close of its fortieth year, The Century finds that its "range has been little changed" since the date of its birth. Today it emphasizes its desire to exercise "the conservative function of a family magazine" and indicates as its aim "to be of use to its readers, to minister to their enjoyment, by fiction, poetry, art and miscellany, that shall take them out of their cares through wholesome humor, or absorbing pictures of the imagination, and through the rarest of qualities—that of charm."

"Success Magazine" for October contains a significant article by Ernest Poole, "America's Young Men," in which the author touches on the ambitions and various careers open to young men. Franklin P. Adams, in "Lo, the Poor Musical Comedy," tells of the mixed and stressful sensations of writing a musical comedy to order, as experienced by O. Henry and himself. In "Marriage in America" Robert Hunter Schaufler gives some interesting figures founded on careful investigation of the attitude of college girls toward marriage. In an article entitled "What's the Matter With Our High Schools?" Benjamin C. Gruenberg shows the present tendency of the public and the increasing scope of the school in directing and forming the life interests fo the pupils.

FRED KANEN WEDDED SEVERAL YEARS AGO

The friends of Fred Kanen, the former Plainfield boy who was injured in the Westfield wreck will be interested to learn that he is married and is the father of a little girl who is now four years old. He is now living in New York city, where he is employed as a clerk in the circulation department of Collier's Weekly. His marriage to a New York young woman occurred shortly after he and his family left Plainfield, and was not made public until some time after.

Kanen, it will be remembered, was badly injured in the Central Railroad wreck at Westfield in 1905, when about two score Plainfielders lost their lives. He was about sixteen years old at the time and his condition was believed to be such that he would never be able to walk again. He recovered $20,000 damages from the railroad. The case had been tried twice before when the maximum verdict was $18,000.

Soon after the verdict was given Kanen's father, who was a tailor on the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fifth street, gave up his business and the family moved to the house at the corner of West Sixth street and Division street. Young Kanan recovered from his lifelong injuries with remarkable rapidity and five months after the verdict for damages was given was walking about, and soon afterwards he secured a position in New York.

When his twin sisters, Clara and Florence, were graduated from the City High School in the class of 1907, the family moved to the Bronx, New York.

A MILLINERY HINT.

What our English friends call a "dodge" in millinery was shown to me recently by a girl student in a technical school.

She had a light blue hat faced with silk of the same shade, but I could get no colored millinery wire to match it. Nothing but black and white were anywhere to be seen, and either would have been hideous.

"Paint it," said my student to me. "We always paint the white silk wire with watercolors, and get the exact shade we want. It works beautifully."

G. O. P. PLATFORM INDORSES NEW TARIFF, TAFT, FORT AND RECENT STATE POLICY

The Republican party, in convention assembled, heartily approves the administration of President William H. Taft, and affirms our loyalty to the President, who fills the measure of the duties of his great office the highest ability and loftiest patriotism.

We commend to the people of this State the results of the labors of the Congress just adjourned, which has enacted measures which contribute to the benefit and development of the country than any other Congress since the organization of the republic.

We especially commend the tariff. The tariff question involves three great principles—the development of American industries and the protection of American labor; a revenue to provide for the expenses of the government and the making of the United States independent as against foreign aid in the provision of everything that enters into the question of national defense. The tariff law of the last Congress provides for all these in ample way, and one of the immediate results is has caused a deficit of $58,000,000 into a surplus of $28,000,000.

We indorse the action of President Taft and a Republican Congress in providing an expert and impartial permanent tariff board to investigate tariff schedules, with a view to a just correction of any inequalities and to relieve the country from political tariff agitation so disastrous to prosperity.

We heartily indorse the administration of Governor John Franklin Fort and the progressive, effective and successful legislation enacted by the Republican legislatures during the term of his office.

True to the pledge of three years ago, the Republican party has enacted into law a uniform and effective public utilities statute for the proper regulation of quasi-public corporations. It is a measure of regulation—not of administration or confiscation. It confers wide powers, but has been approved by experts and by the press of the country as being the best exponent of this class of legislation thus far developed. The expense of the commission created by it is moderate, and in keeping with the functions of the State and the importance to such matters. The new commission has begun its labors and is working smoothly and effectively.

We favor a statute giving the Public Utilities Commission the power to fix just and reasonable rates to be charged by public utility corporations.

We approve the policy of conservation announced by the President, and we believe, in so far as it is possible, the principles which govern that policy for the nation should apply to the State.

We believe in the principle that an industry ought to bear the cost of personal injuries sustained in the business. A Republican Legislature and Governor placed the first employers' liability law on the statute books of New Jersey, and they have also provided for additional legislation on the subject by the creation of an active and efficient commission, to report by bill at the next session of the Legislature. We pledge the party to a passage of a law carrying out the foregoing principle.

We believe in the enactment of a civil service law that shall provide for the permanent employment of officials so long as they discharge the duties of their positions in a creditable manner, to the satisfaction of their immediate superiors in office.

We favor such election and primary laws as will make the decision of the people as to elections and primaries easy of expression and sure of execution, and that the election machinery created shall be such that at the primaries all contesting candidates shall be represented fairly and impartially, and that by enrollment or otherwise at the primaries of each party shall be confined to the membership thereof. We favor the election of all delegates to conventions under the primary laws of the State.

We heartily indorse the policy inaugurated by the Republican party of using all revenue from automobile licenses for the repair and maintenance of our splendid system of improved roads, and we advocate such legislation with respect to automobiles as shall be just alike to the automobilists and to the taxpayers of this State, and also properly promote the reciprocal relations between this and other States with respect to the use of the public highways by non-resident automobilists.

We favor the wise and beneficial development of the commerce of the State, and to that end we pledge ourselves to the continuance of the policy of the consistent and steady maintenance of our public highways and inland waterways, and we approve the policy of Federal aid in the improvement of our adjacent interstate waterways.

Fifteen years ago the Republicans of this State, appalled by the widespread corruption under Democratic administration, placed the Republican party in control, and have continued it in power since that time. The results have been greatly to the advantage of the State in administrative and legislative accomplishments, and demonstrates the wisdom of a further continuance of Republican power and responsibility.

MISS WILSON IS DEAD AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Miss Charlotte R. Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Lucinda S., and the late Charles M. Wilson, died at 2:30 Wednesday morning at her home, 426 Madison avenue, after a long illness. She was taken ill last February and since that time has been a great sufferer from a complication of disease. For some time her death was expected.

Miss Wilson was a member of Trinity Reformed church, the Sunday school and the Young Women's Mission Band, being active in religious work until her health prevented her attendance at the services. She was a young woman of exemplary Christian character, and was admired for her many excellent qualities by all who knew her.

Besides a mother, Miss Wilson is survived by two sisters, Miss Mabel Wilson and Miss Elizabeth Wilson and four brothers, Howard H. and Charles F. Wilson, of Detroit, Mich., Augustus A. Wilson, of Rye N. Y., and George D. Wilson who lives at home.

DUNELLEN TAX RATE IS $1.96 ON THE $100.

Returns from the various taxing districts in the county, now being received by Clerk William A. Spencer, of the Middlesex County Board of Taxation, show that the rates in nearly all places are low in comparison with what they have been in past years. Dunellen's rate is $1.96.

According to the official returns received up to yesterday, rates in some of the districts are as follows: Woodbridge, $2.02; South Amboy, $1.52; South Brunswick, $1.36; Spotswood, $1.63; Monroe, $1.44; Perth Amboy, $1.78; New Brunswick's rate will remain at $2.16, according to the figures first compiled a few days ago.

Approaching Wedding.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Cecil Helen Rockefeller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rockefeller, of Willever street, to Frank Zimmerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Zimmerman, of Bound Brook. The wedding will take place early in October. Both the bride and groom are well known here and have a large circle of friends.

COLLIER WINS ON APPEAL

TROUBLE OVER ASSIGNMENT.

The Supreme Court at Trenton has just rendered a decision in the case of Asa Collier against Arthur De Brigard, reversing the judgment of non-suit rendered by Judge Newcorn in the District court here last winter. The decision is a victory for Counsellor J. Henry Crane, who represented Mr. Collier. Harry Runyon and Frank J. Katz appeared for Mr. De Brigard.

The suit arose out of the assignment made about a year ago by De Brigard & Collier for the benefit of their creditors. William G. DeMeza, of this city, was made the assignee, and right after the assignment, Arthur De Brigard, the father of Louis De Brigard, the senior member of the firm of De Brigard & Collier, offered to pay all the liabilities of the firm if the business was turned over to him.

Mr. DeMeza, as assignee, upon the advice of his counsel, W. S. Angleman, conveyed the property back to the firm and caused the firm to convey the business to Arthur De Brigard in fulfillment of the agreement.

Arthur De Brigard then took possession of the business and commenced paying the debts of the firm, but, it was alleged, refused to pay Asa Collier, his claim of $73 which had been by an oversight listed in the deed of assignment as $190.

The case was tried twice, a nonsuit being granted against Collier each time. In the first case, the nonsuit was granted on the ground that the statute of frauds intervened, and that there was no privity of contract between the parties to the suit; and on the second trial, the non-suit was granted on the ground that the agreement with Arthur De Brigard, by the assignee was void; and that Collier by allowing a larger amount to be listed in the deed of assignment than was due, was guilty of an attempt to defraud. Mr. Crane took an appeal to the Supreme Court which was argued at Trenton last February.

The Supreme Court speaking through Justice Reed, reverses Judge Newcorn's rulings on all points, and after reciting the evidence as to the transfer of the business to Arthur De Brigard, held that a valid title passed to Arthur De Brigard as there was given a sufficient consideration to support his promise to pay the debts of the firm, and raised a privity of contract between him and each creditor, and also removed the transaction from the operation of the statute of frauds.

As to Mr. Collier attempting to obtain more than was due him, the court says: "In that list, the plaintiff's claim was stated to be $190, instead of $73, the amount for which judgment was obtained and entered. The list of claims was made up without each claim being carefully calculated. It does not appear that Collier fraudulently suggested that the amount due him would not equal $190. Collier did not put in, nor did he have the opportunity to put in his claim to the assignee under oath, so no fraud appears in making a false claim to that officer."

The court's decision upholds the action of the assignee and his counsel, and exonerates Collier from any attempt to obtain more than was due him and from any fraud in the matter.

PAST SUPREME REGENT VISITS ARCANUM COUNCIL

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, at its meeting Thursday, enjoyed a fraternal visit from Past Supreme Regent Harry Ward, of Jersey City, and District Deputy Grand Regent George Anderson, of East Orange, both of whom made interesting addresses, telling of the progress being made by the order, not only in this district, but throughout the whole jurisdiction. Their remarks were encouraging to the members, learning as they did the latest news from the State and the condition of the organization throughout the country.

After the addresses and during a business session, George M. Christian was elected orator for Plainfield Council, to succeed H. W. Satterfield, who has been made vice-regent. A social hour followed, during which refreshments were served and cigars were passed.

Among the concerns chartered in the State department at Trenton, yesterday, was the Century Tire Company, with a capital of $125,000.

VIVIAN M. LEWIS.

One of Vivian M. Lewis' friends in sketching the Republican gubernatorial candidate's career writes that "he is a good mixer; has lots of friends in all walks of life," and in recounting his public services shows that the Paterson man has had the benefit of an unusually wide experience in politics and government. Moreover that he has invariably discharged a public trust with marked credit to himself and to those whom he has served. These are the things which count. It is because of these that the Republican nominee is a strong candidate; one who will appeal not alone to the rank and file of his own party but who will attract the independent voter and the voter of other affiliations who places principle above party—considers past performances when weighing the relative values of opposing candidates.

Woodrow Wilson, great though he be as a scholar and famous though he be as the head of one of America's magnificent seats of learning, is at a disadvantage. He has had absolutely no practical experience whatever in the affairs of the State government. He is an untried man and therefore an unknown quantity. At the most he would be an experiment, and in this year of grace, we take it, the people of New Jersey are not willing to turn the highest office into a school of instruction. The demand is for a man who thoroughly understands the political situation; who is familiar with the prevailing conditions; who possesses an accurate knowledge of the various departments of the government and who can take up the State's business without wasting valuable time in acquainting himself with how things are done, how things should be done and what things are to be done.

Vivian M. Lewis is not only a man of splendid ability and unquestioned integrity but is ripe with experience. For years he has been in the public service in one capacity or another. As an assemblyman, as chancery clerk and as tax commissioner, he has rubbed elbows with the men who have been running the State and thereby gained a fund of knowledge which makes him fit in every sense of the word to take up the work as Mr. Fort's successor. He is a good judge of men. He knows what the State needs and what the people want. He is a candidate who should appeal not only to all Republicans but to men of all parties who have the best interests of New Jersey at heart.

THAT GARBAGE PLANT.

It may be right and proper for the Common Council to expend the people's taxes for opening up new streets and the like. Month in and month out, year in and year out, large sums are being used for this and that improvement. We get a $50,000 police headquarters; we get a $40,000 brick pavement. But when are we going to get a sanitary system of garbage collection and disposal?

Some years ago, a tract was purchased for a disposal plant. The action had been taken at the urgent request of the Board of Health and some people really had an idea that the city fathers were in earnest. The truth of the matter is, however, that since that time not one solitary step has been taken in the direction of bringing about the improvement. The pleadings of the health authorities in their annual reports have been utterly ignored. And today, the householder who pays his taxes with the expectation that in return the municipality will do what is done in almost every other city is compelled to pay some one to cart away the garbage or be fined for not doing so. The present unsanitary condition is a disgrace to any city that pretends to be up to date and all know we make that boast.

Not a brick will be laid during the coming week on any of the important building operations under way in New York City.

A lockout of 10,000 bricklayers for alleged violations of their agreement in ordering strikes against a member of a builders' association went into effect at midnight Monday. The employers will not try to fill the places of the men for a week and during that time building operations will cease so far as bricklayers' work is concerned.

If at the end of that period the situation remains the same, bricklayers will be brought here from all parts of the country.

PALMER H. CHARLOCK TO BE 33RD DEGREE

The Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General, thirty-third degree, for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States of America, which held its ninety-eighth annual session last week in Detroit and at which six Masons from New Jersey were crowned and received the thirty-third and last degree of regular Freemasonry, was fraught with special interest to Masons generally, especially to those of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite.

Perhaps the item of interest most likely to attract the attention of Masons in this vicinity is that Postmaster Palmer H. Charlock, of Elizabeth, was elected to receive the thirty-third degree at the next annual session. This honor was awarded him for his service in the bodies of the rite located in Jersey City, particularly in the capacity of master of the Chapter of Rose Croix.

The men who receive the degree rarely known in advance when they are to be nominated or elected, although their merit and service may have prepared the minds of their associates for the news.

During the recent session of the council its deliberations were of unusual importance to the rite at large and just before to close the resignation of the Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander General Samuel C. Lawrence, of Medford, Mass., was announced. He is succeeded by Barton Smith, of Toledo, O., who held the second office by rank, that of lieutenant grand commander. Until the next triennial election of officers in Boston, in 1912, this vacancy will be filled by appointment and the Scottish Rite membership at large are in a state of expectancy not unlike that prevailing prior to the election of a President of the United States. No hint of the succession has escaped yet.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will begin its fall meetings, Friday afternoon at the usual hour.

PLAINFIELD AND KEARNY TEAMS PLAY TIE GAME

The American Types, of Jersey City, being unable to play the Plainfield Association Football club here on Saturday, a game was arranged with the Kearney United. During the early stages of the game both teams played carefully and took little chances, the play being mainly around mid-field. Then the locals let themselves out and made several good attempts for a goal, but were unable to score. The defence of the Kearneys was particularly good. The visitors met with no success in their efforts for a goal in this half.

In the second half, the Kearneys got down to business and made some fine rushes to the local's goal, but the strong play of Craig put them back on every rush, his long kicking being magnificent. The locals then took a long run down field and Heaume gave Hosie a nice pass, which he succeeded in beating Barclay with, giving Plainfield the first point of the game. Then the Kearneys gave McNeice a free kick, which he succeeded in clearing nicely. A corner kick was awarded to the visitors on which they secured the equalizing goal.

The locals then bombarded the visitors' goal during the last ten minutes of play, but were unsuccessful in scoring and time was called with a tie score of 1 to 1. The lineup:

BELIEVE THAT BOY IS KIDNAPPERS' VICTIM.

Peter Cirincion, six years old, a son of a wealthy Armenian merchant of Union Hill, disappeared from school Monday in circumstances which lead the police to believe he was kidnapped and is being held for ransom. Playmates of the boy say he was accosted by two men during the noon hour, and taken to a candy store at the Hackensack Plank road and Clinton avenue.

Here the men bought for him two cents' worth of candy and the trio disappeared. About 3 o'clock the party was seen in a carriage, driving northward.

Subway Odors.

Yeast—"A physician who has experimented with oranges asserts that they have a power possessed by few other fruits, that of absorbing odors from the atmosphere."

Crimsonbeak—"Well, I saw a man eating an orange in the subway the other day. The orange didn't seem to absorb any of the other many odors; on the contrary, it seemed to produce an additional one."—Yonkers Statesman.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Mrs. Jacob Sourmilch, of Bartle avenue, is still quite ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, where she was taken a week ago. Her condition, however, is said to be improving slowly.

Rev. Mr. Hollingshead, pastor of the Methodist church, is expected to return Saturday from his vacation, which has been spent at his home in Ohio.

Miss Glorybell Moffett, of Westfield avenue, has returned from a week's visit with relatives and friends at Kearney.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander MacCauley, of Bartle avenue, have been entertaining relatives and friends from out of town.

CORNER-STONE FROM ERIN

Granite Block for St. Joseph's New Edifice Gift of Mother of Priest.

TO BE BLESSED IN NOVEMBER.

Stone Comes From the Scene of St. Patrick's Labors in Ireland —To Be Dressed at Local Quarry.

The corner-stone for the new St. Joseph's church to be erected in the borough, arrived Monday on the Steamer Baltic, of the White Star Line, having come from County Armagh, Ireland, where it was purchased by relatives of Rev. W. H. Miller, of St. Joseph's church. The stone is the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, of South Amboy mother of Father Miller.

Considerable interest attaches to the stone by reason of the fact that it comes from the seat of St. Patrick's sea in Ireland, where he preached and carried on his mission work. It is of gray granite and said to be a particularly fine specimen. Cardinal Logue, who is now in this country, having come from the same section where the stone was selected, will officiate at the blessing of a similar stone for St. Patrick's church, Philadelphia, in a few days.

The stone for St. Joseph's church will reach Plainfield in a few days and will be sent to Bartle's quarry, where it will be trimmed and put in proper shape, according to the plans of Joseph Jackson, of New York, the architect for the new edifice. The time for blessing the new stone will probably be in November, about Thanksgiving Day, when imposing ceremonies will be held.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The low water in the New Market pond seems to have improved the fishing to offset the poor boating. Several good catches have been reported recently among them one by Richard Randolph, of Clinton avenue, who landed six nice bass. They averaged about two pounds each.

W. G. Runyon is now comfortably established in the middle store of his new building on North avenue. The offices have been commodiously fitted up and are complete in every detail. Earl Ising has taken a temporary position with Mr. Runyon as assistant.

Assessor John H. L. Peters has returned from Woodside, L. I., where he visited relatives. Mrs. Peters has been at Woodside and Miss Elsie Peters left for there today to attend the wedding of a relative.

A large number of Dunellen and New Market residents went to Trenton today to attend the Inter-state fair.

Miss Ethel Humphrey, of Plainfield, was the guest of friends in the borough yesterday.

Jacob Fisher, of Washington avenue, is entertaining his brother from Bridgeton.

The monthly communion service will be held at the First Baptist church on Sunday.

Miss Amy Stratz, of Phillipsburg, has returned home after visiting friends in this city.

Mrs. W. C. Decker, of Trenton, who has been visiting friends here, has returned home.

Miss Marie Jones, of Elizabeth, who has been visiting friends here, has returned home.

Eldon Miller, of Washington avenue, has returned to Syracuse University to continue his studies.

Miss Hope Miller, of Washington avenue, is able to be out again after being detained at home by illness for several weeks.

FOR APPOINTIVE BOARD

Voters May Decide Whether They Desire to Take Ad. vantage of Law.

COMPOSED OF NINE MEMBERS.

Petition Signed by Five Per Cent. of the Voters a Requisite to the Submission of the Question.

It is not improbable that the voters will be asked at the coming election to decide whether they desire to substitute an appointive board of nine members for an elective board of six members to have charge of their public educational matters. Some prominent citizens who desire the Board of Education to be entirely removed from politics, it is said on good authority, have been in conference with Mayor Fisk during the last few days urging him to renew the recommendation along this line made in his last annual message.

With this end in view they want the mayor to actively advocate such a change to be made with the consent of the people at the next election. Report has it that the Mayor is favorably inclined believing that were such an innovation brought about no executive of the city would appoint any but the most competant men for place on the board.

The school law provides that such a change may be ordered by the voters at a general election provided it is ordered by a resolution of either the Common Council or the Board of Education, or on petition of five per cent. of the voters. As the petition is the most popular method, one has been prepared and is now in The Daily Press office where any voters desiring the submission of the question at the general election may sign it.

Should the proposition be carried at the election, it is the duty of the mayor to appoint nine men to compose the board, three for one year, three for two years and three for three years.

MISS GEORGIANNA SMITH ENGAGED TO MR. BREESE.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Georgianna Hoadley Smith, daughter of William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, to Edward Yarde Breese, of Trenton. Mr. Breese is the son of the late Captain James Buchanan Breese, United States Marine Corps, and the grandson of the late Captain Edward Madison Yarde, U. S. N., and is a cousin of Clifton Wharton, Jr., of this city. Mr. Breese is associated with the bond department of Taylor, Smith & Evans, bankers of New York. He is a member of the Military Order Loyal Legion, the Association of American International Riflemen and of numerous clubs.

Miss Smith, who is well-known in Plainfield and New York society, has been active among the younger society set here and greatly interested in charitable enterprises in this city, being prominent in the King's Daughters and its allied interests. No date has been set for the wedding.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S AFRICAN BOOK READY.

After months of preparation, and careful supervision since his return by Mr. Roosevelt, his great book, "African Game Trails," appears all over the United States, in England, France, Germany and Sweden, Wednesday, August 24th. In order that the tremendous initial demand might be promptly met, Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons have printed the book both in the East and the West, and every effort is making to distribute the book with equal celerity through the dozen or more central agencies of Messrs. Scribner in the great cities from New York to San Francisco. Owing to the railway strike, several carloads of paper were delayed on the Grand Trunk, and for this reason it is possible that some persons may not receive their copies as promptly as others.

This volume is a large octavo of more than five hundred pages printed from beautiful type and elaborately illustrated. It contains more than forty thousand words that did not appear during the serial publication, and in addition numerous pictures made especially for the volume. The subjects for the original drawings were selected by Mr. Roosevelt and they were made under his advice. More than a thousand agents have been at work for some time selling this book by means of an elaborate prospectus, and now applications are being received at the rate of about one hundred a day for territory, so that every corner of this country will soon be reached, and, with the large facilities of the publishers, it is believed that even the unprecedented demand will be promptly filled. It is doubtful whether any volume has attracted the world-wide attention of this and has so large an audience ready and eager to secure the finished work of the most distinguished American of the present day and the one best known to all civilized nations.

DEMOCRATS HAD A RALLY

Crowded House Greets William E. Tuttle and Other Noted Speakers.

TARIFF AND G. O. P. RAPPED.

Crowded to the doors and with such speakers as William E. Tuttle, of Westfield, Democratic candidate for Congress; H. J. McLoughlin, of Elizabeth, candidate for the Assembly; William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, a splendid orator, and James E. Martine, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, the campaign of the Democratic club opened with rush Monday at the club rooms on North avenue, it was the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of Democrats in the history of the club. Every mention of the name of Woodrow Wilson was cheered and James E. Martine received an ovation when he arose to speak. All the speakers were cordially applauded and most enthusiastic candidates for the assembly pledged themselves unequivocally to support Martine in event of their election. The tariff and the G. O. P. were rapped good and hard and Senator John Kean came in for a few incidental criticisms.

Robert C. Woodhouse, Democratic candidate for the Common Council in the second ward, acted as chairman of the meeting at the request of Leroy J. Ellis, president of the club. The first speaker was William E. Tuttle, who declared that this was a year for a Democratic victory, not only here but throughout the country. He said that the trend of sentiment was all against the Republicans, especially in the East. He gave thanks to the insurgents for the beating they gave G. O. P. bosh at the primaries. Mr. Tuttle referred to Governor Fort's speech at Elizabeth last year as an indication of the corruption which exists at Trenton and declared that it was up to the Democratic party to correct the conditions existing there. He gave a synopsis of the Democratic platform and urged the unanimous support of the whole ticket, and specially urged the support of Mr. Martine.

Calvin E. Brodhead, candidate for the Assembly, followed Mr. Tuttle in a speech which bristled with points raised against the tariff and John Kean. He declared that there was a wide-spread desire throughout the Senatorial district to remove John Kean from public life and the opportunity was at hand now. He referred to the high cost of living and attached the blame for it on the Republican party and the Payne-Aldrich tariff.

H. J. McLoughlin claimed that he was no politician, but gave a splendid political speech. He declared that the appointments to office were the biggest part of the political graft, interspersing his caustic remarks with humor which pleased the big audience.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders held his audience for fifteen minutes with a remarkably eloquent speech. He said that this campaign was worthy of the best effort of everybody, and believed that Mr. Tuttle would be elected. He had no doubt that the Republican party had allied itself with the special interests and had lowered itself to a state of "privilege." The country has prospered, he said, in spite of protection. According to the present tariff which the Republican Congress aided and abetted by Messrs. Payne and Aldrich, the poor laboring man ought to be riding in an automobile, shoeless, with a pair of cotton socks on and with a bottle of champagne next to his lips for they are the only really reduced necessities. Mr. Saunders references to the tariff brought forth frantic applause.

Howard Fleming and James E. Martine also spoke. Mr. Martine's speech being a characteristic effort with a reference to Thomas Jefferson, in which he was likened to Woodrow Wilson, whom his enemies call a mere-literary man. Mr. Martine declared that Jefferson was also a literary man and showed his ability in the drawing of the Declaration of Independence. Referring to Judge Runyon's declaration regarding a speaker of the house to create harmony in it he declared that there had been too much harmony already and that that was just the trouble.

After the meeting the executive committee of the club and members of the newly formed Woodrow Wilson Club, of North Plainfield, Mr. Saunders was asked to preside at the meeting on Thursday next at which Woodrow Wilson is to speak. Mr. Saunders consented. A press committee was appointed with David J. Carney as chairman, and a committee on ways and means.

Tyrannical Laws.

PROSPECTUS OF Y. W. C. A.

Announcements for the Fall and Winter Terms Made by Secretary.

FOR ALL THE DEPARTMENTS.

Opening Reception on Thursday Night, October 6—Religious, Social, Educational and Physical Classes.

The Young Women's Christian Association announced its fall and winter plans today, through Miss Amy Pryne Tapping, general secretary, showing that the coming season will be a busy one. All work in the gymnasium classes, as well as those in the industrial branches, will reopen October 17. The work in the gymnasium classes will be about as last year, and beginning from Fifth street into Liberty. It was driven by Mrs. Walter Longman, of West Seventh street, who had apparently last control of the wheel. The auto leaped the curb and dashed into the crowd of parishioners going to and from mass. The people scattered in all directions. Miss Mattox alone was struck. She would have been knocked down but for the fact that she grabbed hold of a lamp and clung desperately to it. Mrs. Longman managed to have lost all control of the auto and it continued on despite the efforts of a dozen men to stop it. Miss Mattox finally pulled herself to the hood just as the car swung into a tree in front of St. Mary's church.

The accident was witnessed by fully 500 people and several women fainted when it seemed that the young woman might be crushed to death.

COLONIA COUNTRY CLUB DEFEATED BY PARK G. C.

Owing to the fact that the Park Golf Club team played a return match with the Colonia Country Club at the latter place, Saturday, there was little doing at the local course. The Parks regained lost honors of a week ago, when they were defeated, by taking Saturday's game by a score of 10 to 9. The match was close and exciting throughout. A feature was the fact that Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the Park Golf Club, defeated his opponent, C. H. Hart, captain and champion of the Colonia Country Club, by 6 up and 5 to play. Captain Hart has been defeating the best players this season and his defeat on Saturday was the worst one for him in a long time. C. B. Morse, captain of the Parks, was unable to play, owing to an indisposition. The summary:

Park Golf Club—Dr. H. K. Carroll, 3; W. V. Byard, 0; J. V. Beekman, 0; A. E. Smith, 3; Dr. Runquist, 3; W. E. Lough, 0; A. E. Morrell, 1; total, 10.

Colonia Country Club—C. H. Hart, 0; McCormick, 3; Ward, 3; Corbin, 0; Morris, 0; Peterson, 3; Bowers, 0; total, 9.

The deciding game will be played within a short time the date and place to be announced in a few days.

LEXANDER LUSARDI SELLS OUT TO PHILLIP KIVATINOS.

Alexander Lusardi, one of the pioneer fruit dealers of the city, has been engaged in the business on West Front street for twenty-three years, sold out Monday to Philip Kivatinos, of Philadelphia, and the latter has taken possession. Mr. Lusardi has decided to take a long trip covering a period of about a year, which will include a visit to his native home in Italy. He will be accompanied by his children. He will leave Plainfield during the early part of the winter.

When Mr. Lusardi came to Plainfield he located on West Front street where his store is now situated, and has been very successful in business, having his long residence in this city. Mr. Lusardi has made a host of friends. He has always taken an active interest in city affairs and has held the high esteem of his fellow merchants.

ector and Bride Coming Home.

Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Ascension church, and his bride, who have been abroad for several weeks, are to arrive home on September 21, and are due to arrive this week. They will not return to Plainfield until October 1, and after they are settled in their home a reception will be given them by the parishioners of the church.

Milk Thieves Active.

Residents of East Fifth and Sixth streets have reported to the police that someone is stealing milk from their porches during the early morning hours. The police will investigate the matter and hope to stop the practice.

Probably Insane.

"A man on our side of the river," remarked the Ohio man, "recently bought a pint bottle of whiskey at a single drink and died from the effects."

"That man, suh," rejoined the Kentucky colonel, "must have been crazy. Any sane man, suh, ought to know there is at least two drinks in that bottle of whiskey."—Chicago Post.

LOST CONTROL OF AUTO; STRUCK A YOUNG WOMAN

Miss Sadie Mattox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron B. Mattox, of Spruce street, is confined to her bed today as the result of injuries and shock received Sunday morning when she was struck by an automobile on Liberty street and dragged several feet. The presence of mind alone saved her from possible death or being badly hurt as she pulled herself to the hood of the radiator just as the machine dashed against a tree. The young woman was removed to her home and Dr. F. J. Hughes is in attendance. Besides being in a highly nervous state, she has a broken thumb and a severely sprained back.

In company with her sister, Miss Mary Mattox, and Miss Alice Dixon, Miss Mattox was returning from St. Mary's church when the auto dashed to the front man. The people scattered in all directions. Miss Mattox alone was struck. She would have been knocked down but for the fact that she grabbed hold of a lamp and clung desperately to it. Mrs. Longman managed to have lost all control of the auto and it continued on despite the efforts of a dozen men to stop it. Miss Mattox finally pulled herself to the hood just as the car swung into a tree in front of St. Mary's church.

The accident was witnessed by fully 500 people and several women fainted when it seemed that the young woman might be crushed to death.

WORLD WIDE TRAVELER GUEST OF PLAINFIELDER

Miss Emma Smith, of Adelaide, South Australia is the guest of Mrs. Maria Praed, of Grant avenue, for several days. Miss Smith was connected with the educational department of Adelaide for over twenty-five years and in December, 1908, she gave up her position to travel. Miss Smith has traveled in every part of Australia, New South Wales and New Zealand, until June 17, 1909, when she embarked for England. Arriving there, she was welcomed by relatives and friends and extensively entertained. She visited all the principal cities of England, Scotland and Ireland, and then she sailed from Liverpool for Boston Mass., when, after a stay of several weeks, she came to New York.

The great buildings, the subways, tunels and many other centres of attraction interested Miss Smith. Referring to traffic regulations in London Miss Smith said that she thinks that the enforcement of them in New York is far more efficient, and besides, she complimented the New York policeman on his soldierly bearing.

Since coming to Plainfield, Miss Smith has been charmed with the city. Referring to the suffragette question, Miss Smith said that nothing of that sort disturbs the public mind in Australia, for there women vote on every question brought before the commonwealth. Miss Smith has voted for a number of years. In Australia the women take an equal interest in the elections with the men, and they all exercise the right of suffrage.

After a stay of a month or so in the United States, Miss Smith will leave for London, from which place she will tour France, Germany, Spain and Italy, and then return home, after an absence of two and a half years.

'BOBBY' LEECH SHOOTS THE RAPIDS OF NIAGARA

Bobby Leech, of Niagara Falls Ontario and formerly of this city, went through the thundering Whirlpool Rapids in a barrel Saturday afternoon, having started from the Maid of the Mist landing on the New York shore. He drifted about in the Whirlpool fifty-five minutes before friends caught his barrel and pulled it ashore.

The day was wet and dreary. The banks and bridges were noticeably barren of interesting onlookers, and there was nothing but Leech's determination to coax him on to death or seeming fame. It was 3.57 o'clock when he drifted into the suction of the rapids. The current swept him fiercely on over the route five times travelled by Graham in a similar manner; once by Margaret Wagenfuhrer on Sept. 6, 1901, and by pretty Maud Willard on Sept. 7, 1901, when she went to death in a barrel drifted about in the pool for five hours.

Three minutes after passing under the railroad bridges the barrel in which Leech was a passenger was adrift on the whirling waters of the pool. He was carried over to the Canadian side and then caught in the up-current and swept toward Driftwood point. At one time he was within a few feet of the Canadian shore, but nobody was there to rescue him. His friends not having had time to reach the spot. Leech did not know where he was, for he had no pepp-holes in the barrel. He was carried out into the middle of the pool and then round again.

When next he approached Driftwood point the barrel was caught by William Hill, of Niagara Falls, Ontario, with a spike pole and towed to shore. Leech was helped out in pretty good condition.

WATCHUNG HUNT MEMBERS RIDE AFTER THE HOUNDS

The Watchung Hunt Club held its first chase of the season Saturday afternoon and it was an auspicious opening of the hunting season, there being nineteen riders in the field. The start was made from the New Market pond and the course, which extended through to Clinton avenue, across the Delafield farm and thence to the clubhouse, included fifteen good jumps. There was only one spill, that of C. W. Holland's groom. He was not seriously hurt. Huntsman Watkins rode with the party, and Rufus C. Finch was master of the hounds.

Upon the return of the riders to the clubhouse all partook of a fine breakfast as guests of Rufus C. Finch. Later a dinner party was given by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Holland and the Eureka Trio also entertained with vocal and instrumental music. Next Saturday E. S. Hooley will give a dinner party to about fifty friends. Those in the chase were Rufus C. Finch, C. E. S. Bellows, Charles Wilder, Hart Farlee, C. W. Holland, Harry L. Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Albia Trojan, Hugh Gormley, Schuyler Casey, of this city; H. W. Rose, of New York; Walter Webb, of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Brown and Walter Brown, of Westfield. The hounds will be sent out again Wednesday morning at 6:30 o'clock.

WILSON CLUB ORGANIZED

SAUNDERS IS MADE PRESIDENT.

A number of citizens of the borough of North Plainfield got together Monday in the parlors of the Hotel Chatham and formed what will be known during the present political campaign, as the Woodrow Wilson Club, with some of the most prominent citizens of the borough at its head. The club is pledged to work for the election of Dr. Wilson and while there are several well known Republicans in the list of club members they in no wise promise to support the rest of the Democratic ticket. Their connection with the club being merely in the interests of the gubernatorial candidate of the Democrats.

The officers were unanimously elected: President, Former Mayor William L. Saunders; first vice-president, former Mayor Samuel Townsend; second vice-president, J. O. Osgood, president of the Board of Health; third vice-president, Augustus Van Deventer; fourth vice-president, Timothy F. Harrington; secretary, David J. Carney. The executive committe consists of A. E. Kenney, A. A. Cannon, H. P. Tosseller, Thos. F. Gough and John E. O'Mara.

As soon as the organization was perfected the meeting was adjourned to allow a large delegation to go over and confer with the Plainfield Democratic club with the object of helping out in securing a proper auditorium for the mass meeting to be held on Thursday night at which Dr. Wilson will speak on the issues of the campaign. It is believed that Reform Hall is altogether too small to accommodate the crowds which will want to attend this meeting and pressure is to be brought on the managers of the two local theatres to secure one of them. A committee was appointed for this special object and they are at work on the task.

When seen this morning one of the committee declared that the Plainfield theatre would probably be the scene of the meeting.

REV. C. D. BURROWS MAY COME TO ST. STEPHEN'S

Rev. Charles D. Burrows, curate of Trinity church, Jamestown, R. I., it is rumored, will be the successor to Rev. Morgan Ashley, as rector of St. Stephen's church. It is understood that a call has been extended to Mr. Burrows and that he has signified his willingness to accept. A meeting of the vestry will be held within a few days to decide the matter.

Mr. Ashley, who has resigned to become curate of All Angels' church, New York city, of which Rev. Morgan Townsend is the rector, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday, and will soon take up his residence in New York.

CARL R. SCHULTZ TO MARRY AGAIN.

Announcement of his intended marriage to Miss Minnie Chappell, of New London, Conn., was made Sunday by Carl R. Schultz, of the Carl H. Schultz Mineral Water Company, of New York. The wedding, according to Mr. Schultz, will take place on Thursday next, at his home in Murray Hill, N. J.

Mr. Schultz made no defense to the suit for divorce brought by his first wife about a year ago. The suit was brought in New Jersey, Mrs. Schultz charging that her husband was not contributing to her support. A master in chancery recommended that she be granted a decree.

Mrs. Jane Beam, of Paterson, who observed her 102d birthday anniversary Sunday, declared that she owed her long life to not gossiping about her neighbors and reading good books.

"I don't believe that drinking helps to keep men and women alive," she says, "but it is certainly a remarkable thing the way drinkers manage to hang on. I don't drink myself—I have never tasted liquor; so I won't presume to point out the pitfalls of drinking to others."

Keeping Up Appearances.

"A woman finds a man out after she is married to him," said Mrs. Jangle, bitterly.

"Yes," replied her husband, meekly. "But that doesn't give him a chance to lay off the mask. He's got to go on for years trying to keep the children convinced that he is an intelligent and morally responsible person."—Washington Evening Star.

JERSEY CENTRAL REPORT

Annual Earnings, $27,436,800 Twice as Big as the Previous Year.

IT IS EQUAL TO 33.18 PER CENT.

Revenues Increased and $1,203,000 Paid Off on Funded Debt—Many Great Improvements Made.

The pamphlet report of the Central Railroad of New Jersey for the fiscal year ended June 30 was published Monday, showing a big increase in net earnings over last year and a balance available for dividends on the $27,436,800 capital stock more than twice as large as at the close of the fiscal period of 1909. The balance is equal to 33.18 per cent. on the capital stock, contrasted with 16.54 per cent. in 1909 and 17.57 per cent. in 1908.

The report states also that the funded debt was reduced during the year by $1,203,000 to $50,268,000 through the retirement of five series of short-term equipment bonds.

Of the total operating expenses more than half was paid direct to labor, and the increase of expenses due to advances in wages was set at 4.14 per cent. Considerable improvement work was put under way during the year; notably new express and station facilities at Jersey City at $300,000; a covered lighterage pier in Jersey City, $426,100, and track elevation near Cranford, $115,448.

The statement has total revenues stated at $25,041,624, and increase of $2,039,278; total operating expenses, $15,151,768, an increase of $1,056,942, with net revenue of $10,489,856 increase $982,336. A large share of the total balance was derived from profit of sales of stock of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and two dividends on the stock of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company.

REV. MORGAN ASHLEY TO LEAVE NEXT THURSDAY

Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church for the past two years, preached his last sermon in that church Sunday morning to a large congregation, taking for his topic, "Steadfastness."

Rev. Morgan Ashley.

Rev. Mr. Ashley has accepted a call from All Angels' church, in New York city, where he will be the curate.

Sunday's services consisted of communion at 7:30 in the morning, morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock, and evensong at 4 in the afternoon. Just after the morning service the ceremony of baptism was conferred on the daughter of George Staats.

Rev. Mr. Ashley will probably leave Plainfield on Thursday. On Saturday night members of the parish gathered at the parish house and surprised the rector by giving him a farewell reception. Nearly a hundred of the flock were present.

During his incumbency here Mr. Ashley has practically doubled the membership of St. Stephen's and is much beloved by the congregation he is leaving. In All Angels parish in New York there are about five thousand people, 1,500 hundred of whom are communicants of the church.

Rev. Mr. Ashley is a graduate from Princeton University and the General Theological Seminary, New York. He came to this city from East Orange two years ago.

"Aunty" Arnold's Narrow Escape.

"Aunty" Arnold, aged 93 years; aunt to Mrs. H. F. Reynolds, of 819 First place, is slowly recovering from the effects of an accident at her home a few days ago, which might have proved fatal. Mrs. Arnold, who is both blind and deaf, fell the entire length of the front stairs at her home and was picked up in a semi-conscious and helpless condition. Dr. Sarah D. Keeney was summoned and an examination showed that there were no bones broken, and Mrs. Arnold was suffering chiefly from shock. She is now improving under Dr. Keeney's care.

COMMUTERS BLAMED BY LOCAL OPTIONIST

Asserting that conditions in New Jersey were different from those in the Western States, J. Frank Burke, superintndent of the Anti-Saloon League in New Jersey, in the Methodist Episcopal church at Morristown yesterday, excused the failure of the league in securing the passage of a local option law in this State, though he said the local option vote in the State was four times as large now as it was when he took up the work in New Jersey.

The great bodies of foreign-born citizens in the cities were mentioned as one of the causes for the lack of enthusiasm over local option. Conditions on the seacoast of the State were also ascribed as a reason for failure, as was the very small rural population of the State.

"But the great body of commuters give us the most trouble," said Mr. Burke. "Going every day to New York or Philadelphia, these men purchase New York and Philadelphia newspapers, and in consequence they are in touch with politics and business affairs in New York and Pennsylvania but of their own State they learn but little."

Mr. Burke told how in Newark there were sixty saloons close to the doors of factories, and described the "treating" system in vogue among factory employes, saying that it tended toward the destruction of American homes.

"We are working to write the local option law on the hearts of the people," said Mr. Burke, "for we know that we must do this before we can get it written on the law books of the State."

SERIES OF ENTERTAINMENTS PLANNED BY TEMPLE BAPTISTS.

The trustees of the Temple Baptist church have decided to hold a series of lectures and entertainments during October and November to meet the financial needs of the church. Arrangements have been made to hold the affairs at the First Baptist church, and among those already engaged are Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church; Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, who is pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, and L. V. Randolph. Charles W. McCutchean has been chosen chairman of the committee in charge for a monthly affair.

The church recently incurred considerable expense, including the purchase of 200 new chairs from the Lambertville Baptist church, and it is for the purpose of liquidating this expense that the lectures and musicale are being planned. The dates for the entertainments will be announced later.

GREAT NIGHT FOR KNIGHTS

Grand Lodge Special Session Held in Rooms of Perseverance Lodge No. 74.

MR. KEELER MAKES A HIT.

General William Hitchcock, of Jersey City, and Judge Schenck Speak—"Dutch" Supper Served.

The first special session of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, ever held in this State took place Friday in the lodge rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, and at least two hundred members from out of town were present. Three more meetings of similar character are to be held, Millville, Long Branch and Paterson being the places.

The local lodge was in charge of Past Grand Chancellor John Ulrich, assisted by Grand Chancellor Elmer Deucher, of Elizabeth; Grand Vice Chancellor Harry Keeler, of Newark; Grand Prelate William Quick, of Somerville; Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Margerum, of Trenton.

Frank Putnam of this city, was appointed grand master-at-arms; Charles Fredericks, of Elizabeth, grand inside guard; F. M. Littell, of Perth Amboy, grand outer guard. Plainfield was also honored by the appointment of V. W. Nash, Jr., on the committee of credentials. With Mr. Nash are Josiah Pool, of Elizabeth, and William B. Edgar, of Neshanic.

Twenty-two members of the order received the degree of past chancellor, among whom were seven members of the order in this city, six from Somerville, eight from Elizabeth and one from Rahway. Speeches were made by all of the presiding officers and Major-General William Hitchcock, of Jersey City, who urged the members of the order to join the uniformed rank or the auxiliary which is to be instituted in this city on next Tuesday night.

Harry Keeler of Newark, delivered the speech which most of the members will remember for years. Mr. Keeler talked on selfishness and showed some points which brought the question squarely before his hearers. There are three candidates for the office of supreme representative, Judge Ulrich, Joseph Wilson, of Perth Amboy and Henry Heinrichs, of Paterson, and some of Mr. Keeler's remarks were straight to the point on the aspirations of these candidates.

Among the other speakers were Judge Lewis H. Schenck, of Neshanic, who gave a splendid talk on the value of the order to humanity in general; Lewis Moosbrugger, candidate for the assembly, who dilated upon the splendid fraternal relations existing between the local lodges and officers who declared that the splendid condition of the Knights was almost equal to the condition twenty years ago when a total membership of 15,000 was the number in New Jersey. A special effort is being made to bring the total membership up to 15,500 by November 1 and already the committee having the matter in hand report applications of 300.

Following the business session and the speechmaking a "Dutch" supper was served at which nearly three hundred members and friends enjoyed themselves. Members were present from Freehold, Paterson, Somerville, Neshanic, Flemington, High Bridge, Rahway, Elizabeth, Newark, Jersey City and Round Brook.

It was the most enthusiastic and most profitable meeting the order has ever held in this city. The members of the two local lodges who took the grand lodge degree were: from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Oliver R. Pierson, Charles A. Peterson, William Baker, John R. H. Hall, Fred Douglass and Joseph Baker. From Unity, No. 102, E. P. T. Smith.

AFTERNOON TEA TO BE HELD AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE.

Proctor & Sanderson are planning for a novel affair to be held at The Plainfield Theatre in about two weeks. It will be an afternoon tea, and will follow one of the matinee performances, the date to be announced later. All of the patrons of the house on that afternoon will be invited to attend the tea. The members of the stock company will receive the guests and the management hopes thereby to establish a feeling of cordiality among its patrons and members of the company.

The theatre will be attractively decorated for the occasion, it being the aim of the management to make the tea a success in every detail. The subscription books for season tickets are open at the box office and already a large number of theatregoers have engaged their seats for the entire season, thereby being assured of having the same seats for every performance.

DEMOCRATS FOR COUNCIL

League Mayoralty Candidate Wants Minority Party Representation.

A LARGER SCHOOL BOARD.

Moy to Advocate a Board of Nine Members Instead of Five—Has Not Resigned from City Committee Yet.

Another surprise was sprung by the Bipartisan Municipal League Saturday when it was announced that its mayoralty candidate George W. V. Moy would advocate minority party representation in the Common Council. Mr. Moy, himself, said that the report was correct and that he firmly believed that the body should be composed entirely of that one party, but that a healthy minority is only fair. For that reason he considers, he says, that the Democrats should have some say in the city government. His idea is that he councilmen-at-large should be chosen from the ranks of the minority party.

One other thing that Mr. Moy will advocate is a more representative Board of Education. His plan is that proper representation would be had therein by adding four more members to the board, making it a body of nine instead of five as it has been for years. The water question, however, will be the main issue for the league, which is pledged to the scheme of municipal control and operation of the water supply.

Republican leaders today expressed some surprise over the announcement yesterday that City Clerk James T. MacMurray had "bolted" and had become vice-president of the League which will fight against the election of the party mayoralty nominee. B. Frank Coriell. They said that it was expected that not only he but Mr. Moy would abide by the result of the primaries, inasmuch as each had previously and since declared that they were Republicans. Chairman Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the Republican City Committee, when asked today said that he had not received Mr. Moy's resignation as a member of that committee, but he declined to make any statement as to the League or its leaders. Mr. Moy, who is vice-chairman of the city committee, as told yesterday, has decided to resign his membership in that body.

The League's meeting scheduled for Thursday night has been postponed because the Democrats have arranged for their gubernatorial nominee, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, to speak here on that night.

Much excitement in the League reiterated today that the fight would be a purely local one and that the members will loyally support Judge William N. Runyon as the Congressional nominee.

THOMPSON WAS EASY FOR JOHNNY CAMPBELL

It was with little difficulty that "Johnny" Campbell won his match with "Chick" Thompson, of Detroit, at Campbell's alleys last night. The local champion was in excellent form for so early in the season and gave a splendid exhibition of clever bowling to the many spectators who thronged the alleys.

After this set-to another series, two out of three games rolled and again Campbell was returned the winner.

Thompson rolled in somewhat better form in this series, tallying 264 in the second game, which is the high score for the season at the local alleys. His average for the three games was 213 while Campbell averaged 205. The scores of both matches are as follows:

Campbell	211	231	225	211
Thompson	180	264	195

REVERIDGE'S PERSISTENCE.

Albert J. Beveridge, the "Grand Young Man of Indiana," who is now up to his neck in a desperate fight to make his State go Republican in the next election, is persistent in his efforts to get stock. A writer in the Popular Magazine tells how when he was fighting the bill giving Statehood to Arizona and New Mexico, in President Roosevelt's administration, he used to go to the White House practically every day to enlist the strong support of the President.

On one occasion a newspaper man entered Mr. Roosevelt's office by one door just as the Senator from Indiana was leaving by the other. The President turned to the journalist with a look of annoyance on his face, started to speak, and then checked himself.

But the impulse was too strong. "If I die within the next thirty days," he burst out, "I want them to put on my tombstone: 'Pestered to death by Beveridge!'"

RUNYON EULOGIZES TAFT

HE SPEAKS AT ELIZABETH.

Assemblyman Schwartz Also Addresses Elizabeth Central Committee at Downtown Republican Club.

Reiterating the statement he made in his fight for the nomination, Judge William N. Runyon, after addressing the Elizabeth Central committee at the Downtown Republican club, in that city, Friday declared that when elected to Congress he would vote and work for the best man for Speaker. He added that he did not consider Cannon's candidacy for that place one conducive to party harmony and that therefore he did not consider him the man for the place.

Repeating what he had said many times before, he paid a strong tribute to President Taft during his speech at the meeting, and stated that as a wise, temperate and thoughtful chief executive he should receive the support of all the people and that it would be his constant aim to work for Mr. Taft's policies. He also eulogized Vivian M. Lewis, the Republican gubernatorial nominee, referring to his magnetic personality and clean record.

Judge Runyon addressed the committee and upheld the Taft administration. He said that every Republican should realize Taft's ability and work hard for his policies. He referred to the President as the "safety valve of the nation."

Charles Wagner, a young attorney whose political career began when he was elected president of the Downtown Republican Club a few months ago, criticised Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic nominee for Governor, saying that he had never been confronted with public problems and was unused to the handling of State affairs.

Samuel J. Berry, nominee for Mayor, spoke briefly. He outlined his platform; Elias Applegate, nominee for excise commissioner; Frederick Bender, nominee for the Union County Board of Freeholders, and Sydney Williams delivered addresses.

Assistant Postmaster James White presided.

Because rats gnawed their way into teachers' desks in several of the Piscataway township schools, the Piscataway Board of Education has ordered metal botoms to be put into the desks. At the New Market school, the rats not only gnawed their way into the desks but chewed up some papers belonging to the teacher. The attention of the board had been called to this fact several times and it decided to take action yesterday. The work of putting in the metal bottoms will be done next week.

Another drawback with which the board has had to contend is flagpoles. At the Foster avenue school some boys whose identity is unknown cut the halyards and pulled them out of the flagpole there. Now the board will have to engage a steeple jack to put in new halyards. And at the Parker school a flag pole which was ordered, is still undelivered. At the meeting of the board o'clock Friday afternoon from the to supply the pole, was notified that it must be in position before the middle of October.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS CHARLOTTE WILSON.

The funeral services of Miss Charlotte Wilson, daughter of the late Charles M. Wilson, were held at 2:30 Friday afternoon at Coriell, the late home on Madison avenue, and were private. Only the members of the family and a few close friends were present, including S. B. Carson, Miss Wilson's employer when he was manager of Hill & Shupp's dry goods store in this city.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Miss Wilson was an active member, conducted the services. He read appropriate Scripture texts and then made a short address of eulogy in which he spoke of the Christian life of the deceased and of her great patience in suffering. He closed with an earnest fervent prayer.

There was a beautiful display of floral tributes from relatives and friends. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Horace J. Martin, Sr., Chauncey F. Colthar, Edgar F. Sheppard, Harry F. Crawford, Elmer P. Wheeler and Charles M. Dolliver.

WILSON TO SPEAK HERE

Democrats Gubernatorial Candidate to Make an Address Thursday Night.

HIS ITINERARY ANNOUNCED.

Chairman Nugent Arranges For the Candidate to Make Four Speeches Each Week Until Election Day.

The New Jersey Democratic State committee met at its headquarters in Newark yesterday, and after the members had made reports of a rainbow hue listened to a speech by Chairman Nugent, and arranged the itinerary of Dr. Wilson's speaking campaign.

The Democratic candidate for Governor is to speak four nights a week from now until election day—Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights—and the following dates have been arranged for him:

September 28, Jersey City; 29, Trenton Interstate Fair during afternoon; Plainfield at night; 30, Newark; October 1, Monmouth county; 3, Mercer county; 5, Gloucester; 6, Burlington; 7, Cumberland; 8, Cape May; 11, Paterson; 12, Atlantic City; 13, Freehold; 15, Trenton Interstate Fair during afternoon; 18, Salem; 20, Flemington; 21, Phillipsburg; 23, Newton; 24, Salem; 25, Camden; 26, Perth Amboy; 27, Bergen county; 28, Elizabeth; 29, Hoboken; November 1, Passaic; 2, Oranges; 3, Morristown and Dover; 4, New Brunswick; 5, Newark.

Mr. Nugent in his address urged the committeemen to get busy, saying that there was a hard fight ahead.

"This year we enter the contest with a reawakened hope and entire confidence in our future success," he declared. "There remains, however, stern and difficult work before us, and overconfidence cannot win victories. It is our duty to immediately lay plans for the most vigorous and aggressive campaign possible. This can be accomplished only by co-ordination of action and self-sacrificing work. It rests with you, gentlemen of the State committee, to direct this fight."

Campaign headquarters will be opened in Newark, with William K. Devereux in charge.

AUTO CLUB TO DISCUSS MOTOR LAW IMPROVEMENT

The Plainfield Automobile Club will take some action on the resolutions which have been presented to other New Jersey automobile organizations and accepted by them on Tuesday night, Sept. 27, in order to get a uniform law passed regarding the carrying of automobile licenses and upon which so much discussion has taken place of late in other States.

There are eighty-five members of the local club who have signified their intention of being present on this occasion and in addition all the candidates for the Assembly have been invited to hear the question discussed. It is probable that the officers of the local club will bring out a large attendance and Harry Marshall, the president, is anxious that every member shall bring a friend who is an owner of an automobile.

J. H. Woon, president, and H. A. Bonnell, secretary of the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, will be present and add their voices to the general sentiment for a betterment in the inter-State license law in so far as it relates to motor cars.

A mass meeting will be held on the date above noted on the top floor of the City National Bank building and automobile owners are requested to note the date and place.

Revival at Dunellen.

The clergymen's association of Dunellen and New Market is preparing for an evangelistic campaign to be held this fall. The evangelistic meetings will be undenominational in nature and will be held in the assemblies of the various schools in Piscataway township and in the churches in and about Dunellen and New Market. All of the pastors are to unite in the work which will begin next month.

Tickets Ready for Dotiar Dinner.

J. Henry Crane, who is a member of the committee in charge of the dollar dinner to be given in the Downtown Republican Club, of Elizabeth, early in October, announces that he has tickets for the affair and those wishing to purchase them can obtain the same from him.

Supreme Castle to Meet.

The Supreme Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, will convene at Scranton, Pa., October 11, and among those who will attend are Dr. and Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin and Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Kinney. This will be one of the most important sessions of the Supreme Castle, as a great deal of important legislation will be taken up by the officers.

HOLY NAME RALLY PLANS

SPEAKERS ARE SELECTED.

Former Attorney General Donnelly, Rev. Joseph MacMahon, Both of New York, to Make Addresses.

When the first demonstration of the Holy Name Society is held in this city Sunday, October 9, 2,500 delegates will march in the half-hour parade and take part in the exercises. These will come from the six parishes of Elizabeth, two of Plainfield, and from Roselle, Roselle Park, Westfield, Rahway, Raritan and Somerville. The object of the celebration is to engender respect for the name of the Savior and publicly to protest against blasphemy and foul speech.

The details of the demonstration have been completed. A parade of the delegates bearing blue and white banners with the symbol of the society, "H. N. S.", and headed by a flag bearer carrying the American flag, will march through the principal streets of the city. No matter what their nationalities are represented, the American flag only will be carried. Michael J. Caffrey, president of the local society, will be marshal of the Plainfield division. Michael D. O'Keefe will be marshal of the other division.

After the parade religious exercises will be conducted within the grounds of St. Mary's church. Two addresses will be given. Rev. Joseph J. MacMahon, of the church at 143d street, New York, will give one of the speeches and the layman to give the other will be Joseph J. Donnelly, formerly Deputy Attorney-General of New York State. Father Hogan will welcome the visitors and introduce the speakers. The Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be by the venerable Dean Gessner, of Elizabethport. The speeches will be along the line of higher standards of citizenship and the influence of morality in the upbuilding of the people. The fact that it is a distinctly religious demonstration explains the absence of so-called "prominent people" on the platform.

Each delegate will receive Holy Communion in his own parish before coming to Plainfield.

Arrangements have been made with the Jersey Central railroad for reduced rates for the delegates. Van Baar's band, of New York, will head the Plainfield division of the parade, and Rahway and Elizabeth will bring their own bands.

METHODS OF THE FRENCH HOUSEWIFE.

One of the chief characteristics of the Frenchwoman, no matter what her class, is her excellent housekeeping, and just now, when the Paris season is over, this characteristic is uppermost. She goes through every detail of the household with minute care, thoroughly overhauls linen chests, wardrobes and china cupboards, renovates all that is necessary and makes all arrangements for autumn cleaning. As she does with her house, so she does with her own clothing, and it is a real pleasure to be initiated into the mysteries of her wardrobe. Everything is so dainty, so orderly and so suggestive of the care and trouble bestowed upon it that it becomes as interesting as a human personality. Moreover, it is not suggestive of frivolity but, rather gives one the idea that the woman herself is a fair and comely being, moved in all her actions by a spirit of beauty. She is practical also, and, though she spends a great deal of money upon the dainty garments she possesses, she rarely wastes anything.

The power of utilizing old materials has grown out of the Frenchwoman's natural instinct to buy good things—things which one cannot throw away carelessly and which always remain a joy, even when they have been mended and cleaned several times. Thus, when one season is over she at once examines what she has and decides what can be adapted for the next, and what can be put aside for a few months. Even quite poor Frenchwomen possess real lace, hand-embroidered blouses, fine linen and beautiful colored embroideries; therefore there is far less to dispose of at the end of each season, but quite a lot of cleaning and remodeling to be done. It is the details of dress over which he Frenchwoman is so particular and which plays such an important part of the general effect. There is a saying in Paris that with a good veil, a good hat and gloves and good shoes a woman is always well dressed. It would seem so, for even in the plainest gown, the average Frenchwoman has a chic and smartness all her own and which women of other nations seldom attain.

"Henry," said the small boy's mother, "I wish you would see to Willie."

"What's the matter?"

"I strongly suspect he's using his athletic clothes as an excuse for not properly dressing himself in the morning."—Washington Evening Star.

HERE AND THERE.

Here is a story that is told by a local lawyer who swears that it is an actual experience: A jury had retired on a murder case and had voted 11 to 1 for acquittal. The obstinate man was a small, red-faced fellow, apparently a heavy drinker. He held out for conviction and declared that he was ready to stay there as long as the next one. Every now and then he would lean over and suck the head of a small bamboo cane he carried. Finally the jurymen began to make ready for a night of it. The little man soon fell asleep over his cane and when he went further into the Land of Nod the stick dropped to the floor. Members of the jury picked it up and were about to return it, when they discovered that it was filled with whisky, and very good whisky, too. They passed it around, each taking a drink, and when the little man awakened and, reaching for his cane, attempted to suck more "oil of joy" from the head. He was very thirsty, but found the cane empty. After thinking some time, he said: "Boys, I believe I've changed my mind. I'll vote for acquittal. Let's hurry."

A noted clergyman was in his study writing when his 5-year-old daughter walked in and asked:

"What are you writing, papa?"

"I am writing a sermon, my dear."

"How do you know what to write, papa?"

"God tells me what to write."

After watching her father a few minutes the litt'e girl said:

"Papa, if God tells you what to write, why do you scratch some of it out?"

The members of the City Mothers Club and most of the other organizations which make up the City Federation were interested themselves from the Pure Food Show at Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon. Even Alberta Hill, who has been the feature of the suffrage booth ever since it opened, went home at noon.

The club women felt that a lecture hall where the piece de resistance of oratory was a eulogy of an alcoholic beverage was no place for them, and they had already sampled several times every variety of pure food on sale made "those" and "them" who had no other place to go went home after reading the program and discovering that Hugh Fox was going to talk about what a man should drink. Mr. Fox thinks beer and ale are the ideal thirst quenchers, and said so in several thousand words.

Of course, water was all right, he admitted, if one could only get it pure, but it wasn't likely that that could be done once in a hundred drinks.

Mrs. John Francis Yawger, who had come to the show to receive the members of he Minerva Club and didn' find them, said that she thought a man ought to drink anything he could get him good natured. Mrs. Thomas Vivian, president of the National California Club, said she agreed with her.

John Hays Hammond, the mining engineer, was on his private car en route to Mexico at the time that Halley's comet was visible at 3:30 o'clock in the morning. The train was speeding through the State of Texas when Hammond rose at that ungodly hour and went out on the observation platform of his car to see the comet.

On the platform he found two tramps and spoke to them cordially. They told him where they were going and thanked him for his politeness.

"You fellows wait here a minute and I'll get you some cigars," said Hammond.

When he produced the smokes one of the tramps said:

"Look here; if I had cigars like these to smoke and a place like that car to sit, you wouldn't catch me running out here to see a comet. There's no telling what you rich guys like to do."—Popular Magazine.

Kant, the great philosopher, cultivated peculiar habits which enabled him to accomplish a certain work in the world, says the London Globe. From the day he began to write until the completion of his mind, which grew worse and on Monday Dr. A. A. Mulligan was called and diagnosed the case as another attack of pneumonia. He leaves a widow, four daughters and two sons. A daughter, Miss Catherine Doherty, is a nurse in the Kings Park Hospital, Long Island. She was summoned by phone last night, but owing to duties she had to perform in caring for a patient in danger of death at the hospital could not reach the house in time to see her father alive. The girl failed in the race for life unless and finding her father dead.

Mr. Doherty was a member of Branch No. 2 St. Patrick Alliance of America, of Harrison, and Division No. 4, Ancient Order of Hibernians.

JUSTICE'S INDISPOSITION PUTS AN END TO HEARING

Proceedings were heard before Justice Clark Friday afternoon on complaints of J. E. VanNess, who claimed that four workmen, Edward Schymer and his brother, Mark, John Hummer and Edward Brown, employes of Alexander Milne, had no right to tear down a building purchaser by Geo. Forsythe from the executors of an estate in which Mrs. Ness was interested. The building was bought in by Mr. Forsythe at a foreclosure sale and he attempted to take immediate possession.

The structure was not the kind that Mr. Forsythe cared for on the premises and according to the testimony presented he engaged Alexander Milne and made a contract with him to tear it down. Mr. Milne sent the four men mentioned above to do the work and they were stopped by Mr. VanNess.

Mr. Forsythe has had lots of trouble ever since he purchased the property and several times, it is said, the matter has been laid over for a hearing and bonds asked for an appearance in the case. Yesterday afternoon, William G. DeMeza and V. W. Nash, Jr., appeared in the courtroom ready to proceed with the case, but owing to the indisposition of Justice Clark they were unable to accomplish anything beyond having the men in the employ of Mr. Milne discharged and the case adjourned until next Thursday. Those interested in the case may or may not appear in the Scotch Plains Town hall on Thursday as a result of yesterday's proceedings.

NOTED BAG PIPE PLAYER DEAD AT HARRISON.

Thomas P. Doherty, of 44 Washington street, Harrison, died about 9 o'clock Thursday night after a his home after a few days' illness from an attack of pneumonia.

Mr. Doherty was well known in Irish societies, both in this State and New York, and was known as the "Celebrated Piper." Mr. Doherty came to Harrison from New York several years ago and purchased the McCall bandball court at Fourth and Davis streets, which he conducted. The place was the scene of many celebrated games. Last February Mr. Doherty had an attack of pneumonia and was confined to his home for several weeks, but recovered. Last Sunday he entertained a number of friends from New York and played the bagpipes. In the evening he complained of a cold,

MOY CANDIDATE OF MUNICIPAL LEAGUE

A Bi-Partisan Organization is Launched to Wage Vigorous Campaign.

MacMURRAY A VICE-PRESIDENT.

Depew President and Randolph Secretary—Declaration of Principles—Moy Accepts Democratic Nomination.

Thirty or more Republicans and Democrats compose the nucleus of the Bipartisan Municipal League, whose organization was announced Friday coupled with the formal acceptance of George W. V. Moy, of its nomination for the mayoralty with a Democratic endorsement.

Prominent in the club, which will wage a vigorous campaign to capture the mayoralty and to eradicate party influence in municipal affairs is City Clerk James F. MacMurray, recognized as the head of the local Republican organization uhtil he led the fight here for Charles N. Fowler for the party's congressional nomination. R. Henry Depew, president of the New Jersey People's Lobby, and president also of the Plainfield Protective Association, and former Mayor Lewis W. F. Randolph are other influential members. LeRoy Ellis, president of the Plainfield Democratic club, is conspicuous among the Democrats affiliated with the club.

The purpose of the league, as set forth in its declaration of principles is three-fold: "First, an uncorrupted ballot; second, a manly independence of and separation from selfish and corrupt combinations, and third, the choice at the polls of men who shall best represent the interests of Plainfield, irrespective of party affiliation." It is asserted that the chief issue of the fight in this campaign will be the municipal control and operation of the water supply, to which the league is pledged.

At the last of three meetings, the league on Tuesday night passed this resolution unanimously.

"Resolved, That the Bipartisan Municipal League heartily endorses the candidacy of George W. V. Moy for the office of mayor of the city of Plainfield."

At the previous meeting this resolution was enacted:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that a bipartisan committee to consist of the chairman of this meeting and of two persons from each election district be appointed with power to carry on the campaign according to their judgment, but on the general lines laid down in he recommendations of the report which has been read, and that such committee have power of self-enlargement."

R. Henry Depew is president of the league and Mr. MacMurray and Patrick J. Reville are vice-presidents while Mr. Randolph is the secretary. The treasurer is J. F. Zerega. Various committees have been appointed and are now at work.

The first of a series of mass meetings in the interest of Mr. Moy's candidacy will be held at Reformed hall on Thursday night. Mr. Moy says that he and other members of the league will deliver frequent speeches during the campaign.

"Whereas, at a primary held in the city of Plainfield, County of Union and State of New Jersey, on Tuesday, September thirteenth, nineteen hundred and ten, I the undersigned, George W. V. Moy, was nominated as a candidate for the office of mayor of the said city of Plainfield on the Democratic ticket, and

"Whereas, before the holding of said primary I had not filed a certificate consenting to stand as candidate for said office if so nominated.

"This is therefore to certify that I, the said George W. V. Moy, am qualified for the office of Mayor of the city of Plainfield, aforesaid, and that I accept said nomination."

PIPE LINE TO W. VIRGINIA PASSES NEAR PLAINFIELD.

Work is being pushed in the laying of the large Standard Oil pipe line which passes through Oak Tree towards New Market and thence to West Virginia. Where the pipe line crosses Park avenue near the Lehigh Valley tracks the laborers who are digging the trenches have met a difficult engineering problem. The road is so narrow at that point that vehicles can not pass if the trench is dug halfway across, as is usually done. As a result it is likely that the trench will be dug at night.

BOLD ENEMY OF THE SNAKE

Unfortunately the Mongoose Also Has an Insatiable Appetite for Chicken.

"The loneliest living creature in the United States is undoubtedly the mongoose," was the statement made by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles at the New York Zoological park. "I believe that there are but two or three of the beasts in this country. Mongoose society, you might say, is not teeming with members. A mongoose is a pink-eyed, flexible-snouted little animal, with a shape like a debutante. He is chiefly waist, that is to say. He is partial to snakes, as a steady diet, or, perhaps, it might be better to say a wriggly or unsteady diet. He was one of the original 'catch-'em-alive-Os.' A mongoose will kid almost any sort of an ordinary sized snake. Most of the constrictor family, however, are too big for him. But he's a bold mite of a furry creature and will tackle almost anything in the serpent line. A mongoose is easily domesticated and in many respects is quite as pleasing a pet as a cat or dog.

"The single objection to him is the fact that if he can't have his snakes he is only too willing to subsist on chicken. As a rader of benrooats a mighty darky in a neophyte compared with a mongoose. That is the reason there are so few of him in this country. There is a federal law which absolutely forbids the importation of a mongoose. It really is a pity that this companionable of animals has to be barred from the country. Even if simply couldn't keep a chicken in the same neighborhood with a mongoose, safeguard the henhouses as you might. A mongoose can go any place he chooses. If there isn't a hole, he imagines one and crawls through it. I'd like to keep one in the Bronx reptile house, but I couldn't afford to. He'd dine on my rarest snakes, despite anything I could do to prevent him."

American Folk Songs.

As yet no ballad writer has appeared in America that rivals Kipling or the pre-eminent Burns. The product we have from professed ballad singers is mediocre. But out in the far corners of the land there are to be found the folk songs, true ballads whose authorship will never be known. The course of our national development and the inherent romance of the fields and forests has inspired the ordinary lyre to lofty songs. And the life of isolated communities and the common if narrow interests of the men who work in gangs under all sorts of dangers have given rise to song and chant that savor of the blood. The English department of harvard university has commissioned John A. Lomax, associate professor in College Station, Tex., under the Sheldon fellowship, to gather together these typical ballads. The old cowboy ditties, the chanteys of the coast, the gulf and the great lakes are what he wants. Also army songs, lumberjack chants, the songs of voyageur, miner and vagabond. All these serve to characterise vividly life that is passing. And it may be that thorough search will reveal unsuspected treasures.

Cradle Unfashionable.

Cradles are going out; children are not wearing them any more. People tell us that rocking is unhygienic; babies, according to modern idea, should go to sleep naturally in a stationary germproof bed, with antiseptic pillow and sanitarium rattle. Sentiment may save the cradle for a little while, but sooner or later it will go to the dusty attic along with the haircloth sofa. Maybe the infant of tomorrow will bear up sensibly under these evils of modern misfortunes, will struggle along somehow to maturity, but what about the artists, the poets, the song writers. What a world of sentiment and melody has been woven around the theme of the mother and the gently rocking cradle! What kind song will the poor poet of the future be able to make about an enameled iron crib with brass trimmings!—Success Magazine.

The Cultured Old Man.

"Algernon is very interesting," said the stock broker's daughter.

"What does he talk about?" inquired her father.

"Why, he's ever so well posted in Shakespearean questions," was the answer.

"Young woman," said the financier, sternly, "don't let him deceive you. Don't you let him make love out of your library. There isn't any such stock on the market. I ought to know, for I've been on the exchange long enough."

Still Preaching at Ninety-One.

Rev. L. C. Wood recently entered upon his ninety-second year. For more than 64 years he has been vicar of Singleton, near Blackpool.

He is in excellent health, works hard in the parish, preaches regularly and presides at various agricultural meetings of associations with which he is connected. He attends all the public functions in the Blackpool district, and a few days ago he delivered a panegyric on the late King Edward which revealed great mental as well as physical vigor.—London Standard.

WANTS UNIFORMED POLICE FOR DUNELLEN BOROUGH

Dunellen will soon take one more advance step if Charles E. Tinsman's proposition to have a uniformed paid police force meets with the approval of the Council. Hitherto the good conduct of Dunellen has been cared for by a marshal, usually some man who had other occupations. As a result, the job of looking after all corners of the growing borough has been particularly difficult. Recently some burglaries were committed and the inadequacy of the lone marshal and his deputies who are seldom if ever readily available was proved.

This led Charles Tinsman, a real estate dealer of Dunellen, to prepare a paper which has been given wide circulation in the borough. It sets forth plainly the need to Dunellen of a police force, if it is to attract home seekers. His proposition is to submit the decision to the voters at the next general election. If it meets with approval there then the police force be assured. If not, then for the present, the force could be supported by subscriptions from business men—at the rate of $5 a year, according to Mr. Tinsman's calculations.

A bank says Dunellen took a big jump from the rural stage when a national bank was established there. Last week a still greater jump was taken when a street cleaning department was inaugurated. This department consists of Peter Schneiderwind, who has been engaged by the borough merchants to sweep North avenue. A white canvass uniform was purchased for him; and since he began work Dunellen has proudly boasted of a "White Wing."

The success of this venture in borough municipal improvement led Mr. Tinsman to launch his idea in regard to a uniformed police force. In the borough the proposition has met with considerable favor, and is in line with a recent movement to establish a public library.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Noise Restricts Motorists.

Owners of automobiles throughout the country are rapidly bringing upon themselves some rigid restrictions which they will not enjoy. Reform legislation is always slow in coming, and for that reason generally goes further than is necessary. It seems to be a case of the breaking loose of pent-up waters. The annoyances referred to are the unnecessary use of horns, whistles and exhaust. Many drivers seem to have a mania for making all the noise they can, lest some should fail to realize they are in a moving car. The smoke nuisance is equally unnecessary and offensive, and that it also can be prevented is demonstrated in nearly all European cities, where heavy fines are imposed for violation. The nuisance of a smoking car is seldom seen, for other drivers immediately call attention of the offender to the fact. The motorists is even more offensive in its noise making. This, too, is equally unnecessary. The motorcycles in England make no more noise than a sewing machine. The public has about reached its limit of endurance of these disturbances of the peace, and unless the offenders promptly reform themselves city ordinances should and will be passed and enforced without regard to who the offender may be. This is an instance where a $10 or $20 fine will work a prompt and permanent cure.—Popular Mechanics.

M. V. Williams Coming.

M. V. Williams, of Athens, Pa., the well known evangelist, has been engaged to conduct a three weeks' evangelistic service in this city commencing Sunday, October 23, under the auspices of the three local Methodist churches. He will spend a week at each church.

FUNNY PLAYS MADE IN THE BIG LEAGUES

"It's the baseball club that is always going at full speed and trying to pull off the unexpected that makes the most plays of the variety classed as 'bonehead' by sporting writers. The fastest and best ball players pull off most of the plays which come under that head. Slow-moving players who never take a chance, very seldom make plays which appear foolish, but which go wrong simply because the other fellows are there with the goods when they try to pull off the unexpected."

This was the statement of Manager Griffith, of the Reds. Continuing, he said:

"Ty Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers; Bob Bescher, of the Reds, and Tris Speaker, of the Boston Americans, are some of the players who must be classed as boneheads if a man is an every dome way time he tries to turn a trick and is foiled. Cobb is probably sent to the bench more frequently than any other player in the business because he runs wild on the bases and loses out because players on the opposing team weigh in with perfect fielding performances at the right time. Cobb is one of the country's greatest players because he takes those chances. He generally takes them when his team is most in the need of runs. If he succeeds in the do or die, and he fails it is almost an even bet that his club would have been beaten anyhow.

"There are ball clubs which never pull off plays of the bonehead type during their offensive play. A ball club that never takes chances will never be subject to such. When a team goes along day after day doing the same old thing, the defensive work of the opposing team soon becomes pie. The players always know what is coming off and are never surprised in the least. Clubs that fail to take chances lose many games by one run, which they could win by pulling off the unexpected once in a while.

"Of course, a club that takes chances is bound to be pulled up occasionally, but it is better to lose a game in trying to make that goes wrong than to stand idly by and try to hammer the life out of a pitcher who happens to be unhittable that day, and lose because nothing daring is attempted.

"Keep your eye on the records of ball clubs and see if most of the plays classed as ivory dome stunts are not pulled off by winning ball clubs and then take a look at the losing clubs and see if they are not the ones which never attempt to do anything startling."

A. H. Ahrens ago Dunellen took a big jump from the rural stage when a national bank was established there. Last week a still greater jump was taken when a street cleaning department was inaugurated. This department consists of Peter Schneiderwind, who has been engaged by the borough merchants to sweep North avenue. A white canvass uniform was purchased for him; and since he began work Dunellen has proudly boasted of a "White Wing."

The success of this venture in borough municipal improvement led Mr. Tinsman to launch his idea in regard to a uniformed police force. In the borough the proposition has met with considerable favor, and is in line with a recent movement to establish a public library.

Another book from the pen of William D. Murray has just come from the press, "Bible Stories to Tell Children." The book contains the more familiar and picturesque Biblical stories, such as the "Christ Story," "Disobedient Jonah," "How the Baby Moses was Saved," and "Samson, the Strong Man.' In all, there are twenty-four such stories and four well executed page drawings from Doré's Bible Pictures, illustrate the text.

In the work Mr. Murray set before himself the task of making the stories actually real to children. To do this he has amplified the Biblical text by a judicious imagination. If anything, this adds to the charm of the book. His diction is largely Anglo-Saxon, his style is simple and direct, and his art of story telling effective.

Mr. Murray defines his object in writing the book in his preface: "We do not 'explain' Bible stories nor recognize the great importance of the story in education, and we ought to use it even more than we do. It is hoped that these stories will serve in some degree as models so that those who use the book will be led to put many more Bible stories into their own words, filling in such details as anyone knows must have accompanied the incidents. Any parent or teacher," he adds significantly, "can do this," "stories must be told with eyes and hands, as well as voice, so that the scene is brought vividly before the listening child.

Mr. Murray has been superintendent of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Sunday-school for many years and has been unusually successful in his work among children. In concluding his preface, Mr. Murray gives a clue to the incentive to his new book when he says: "The stories in this book are only a few of those which have been told in telling to little children, and he feels from his own experience that if Bible stories are told as these have been, lasting impressions for good will be made upon the hearts of the children who hear them."

The Other Side.

"I see you employ a number of old men."

"I do."

"How old are they?"

"Too old to be interested in canoeing, or mandolins, or race horses, or girls, or tennis. That makes 'em fine for work."—Kansas City Journal.

TAX RATES IN UNION ANNOUNCED BY BOARD

The Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes Wednesday fix the tax rates for the various municipalities throughout the county. As a rule, the rates show an increase over those of last year and in almost every instance, the increase is due to increased school expenses. Roselle Park has taken a big jump, every county with 1.97, an increase of thirty-nine points over last year. This is due to the added expense of running and paying for the new schoolhouse recently erected there. The lowest rate is for Clark Township, where taxes will have to pay only seventy-seven cents on every $100 valuation. The rate for Elizabeth remains the same, 1.60.

The increase in Linden of several points is the only raise not caused by addec school expenses. This is due to the new sewer which was recently installed.

Westfield, which had the high water mark last year with 1.95, shows a decrease of eight points in the rate. Rahway and New Providence Borough also have large increases, the rate in both of these municipalities being more than 1.90.

Plainfield	1.65	1.68
Elizabeth	1.60	1.50
Clark Township	.77	.96
Cranford	1.64	1.60
Fanwood Township	1.62	1.56

MINISTER TO LECTURE ON THE BOY PROBLEM

"How to Know Our Boys," is the general topic of a series of nine lectures to be given every Friday afternoon, at the Y. M. C. A., commencing October 14th by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains. These lectures have been planned for all the mothers of Plainfield and North Plainfield, and all will be welcome. There will be a charge for admission. The lectures will be given at 3:30 and will last from thirty to forty minutes, to be followed by an open conference.

This will be a brief course of popular instruction to make clear the problems involved in the moral and religious training of boys, and to point the way oward the solution of these problems by the proper application in the home of modern educational methods. Mr. Mathiews is fitted both by knowledge and experience for leadership in this important study. The dates and subjects of the lectures follow:

October 14, "The Profession of Motherhood;" 21, "How to Secure Obedience?" 28, "The Aims of Punishment and the Methods that are Most Effective;" November 4, "Obstinacy and Its Relation to Self-Reliance;" 11, "The Educational Value of Play, and Its Moral Benefits;" 18, "The Moral Value of Fear and Its Culture;" 25, "The Problem of Fighting and the Culture of Courage;" December 2, "The Moral Influence of the 'Gang', and What to do About It;" 9, "The Educational Value of Play, and Its Religious Benefits."

SAVED

By T. DEWITT BOWMAN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Farmer Insley was tossing about in bed vainly trying to sleep. At last he arose, went to the window and looked out. The moon was at the full, illuminating everything in sight—namely, the undulating plain, scattered dwellings and the meeting house more than 200 years old. Suddenly Insley opened his eyes wider than they had been opened during his sleeplessness. A light passed across one of the windows of the church. He went to the door, opened it and stood looking out. All was still. Not a house was lighted save by the moon. Not a living creature was in sight.

The light appeared again. This time it was stationary for a few seconds, then seemed to have been extinguished.

Insley hurried into his clothes and ran as fast as his legs would carry him to the church. As he proceeded he thought that he had better see than be seen. He knew the church well and felt confident that he could enter by a basement window. A tall tree cast a shadow on his approach. Finding the window open, he crept stealthily, and, guided by sufficient light from without to enable him to see his way, he ascended a staircase leading up into the vestibule. Opening a door only so far as would enable him to peep into the body of the church, he saw a strange sight.

Two men were standing by a window, the moon shining full in their faces. The one was young and of city mein—that is, so far as Insley could see by his single glance. The other was dressed in the garb of a clergyman. The men were talking, but he could not hear what they said. Now and again the younger man would take out his watch and look at the time impatiently.

Then Insley heard a knock at the church door. The men heard it, too, and the younger hurried to the front of the church. The watcher, that he might not be seen, descended the stairs, but not so far that he could not know what passed in the vestibule. The young man opened the church door and admitted a woman. There was no light for him to see by, but he could hear.

"Sweetheart," said the man, "what has kept you?"

"I heard father tolsing about in bed and dared not venture."

"Well, come. It will soon be over, and then we will feel better. You are all unstrung."

"Oh, I can't."

These were the last words Insley heard, for the man drew the girl into the body of the church and toward the other end. Insley could not see them in shadow part way down an aisle entering one of the high pews. The two men and the woman were in shadow, but presently Insley saw one of the men as he struck a match. In a flood of moonlight, with their backs toward him, while the man in clerical garb faced him and them. The clergyman held in his hand a lamp or candle covered so that its light could only shine on the page of a book he held in his hand.

Insley knew that a marriage service was about to be performed. Whether it was a case for interference or one to suffer to proceed he knew not. But he had passed the romantic age when one sympathizes with those who would wed in opposition to their parents' wishes and was not minded to permit the marriage without being informed of the circumstances attending it. One thing only he was positive of. The pastor of the church was a large man, while this one was of medium height and slender. Besides, the pastor was not a person to wed couples in his church at midnight and if he did would not require a light upon his book by which to read the marriage service.

True enough, a marriage service was begun. Insley could hear every word. When the clergyman asked if any one had aught to say why the two should not be joined together in wedlock Insley said solemnly:

"I forbid."

At the same time he dropped down into the pew. He did not see the commotion his words produced, but he heard a woman's cry. Then there were indistinguishable sounds and a muffled voice:

"We'd better get out. Some one's got on to it. You'll be jugged for this."

"So will you."

Insley heard steps—men's steps—hurrying past him in the aisle and passing out of the front door. As soon as all was still he went down to where he had seen the bridal party standing. His foot pressed something lying in the dark on the floor. Stooping down, he felt a woman's form. Raising her, he carried her to where the moonlight shown upon her face.

Great heavens, she was his own daughter!

She came to herself, and by the light she saw him gazing down upon her with a mingled expression of surprise and pain.

"Father!"

"Bessie!"

"Is it a dream?"

"No, dear heart, not a dream, but a reality. Some one from above—possibly your mother—sent me here to save you."

He carried her home in his arms. It was the old story of a villain from the city seeking by a mock marriage to lead astray a simple country girl.

LEE STATUE AGITATION ENDED BY G. A. R. VETS

The veterans assembled at the national encampment of the G. A. R. at Atlantic City Friday decided by a vote to table the majority report of the committee on resolutions asking Congress to take the Lee statue from the national capitol. The vote was 133 to 102. There was heated discussion on both sides. Many remarks were made in favor and against the effort on the part of some to bar Lee's statue from the national capitol, and among those who spoke vigorously against such action was Major Eli Torrance of Minnesota, chairman of the resolution committee. He made a strong appeal in behalf of Virginia and the old Confederates.

Recommendations of the bill to give pensions to 70 years old an increase to $20 a month, 75 years $25 and $30 a month for those disabled were adopted, and the matter referred to the Legislative committee to try and have it passed at next Congress. It was also decided to admit to the Grand Army men who served in the Revenue Cutter Service during the war. The veterans condemned the proposal to pay all old soldiers a pension of $1 a day. All the new officers were installed last night. Next year's encampment will be held at Rochester, N. Y.

THIS MEXICAN WAR VETERAN A WONDER.

Bill Maccabee received visitors at the United States Home in Philadelphia Thursday in celebration of the 107th anniversary of his birth. Comrades of the Civil War came to Bill's room to "pass the time o' day," but the comrades who fought with him in the Mexican War were not there; for Bill Maccabee is the oldest sailor now on the rolls of the United States Navy, and he has survived most of the members of the old school of seamanship before steam became a factor.

Bill sat in his rolling chair during the day, his weather-beaten face bearing little or no occasional smile, but he was muffled up like a mummy and scarcely ever shifted his position. He was able to smoke his pipe, however, and to salute the flag when his chair was rolled out on the porch. About a year ago he fell in his room and broke his hip. The fracture never knit.

Bill received postcards yesterday from ports and sailors' homes. He was particularly pleased with a postcard sent to him from some of his Civil War comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, now at Atlantic City. It was sent by members of a post from the town in which Bill was born, down on the eastern shore of Maryland, 107 years ago.

ITALIAN MURDERED; ASSAILANT CAPTURED

On a charge of murdering Francisco Lahgi, 22 years old, Batista Antonozzi, of 422 East Third street, 24 years old, was held without bail for the action of the grand jury by Judge William N. Runyon Monday p. m. The alleged murder occurred at the corner of East Fourth and Watchung avenue at 8:20 o'clock Sunday night and was committed with a stiletto. Lahgi was hurried to the hospital, where Drs. Pittis, E. W. and B. VanD. Hedges and Norman H. Probasco worked over the mortally injured man for two hours, when he died.

Before passing away Antonnizzo gave the police a statement and was also able to identify his assailant. He declared that he knew of no reason for the taking of his life. The statement of the prisoner, however, differs. He declared Sunday that Antonozzi had assaulted him twice, once at about 6 o'clock in the afternoon at the corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue and later at 8:15, the time he defended himself with his knife. Antonozzi was caught by Roundsman Higgins and Patrolman Nick Meyers, the latter pulling the prisoner from underneath his bed at his home on East Third street. The house was in darkness when the officers arrived at the place where they had traced the fugitive, who had run from the scene immediately after the crime was committed.

Twenty witnesses were examined by Prosecutor Swift, assisted by Walter Hetfield, Jr., and up to noon had only secured one who could be held as a material witness in the case. From the stories so far told no motive has been established for the crime. Contradictory stories have been told by the prisoner, the first being that Lahgi had been persecuting him for months, especially on Sundays when partly intoxicated, but when questioned again he declared that they had always been friends.

The story told by several others is that Antonozzi had quarreled with his victim over the payment of the beer which the party had been drinking all day. At the height of the quarrel it is alleged that Antonozzi told four of his companions who live in Raritan, to leave the house and he would fix Lahgi. Lahgi also left the house, but was followed as told above.

In the pockets of Antonozzi were found, besides a knife, $122 in money, which he claims to have saved up from his daily work on the street car local contracts.

An autopsy was performed on the body of Lahgi at Coles' undertaking establishment Monday by City Physician C. B. Lufburrow, assisted by Dr. Norman W. Currie and Acting County Physician Munger. They found three deep stab wounds in the body, one of which pierced the lung on the right breast, another in the back near the shoulder, and a third in the abdomen which laid open a gaping wound.

DUNKLEEN SAENGERBUND ENJOY FIELD DAY SPORTS.

The Saengerbund Club, of Dunellen, held their semi-annual field day Saturday afternoon, playing a five-inning game of ball and ending up the fun with an old fashioned country dinner, with real spring chicken and the usual trimmings.

The ball game attracted a crowd of the Saengerbund's friends and nearly resulted in the murder of the umpire. John C. Dilts was the man alleged to have caused a riot among the players. Anyhow, it was lots of fun and the umpire was in no real danger. Sides were chosen by the brothers Craig, and Bob's side won by a score of 7 to 6.

Harry Brentnall was presented with a cricket bat by the members. Mr. Brentnall was a noted cricket player in England.

Girls, Here's a "Catch."

A girl who is willing to become the wife of a farmer may get the job by writing to Jesse Smith, of Mount Bethel, near Delaware, Warren county. Jesse wants a wife. The only requirements he demands are that she be between twenty-two and thirty years old and good looking. Oh, yes, one more qualification. She must not wear hobble skirts. Jesse is thirty-two years old, he says, and longs for a good life partner. He smokes, but doesn't drink.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Amanda E. Schupp, of East Fifth street, to Frank A. Wernett, of Lehighton, Pa., is announced. Mr. Wernett is associated with a large firm at Stroudsburg, Pa., and the marriage will take place in the near future.

SOMERVILLE WINS 5-3

ALBERT'S SENSATIONAL CATCH.

Somerville had sweet revenge on Plainfield Saturday afternoon when she wiped out the stinging defeat of the week before by the score of 5 to 3.

The visitors made two runs in the first inning and held the advantage throughout. Toward the latter part of the game they hit McLaughlin heavily, who appeared to be out of form.

The first two runs were easily tallied. Anderson, the first man up, singled. Jung got a base on an error; McDonald placed a fast fly to center and Anderson and Jung ran home. In the second inning Alberts, the Scotch Plains boy, made a sensational catch of a long drive to centerfield, falling backward over the other fielder as he grabbed the ball in his right hand.

Plainfield scored its first run in the fourth inning. Nelson fanned out; McLaughlin placed a two-bagger to center; Barnes struck out; Schott shot a grounder close to first base and Emery, who ran for McLaughlin, crossed the pan. Again in the eighth inning Plainfield tallied. Nelson flied out to right field; McLaughlin placed another two-bagger just as he had done in the fourth inning, and Barnes again struck out. Schott hit towards third and Barnes, who ran this time for McLaughlin, crossed the pan. Thus two of the runs scored by Plainfield were scored on hits by the popular fielder Schott.

In the fifth inning of his ninth Plainfield tallied its last run. Boyd fanned out; Emery drove to right field; Jack Martin popped out to shortstop and with two outs the crowd began to leave the field. Carlstrom drove well to center though, and Emery ran to third base. Nelson then placed a fast fly to right field and Emery crossed the pan. Carlstrom was on his way to repeat the stunt when caught out at home while sliding.

Pickled Crab Apples.

Nine pounds apples, four pounds sugar, one pint water, one quart vinegar and broken cinnamon and cloves one-fourth tablespoon each. Leave the crab apples whole with the stems on. Put them in a crock, a layer of apples and a layer of sugar alternating, pour vinegar and sugar over them and let them stand over night. Drain and heat the liquid adding to it the broken pieces of cinnamon and cloves which have been tied in a bag. Heat slowly to the boiling point and when the liquid is clear add the apples and boil until they are tender. Put them in glass jars. Let the liquid boil down to a syrup and pour it over the apples in the jars and seal airtight.

Cake Sale a Success.

The cake sale held at Trinity Reformed church Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday department of the Sunday-school was a success. About $10 was netted for the flower fund of the church. Mrs. Henry VanNatta is the superintendent of the department, and she was assisted by other members.

Cultivate It.

Love must be cultivated, and can be increased by judicious culture, as wild fruit may double their bearing under the hand of a gardener; and long can dwindle and die out by neglect, as choice flower seeds, planted in poor soil, dwindle and grow single.

AUTOMOBILE IN CRASH; C. B. LEVY SLIGHTLY HURT

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Levy and two-year-old son, Irving Jerome Levy, of Duer stret, accompanied by Mrs. M. Weinberger, of the borough, and Wilber Greenfield, of this city, had a narrow escape from serious injury while enjoying a ride in Mr. Levy's automobile Sunday afternoon. The Plainfielders were going along the Stelton road in the direction of New Brunswick, when they were run down by an auto driven by Wilber White, of Bloomfield. The accident occurred at the fork of two roads. Mr. White, who was accompanied by his wife, was coming from Metchen and was headed toward the main road. There was a car ahead of Mr. White, which passed the Plainfield party, and Mr. Levy not wishing to take any chances, ran his machine over to the right of the road and stopped to allow Mr. White to pass.

Whether Mr. White lost control of his machine is not known, but he almost ran headlong into Mr. Levy's auto, breaking both radiators, the windshield, wrenching right axle of the cars and giving the occupants of both a severe shakeup. The flying glass struck Irving Levy, cutting his head, but the others escaped injury. Both cars were so battered that the owners had to leave them on the road.

Other automobiles which happened along soon after the accident picked up the stranded people and brought them home. Irving Levy was attended by Dr. J. Henry Buchanan. His injuries are not serious. It is admitted that he was at fault, claiming that the car ahead of him prevented him from seeing Mr. Levy's machine. The latter had brought his car to a standstill to allow Mr. White to pass, and it is said was not to blame for the collision.

CORNELIUS D. TAYOR, HOTEL MANAGER, DEAD

Cornelius D. Taylor, aged about forty-nine years, one of the best known hotel men in the State, died at his home in Dunellen, Sunday from a complications of diseases. He was son of William H. Taylor, and for twenty-seven years has been manager of his father's hotel at Dunellen. Mr. Taylor had a host of friends. He was a genial disposition and always entertained in a lavish manner.

Mr. Taylor was born at Montville, but had resided at Dunellen the greater part of his life. He always took an active part in the affairs of the borough and was interested in sports of all kinds. He was a member of George H. Adams Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Newark.

Besides a father, Mr. Taylor is survived by a wife and two children, two brothers, George W. Taylor, of Elizabeth, and Edward Taylor, of Dunellen.

YOUNG MAN VICTIM OF TYPHOID FEVER

Earl W. Lynn, aged 18 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Lynn, of 410 Grant avenue, died at Muhlenberg Hospital at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon from typhoid fever. He had been ill since August 20, when he was first taken with pleurisy after which he suffered an attack of typhoid fever. Everything possible that the skill of medical science could provided the young man at the hospital, but he failed to improve under the treatment.

Mr. Lynn was born at Detroit, Mich., and removed with his parents to this city a year later, where he has continued to reside. He attended the Stillman school, where he was popular with all his schoolmates, and where he made excellent progress in his studies. He was also a member of the First M. E. church and the Epworth League. The young man had a host of young friends, who deeply regret his death.

RALLY DAY EXERCISES AT THE FIRST BAPTIST.

The rally day exercises at the First Baptist church Sunday school Sunday were enjoyed by a large number of members and friends. Superintendent James E. Church was in charge of the program. A feature was the music, new books, "The Bible School Hymns," being used for the first time. Grant Colfax Tullar, one of the authors of the book, was present and led the school in singing and whistling several hymns from the book. This was greatly enjoyed by all, as was also the music furnished by Miss White, trumpeter, who has been a member of the large orchestra at the auditorium in Ocean Grove the past summer.

The lesson was taught by H. W. Herrman, and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, offered prayer. The Sunday school was attractively decorated for the occasion with American flags, and each member of the school was presented with a small American flag during the exercises.

HOW TO END DIVORCES

SO SAYS PASTOR MAGUIRE.

He Should Have No Secrets Apart From Her—Only Wages She Gets is His Love, Declares Pastor.

In a sermon directed to husbands in the Park avenue Baptist church Sunday morning, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor, put himself on record as being against the marrying of divorced persons and declared that he would never perform such a ceremony. He further declared that all the churches unite on that stand the divorce court of the country would soon be put out of business. "Marriage in these days," he said, "is being put on the level of commercialism and as such cannot have the blessing of the Almighty."

In his opening words the pastor said that it takes more than four walls and a roof to make the home. "If the roofs were lifted from the homes of the citizens of this city many would be disclosed. The only remedy for all of the ills of the household is found in the word love. Husbands should tell their wives oftener of the love they have for them and not let it go as an assumption that they have conferred to. A man and his wife should live in perfect confidence with each other and have no secrets between them. Thousands of commercial failures could have been averted had the husband only consulted the wife when trouble loomed.

Great countries like France, Italy and these United States are suffering the consequence of divorce laws which make it so easy for the dissatisfied to be become separated, but there should also be laws which will prohibit the remarrying of those divorced. Your wife hungers in her heart for the word of love. Don't always assume that because she knows you love her that she does not want you to repeat it over and over again for she does. The husband ought at all times be ready to sacrifice his life for his wife. He should find excuses for her faults. The only wages your wife gets is the love you give her and you should not be stinting her all the time.

Spend your evenings at home, at least some of them and you will find after a while that you enjoy yourself more in her company than at the lodge or club. Your wife should have a generous allowance and your pocketbook should always be open to her. In all conditions of life a husband can rely upon his wife for help. Her intuition is something that men cannot begin to have. Therefore consult her in everything.

"Comfort her. Sympathy and love help both the husband and wife in the training of their children. Begin to train the child before it is born by resolving upon its training ahead. Don't keep it to yourself, your child will be what you want to make it. Kindness is better than harsh words with the little ones. Remember they are learning from you and do your duty toward them.

"Discipline can be managed without crushing the spirit of a child. Remember that your child is an echo of yourselves and be guarded in your speech. And I caution you men to not make idols of your wives. Love them, yes, but remember that God has appointed you a priest in the household and it is your duty to there set up the family altar which should have the same care and reverence as the church of which you are a member. Remember that love is or should be the ruling feature in the home and this will lead you into the paths of Godliness."

Rev. Mr. Maguire had a large congregation many of the people coming from other churches to hear his text was taken from Ephesians 5:20 and the topic was "Duties of Husbands."

A Birthday Surprise.

Miss Hazel Williams, daughter of Mrs. L. R. Williams, of Crescent avenue, was tendered a surprise party in honor of her birthday, Saturday night. Thirty-six of her friends from this city and Westfield were in attendance and enjoyed music, games and dancing until 11 o'clock, when refreshments were served. A feature of the program was piano selections by Miss Emma Jimerson, of Westfield, and Fred Zweifel, of this city. The affair was arranged by Edwin Williams.

Will Celebrate Anniversary.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Senior C. E. Society of Trinity Reformed church will be held Tuesday evening, October 17. All former members and presidents will be invited. A history of the society will be read. A worshiper of the city will be invited. There will be special music, a social hour and an address by Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl, of Somerville.

Approaching Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Driscoll, of South street, announce the engagement of their son, Harry Reader to Miss Mae Dalley, of Somerville. The wedding will take place October 28.

TRINITY SUNDAY SCHOOL GRADUATION EXERCISES

The annual graduation exercises in the various departments of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school Sunday, excused the failure of as usual, proved interesting to the members and friends of the school. The attendance for the afternoon was 421, one of the largest of the year. Superintendent F. E. Smith was in charge, while interesting exercises were held in each department in connection with the graduation of the children. As each department was promoted, Rev. John T. Brock, pastor of the church, made a short and appropriate address, in which he congratulated the children for the excellent work done by them during the year.

The graduates to the junior department entered the large room first, taking part in simple exercises, then the graduates to the primary department and lastly the little tots going from the beginners to the primary department. Those going from the primary to the junior department each received a Bible. Earl Cooke and Francis Smith, of the primary department, received books for doing the best work during the year.

Miss Helen Smith was in charge of the exercises in the beginners' department. Mrs. J. M. Tier had charge of the primary department and Miss Harriet Randall was in charge of the juniors. Each child promoted received a diploma. The graduates were as follows:

D. A. R. TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING IN OCTOBER

Camp Middlebrook Chapter, D. A. R., held its first meeting of the fall season on last Tuesday afternoon at the Library club rooms in Bound Brook. Mrs. C. W. Thomas, the regent, being hostess of the occasion. An interesting and profitable afternoon was spent. The names of two applicants were presented and one previously presented was elected to membership.

Plans were formed to have a neighborhood meeting late in October and a committee appointed to take full charge. Members of Morristown, Continental, General Frelinghuysen, Oliver Blair and Princeton chapters will be invited to attend, they being the chapters interested in marking General Washington's line of march from Princeton to Morristown.

Papers were read on the New Jersey signers of the Declaration of Independence and Valley Forge. There were about eighteen members present and after dainty refreshments were served a rising vote of thanks was given the hostess.

The next meeting will be held on October 18, at the Homestead, the home of Mrs. William Rogers, River road, Bound Brook, and all who can are urged to be present as it will be the seventeenth annual meeting and election of officers.

ORIGINAL OF LITTLE DORRIT DEAD IN ENGLAND.

Word has reached American that Mrs. Georgiana Hayman, who claimed to have been the original of Little Dorrit, the character made famous by Dickens, is dead at Southsea, England, at the age of 81.

Her father was often visited by Dickens at the London home in Westminster Bridge road, and in this way the author first became acquainted with Mrs. Hayman, who was then Miss Bridges. Mrs. Hayman's brother was also the original for Tim Linkinwater, known as Tiny Tim. Fond of imitating a tightrope walker, the little fellow was one day walking along a railing outside the house, when he fell and was impaled on a spike.

FIGHT AGAINST SALOONS FOR CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP

Swackhamer Urges Borough Residents to Protest to Somerset Court.

SPEAKS AT WARREN CHAPEL.

Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey also Asks Men to Work Against Granting of Two License Applications.

Warren chapel was filled to its capacity, Sunday night, when Samuel S. Swackhamer stepped to the front of the platform to deliver his address of protest against the issuance of two more licenses in North Plainfield. Preceding Mr. Swackhamer's speech a short song service was held. Rev. J. O. McKelvey introduced the speaker.

Mr. Swackhamer devoted the early part of his speech to denouncing the selling of liquor on Sunday. He declared that this evil was and is conducted in defiance of the law and that it was within the power of the voters to put a stop to the practice. He said that other trades were compelled to keep their doors closed on the Sabbath, but there seemed to be no attempt in certan places to prevent the saloon from doing business on that day.

Mr. Swackhamer pointed out that the present slavery to the saloon was worse than the slavery which caused the war of the rebellion. In his efforts to put down the traffic, he said, the voters of this State had not stood by him as he knew they should. Public sentiment is changing and soon the tide will turn in favor of locap option and those who are working for the salvation of the youth of the land will have such a triumph as will make the vaults of heaven ring.

Two licenses are to be passed upon by Judge Clarence L. Case on October 8, and Mr. Swackhamer pleaded with all the men present who were in favor of restricting the sale of liquor in the borough to send in their protests if they were unable to take a trip to Somerville in person. "I would protest against a license for my own brother," he said. He has no animosity against the liquor men themselves, but against the stuff they sell. Mention of the defiance of law dealers at Atlantic City was made and then a final plea for a protest against the granting of the two licenses in the borough.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey supplemented Mr. Swackhamer's remarks by again urging the men present to send their protests. The congregation consisted largely of men and nearly every denomination in the city as well as the borough was represented. Many pledges of support for the protest were given by the men present.

WATCHUNG HUNT'S TEAM DEFEATS COUNTRY CLUB

The Watchung Hunt Club and Plainfield Country Club ball teams demonstrated their ability to put up a fine article of baseball at the Hunt Club grounds Saturday afternoon, the former finally winning by a score of 5 to 2. The contest was witnessed by an unusually large number of people, many enthusiasts making the trip to the grounds in autos and carriages. It was the opinion that the game would be a farce, but they were agreeably disappointed, for instead, the contest narrowed down to a real live diamond battle in which the Hunt Club members proved their superiority.

Harry Butler and Morris J. Dumont were in the points for the winning nine, while William Rushmore and Henry L. DeForest officiated for the Country Club aggregation. The latter nine was short a man, and the home club courteously loaned them a player, it being agreed that the last man at the bat in each inning should cover right-field for the visitors.

Rushmore fanned ten of the opposing batsmen, while Butler returned the compliment by striking out six men. Morris J. Dumont distinguished himself by making four of the eight hits for his team, while Arthur L. Otterson was credited with two bingles. The Country Club only got five hits off Butler, and they were well scattered. Hunt Club scored its runs in the sixth, eighth and ninth innings, while the visitors tallied its two runs in the third inning.

After the contest, the defeated team entertained the victors at dinner, and the Eureka Trio, of New York, kept everyone in good humor by a popular program of songs and instrumental music.

The lineup and score by innings follows:

Plainfield Country Club—Arthur Lovell 2b; W. T. Glenney, ss; H. L. DeForest, c; Ames Brooks, cf; J. R. Greason, lf; Clinton Ivins, 1b; Harry Eaton, 2b; William Rushmore.

FINALS TO BE PLAYED OCT. 22.

The annual play for the golf championship of the Plainfield Country Club, which began on Saturday with the qualifying round, attracted the largest entry list in the history of the club, there being fifty-six players entered for the big event. Of this number Roger F. Murray and John H. Deming, with W. G. Cooke, H. J. Cochran and H. S. Rogers returned no cards and two players were disqualified.

Owing to the large entry list a third sixteen was provided for and a prize will be secured for the winner. In the first sixteen four players were tied for last place, namely, A. M. Collens, Clifton Wharton, Jr., W. H. Rogers and W. T. Kaufman, with a score of 89. Those tied in the first sixteen will play off later. H. R. Stockton won the lowest gross score prize with a 77.

The play for the championship continued throughout the entire day and the course was crowded with contestants for honors. Prizes are offered for the winner, the runner-up, best score in qualifying round, and one for the defeated eighth. The winner of the second sixteen as well as winner of third sixteen. The play began with a qualifying round for the championship, the second and third sixteens to compete for special prizes. There will be a consolation prize for the beaten eight of the first sixteen. All match play rounds will be played at 18 holes, the championship and beaten eight at scratch and the second and third sixteens on a handicap basis, as follows:

October 1, the first round for the championship and second and third sixteens; October 8, the second round for the championship, second round for the second and third sixteens and first round for beaten eight in first sixteen; October 15, all semi-finals; October 22, all finals.

Those who qualified on Saturday were as follows:

First sixteen—W. Lester Glenney plays winner of tie; C. B. Morgan vs. H. D. Hibbard; Dudley H. Barrows vs. J. Whitney Baker; Arthur Murphy vs. R. G. Morse; H. R. Stockton vs. Ames Morgan; W. L. Glenney vs. Willard Wadsworth; S. D. Lounsbery vs. M. J. Dumont; J. E. Erickson vs. F. C. Talmadge.

Second sixteen—C. C. Burke vs. loser No. 2 of tie; E. J. Patterson vs. P. F. Shoemaker; E. T. Willson vs. loser No. 1 of tie; H. S. Fox vs. L. R. Hopton vs. L. G. Carman; C. W. King vs. loser No. 3 of first sixteen; H. F. Fox vs. S. P. Wood; R. S. Cox vs. E. P. Goodwin; O. W. Gott vs. S. H. Patterson.

Third sixteen—F. H. Stewart vs. D. G. Weems; Howard Huntington vs. G. F. Earl; Harold Serrell vs. L. H. VanBuren; George S. Clay vs. C. M. Church; A. W. Kleinecke vs. B. F. Kraffert; H. L. Hall vs. L. H. Gates; H. Serrell vs. W. A. Lane; G. M. Holstein vs. C. C. Riggs.

In addition to the championship event, there was a golf ball sweepstakes, 18 holes, handicap, medal play. C. B. Morgan was the winner with a score of 77, 7-70.

There were several amusing incidents throughout the day's play. One player was disqualified two strokes for picking up his ball when within two inches of the cup. His attention was called to the infraction of the rules and he replaced the ball and played the hole as he saw fit. Another player was disqualified for allowing his partner to put his ball at one of the holes, while another player was counted out without his knowledge. He gave his partner his card to attest with the understanding that he would turn in the score. He failed to do so and the player did not know the fact until told so by a member of the committee.

GOOD BOOKS AS MEDICINE

Their Reading a Valuable Aid

PRESENTS A FINE COLLECTION.

Philanthropist Holds That There Should Be a Library in Every Hospital for the Patients' Use.

The library at Muhlenberg Hospital is to be enriched by a magnificent gift from Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains. Volumes from the pens of the greatest authors including Shakespeare, and the novelists, Sir Walter Scott, Charles Dickens, Thackeray, J. Fenimore Cooper and others are included in the list which the doctor has donated, and most of the editions are of the de luxe variety and will form one of the finest collections to be found in any hospital library.

In his letter to the managers of Muhlenberg Dr. Coles says that: "In the treatment of disease, whether of the mind or the body, I have learned to thoroughly appreciate the invaluable aid obtainable from the reading of good books by the patients, especially during their convalescence. I therefore regard the establishment and use of a well selected library in every hospital, if not essential, certainly very beneficial as a means of lessening the weariness of delay and in the hastening of recovery. 'Mens sana in corpore sano.'"

Dr. Coles has ordered sent to Muhlenberg, all delivery charges prepaid, the following de luxe editions of Standard works: The Masterpieces and History of Literature, in ten volumes, edited by Julian Hawthorne which is a digest of the best writings of ancient and modern times and elegantly illustrated.

Modern Achievement, edited by Edward Everett Hale and others, ten volumes, containing celebrated and unique manuscript and book illustrations—series of fac similes showing the development of manuscript and book illustrating during a thousand years, also photo engravings in colors of paintings by Bierstadt and other famous artists.

Among the other works are de luxe editions of the works of William Shakespeare in ten volumes, and the novels mentioned above with many others. Doctor Coles has not forgotten the children in his splendid gift, for there are many single books especially designed to entertain and delight the young people who may have to linger on a cot. Among the single volumes is a copy of The Abbe Constantin, by Ludovic Halevy, which is acknowledged to be one of the most fascinating of novels. It is remarkable for its literary style, tenderness of spirit and keenness of observation. It was crowned by the French Academy and in 1904 had gone through no less than 150 editions.

This gift of books includes also a de luxe edition of volumes filled with copies of famous paintings by the old masters which adorn the walls of the noted galleries of Europe.

The best we owe to books, says Lord Macauley, in inexplicable. They fill our minds with noble and graceful images. They stand by us in all vicissitudes. They are comforters in sorrow, nurses in sickness and companions in solitude.

COST HIM $5 TO TRY TO SELL LINEN WITHOUT A LICENSE.

Domenico Sellenio, of 76 Oliver street, New York, made a sad mistake yesterday afternoon when he stopped at the home of Detective Sergeant John Flynn, on West Front street, and offered for sale some fine table linen. He didn't know what he was up against. This morning he enriched the city treasury by five dollars for peddling without a license, and was sent out of town. He said he would return to New York, where he wouldn't be treated quite so harshly and where he is more familiar with the appearance of a detective. Of course this move was suggested by Judge William N. Runyon, in the city court.

Passing Worthless Checks.

Merchants of the city are warned not to receive checks purporting to be signed by the manager of the Salvation Army Industrial department. Captain Hewitt, of the Army, says that the employees of this department are never paid in checks. Several merchants have cashed checks signed and endorsed by a man who variously signs his name Brooks, Fisher or Fox, as the whim seizes him, and he has succeeded in getting the change on small checks after making a small purchase. The checks have all been marked "N. G." by the bank upon which they have been drawn.

MANY REMONSTRATE AGAINST 2 LICENSES

From what can be gathered from the opponents to the liquor business in the borough, Judge Clarence L. Case will have a load of remonstrances to wade through before next Saturday which may convince him that the people of North Plainfield do not want any more saloons in that bailiwick.

The two cases which were postponed for further consideration by Judge Case two weeks ago are the new license for the Arlington Hotel on Somerset street and the renewal of the license for the Manhattan Hotel. It is claimed by those who are remonstrating against the opening of these places that there are enough saloons in the borough now and to add two more, both within a block of each other and in the residential district, would be a disgrace to the community.

The remonstrance meeting held in Warren chapel on Sunday, September 25, hundreds of letters have been written to Judge Case imploring him to refuse both licenses. On Saturday next a large delegation of men from North Plainfield will accompany Rev. Dr. J. McKelvey to Somerville to enter verbal protests against the granting of these licenses. Those who have signified their intentions of aiding in the protest are requested to take the 9:42 train from here on that day. It is urgently requested by Mr. McKelvey that all get together for that train so that a solid phalanx may be presented to Judge Case and thus carry all the weight necessary to have the desired result.

The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union has filed a protest, signed by all its members, and a number of the societies will be represented in the court that day to add their influence to that of the protestants from the borough. The hearing will take place at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning in the Somerville courthouse.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY WORK HER SUBJECT

A paper replete with interest was presented by Miss Susan Rafferty on "The Beginning of Woman's Mission Work" at the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Miss Rafferty prefaced her story of mission work among women by telling how the nineteenth century came to be called "the Woman's Century," and touched lightly on the movement that gave it the right to the ballot. Advance in the legal status of woman and opportunities for higher education were among the changes mentioned. She said it was not until 1893 that in Philadelphia the girl's high school was put on an equal basis with that of boys. In 1879, Northampton, Mass., now the seat of Smith College, voted not to be at any expense for schooling girls.

Miss Rafferty told of the coming, with the new century, of Emma Willard, who dared plead with the legislature of New York for the higher education of girls, and of Mary Lyon, who founded Mt. Holyoke Seminary, and whose influence directly affected woman's work for missions. Woman's part in the agitation on the subject of slavery, her interest in the Civil War, and the Woman's Rights movement were also touched upon. She paid a high tribute to Julia Ward Howe, who has achieved so much for women, and is still achieving.

Miss Rafferty told of the organization of the "Boston Female Society for Missionary Purposes," when Cary, the pioneer missionary, was at work in India, and of the general awakening when the nation was aroused by Judson's appeal. Her story of the organization of women's societies for missionary work among various denominations was full of interest and instruction.

The inscription now used on the first page of the First Baptist church's weekly calendar was obtained by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss from the tablet at the entrance to York Minster, while he was abroad. It reads as follows: "Whosoever thou art that enterest here, wilt thou not offer before thou leavest a prayer to God—for thyself, for those who worship and those who minister before Him in this His House."

Old Lady—I notice there has been a great falling off in the number of marriages.

Old Bachelor—Of late years the spread of intelligence among all classes has been simply wonderful.

MRS. HAYES FINE GOLF

She Wins Gross Honors in One Day in P. C. C. Tournament.

SEVERAL OTHER CONTESTS.

Mrs. Bird Makes Lowest Score in 18-hole Medal Play—Mrs. Patterson Wins Approaching Competition.

Mrs. F. H. Hayes, of Midland, won the gross scores honors in the one-day tournament over the course of the Plainfield Country Club, yesterday. She made the 18-hole circuit with a score of 90, one stroke better than Mrs. L. W. Callan, of Englewood, and two strokes less than Mrs. T. H. Polhemus, also of the Englewood club.

In the 18-hole medal play handicap three prizes were offered by the club. They were first and second net and first gross. Mrs. W. S. Bird, of Dunwoodie, won the first net score prize with a 94, 18-80, while Mrs. R. Frayne, of the same club, and Miss Margaret Goddard, of the home club, tied for second honors with net totals of 84. There was a difference of only two strokes in their handicaps, Mrs. Frayne having a 12 and Miss Goddard 14. The playoff was on three holes and Mrs. Frayne allowed her opponent one stroke, and won out.

The club ruled that a player could only receive one prize and in consequence Mrs. Hayes was eliminated so far as the second net trophy was concerned. In her round, Mrs. Hayes went out in 48 and home in 42.

In the wake of the handicap came an approaching and putting competition. Contestants approached to the home green with three balls from as many distances, and when all had finished Mrs. H. L. Patterson, of Baltusrol, and Miss M. Van Boskerck, of the home club, were found to be tied with 10 strokes who did well were Mrs. Ralph Hoyt, of Forest Hill; Mrs. H. R. Stockton, of Plainfield; Mrs. F. E. Donohoe, of Montclair; and Mrs. N. P. Rogers, of Baltusrol, all at 16. The play-off between Mrs. Patterson and Miss Van Boskerck to decide first and second prizes was won by the first named with a score of 13.

The field of forty-odd women represented something like eleven clubs, and the fact that no member of the home organization won a prize speaks well for the quality of the visiting players. Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, chairman of the tournament committee, was ably assisted by J. E. Erickson and Leighton Calkins, president of the club.

The scores in the handicap were as follows:

Mrs. W. S. Bird, Dunwoodie, 98, 18-80; Mrs. F. H. Hayes, Midland, 90, 9-81. Mrs. W. R. Frayne, Dunwoodie, 98, 12-84; Mrs. M. Goddard, Plainfield, 98, 14-84; Mrs. L. W. Callan, Englewood, 91, 4-87; Miss Helen Rosencrantz, Ridgewood, 94, 7-87; Mrs. R. G. Hanford Wykagyl, 99, 10-89; Miss F. Gwyer, Siwanoy, 108, 18-90; Miss A. M. Elsberg, Plainfield, 108, 18-90; Mrs. H. R. Stockton, Plainfield, 100, 10-90; Mrs. T. H. Polhemus, Englewood, 92, 2-90. Mrs. C. J. Selter, Siwanoy, 117, 25-92; Mrs. R. A. Moriarity, Montclair, 113, 20-93; Miss F. Cooper, Montclair, 105, 7-98; Mrs. H. Balin, Forest Hill, 105, 12-93; Mrs. W. J. Faith Wykagyl, 98, 5-93; Mrs. S. A. Cunningham, Englewood, 109, 15-94; Miss Alice Titus, Plainfield, 114, 20-94; Mrs. N. P. Rogers, Baltusrol, 99, 4-95; Miss Lockett, South Orange, 106, 20-96; Mrs. R. O. Smith, Montclair, 104, 8-96; Miss F. A. Duff, Dunwoodie, 113, 17-96; Miss J. A. Philbrick, Montclair, 116, 20-96; Miss Gertrude Noe, Westfield, 113, 15-98; Miss L. Gould, Siwanoy, 108, 10-98; Mrs. J. H. Stokes, Jr., Ridgewood, 111, 25-99; Mrs. M. M. Dumont, Plainfield, 124, 25-99; Mrs. C. A. Woodruff, Forest Hill, 112, 12-100; Mrs. Thomas Travis, Montclair, 118, 16-102; Miss L. F. Otten, Siwanoy, 126, 20-106; Mrs. Ralph Hoyt, Forest Hill, 141, 25-116.

The Plainfield Driving Club is completing arrangements for a special race meet to be held at the driving park on Columbus Day, October 12. There will be trotting and running races, and the Watching Hunt Club will have a number of entries.

3 Hurt in a Fall.

Three carpenters, each injured by falling thirty feet while at work, were given treatment at the City Hospital, Newark, the last the twenty-four hours. But one of the trio sustained injuries which are regarded as dangerous.

HOLY NAME 4,000 STRONG

NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Father Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, today announced the plans for the annual demonstratin of the Holy Name societies to be held here next Sunday afternoon. It is expected that there will be at least 4,000 members in the parade which will be started at 2:45. The line of march will be up Watching avenue from Second street to Manning avenue, to Somerset street, to West Front to Seventh street, thence to Liberty.

In order these will be in line: First division—Elizabeth band, St. Mary's, Holy Rosary, St. Michael's and Sacred Heart societies, of Elizabeth; Elizabeth fife and drum corps; St. Patrick's, Elizabeth; St. Mary's, Rahway; St. Joseph's Roselle; Holy Trinity, Westfield; St. Andrew's, Cranford. Second Division—VanBaar's Imperial band, New York; St. Mary's Plainfield; St. Joseph's, North Plainfield; St. John's, Dunellen; St. Bernard's, Raritan; Immaculate Conception, Somerville, and St. Joseph's, Bound Brook. There will be no flags except the American carried in the parade. Each marcher will have a bannerette inscribed "H. N. S." attached to a cane. Michael D. O'Keefe will be marshal of the first division, and Michael Caffrey of the second division.

A large platform is being erected in front of the St. Mary's commercial school, where the exercises will be held. The solemn benediction will be given by the Very Rev. Dean Gessler, the venerable rector of St. Patrick's Elizabeth, assisted by Rev. Francis O'Neill, pastor of Holy Rosary, Elizabeth. Father Bogan will preside at the meeting to follow. The speakers will be Rev. Dr. Joseph J. McMahon, rector of Our Lady of Lourdes, New York, and James A. Donnelly, formerly assistant attorney general of New York State.

Miss Gratia Greenwood Van Patten, daughter of Mrs. Byron Van Patten, of North Main street, Carthage, N. Y., and Alfred Edmond La Porte, of this city, were married at the rectory of St. James' R. C. church, Carthage, on Monday morning, by Rev. Father Whalen, O. S. A.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to a few friends and the relatives of the couple. The dining room was decorated in purple and white, these being the class colors of the bride. Misses Ora Lombar and Helen Woolworth served the guests at the tables. These two young women are intimate friends of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of the State Normal School, at Potsdam, N. Y., and taught school for several terms in this city. Mr. La Porte is employed in the local postoffice and is president of the New Jersey State Postoffice Clerks Association. The couple are spending their honeymoon in the Adirondacks, and on their return will live at 21 Jackson avenue, the borough, where they will be at home to their friends after December 1.

WHAT'S THE POPULATION?

All the guessers in this town have not yet taken a fall out of the census figures, but they ought to get on the job. Figures are coming in for cities of about the population of Plainfield and it wont be long before the real population of the City Beautiful is made public.

The Daily Press has offered a prize for the nearest guess as to the population of Plainfield and North Plainfield, $5 in gold for each municipality. Hundreds of guesses have been received, but there is room for more. Have you sent in yours?

Still Hunting for Miss Bremmer.

Search is being continued for the missing Lily Bremmar. Chief Marshal George Weiss, of the borough, had a clue which led over the mountains this morning, but it did not pan out. The person did not answer the description of the missing girl.

ARRANGE MASS MEETINGS

NOON-DAY SHOP MEETINGS.

Open-air and hall meetings are to be held under the auspices of the Republican city committee to give the Republican nominees in the State, county and city tickets an opportunity to be heard by the voters. The arguments, as in the primary campaign, will be free of personalities and will be confirmed to a discussion of the issues. Reform hall has been leased for every Monday night from now on to the day of election for this purpose. In addition, there will be open-air meetings at the shops at noon time during the last week of the campaign. All this was decided at a meeting of the city committee last night.

The resignations of G. W. V. Moy and Howard C. Tracy were accepted. Dr. N. W. Curry was selected to succeed Mr. Moy. The other vacancy was not filled.

The committee for the meetings, as appointed by Chairman Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., consists of John H. Cose, James F. Buckle, Arthur Lovell Amos Andrews and Ralph I. Foles.

There appears to be some question as to the exact date when the gubernatorial candidate, Banking Commissioner Vivian Lewis, will address the Plainfield voters. At first it was announced that he would be here on Thursday, Sept. 13, and then it was stated that the correct date was Friday, Sept. 14. Union County Chairman Frank H. Smith, however, said today, that he understood that Saturday, Oct. 15, was the date. To find out to a certainty he has sent to the State committee for information.

It is expected that former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, the Republican nominee for mayor, will speak at one of the meetings. He has taken the position that he is not a seeker after the office and has not been from the start, but now that he is in the fight he proposes to win and therefore may address the voters. Mr. Coriell's friends say that he believes in the old Republican maxim, "the office should seek the man, and not the man the office."

STREET CONTRACTOR'S NEGLIGENCE IS COSTLY.

Last night, at about 9 o'clock, William Phillips, of 510 West Fourth street, while driving through Plainfield avenue, between Stelle avenue and Randolph road, ran into a pile of dirt, breaking a shaft of his wagon and rendering parts of his harness useless through the falling of his horse.

Patrolman Birmingham reported the occurrence, and declared that although the piled up dirt extends for nearly a block, there was only one red lantern to indicate the danger. The contractor, whose name the police did not know will be looked up today and notified of the accident.

ANGLOPHONICS SUBJECT OF BOARD OF TRADE LECTURE.

The October meeting of the Board of Trade will be held tomorrow night in the rooms on Park avenue, when a program of unusual interest will be presented. Invitations have been sent to neighboring Boards of Trade, civic bodies, educational boards, teachers and ministers and women will also be welcome.

From 8 to 9 o'clock the topic for consideration will be "The Fire Department," and after 9 o'clock there will be a lecture by Dr. W. W. Shearer, of Virginia. The subject will be "Anglophonics or the Phonetic English Alphabet."

Going to Leave Town

MISS MARY T. SMITH T. R. RANDOLPH'S BRIDE

In the presence of only immediate relatives of the two families, Miss Mary Tomlinson Smith, youngest daughter of Captain and Mrs. W. C. Smith, was united in marriage last night to Thomas Raymond Randolph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Randolph, of Central avenue. The ceremony took place at 8:30 at the home of the bride's parents on Grandview avenue, and was performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. The young couple were married with the impressive ring ceremony while standing beneath a bower of smilax, ferns and plants, having a background of the national colors.

Miss Smith wore a becoming traveling gown of navy blue with hat to correspond, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Clara Barton Smith, who wore a gown of pink chiffon over pink silk, and carried pink roses. Paul Whitford, of this city, acted as best man. Mrs. Edward I. Smalley, sister of the groom, played the Mendelssohn wedding march as the bridal party entered the parlor. The bride was given away by her father.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, during which supper was served by Caterer Edwin Neighbor. Mr. and Mrs. Randolph took their departure later amid a shower of rice and good wishes, and will spend the next two weeks in New England, going as far as Maine. On returning they will begin housekeeping at Fourth street and Central avenue.

Both bride and groom are well known in the city and borough, and the esteem in which they are held was vouched for by the large assortment of wedding gifts. They included a substantial check from the bride's father. The groom is connected with the local office of the Public Service Corporation.

FINCH LOSES LAST OF A STRING OF HUNTERS

"Harry Baylor" conspicuous in all of the hunt club races throughout the Metropolitan district, and in other parts of the country, died Saturday night at Millbrook, N. Y., where two weeks before the horse took part in the races at that place. The animal was entered by the owner Rufus C. Finch and in taking one of the water jumps reached too far, spraining a tendon in the leg. The injury was not thought to be a serious one at the time, but the next day the leg began to swell until it reached extreme proportions. The services of an expert veterinary were secured and everything possible was done for the horse, but to no purpose. Saturday morning the attendant found the animal dead in his stall, and an investigation showed that a blood vessel had burst.

The death of this valuable hunter recalls the misfortune of Mr. Finch since he has become active in various hunt races, about a year and a half ago he lost "Rounder," whose sire won the Baltimore Derby and three weeks later he lost "Lady Potentate," both fine blooded animals. "Rounder" died at Cedarhurst, where the animal broke neck in a fall and continued running a considerable distance, when it fell dead. "Lady Potentate" died at Elkwood Park from an injury.

"Harry Baylor" was originally a Virginia horse, and was nine years old. Hugh Gormley owned the animal for a couple of years and was successful in all the races in which the horse was entered. Two years ago the horse won the President's cup at Lenox, Mass. and won other notable events. Prior to selling the horse to Mr. Finch, Mr. Gormley hunted him on several occasions throughout this section, and Mr. Finch also entered his horse in many races. This will probably end Harry Baylor's racing career with blooded stock. He feels his loss keenly.

F. C. LANGHORNE INJURED

UNCONSCIOUS WHEN RESCUED.

Deckhand Saves Him From Drowning—He Will Recover—Jas. Craig's Fortunate Escape.

Rendered unconscious from a glancing blow from the stem of a Pennsylvania tug boat while fishing in the channel off Boynton Beach this morning at 11 o'clock, Frank C. Langhorne, the well known photographer, of East Front street, was taken to the City hospital at Perth Amboy, where it is said he was in a dangerous condition. James Craig, who was with Mr. Langhorne, was thrown from the boat into the water, but escaped with nothing worse than a wetting while the row boat was smashed into kindling wood.

It was said this afternoon that the accident happened so quickly that the occupants of the boat could not escape the collision after they had observed the approach of the tug which was towing some empty scows. When the two men saw the oncoming tug they made frantic efforts to get their boat out of the channel, but they were not quick enough. As the prow of the tug struck the boat it also hit Mr. Langhorne a glancing blow on the side of the head and threw him under one of the barges, and as he rose from the depths his head again struck the side of the scow with such force as to render him unconscious. His body immediately floated face upwards and Howard Cappen, a deckhand on the tug jumped over board and hauled Mr. Langhorne aboard the tug.

Making all haste, the captain of the tug cut loose from his tow and made for Perth Amboy, where an ambulance hurried Mr. Langhorne to the City Hospital, still unconscious. The tug which struck the boat was numbered 32 and was in command of Captain R. B. Forbes. Dr. Meringer, of Perth Amboy, attended Mr. Langhorne and from the latest information that he has obtained to believe that the Plainfield was seriously injured.

A more thorough examination at the City Hospital revealed the fact that no bones were broken and that Mr. Langhorne's skull was not fractured. Shortly after noon he regained consciousness and was able to converse freely, telling who he was and how the accident happened. The chances are good for an early recovery, Dr. Meringer saying that Mr. Langhorne was suffering more from shock than anything else.

Mr. Langhorne is the only surviving charter member of the "Jolly Corks," an organization from which the present order of Elks sprung.

MUSICAL SERVICE OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

A musical evening at the Salvation Army Hall was enjoyed by a large congregation last evening. Martin A. Korff and George Speers with violins and Mrs. L. R. Howard at the piano made a splendid trio. Besides solos by Mr. Korff and Mr. Spers Mrs. Howard sang beautifully "Carry With Me" and "I'll Do What You Want Me to Do."

The solos were interspersed with Gospel hymns heartily sung by the congregation led by Captain Hewitt. After the music Mr. Korff addressed the meeting for about forty minutes taking as a topic the roads of two trains and his text from Matthew, 7:13. Mr. Korff's talk was along the line of taking either one of the two roads, preferably the one which leads to everlasting life and gave the reasons why it was better to switch off at Hallelula avenue and join those whose destination was the Kingdom of God.

The Tuesday night meetings in the hall will be continued throughout the winter and a special music will be engaged for each meeting.

Catholic Books in Library.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library last night, the library committee reported the purchase of the first eight volumes of the Catholic Encyclopedia. Subsequent volumes are to be purchased as issued. Steps are being taken to enlarge the law library, and to provide a room for it. A contract has been given out to install a disinfectant plant.

One Year as Rector.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Church of the Heavenly Rest was held last night with a full attendance. Mortimer Givens and James R. Harris, were present for the first time. Rev. Mr. Mallory's first year as pastor will be observed at next Sunday's service.

LIFE IN A COAL BREAKER

Dark Picture Drawn of Employment to Which Young Boys Are Bound.

Practically every boy graduates from school to the coal breaker before he is fourteen—some boys as early as ten or eleven years. The coal breaker is a gaunt, tower-like wooden structure, at the top of which the coal is broken into the required size for use and then sent in a continuous stream down chutes which empty into waiting coal cars or pockets. The boys are employed to pick out of the moving stream the pieces of slate as they appear—straddling the chutes, or sitting on small wooden projections at the side. The atmosphere in the breaker is so thick and dark with flying coal dust that an attempt to take a photograph of a couple of boys at noon, near a window, resulted in one indistinguishable black surface; the noise is so great that I could not distinguish the words of my guide even when he put his mouth close to my ear and shouted; the movement and shaking of the whole structure are at times so violent that in some breakers I have been obliged to hold tightly on to something for safety. The boys grow so cramped from long sitting in one position that sometimes they seize the opportunity to chase one another around the slippery metal platforms. And there was not one superintendent in the four or five collieries that we have happened to visit who did not, upon our questioning, relate at least one tragedy that had occurred in his experience, of a boy who had slipped into a coal pocket and been smothered, or had been mangled by falling into the machinery. When we have asked whether the slate picking could not be done by mechanical devices, the invariable answer has been, "Yes, but the boys are cheaper."—Harper's Magazine.

OLD AIDS TO THE HAT TRADE

Severe Laws Have Been Passed in England to Protect Various Makers of Headgear.

Hats have in England been subject to very severe protective enactments. The blocked beaver hat, for instance, imported by Sir Walter Raleigh from the low countries, won its way so rapidly that in 1571 Queen Elizabeth passed an act to protect the making of "shrumms" caps, made from wool for the advantage of the landed proprietors, whose sheep furnished the material. The statute provided that "every person, except ladies and Jews (why were Jews excused?) shall on Sundays and holidays wear on his head a cap of velvet wool made in England. Penalty 3s. 6p. per day." About a century later the law, for which there is nothing too high or too low, having taxed men's shoes, turned its attention once more to their hats, and soon put a check on all improvements in the trade by requiring every vender of hats to take out a license under a heavy penalty. Subsequently a stamp duty was imposed on hats, which were officially marked inside where the maker's name now appears. The penalty for selling a hat without a stamp was £10, and the penalty for forging a hat stamp was—death! Whence, no doubt, the modern custom of the man who goes to church, sits down, looks into his hat—to read his maker's name!

A Novel Bed.

"I'm a hundred per cent. healthier for sleeping up next to the ceiling," remarked a certain dweller out East Capitol way. "I'm not only above the drafts that frisk back and forth from the window to door and cause half the colds we suffer from, but I breathe a far purer quality of air and hence awake more refreshed. Foul air always settles to the lowest parts of the room; the purer air floats above where I sleep."

He has rigged for himself a complicated system of weights and pulleys whereby he can hoist his couch from the floor and suspend it, like Mohammed's coffin, the while he slumbers. As to the possibilities of rolling out of bed, he refused to make commitment.—Washington Star.

The Question Answered.

The late Mr. John J. Ingalls, United States senator from Kansas, once told with great glee the story of a joke at his own expense, the humor of which, however, he enjoyed as keenly as if he had not been the victim of it.

"I went one evening," said Mr. Ingalls, "to make a political speech in a small town. I presume the people thought I would have difficulty in filling an hour; at any rate, they called upon the village choir to assist.

"I trust that the hymns were selected for my arrival, for all that I cannot be sure. I know that before the talk the choir sang 'What Shall the Harvest Be?' and after it, 'Nothing but Leaves.'"—Youth's Companion.

Luxury of Law.

"I haven't the vestige of a case," said the crafty client to the crafter lawyer, "but I have money."

"How much?" casually inquired the legal one.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars," proclaimed the client.

The lawyer put out his hand.

"Shake hands!" he said. "You have the best case I ever heard of. I'll see that you never go to jail with that sum!"

And he did.

The client there went "broke."

SURPRISED VISITOR TO CITY

Good Old Uncle Josh Wondered at Liberality Displayed by "Them Oprey People."

A few days ago a resident of Shamong township came over from Jerusep to lay in a supply of seed potatoes, cultivator teeth and other things, and after looking over the cut glass and picture display in one or two lifesaving stations, he rambled out Market street to see the city.

While making a tour Uncle Josh ran across a building operation where an old structure had been torn down to make room for a more modern one. The bricks which had been taken from the old building were piled several feet high and many yards long in the street, and, of course, were covered from one end to the other with theatrical posters.

Uncle Josh let his eyes play on the brick pile for several minutes while an expression of mingled surprise and admiration floated over his countenance. Finally he turned to a policeman on the corner.

"I jes' tell you what it is, constable," he remarked in a confidential tone, "them oprey people don't mind their expense when they start to do a thing, do they?"

"I don't know," was the wondering response, "what do you mean?"

"Why, jes' look at that," said Uncle Josh, pointing to the brick pile, "who would think that they would go to all that trouble to build a brick wall as thick as thet jes' ter paste them actin' picter's on?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

HAD FUN WITH PRESIDENTS

Agnes Carr Sage, in her book, "Boys and Girls of the White House," has included some stories of children who, without living in the presidential mansion, were privileged to have their fun at the president's expense. Among them was the adopted daughter of Dolly Madison. Who was the president is not told, but the chances are in favor of Van Buren. The little girl was a great favorite with the following Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler and Polk in the White House. Van Buren is the one who would have enjoyed the joke most heartily.

Mistress Dolly's closing days would have been desolate, indeed, but for Anna Payne, the child of a brother in Kentucky, whom she adopted late in life. This young girl was her constant companion after the death of Mr. Madison, in 1836, and a veritable sunbeam in the home which she made at Washington within a stone's throw of the White House.

A prankish little creature was Anna, and up to all sorts of mischief. Thus, one first of April, she invited the one who was then president to dine, without mentioning the fact to her aunt.

When the worthy lady was horrified by the unexpected arrival of so illustrious a guest, Anna flew in and laughingly informed them both that it was only an "April fool."—Youth's Companion.

A Strange Hairpin.

"This," said the gay bachelor, leading his visitors through the flat, "is my famous collection of hairpins."

The hairpins, 100 or more, filled a Louis Quinze cabinet. Some were of shell, some of silver, some even of gold.

"This is the strangest," said the bachelor, "this hollow glass one. See, there is a fluid in it, a perfume. And here is a tiny hole, so that, when the pin lies obliquely in the hair, the perfume is emitted slowly in delicate drops.

"It is a Japanese hairpin," he concluded. "A geisha in a Yokohama tea house gave it to me. I can still see how to fasten the lower coil of the samisen, while very slowly, in drops resembling tears, the perfume fell on her amber-colored cheek."

A correspondent, writing on the illiteracy of the native classes, points out a strange anomaly. In devising the "Oriental Braille" alphabet for the use of the Indian blind it was found that the 63 combinations of the six Braille dots will serve to give the blind one code for the whole of the languages of India, and with this code the Indian blind are being taught, and no difficulty has arisen in any vernacular. The ordinary native blessed with sight is more unfortunate. The complicated nature of the native syllabaries is such that it requires from 500 to 1,000 sorts of type to print a book even in simple language. Originally the letters of Asoka were alphabetic in form, but the modern varieties of Asoka's letters have become elaborate and complicated.—Allahabad Pioneer.

Had to Find His Man.

"Mark Twain," said a magazine editor, "liked to tell, as an illustration of persistence and push, a story about a Sheepshead Bay race. He said that at the end of an important race a young man shouted so savagely, 'Hats off! hats off, there!' that every one in hearing distance obeyed him and stood bareheaded. A moment later the young man hastened towards an elderly gentleman, shouting as he ran, 'You can put on your hat again now. It's all right.' Some one asked him later why he had made all the people take their hats off. 'Well,' he replied, 'I'd bet fifty with a bald-headed man, and I had to find him, hadn't I?'"

NEEDS OF BACKWARD CHILD

The greatest need of the average backward child, after his physical defects have been removed and his body given a decent chance to develop, is a moral awakening, says Rheta Childe Dorr in the course of an article describing the public school work for backward children, in Hampton's Magazine. Virtually all such children are selfish, passionate and malicious. They love to destroy. They love to inflict pain. They delight in disturbing the order of a classroom. Almost always are they untruthful, and very frequently are they thievish.

Why not? They live in a state of constant struggle with the world—an unequal struggle in which their miserable little souls are daily and hourly crucified. Around them is a world of normal children who learn easily things beyond the power of the backward to acquire; who are praised and loved and rewarded. In the playground the backward children enviously watch the others perform feats of strength and skill. Sometimes the dullard or the handicapped child tries to break into a game or a contest and is pushed aside or chased away by the strong. A child not feeble minded but merely dull and on that account behind the procession resents with a bitterness not to be comprehended this constant pushing aside. Exactly like a rat fighting for life in a corner he strikes back viciously, desperately.

Far more than their brains the emotional natures of such children need cultivation. Far more important than learning to read is learning to love and trust. Vices of temperament must be unlearned, bad habits must be overcome, a whole garden full of weeds must be cleared away before the soil is ready for planting. After that the task is not fraught with serious difficulties.

NEW INVENTION OF THIEVES

Wholesale thefts from a score or more of Philadelphia stores were discovered recently through the arrest of two men and a young woman, and from $3,000 to $4,000 worth of stolen goods were recovered in their room.

The detectives who entered the room had just as the three were unloading goods of various kinds from the big paper boxes. Hawley, upon whom cards were later found giving the name "William Hailey, character comedian, Philadelphia," ordered them to remain where they were and what they wanted. The detectives soon enlightened him and told the three they were under arrest.

The boxes were especially arranged for making thefts easy, the arrangement being something new even in the varied arts of shoplifters. A hole about 12 inches long and 5 inches wide was cut in each box, and the box was so carried under the arm with this hole next to the side of the body that it was almost impossible to discover it. The accused would each buy some trifling article and pay for it. The bill was then taken and attached to the box in such a way that it could be seen readily by the salesperson and was thus easily paid. Each of the thieves would operate at different counters, as a rule, but sometimes one of the men and the woman would operate together.

Made Him a Fair Offer.

A good story is told of the late A. H. Wyant, the artist. A young man called at Mr. Wyant's studio one day and asked him to give him some lessons in painting. "What can you do?" asked the old artist. "Oh, I can finish a landscape first-rate, but I never know how to begin one"—was the reply. "Well, that's so," remarked the veteran painter, solemnly, "I think we can easily make a bargain. I find that I can begin a picture without any trouble, but it is a dreadful task to finish it satisfactorily. Now, if you'll teach me how to finish my pictures, I'll teach you how to begin yours." Then the old gentleman went back to work, and the young artist went away to think over the proposition.

Picks Up Pawned Medals.

A man was peering through the window of an old curiosity shop on Third avenue, making notes on the back of an envelope, relates the New York Sun. He said to a bystander who was looking at him inquiringly: "See those old war medals in there? I go around town making lists of those that are for sale. I send them over to various dealers in Europe who sell them to collectors. These dealers make offers to me, and if I make enough margin I take them up by buying the medal at once and shipping it. New York is the best town in the world to get old European war medals in. Exsoldiers and discharged sailors usually come here as immigrants, get into hard luck and dispose of their medals."

Modern Palmistry.

Palmistry, in its modern acceptance, is divided into two branches, chirognomy and chiromancy. Chirognomy defines the outward shape of the hand, and of its members, the thumb and finger. The name is derived from the Greek and means the laws of the hands. Chiromancy is also derived from the Greek and signifies divination by the hand—that is, by the lines, mounts and other marks on the palms of the hand.

THE MAN HATER

Miss Pine glanced up from her garden bed and her eyes encountered two round, blue ones, set in a square, unsmiling face, behind which a big sun hat flared out. The elastic which held the hat in place was conveniently, if not artistically, hitched under the tip of the wearer's nose.

"Good morning," said the owner of the blue eyes, taking a few tentative steps toward Miss Pine. "What are you doing?"

"I'm planting some flowers," was the reply. "What are you doing this fine morning?"

"I'm just taking a walk," answered the blue-eyed one, casually. "That is, I thought I'd come and walk past your house and see what you were doing. I thought you might be out here."

"My mother and I might come in and stay with you awhile if you asked me," she ventured presently.

Miss Pine looked properly embarrassed and apologetic. "I beg your pardon," she said. "Do please come in. I have such awfully poor manners. I never thought to ask you."

The caller promptly came. "I think you have very nice manners," she remarked consolingly. "Everybody forgets sometimes."

She carefully examined a big stone that lay near the walk, then, gathering her skirts tightly about her plump knees, she sat down upon it, tipping her feet up so that only her toes touched the ground.

"Once," she said, when she was comfortably seated, "a boy told me to sit on a stone like this one and when I got up I found it was on top of an ant hill." She gave a retrospective wriggle.

"It was awful terrible," she assured Miss Pine in a hushed tone. "They bit me dreadfully and I cried for hours and hours. I had always been told that if I didn't hurt the creatures they wouldn't hurt me, so I was very much grieved in my inside feelings and my outside ones, too."

"I don't wonder," sympathized Miss Pine. "But I don't think there are any ants under that stone. It was put there only yesterday."

"I think I'd better watch, though," returned the caller, peering about anxiously. "What are you planting?"

"Pansies," said Miss Pine. "Have you planted any at your house?"

Blue Eyes sniffed disgustedly. "We did plant some," she replied, "but a boy came and kicked them all up with his foot. We have the most awful time with boys. I don't see what they were ever made for."

"Oh, I think they have their uses," said Miss Pine, tolerantly. "Don't you know any nice boys?"

"There aren't any nice ones," Blue Eyes asserted with conviction. "They're all bad. Even the grown-up ones I don't like very much, except my daddy, but he's so different from the rest of them. Uncles are grown-up boys, you know, and I don't like them at all. I have one uncle that I pretend I like sometimes till I can hardly bear it.

"There's a very bad boy that lives next door to us," Blue Eyes continued, ruminatingly. "You know, I have a lovely dog. Father says he's more kinds of a dog than he ever knew of before, and this bad boy next door calls him a cur. I think that's a mean thing to say and it hurts Tadpole's feelings. Tadpole's the name of my dog. Uncle Jack named him and all the other uncles would call him that, so I thought the easiest way was just to pretend I liked it and let it be his name.

"Are you married?" she interrupted herself to ask suddenly.

"No," said Miss Pine, "and, frankly, just between you and me, I don't ever expect to be."

Blue Eyes clapped her hands delightedly. Then she got up from the stone, stepping into a rather gingerly way, until she had safely cleared its environs. She threw her arms around the knees of Miss Pine and hugged them enthusiastically.

"Oh, isn't that perfectly lovely!" she exclaimed. "I'm never going to be married myself unless boys get lots nicer than they are now. Don't you think it would be just the loveliest thing in the world for me and you and my mother to live together and plant things and take care of Tadpole and not ever have any brothers or uncles or husbands or anything, but just have a good time and be widows?"

Nobility of Labor.

There is a perennial nobleness, and even sacredness in work. Were a man ever so benighted, or forgetful of his high calling, there is always hope in him who actually and earnestly works; in idleness alone is there perpetual despair.—Thomas Carlyle.

True Motive in Life.

Where you are is of no moment, but only what you are doing there. It is not the place that ennobles you, but you the place, and this is only by doing that which is great and noble.—Ruskin.

HELPFUL GUESTS

Although of a hospitable nature, Miss Belinda had long ago added to her many gifts of diffidence the reserve from visitors in the spring. "Planting and visitors don't agree," she often said to herself.

When, on the day she was putting in seeds for her annuals, she saw an automobile turn into her driveway she gave a gasp of dismay and arose from her knees with an expression of fatigue not caused by her garden labors.

"We have come out to pass the day with you," announced one of the girls, who gaily jumped out of the car.

"And we were only two hours and fifty minutes running out from town," said another. "Wasn't that good time? We are planning to go home by moonlight."

"Oh, Miss Belinda," exclaimed the third, "how perfectly lovely your place looks and what a lot of spring work you have done already! Now, we aren't going to interrupt your labors at all. That would be a shame. We are going to help you. What shall we do? Shall we weed the garden?"

"It's a little early for weeding," answered Miss Belinda, with a smile. "I think perhaps luncheon should be the first thing on the program. My cook has gone for the day, so we shall have to prepare our own meal."

"All the more fun. We love to cook. Let us do everything," cried the girls in a jumbled chorus of enthusiasm.

"Very well," laughingly agreed Miss Belinda. "You can start things while I get a little of the garden soil off my hands. You'll find nearly everything in the pantry, and what you don't find there is in the cellar."

The girls, having frequently visited Miss Belinda in the summer, quickly made themselves at home and Miss Belinda, dressing in an upstair chamber, smiled as she heard the bursts of merriment rising from the kitchen and dining room.

"I oughtn't to grudge them such a good time," she said to herself, "but I am glad my guests do not see me much in getting the garden started."

She still was thinking regretfully of her unfinished garden beds as she went downstairs.

"See, Miss Belinda, what a pretty salad I have made of watercress," said one girl.

"Watercress?" Miss Belinda looked at her visitor in surprise. "Why, where did you get watercress?"

"In the garden. There was quite a clump of it, but I didn't take it all, for I thought you'd want to have another salad before what I cut grew up again."

"I'm glad you didn't take it all," said Miss Belinda, looking carefully at the green leaves under the mayonnaise, "because I'm afraid it won't be very good in salad. It's campanula. We'll have to eat it, my dears, and you say a word to the other girls about it."

"I suppose it is a kind of a joke on me, isn't it?"

"Well," Miss Belinda's eyes twinkled, "I don't know whether the joke is on you or not. I should place it in another quarter."

"Oh, Miss Belinda, do come into the kitchen," called one of the enthusiastic young cooks, "and tell us what you think is the matter with these sweet potatoes. They're boiled all right, but they don't seem to be the right color. I was so delighted when I found them in the cellar, and onions, too, but I'm afraid they're spoiled."

"Yes, they are undoubtedly spoiled," remarked Miss Belinda, gravely, as she recognized her precious dahlia roots boiling in one pot of water and a dozen of her choicest gladioli bulbs sizzling with cream sauce in another.

"No, these are not good onions. In fact, they are very poor onions, indeed." Miss Belinda laughed a little strangely.

"Well, that's what I call a disappointment."

"So do I," agreed Miss Belinda, feelingly.

"You don't blame us for not knowing that we were spoiled, do you, dear Miss Belinda?"

"Oh, no, I—I am the one who should have been more careful. Are you making an omelet?"

"Yes, I thought that was the nicest way to use the fresh eggs I gathered," answered the girl who was turning an omelet in the skillet. "I never had the fun of gathering eggs before, and wasn't I lucky? I found 12 eggs under one hen. She was the stubbornest creature. I could hardly get her off the nest."

"I can imagine it was difficult," said Miss Belinda, adding to herself: "Alas, my expensive setting of Rhode Island Reds was not under the poor old hen this morning!"

Then she sat down at the lunch table and entered into the merriment of her guests. Her heroic mood will lasted till she saw the automobile disappear with them round a bend of the road late that afternoon.

"Anyway," she murmured, "I kept them from working in my garden. That's some comfort."

CHINA IN STATE OF DECAY

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Honanfu there is a fine stone bridge of five arches; but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business.

At another stage of his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hovel. Nothing is repaired; their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is split may flow back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage.

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air, and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

SEEK TO TERRIFY ENEMIES

It is generally believed that many animals, especially insects, assume what is called a "terrifying attitude," by means of which they escape their natural enemies. In the Zoological Jahrbuch Mr. Arnold Japha describes the "terrifying attitude" of the hawk-eyed moth.

During the day this insect sits with folded wings on the willow, or other tree. The eye spot and the rose-red pair of hindwings are hidden, and the moth looks like a group of dried willow leaves. This is its protective attitude, by which it wishes to escape observation. But if disturbed, it immediately assumes the "terrifying attitude." The eye spot and red are displayed, the antennæ becomes curved up. This is accompanied by a protruding and retracting of the front of the body.

The movement lasts some few seconds, or half a minute. This is thought to frighten the moth's enemies. The eye spot may suggest the eye of some larger animal, while the energetic motion may give the impression that the enemy itself is about to be seized and devoured.

But does the moth's "terrifying attitude" really frighten its enemies, and allow it to escape; Standfuss tried some experiments with a view to settling this point. He gave specimens of the moth to nightingale, red-breast, black-cap and other birds. Four out of five were obviously frightened when the moth assumed the "terrifying attitude," and left it alone after one trial.

Gaillard Hunt describes the social graces of Dolly Madison and her First Drawing-Room, in the June Harper's, and recalls that those were the days when the society of the nation was upheld on the foundation of two principles. "One was that a man of high rank in the public service was entitled to high rank in private life. Everybody was proud of the fact in public and thought it an honor to associate with those who guided its destinies. The other was that members of families who had always occupied prominence in private life should continue in their position. It was not until the next generation that the political doctrine of the equality of men was construed to require a removal of the barriers which separated grades of people in private life."

Fine for Tabby.

A middle-aged Washington maiden possesses a cat that is the light of her eyes. Life is a gray misery when household duties compel her shopping far from the adored tabby. But love has found a way. She has built two little bags, one woolen for winter wear, warm and cozy as a pocket, the other of netting mesh for warm weather. In each she has crocheted or quilted, or however women work such things, a neat circular window for light and ventilation.

Any day she may be seen in the shopping district, smiling, for hanging at her belt is a bag from which a comfortable cat looks contemptuously out upon a walking world and placidly views the passing show.

Perfectly Easy.

"See here, my man," said the philanthropist who was doing an investigating stunt on his own account, "you are an interesting puzzle to me."

"Is that so?" queried the other.

"Yes; it's so," answered the party of the philanthropy part. "You are too honest to steal, too proud to beg, and too lazy to work. How do you manage to live?"

"Oh," was the reply, "I get trusted."

PRINCETON GETS BOOKS.

Rare Volumes Bequeathed to the University by Artist.

The Princeton University library has announced the receipt of a large number of rare, valuable books from the executrix of the estate of the late Francis Lathrop, the artist and art critic, Mr. Lathrop, previous to his death, which occurred about a year ago, willed to the university a considerable portion of his extensive library.

The books received are about 1,000 in number and consist in the main in the miscellaneous portion of Mr. Lathrop's library. The particular value of this collection lies in the number of association books which it contains, including many presentation books to George P. Lathrop, his brother, or containing the names of the Hawthorne family, to which the Lathrops were related.

The bequest also includes Mr. Lathrop's literary apparatus as an art critic, comprising card indices and an extensive series of clippings.

WHAT TO DO WHEN A CHILD IS DELICATE.

So often, even in these enlightened days, we hear the phrase, "Oh, he is such a delicate child! He is a great care." But the mother who makes the remark never for a moment imagines that in many cases her early training of the child has made it what it is.

One child, of course, may inherit a more robust constitution than another, but still very often those who are decided weaklings when they reach a school age might have been strong and healthy had only proper care of the little essentials had been taken from birth upward.

Unfortunately many maternity nurses still cling to the old-fashioned idea that the new born babe must at once be given a dose of castor oil. This is a very bad beginning, and is responsible for "upsetting" more infants than almost anything else.

Of course, there is the child who inherits a delicate constitution, has a tendency to be "cheaty," or perhaps suffers from weak heart or lungs. All such requires extra care, but even these may be much improved and in many instances be made quite "strong" by a strict adherence to a few general rules of healthy living.

Let me give you some useful hints:

Don't overburden the delicate child with too many clothes, but have those worn made of all-wool materials, warm, very light. A woven binder will save groups of child from many a chill. In this changeable climate it is most necessary to keep a child's stomach well protected from sudden changes of temperature.

Be very careful with regards to the feet and ankles. Stockings, not socks, should be worn outdoors in winter as soon as the child is of walking age. Boots with light uppers, but strong soles, are best for children. Too heavy boots tire unnecessarily.

Don't coddle by wrapping up the throat with mufflers, or forbidding a child to go out in the rain or snow. If it is properly clad and not permitted to remain in wet things the weather will not harm it, provided it is not suffering from cough or cold.

The delicate child needs plenty of fresh air even more than its strong fellow, so let it sleep out of doors at night as soon as it is able when tiny, and be out as much as possible when it grows older.

A delicate child is often excessively quick with its brain. See that you don't allow this to be overtaxed. Rather let it be kept from lessons and regular lessons than push its education in any way. A properly graduated course of physical exercises, gone through in a well ventilated room, is a splendid substance on the road to health. But be sure you get your doctor to prescribe the amount and kind of exercise suitable for your child.

Plain food, plainly cooked, is the only diet possible if you really wish to build up the health of your little one. No "made" dishes, no sauces or high seasoning should be given to children. Roast and boiled meats, suet or milk puddings, well stewed fruits, and oatmeal should be their staple foods.

The fragile child should always be made to rest quietly both before and after meals. Such a regime greatly aids digestion.

Hot baths should not be given to children. Tepid water is best, while for those who are "cheaty" cold sponging of chest, back and shoulders, followed by a brisk rubbing with a rough towel, will be found very strengthening. A delicate child should never be put into an entirely cold bath. The shock to the system is too great and the circulation of the blood is generally too poor to give the proper reaction and glow, therefore chills ensue.

Alfred W. Dunavan Engaged.

Mrs. Wilhelmina R. Hahn, of East Second street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Minnie Helene, to Alfred Warren Dunavan, of East Second street. Both Miss Hahn and Mr. Dunavan are active members of Trinity Reformed church, the Sunday school, Christian Endeavor Society and other department of church work. The date for the wedding has not been fixed.

He—What's that I hear? You want more new shoes?

She—Certainly! I can't go around without shoes. When you married me you didn't think you were getting a mermaid, did you?—

GIFT OF CONGREGATION

AT HOME-COMING SOCIAL.

First M. E. Church Flock Show Their Esteem for Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles M. Anderson.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church a "home-coming" social was held in Vincent chapel Friday night marking the resumption of fall activities. The attractive chapel, resplendent in all its recent improvements, including new furnishings, was thronged with members and friends of the church, and the occasion was noteworthy for the genuine sociability on the part of everyone.

Perhaps, one of the most interesting features of the affair was the great surprise given to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Anderson, in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding, which occurs today. Henry A. McGee, who had charge of the program, called the pastor and his wife to the platform and, then in a felicitous speech, presented them with a purse for the substantial gift and expression of good will. The presentation was accompanied by hearty applause.

During the evening there was an excellent program of music, presented by Mrs. Theo. White Lillard, violinist; Miss Jubilee Bowler, Miss Mildred Burnett and Miss Beth Martin on the piano, while Miss Helen Whitney sang "Nonsense," by Lear. Her sister, Miss May Vincent Whitney accompanied her on the piano.

The program was followed by the serving of refreshments and a social time. Mrs. G. H. Whitney, Mrs. S. H. Tugwell and Mrs. Judd Stuart comprised the entertainment committee. Mrs. Frank Rowley was chairman of the refreshment committee, while Mrs. John Valiant was the chairman of the whole affair, assisted by a large committee of women.

The chapel, thoroughly renovated and improved, including a handsome new carpet, was greatly admired. These improvements were made by the Ladies' Aid Society through funds raised during the past year.

SURPRISES PARTY FOR MISS MAMIE JAEGER.

Miss Lucy Rhodier, of Spooner avenue, with a number of her young friends surprised Miss Mamie Jaeger at her home, 318 Lee place, Friday night, and the young folks enjoyed the event to the utmost with games, music and dancing. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Among those present were the Misses Bessie Carson, Louise Kitchen, Sadie Williams, Cora Kennedy, Catharine Winzenried, Margaret McCarthy, Christina Conrad, Mamie Nugent, Nora Regan, Mollie Treanor, Alicia O'Loughlin, Nettie Schlick, Barbara Schlick, Florence Mahoney, Elsie Theis, Esther Mitchell, Sophie and Lena Jaeger and Maire Foster, the last three of Cranford; and Messrs. Harrett Scanlon, Charles Rhodier, Leonard Schlick, Herman Theis, Albert Jaeger, Frank Schlick, Thomas Matell, Joseph Greede, James Kyle, William Allen, John Winzenried, John McCarthy, Charles Jaeger, Albert Jaeger, a cousin; James Traynor and Albert Rhodier.

Wonders Bring Crowds to "Hip."

"The International Cup," "The Earthquake" and the splendid "Ballet of Niagara" with its Indian corypheus and pretty "girl of Niagara Falls for a background continue to attract twice daily crowds to the New York Hippodrome. It is generally conceded that nowhere else, either in this country or abroad is there to be found a show to compare with this in point of size and scenic splendor. For one price of admission one is enabled to see three complete performances, not to mention an entire circus—and this year's circus is thought by many the best ever seen at the big playhouse. Performing lions, bears and elephants add their antics to the amazing stunts of the equilibrists, equestrians and clowns. Silvers and Marcelline continue to please both young and old patrons and the "Yacht Race," "The Shipwreck" the sprightly "Flag Number" as well as the great earthquake effects and aquatic finale with the rainbow flying ballet, all contribute to the attractiveness of the big show.

Related Announcement.

William J. Mattox, of Webster place, announces the marriage of his daughter, Florence, to Thomas Kelly, of this city. The ceremony took place at the St. Stephen's church on June 3, and was performed by the Rev. Bryan Ashley, rector of the church.

WOMEN'S BIBLE CLASS SOCIAL AT HOPE CHAPEL

The members of G. Stuart Simons women's Bible class of Hope chapel, were the guests of the leader at an enjoyable social and dinner in the Sunday school rooms Friday. The affair was the third of a series which the class hoped to promote sociability among the attendants. There were about seventy-five present.

During the evening Mr. Simons and G. Herbert Condict spoke briefly and songs were given by Mrs. L. R. Howard and Thomas Hendry and recitations by Mrs. W. B. Grannatt. An added feature was the display of post card pictures on a screen by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. P. Veysey. By means of a machine on the style of a stereopticon, Mr. Veysey could reproduce the view on any ordinary post card and some decidedly attractive scenes were shown.

Following the program refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mrs. William Terry, Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse and Mrs. Ira Snyder. The committee were selected from the men present and besides Mr. Simons and Mr. Condict included James Penny, Donald McInnes, Thomas Hendry and Robert Hangliter.

WHAT KIND OF A MAN WOULD YOU LIKE TO MARRY?

What sort of occupation do you want the "not-impossible" to have? Is he to be a business man, the member of a profession, the follower of an art? Her are a few articles that may guide you in your choice.

The man who works with his hands, the skilled tradesman or the small merchant is apt to be domestic. He is usually too tired at night to want to go out much, which is pleasing for the home-loving wife, but not for her who is fond of gayety.

The farmer is likely to live to ripe old age, and will never make much call upon his wife to act as a sick nurse. All winter he is at home most of the time—a thing which many a business man's helpmate would consider paradise. On the other hand, he expects h's wife to be a hard worker, and the loneliness of farm life is too much for many women. Therefore, farmers' wives are in insane asylums than any other class. Simple living may make the farmer a bit more "close," too, and as years go on he is apt to become unprogressive, though in these days of modern improvements this is by no means always true. The farmer's chief recommendation is that, as a class, he is the most faithful and steady of husbands.

The business man, whether his work be in factory, store bank or office is most likely of all to far mention to make a companion of his wife. Married couples seldom go into business together here, as they so frequently do in France, but the wife is often the silent partner of the firm. The business man's mate is surest of a liberal allowance and straightforward treatment, for her husband is used to direct methods and dealings. Often the business man lives at a nervous strain and needs to be handled carefully and steady. His chief fault is likely to be irritability, which will vent its fault-finding. The oversensative woman would better keep away from him.

The doctor is not a safe choice. In the first place, his hours are irregular and life with him becomes a torment to an overworked housewife. In the next, his patients absorb too much of his time that to the critical wife may be neglectful. Finally, he is often subject to bad temper and fickleness, and the early years of married life are apt to be stormy enough. As the other side of the picture, he is tender and sympathetic in trouble, he is usually soft-hearted and easily coaxed and calmed, and the doctor's wife has always a certain standing in the community.

The minister is not a good husband for a woman with nerves, or without patience and Christian charity. His mind is apt to be in the clouds most of the time, and he is even less at leasure than is the doctor. And unless he is usually a easily managed husband, almost sure to be faithful and devoted, and there is a dependence on his goodness that is comfortable and satisfying.

The lawyer is apt to be cold, outwardly at least, and perhaps that is most unfavorable of all types, the quizzical man. He is only too likely to waver from the narrow path, and is often headstrong. Still, he takes a great pride in his wife, for she is a social and professional asset to him, and he will express his praise freely. And financially he is a good investment.

The teacher will make an ideal father. He is broadminded, likes women and has the vacation habit. But he is inclined to be dictorial and despotic.

The artist and the musician, to some extent the literary man, make adorable lovers, but poor husbands. They are usually already wedded to their art, and make you feel understand that you are the second wife. They are fickle, eccentric and sometimes cruel. They are never housebroken, and should not be attempted by women who cannot sympathize and understand.

The army and navy man is fond and indulgent, but has little money, is away most of the time and may be fickle.

WHY LEWIS STICKS AS BANKING COMMISSIONER

The office of State commissioner of banking and insurance is regarded as too good a political plum to be handed gratis by a Governor who is just about to bequeath office, and this is the reason why Vivian M. Lewis is not going to resign the place until it will be too late for Governor Fort to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Lewis' term as commissioner expires in 1912, and the Republican leaders feel it could be dispensed on far better advantage than to permit Mr. Fort to give it to some one whose appointment would not aid in any way in helping the organization in its fight to carry the State. The salary is $6,000, and the berth is one of the best in the State.

Had Mr. Lewis followed his own inclinations he would have resigned rather than place himself before the public in the apparent position of taking care of one position in case he could not get another. But the old heads in the party pointed out that the appointment would be a nice one to distribute in case he should succeed in landing in the Gubernatorial chair.

Down at the State house there is talk that Alfred N. Dalrymple would like the commissionership. While the place is a good one, and the Essex County chairman would undoubtedly like to fill it, there has been nothing yet to indicate that such would be the case.

A REAL LIVE COP WILL PROTECT SCOTCH PLAINS

The plaint of the citizens of Fanwood has at last been heeded and a special officer has been appointed to patrol the town at night in an effort to preserve the peace and quiet of the neighborhood. The decision to appoint George Rabig, of Elizabeth, was arrived at Friday at the regular meeting of the Fanwood township committee, and carries out the provisions of a resolution made several months ago.

The committee had considerable difficulty in finding the right man for the place, but the selection of Mr. Rabig seems to have met the conditions.

Mr. Rabig has been in the employ of the Central Railroad of New Jersey for several years as a detective, and it is believed he knows how to handle the situation which confronts him in the township. The main trouble has been rowdyism at night, disturbing the slumbers of the residents.

HOUSEHOLD JOTTINGS.

Save your fat for soap making. It is not difficult, and makes a good quality of soap at less cost than it can be bought. If a teaspoonful of salt is added to every six pounds of grease the soap made will profit, as well as handle the user.

To avoid a spotted floor, hard to scrub, insist upon the boards or cement of the cellar being wet before whitewashing is begun. Spots of the wash are thus easily washed up, as the water prevents the lime from soaking in the floor.

Corn fritters should be mixed with as little flour as can hold them together. Fry in butter and serve very hot. They should not be fried in large batches before a meal, as they are much better served from the skillet.

If a porcelain lined kettle has become soiled and browned, try filling it with water in which a little chloride of lime is placed. Let it boil for twenty minutes or more, and the kettle will look as good as new. It must be thoroughly rinsed and scrubbed before using.

When a room is to be closed for several months work powdered borax into the edges of the carpets and under the spots where heavy furniture rests.

When the knobs of kettle lids are too hot to handle, cover them with a rubber nipple or with several thicknesses of adhesive paper and the heat will not be felt.

Have you ever been aghast at spilling ink on a new linen table cover? The next time you are so unfortunate, dip the spots at once in hot tallow; then wash out the grease and the ink will come, too.

WOODROW WILSON DINED BY DEMOCRATIC CLUB.

Arriving here by automobile from the Trenton fair, where he made an address to several thousand people in the afternoon, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic Gubernatorial nominee, was entertained at dinner by the Democratic Club at Truell inn.

Besides the distinguished guest at the table were Former Mayor William L. Saunders, James E. Martine, Howard Fleming, all of this city; Brig. Gen. D. F. Collins, of Elizabeth; James Nugent, of Newark, chairman of the Democratic State committee; David J. Kenney, David J. Carney, Robert C. Woodhouse, L. J. Ellis, all of this city, and some newspaper men.

GOLF WIZARD'S OPINION

Walter J. Travis Offers Suggestion for Golf Course Improvements.

HE PLAYED THIRTY-SIX HOLES.

Thirteenth the Only "Flunky" Hole He found—Approves Most of the Others—Guest of the Club's President.

It will be interesting to members of the Plainfield Country Club to know what Walter J. Travis thinks of their golf course. The "old man" or "American wizard," as he has often been called, played thirty-six holes at the Country Club on Wednesday, afterwards dining and spending the evening with Leighton Calkins, and several friends who were invited to meet the famous player. Mr. Calkins has an ambition to give Plainfield a golf course which shall be a really good test of the game, although he does not think that for this purpose it is necessary to have a very long course. When the three new holes are opened up next year, the total length will be almost exactly 5,300 yards out and 3,000 yards in. While not long, this is championship length, and Mr. Calkins has always felt that excessive length is not necessary. His plan has been rather to obtain scientific trapping, and good turf, with a moderate total length. In this plan he has been supported by R. S. Rowland, chairman of the green committee, and by the trustees. And now Mr. Travis endorses this plan.

In going Mr. Travis to come out and play over the course, the idea was not merely to give the members an opportunity to see a famous player—the most consistently straight and accurate player, if not the most periodically brilliant player, in the world—but also to get his opinion on the plans which have been outlined for improving the course. Mr. Travis was in entire accord with the theories of the local players, and said that nothing would do more for the game than to have a club devote its energies towards good turf and scientific bunkering, contenting itself with reasonable length. He said that the only really bad hole on the course is the thirteenth which he called "fluky." He pronounced the first hole "superlatively fine" owing to the accurate second shot required, and the fourth was the same comment with respect to the fifth, eighth, twelfth, fourteenth and seventeenth. He said that the eighteenth was as good a short one-shot hole as one could find, and spoke highly also of the seventh, eleventh and sixteenth as being fine one-shot holes. With pot bunkers, or traps, on the front corners of the third, fourth, ninth, tenth and fifteenth holes, he thought that no better two-shot holes could be laid out. On the second hole he suggested deep pits at the left of the green and on the twelfth hole two pot bunkers just short of the green, down the slope a little, leaving a space between, about ten feet wide, as he expressed it "just to entice a man to run his ball up between the traps, with condign punishment at hand if he fails to pull off the shot properly."

The bunkers already built he regarded as good, except that those that are shallow should be deepened down to at least three feet or more.

Mr. Travis also made valuable suggestions as to turf. He approved of the plans of the trustees to use the fescue seeds, which are slow growing, but produce a wiry hard turf requiring little water (except during the seeding time), and which in time actually crowd out and kill off the summer grass and weeds.

Mr. Travis said he was amazed to find so good a course in New Jersey, and that the configuration of the ground on all but a few of the holes was wonderfully good. Considering its length (only about 5,400 yards at present) he said it was "not so easy as it looks," and that the approach shots to many fairly short holes like the tenth, sixth, twelfth, fourteenth and seventeenth, required such careful placing that it was not exactly as easy as it looked to get the regulation "four." Mr. Travis also had a good word to say for the green committee and professional, because of the general condition of the course, especially the greens, n so dry a season.

Mr. Travis hopes to come out again in the near future. "When I get on to your greens," he said, "which are not at all bad, I expect to get down more fairly long puts and add more threes to my card." Mr. Travis had only eight holes out of thirty-six over fours, and on four of these he took five puts owing to unfamiliarity with the greens and a little overconfidence once or twice where he putted quickly "thinking I had a sure thing."

The wardens and vestry of Grace church have issued invitations to a reception to be given at the parish house, Tuesday evening, October 11, from 8:30 to 11 o'clock, to meet the Rev. and Mrs. E. Vicars Stevenson. The rector and his bride are expected home this week from a month's honeymoon abroad, and they will return to Plainfield in time for the reception.

CONGRESS NOMINEES AND A POSSIBILITY

With the holding of the Third District Congressional Democratic convention in Red Bank this afternoon, at which Woodrow Wilson, Democratic Gubernatorial nominee, was present, all the Congressional nominations of the two big parties in New Jersey will have been made.

It is believed that Mayor Thomas J. Scully, of South Amboy, will be the Democratic nominee in the Third. In that event the Republican and Democratic nominees who will be voted for at the November election and the nominees of the minor parties already filed, are as follows:

First District (Camden, Gloucester and Salem counties)—*Henry C. Loudenslager (Rep.), Joseph E. Norcy (Dem.), Leo M. Harkins (Soc.), Chas. C. Lindsey (Pro.).

Seventh District (part of Essex)—*H. Wayne Parker (Rep.), Edward W. Townsend (Dem.), Edward H. Ashton (Soc.).

Eighth District (part of Essex)—*William H. Wiley (Rep.), Walter L. McCoy (Dem.), Hugh V. Reilly (Soc.), Charles B. Stokes (Rep.).

LONG VOYAGE FOR YALE AND HAVARD

The oil-burning turbine steamships Yale and Harvard, the swiftest coastwise ships in the world, will make their last trips between New York and Boston this week. They will then be prepared for the longest voyage they ever will undertake, that is, from New York to San Francisco through the Strait of Magellan, about 15,000 nautical miles. They will take no passengers and it has not been decided yet whether or not their skippers will go with them.

Reports of the sale of the two ships have been current for several weeks and are now officially confirmed. They have been purchased by a Pacific Coast company, which will use them between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The two boats, which will be replaced next spring between New York and Boston by two new boats, have been profitable investments to their owners and have practically paid for their construction, $1,500 000 each, since they went into commission. They will leave New York for San Francisco on October 10 and are expected to make the trip in about fifty days.

REAL MENAGERIE NOW AT TRENTON ALL YEAR.

The State house at Trenton is soon to become the home of numerous rabbits, guinea pigs and other animals which will be used for scientific purposes by the laboratory of the State Board of Health. When the new wing was built and the laboratory was removed to the State house the board asked that quarters be fitted up for the various animals upon which they wish to experiment.

The State House Commission rebelled, and so did a Democratic high State officials, the result being that no live stock quarters were provided. The State Board of Health was persistent, and finally secured the consent of the commission to install the necessary quarters upon the roof of the capitol.

State Architect George E. Poole spent yesterday afternoon examining the roof of the building, and finally spent yesterday afternoon examining a rear of the gilded dome where the necessary rooms will be built.

For Patrolmen's Ball.

Tickets are out for the second annual ball of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association and may be obtained from any of the patrolmen. The ball is to be held in Saengerbund hall, North Plainfield, on Thursday, November 10. Andrew Saffron is the president and the entertainment committee is composed of Charles Keller, Daniel McDonald, Charles A. Flynn and George K. Dobson.

Edward Eskeson had to explain in the city court Saturday morning to Judge William N. Runyon why it was that his daughter went to school in rags and why his nine-year-old boy stayed away from school three days last week. It was rather a pitiful tale.

Eskeson's wife died eight months ago, leaving seven children for her husband to care for. It has been a hard task, although assumed willingly. Rising at 4 o'clock in the morning to prepare breakfast for his school, cooking, washing dishes, then working ten hours a day, has been the portion of the father.

The attention of the Organized Charities had been called to the conditions existing in the Eskeson household through the neighbors, who declared that the children were dirty and uncared for. An investigation by the society revealed the neglect, not wilful, of the little family, and measures were taken this morning to correct it.

Judge Runyon listened patiently to the story told by Eskeson and found that he had tried to get a woman to look after the children, but had been unsuccessful in obtaining the right sort of person. He cannot afford to pay much, but he is willing to give a home to some elderly woman who will assume charge of the little ones for a while or until they are better able to take care of themselves.

Eskeson is employed in a local factory and earns about fifteen dollars a week; besides this, he boards his brother-in-law, which brings in a fair sum, but with the big family of children it seems hard work to make both ends meet.

CHOLERA EPIDEMIC HAS BIG HOLD IN SIBERIA.

The cholera epidemic has taken a strong hold in Amur Province, Siberia, twenty-six cases with twelve deaths being reported from that section during the week ending September 22, and these, twelve cases and seven deaths were at the capital, Blagovieshtchensk. Gerghans, in Turkestan, is also included in the cholera zone and has reported six cases.

On the whole, however, the situation is improving. The totals made up at the sanitary bureau show 198,246 cases and 92,329 deaths since the outbreak of the epidemic.

In the week of September 17 to 23 the cases and deaths numbered respectively 3,038 and 1,474. These included deaths by provinces as follows: Samara, 248; Kiev, 176; Saratov, 111; Simbursk, 101.

There has been a considerable falling off of cases in St. Petersburg, yesterday's record being fifteen with five deaths. During the same week there were 215 new cases and eighty deaths in the capital and 393 patients in hospitals.

FOR THE BABY.

There are many things which can be embroidered or entirely made by the clever aunt or best friend of the new arrival's mother. Usually they should be in white, though pink for a boy and blue for a girl are also sanctioned.

One of the best gifts is a carriage cover of union linen, embroidered in a flower design and with a huge bow of ribbon on each side.

Then there are carriage parasols of finer linen or batiste, with scalloped ruffles and ribbon beading.

And little linen bootees, washable, with an edging of valenciennes lace and a ribbon bow below the embroidered strap.

Rattles may be crocheted around with thick silk, to keep them from hurting baby when he grabs. Be sure the color is absolutely fast, as babies put everything in their mouths.

Safety-pin holders come in ribbon, with crocheted rings for the pins, or as embroidered linen rolls lined with canton flannel with the fuzzy side out.

Baby armlets or sock garters of ribbon elastic edged with gathered lace are easily made and very pretty.

Pincushions galore will suggest themselves to auntie as she looks over her scraps of silk and lace and velvet.

Odd.

"Eliza," yelled the poet, "why don't you keep that kid quiet? What ails him, anyway?"

"I'm sure I don't know," replied his patient wife; "I'm singing one of your lullabies to the little darling."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Not Missed.

"There are some French idioms," said the linguist, "that are very difficult to translate into English."

"Yes," replied the adapter of plays; "but they are rarely so shocking that you can't get on just as well without them."

After having enjoyed the high honor of a private audience with Pope Pius X and having witnessed that impressive performance at Oberammergau the Passion Play, David T. Kenney has returned from a three months' trip abroad. His wife and daughter accompanied him in his travels, which covered France, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium, Holland and England.

Mr. Kenney is a knight of the Papal household, a much coveted honor bestowed by the Holy Father on Catholic laymen who have rendered distinguished service to the faith, and as such was received privately by the pontiff. He was accompanied by Bishop Kennedy, of the American college at Rome, and as he was about to retire from the Pope's presence received the Papal blessing.

Mr. Kenney was deeply impressed by the Passion Play. He said that it was hard to bring himself to the realization that it was a performance so sincere and devout was the acting and so faithful was the reproduction of the Life of the Saviour on earth. The Plainfielder happened to be in Brussels at the time of the conflagration at Belgium's fair, which he characterized as an international calamity

WIDOW SUES MFG. CO. FOR $25,000 DAMAGES

Suit has been instituted by Mrs. Emma Langfeld, of Philadelphia, against the Hall Printing Press Company, of Dunellen, in which the widow, who is administratrix of the estate of her late husband, Edward Langfeld, seeks to recover damages to the amount named. It is recited in the declaration of the complaint that Mr. Langfeld was at work at the premises of the defendant company last spring, engaged with other men in installing a system of automatic sprinklers.

While engaged in this work he was caught between a traveling crane and the side of the building, receiving injuries that caused his death soon afterward at Muhlenberg Hospital. The widow seeks to recover $25,000 damages, and has retained Senator George S. Silzer as her attorney. Alvah A. Clark represents the Hall Printing Press Company.

JUDGE ARMSTRONG FRACTURES A RIB.

Former Judge E. Ambler Armstrong, brother of Thomas S. Armstrong, of this city, met with a peculiar accident at his summer home, Lawreneville. The ex-judge was in the act of getting out of his bathtub when he slipped and he fell heavily on his side against the outer rim of the tub.

At first it was thought that he was only suffering from a badly contused hip, but the pain kept getting worse and a physician was summoned. The latter stated that one rib was fractured and that one patient would have to be kept quiet for at least two weeks in order to guard against complications.

Drought Worries Farmers.

Farmers in Monmouth county are complaining of the prolonged drought, which has caused them considerable inconvenience. A number of them have been compelled to resort to the mill pond for their supply of water for cattle and some of them cart it several miles. Many wells on the farms have gone dry and others are so low that the farmers are afraid to draw water from them for their stock. The crops were too far advanced for the drought to do them any damage.

PROCRASTINATION.

While thousands of dollars of the people's money have been expended, whether wisely or not is immaterial, in investigations relative to sewage disposal systems, municipal ownership of water, consolidation of city and borough and what not, procrastination of the most inexcusable sort has characterized the attitude of the Common Council for years on the question of a sanitary system of garbage collection and disposal. Year in and year out the Board of Health has been begging the city fathers to rid the community of a disgraceful condition—ramshackle old carts going about collecting the refuse—and to establish a sanitary service to be operated by the local government. The recommendations made by the Board are to be found in the following extracts from that body's annual reports:

1903: "A municipal control of collection and disposal of the garbage" was recommended.

1904: "A municipal collection and disposal of the garbage of our city" was recommended. It was also recommended that some system be adopted before the coming summer of 1905.

1905: "I would strongly recommend, both from a sanitary and economical standpoint the adoption of some system of collection and disposal system (of garbage) before the summer of 1906."

1906: "The question of garbage collection has been thoroughly discussed in previous reports. I would now respectfully urge that measures be taken to obtain such collection system for the comiag summer of 1907."

"The present method of garbage collection and disposal is not only very inadequate and unsanitary, but is also a constant menace to the health of the city, and unless something is done at once to improve these conditions, serious results may at any time develop. This question of garbage collection has been brought to your attention on several occasions, and the same has been referred to the Public Affairs Committee, and there pigeon-holed and never even reported back to your Honorable Body," etc.

1907: "We would again call your attention to the unsightly, unsanitary and unsatisfactory methods employed in the collection of garbage. Other cities have grappled successfully with this problem during the past few years, and there is no reason why Plainfield should delay any longer in taking action on this most important matter."

"The most serious question with which we have to deal has been and still is, that of garbage collection. Plainfield has now reached the size when the only satisfactory solution of this problem is a collection of the city's refuse under municipal control. More nuisances arise from accumulations of garbage than from any other cause. Complaint after complaint has been received of the failure of garbage men to collect from their regular customers. Besides the irregularity in collections, the work is done in an expensive, unsanitary and unsatisfactory manner. * * * Complaints of this character could be entirely done away with if the city should collect the garbage and refuse; and until this is done, we will continue to receive complaints from the same source."

1908: "The present methods of garbage disposal are still unsanitary and unsatisfactory, and a menace to the health of the community. It is earnestly hoped that this problem may soon be solved by a proper municipal control."

"I would again urge the necessity of some action toward a proper sanitary collection of the garbage of our city under municipal control."

1909: "This coming year I would strongly recommend * * * that we request the Common Council to consider the question of a proper collection and disposal of garbage."

Utterly disregarding these requests, the householders, who by right are entitled to have their garbage removed and the expense met out of the taxes they pay, are compelled to hire men to do the work. How long, we ask, will the people tolerate such procrastination?

Miss Jessie Hummer Surprised.

Complain About the Dust.

Residents along the line of the trolley on West Front street are suffering a great deal from the dust nuisance. The coating of oil put on the street early in the summer has outlived its usefulness and the trolleys and automobiles make conditions almost unbearable.

FUNERAL OF A. H. LEIVERS LAREGLY ATTENDED.

The funeral services of Former Councilman Albert H. Leivers, formerly of this city, but recently of Westfield, were held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the home of his son, Frank Leivers, of Belmont avenue, North Plainfield. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, of which Mr. Leivers was a member, officiated.

The members of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, of which Mr. Leivers was a past chief, attended the services in a body. The officers of the lodge took part in the services, using the funeral ritual of the order. The burial took place in this city.

Senior Class Pins.

The senior class of the Plainfield High School has selected its pins for the year, and they will be furnished by a local jeweler. The pins will be made with the initials "P. H. S." in a shield in the form of a shield. They will be ready in about two weeks.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 2, 1910.

The Israelites were in a great crisis. They had celebrated the Passover for the first time, according to the command of God in Egypt, and were now on their way to the land of Cannan. They had marched down in a rather zigzag fashion to the south and southeast and stood face to face with the fled sea, with no apparent way of crossing over. They had no ships like the Greeks and Persians to carry them across. In front of them was the sea, on another side hostile tribes and mountains to the south and southeast. Looking behind them, they saw Pharaoh and his army pursuing them.

The situation certainly seemed critical. It was it any wonder that they complained. We would have done the same and probably worse. But their extremity was God's opportunity, and in a short time they were commanded, while Moses held the rod over the waters of the sea, to "go forward." They instantly obeyed. God banked the water, and they crossed, and when Pharaoh and his army attempted to do the same thing the waters came down upon them, and they were drowned, and God rejoiced.

The busy season of the companies of the great Christian endeavor army has arrived. What should therefore be the watchword of the army, which includes all companies, each society? What could be better than the command of God through Moses to the Israelites—"Go forward," or as the topic puts it, "forward steps in our society."

Step forward under the command of God through His Son, Christ Jesus. Do what God commands. Get your orders from Christ and follow them closely.

Step forward in spite of difficulties. Look at the Israelites again. What immense difficulties they faced. Some of them faded away as when God desired it. Every society will have its difficulties. But what army ever went forth without meeting difficulties? General McClellan met some with the Army of the Potomac. General Grant found a few when he retired into Penasylvania. Grant met more than both together, but did his men cry for graves or anything like that? Not at all. They faced the difficulties and won in spite of their society committees. You will have to meet difficulties. The P. M. committee will not always get the leader it wants. Will it stop there? No; it will go as many steps as needful in order to get some one who will lead. Executive committee, attention! You will have difficulties. You are going to run away from them or pass them by or resign? If so, then you are not a "step forward" member of the committee.

Endeavorers all, attention! Each one of you will have difficulties. You may be difficult to be present or to take part or to seek a new member. Will you therefore break your pledge to God in Christ? May it not be said of you, what are all or any of the committees, the members, meetings ready to obey the command? Did the Israelites hesitate when they saw the water go up? There is no historic record to that effect. Instead, each one stepped forward, and I imagine that a quick step and even double quick.

Step forward in spite of complaiffers. These people cried out against Moses. They wanted to know if there was not enough burying ground in Egypt that they must die under such circumstances—slain by Pharoah's army.

Did you ever hear of a society without a "kicker," to use an expressive word, if not so elegant? Every society on earth ought to have a "complaint committee" to meet promptly to hear all complaints and to adjust them. Seriously, this might give us a new committee and be a step forward. In some societies it would be a live wire, but after the adjustment be made it would be found that the cause for complaint would be done away with. Then, associated with the "complaint committee," there might be a "burial committee." The complainers wanted a decent burial. Many Endeavorers at least need it. They are dead and should be buried so far as the Christian Endeavor society is concerned. Better to have ten Endeavorers unenrolled than a hundred enrolled and still only have the ten real ones.

Step forward for a revival. Do not, however, seek to add a great list of new members to your roll, but take off one-third to one-half. An evangelist in Ohio was once asked by a newspaper reporter about the success of his meetings. He answered, "The result is that it was the greatest revival he ever had. "How many did you receive?" "Not one," said the minister, "but we put out forty and are now ready for a true evangelistic work." If this example were followed in many churches and in Christian Endeavor societies there would indeed be many true revivals.

BIBLE READINGS.

II Sam. vii, 1-17; II Chron. xix, 1-10; Prov. iv, 25-27; Matt. v, 17-20; John xv, 9, 10, 16, 17; Rom. xv, 1-7; Thess. ii, 13-18; Heb. vi, 9-15; xii, 1, 2.

For Buffalo Bill's Men.

Following a newspaper suggestion made by George J. Michelbach, the Christian Endeavorers of the Epworth Leaguers of Binghamton, N. Y., distributed a large amount of good literature and great quantities of flowers among the men and women traveling with Buffalo Bill's Wild West show. The workers were received with the greatest courtesy, and the men were particularly pleased at the unusual attention shown them.

FOR INSPECTION BUREAU

Mayor in Message to the Common Council Suggests Such a Department.

FOR BETTER FIRE PROTECTION

He Says It Would Lower Insurance Rates and He Wants His Scheme Investigated.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk sent a message to the Common Council, Monday, suggesting that steps be taken to organize a bureau of inspection to take in manufactories, public buildings, stores, warehouses, etc., the purpose being to minimize the fire risk; also to enforce conditions in regard to the storage of inflammable materials and the keeping of places clear of unnecessary rubbish and packing. The message was referred to the fire and building committee and will be taken up later. This is the message:

"The question of organizing a systematic and effective method for the inspection of all manufactories, public buildings, stores, warehouses, etc., with the view of taking such precautions as may seem necessary and enforcing conditions in regard to the storage of inflammable substances and the keeping of places clear of all unnecessary rubbish and packing and such unnecessary materials as may cause fire and having the firemen—particularly the captains—familiar with the construction of such buildings and the means of egress and ingress in case of fire, and as a means of taking every precaution possible for the prevention of fire, has been called to my attention by a number of our citizens and most prominent merchants and manufacturers.

"In all the principal cities there is as much or more attention given now by the various fire departments to taking all the precautions possible for the prevention of fire as well as the extinguishing of fires.

"This I feel is a very important matter and one that will meet with the approval of the manufacturers, merchants and taxpayers, and will have a tendency to lower the insurance rates and at the same time may prevent at any time a serious conflagration.

"I therefore recommend that this question be referred to your Committee on Fire and Buildings, with the request that they investigate the matter fully both in regard to the advisability and the proper steps to be taken for the organization of a bureau of inspection, as well as the laws of the State in regard to such powers as may be conferred upon the inspectors in order to bring about the best results, they to report to your Honorable Body at the earliest possible moment."

IN AUTUMN BRIDAL DAYS.

When a man marries a second time, it very frequently happens that he chooses as his partner a girl many years younger than himself.

It may be that youth has an irresistible attraction for middle age. Indeed, it is only natural that it should be so, for the bright, happy ways, the lightheartedness of a young girl recall all the early joys to the man who has left his own youth behind him.

The world seldom regards such marriages as complete successes. We have all heard the shocked exclamation—"Old enough to be her father" and perhaps have joined in the chorus of disapproval.

Yet very frequently such marriages are happy ones. Forty and twenty are not so far apart as they seem. Mentally and physically a man is at his prime at forty-five and at that age he is generally more attractive to the opposite sex than in his earlier years.

He has fought the world, has known its joys and sorrows, and his character has been strengthened. His wife of twenty can look up to him, respect him, rely upon him, and love him.

And it is often noted that the children of parents of such differing ages are likely to be bright, intelligent, and full of healthy vitality. Often they seem to inherit something, and as they grow to years of responsibility they seem to combine the natural fire and impetuosity of youth with strength, self control, and sound mental qualities. Such children are happy and successful.

Marriages between women of 40 and young men in their twenties are less common. But they do occur, and the children of such an union are nearly always intelligent and well equipped for the battle of life.

"Youth flies to youth," according to the poet, but in modern life the statement is not always true. To the idealist it may seem natural and right that boys and girls should mate in early days when life seems all summer, and years ago such marriages were regarded as the very true love matches.

But today life is made difficult with a thousand complications that our forefathers knew nothing of. We are more highly developed than our ancestors in many directions and we take longer to reach our prime than they did under simpler conditions.

CHAMPIONS CANDIDATES

S. P. Northrup, of Newark, Tells Democrats of Their Opportunity.

DR. WILSON IS SURE WINNER.

A large gathering of Democrats were entertained in the club rooms on North avenue Monday by S. P. Northrup, of Newark, who was sent here for the purpose by the Democratic State committee. Mr. Northrup delivered an eulogy of Dr. Woodrow Wilson and excoriated the Republican party including its bosses, laying special stress upon the attitude of the machine toward special interests and paid his respects in very moderate language to Al. Dalrymple and David Baird, parts of the machine.

Mr. Northrup said that this campaign differed from its predecessors inasmuch as the candidates on the Democratic ticket were men of superior quality to any that had heretofore been nominated. He declared that conditions in this State had reached a point where a change was absolutely necessary and that as this was undoubtedly a Democratic year, the change was bound to come and at last the common people would come into their own.

Mr. Northrup said that Dr. Wilson had been a favorite from the start of the race and he was inclined to believe that Mr. Lewis would find he had been left at the post. The Democratic party has tried all sorts of issues and platforms, but none of them, like the Republican platforms was absolutely perfect. "No chain is stronger than its weakest link," he said, and it has always been fatal to the party (Democratic) that their opponents had dissected their platforms and having discovered the weak point had managed to break the chain.

"In New Jersey," said Mr. Northrup, "no one is too good for the people and we have nominated a man who will do what he says he'll do; a man who will devote his entire ability and talents to the good of the people.

Mr. Northrup had much to say about the millionaire Plenipotentiaries sent abroad to represent this country. They are so lavish in their expenditures that if a poor man were selected by the President to fill a vacancy, as it occurred with David J. Hill, who succeeded Charlemagne Tower at Berlin, the foreign potentates would turn and almost snub him because he is unable from his private means to keep up the pace. He declared that if this sort of thing were kept up the best men in the country cannot fill the places they are supposed to filling with honor to their government.

Referring to the comparative expenditures of the Sate under Democratic and Republican administrations, Mr. Northrup showed by figures that the Republicans had jumped the yearly outlay from $1,800,000 to $8,400,000 since the last Democratic administration.

Mr. Northrup said that the Democratic party had always been the repository of the confidence of people and in voting the people ought to cast their ballots in their own interests rather than for the interests that had robbed them of their rights as free citizens.

Holy Cross and Westfield Tied.

The Holy Cross church second team met the Westfield High School team at Westfield Saturday, in a hard-fought battle, with the score a tie. Both sides played a fast game. Referee Marvin and Umpire Vash were kept busy calling fouls, as the contestants were not yet familiar with the new rules.

Dr. Titsworth Returns to City.

Dr. Sidney R. Titsworth, a former local resident and graduate of the Plainfield High School, who has been located in Bridgeport, Conn., for several years, has returned to this city and will begin the practice of dentistry here in connection with J. Dr. Titsworth is a native Plainfielder and his many friends will be pleased to hear of his return.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS MARY A. ARNOLD.

The funeral service of Miss Mary A. Arnold, aged 94 years, was held Tuesday morning at 10:30 from the home of her niece, Mrs. Howard P. Reynolds, 819 First place, and was largely attended by friends and neighbors, including many who had known Miss Arnold during her residence of twenty years in this city. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated at the service, and spoke impressively of the devout Christian life of the departed and of her long years of faithfulness to the service of her Master. Miss Arnold was a life-long member of the Methodist church, and she was faithful in her attendance at services until the infirmities of old age prevented. The burial was in North Plainfield cemetery.

RECEPTION OF TEMPLARS

Trinity Commandery only One in Jersey Invited to New York Demonstration.

AT THE KISMET TEMPLE.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, of this city, was honored Monday in receiving the invitation from Clinton Commandery, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to be present at a reception to be tendered Sir John Carlisle Louden, grand commander of the Knights Templar of the State of New York. The reception will take place on Friday night, October 14, in Kismet Temple, (Mosyne) Brooklyn.

The special honor is all the more appreciated by the Templars of Plainfield, because Trinity Commandery is the only one in the State of New Jersey, in fact, outside of the metropolitan district, which has been invited to participate in the auspicious event.

Nineteen commanderies of the metropolitan district are co-operating in the proposed demonstration and the parade will no doubt be the largest ever seen in greater New York. There are to be addresses by prominent members of the order, a reception of the grand officers of the grand lodge, grand chapter, council and Scottish Rite, a band concert by Shannon's Band, the best in that part of the State.

The members of Trinity Commandery will hold a special meeting Monday evening in the parlors of Masonic Hall, to make complete arrangements for the affair.

HEART DISEASE PROVES FATAL TO H. C. PIKER

Henry C. Piker, aged 38 years, a native of this city, and one of the best known residents of Westfield, died at his home, 139 Euclid avenue, Westfield, Monday afternoon from heart disease. He was the son of the late Henry Piker, of Elmer street, Westfield. He went to the later place fifteen years ago and until two months ago continued a shoe store there. During the past three years he had also been a contractor and builder.

Mr. Piker, who was born here September 14, 1872, was well known among Plainfielders, having in his fifteen years in Westfield at Westfield he was active in public affairs. He was a member of the Board of Tax Assessors and was prominent in athletics. He was a member of the Suburban Club and Westfield Conclave, Improved Order of Heptasophs. He is survived by two sisters, the Misses Lizzie and Louise Piker, both of whom are engaged in business at Westfield.

BAPTIST MINISTERS HOLD A CONFERENCE

Among the ministers from this city who attended the conference of the East Jersey Baptist Association at Roselle Monday, were the Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of Temple Baptist church, who is secretary of the association, and Rev. Gabriel Del Maguire pastor of the Park avenue church.

In the morning an address was delivered by Rev. W. W. Pratt, district secretary, of New York, and a member of the American Baptist Publication Society, who spoke on "Up-to-date Methods in Sunday School Work." After a luncheon, which was furnished by the women of the Roselle Baptist church, where the conference was held, the regular business of the meeting was taken up. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Parmly Memorial church, of Jersey City, presided. A general conference on church work ensued which kept the ministers busy until late in the afternoon.

FEWER PRINCETON FRESHMEN

Decrease in Number of Men in Entering Class at Old Nassau.

The total enrollment of the freshman class at Princeton is 329, which shows a decrease of 12 from last year. This number includes 123 candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, 154 for the degree of Bachelor of Literature and Bachelor of Sciences, and 62 for the degree of Civil Engineer.

The members of the faculty include many well known names. Among them are Frank J. Mather, professor of art and archaeology; Alfred J. Mayer, director of the department of marine biology at the Carnegie Institution, Washington, who becomes a lecturer in biology, and Rudolph Ernest Brunow, formerly professor of Semitic philology in the University of Heidelberg, who comes to a similar chair here.

UNION CO. COURTS OPEN

ON EXCISE VIOLATION, TOO.

The October term of the Union county court opened Tuesday Justice J. J. Bergen on the bench, and with a large representation of the legal fraternity in the county in attendance. In charging the grand jury, the court called the attendon of the members to three important matters to be considered by them during the term.

One case referred to was that of the murder in this city on Sunday night, September 25, when Battista Laghi, an Italian, received numerous stab wounds, it is said, from Francisco Antonnozzi, a fellow-countryman. The former died in the hospital a few hours after being removed there. Antonnozzi is charged with the crime.

Another case is that of the death of Thomas Kelly, of Dunellen, who was struck by an automobile on South avenue, late at night on May 30. The auto was owned and driven by Lee Gazley, of 20 Pine street, Dunellen. Another case following carrying friends of Mr. Gazley, picked up the injured man, took him to the hospital, where he died from his injuries. It is alleged that Kelly was intoxicated and that he fell in front of the automobile. Mr. Gazley was held in $1,000 bonds for the action of the Grand Jury.

Judge Bergen then called the attention of the Grand Jury to the violations of the excise law in the county, of which there are known to be a number. He suggested that the cases be promptly investigated and the violators brought to speedy trial.

Those chosen for Grand Jury duty are as follows:

Elizabeth—Charles Russ, Samuel J. Berry, William B. Hamilton, Henry Schmidt, George Froggett, Otto Wesner, William K. Wells, John G. Hall, Edward L. Pelty, Thomas J. Graham, Mahlon Morey. YOUNG FINNISH WOMAN IMMIGRANT GETS LOST.

A young Finnish girl with an unpronounceable name arrived in Plainfield Monday, and evidently had not long been off the ship that brought her to this country. She carried some hand baggage and a slip on which was written an address of a friend in North Plainfield, but the name on the card was undecipherable.

The young woman wandered about the borough for some time and was finally brought to police headquarters in this city. Captain Frederickson could find no one who could talk Finnish, but he finally solved the problem by sending the girl to Mrs. Lundstrom's boarding house at 626 East Seventh street where there are some Finish women boarders, who will care for the immigrant until her friend is found.

An Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry King Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter. Winifred Charlotte, to Charles Kendall Mason, of this city. The wedding will take place Tuesday evening, October 25, at 7:30 o'clock at Grace M. E. church. Miss Carroll is at present the contralto soloist at the First Presbyterian church.

DWELLINGS AND STORES FOR SCOTCH PLAINS.

Scotch Plains is just now enjoying a building boom which will add considerable to its real estate and increase to some extent the population. A. L. Clark Stone Co., of 1178 East Broad street, Elizabeth, who own about twenty acres of land at Plains, are about to erect several moderate priced dwellings on their land. Thomas McGann of North Plainfield, has the contract for excavating the cellars.

John McIntyre, of North avenue, this city, is building a two-store and apartment building which will cost about $7,000. Mr. McGann also has the contract for digging the cellars for these apartments and Brokaw Bros., of West Front street, have the contract for the carpenter work.

SEE 'BI-PARTIZAN PLOT

Claimed That Some League Members Really Aim to Defeat Assembly Nominees.

TO HELP THE DEMOCRATS.

Not only to knife the Republican party's mayoralty candidate at the polls, but a more far-reaching scheme is laid at the door of the Bi-partisan Municipal League by loyal Republicans, who claim to know whereof they speak. The ulterior purpose, which it is alleged is carefully hidden from the voters as yet, is nothing less than an attempt to defeat the party's nominees for the Assembly. This report is given credence by the fact that many who are conspicuous as officers and members worked against the organization candidates at the primaries but met with a sorry defeat.

It is claimed that some of those in the League aim to split the Union county delegation to the next Legislature as a thrust at United States Senator Hughes, who is a candidate for re-election. These men are bent on revenge for the crushing defeat at the primaries and it is alleged will go to the extreme to humiliate John Kean and therefore aim to defeat him having a solid delegation from his own county.

To accomplish this aim, they must elect Democrats and their alliance with the Democrats shows conclusively to the minds of some of the political wiseacres that there is some truth in the report that the Bi-partisanites are working hand in hand with the Democrats to elect Calvin C. Broadhead and Abraham Morris, two of the Democratic Assembly candidates, and to knife Augustus Schaefer and Peter Meisel, two of the Republican nominees. They have chosen Lloyd Thompson, it is further said, as the one Republican Assemblyman that they will vote for.

It has not occurred to such Republicans, so it is claimed, that such methods would be resented by the great mass of the loyal Republican voters who do not believe in treason in or out of politics. The anti-organization Assembly candidates were fairly defeated at the primaries, these being no allusion to the contrary. Consequently, it is claimed, the duty of all true Republicans is to abide by the decision of the voters and to vote for the winning primary ticket. Going over to the enemy and to work in their ranks in an assault on the regular Republican ticket is the accusation made against some who it is alleged are masquerading as reformers to accomplish the defeat of the Republican Assembly ticket.

The effect of Union county sending Democrats to the Legislature would be to hamper the work of the Republican governor. Every Republican vote that can be gotten will be needed in the Legislature to carry out the progressive program to which the Republican party stands committed in its platform, and, therefore, the wiseacres say that the Republicans in Union will not lend themselves to this alleged scheme.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church a rally service was held at the church at 6:45 o'clock, last night. Miss Marie Hahn was the leader and a quartet comprising William Bellerjeau, Edward D. Young, Miss Harriet Randall and Miss Mae Kissack sang a selection, and Miss Etta Raybert also sang a solo.

Fred Soper, as president of the society, made a few remarks, and Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of the church, spoke of the value of Christian Endeavor work. He also referred to the topic of the meeting, "Self-Centered or Christ-Centered." Three new members were received into the society.

Y. W. C. A. Outing.

One of the most delightful outings ever held by the Young Women's Christian Association was held Saturday afternoon when about a dozen of the young women members took a walk out to the deserted village near Scotch Plains. Altogether the young women walked about six miles through the country and having carried a lunch they enjoyed every minute of the time. Wild flowers were found in quantities and armfuls of goldenrod added to their trophies. Miss Mosher was in charge of the outing.

Nesler Wins Awards at Trenton.

At the State fair at Trenton, Joseph Nesler, of Richmond street, exhibited nine birds in the White Orpington class and won with every entry having pitted against him twenty-two White Orpington breeders. The awards were as follows: Second and fourth cockerels, second and fifth pullets, and second on the pen. They made a clean sweep at the recent fair at Richmond Borough on Staten Island.

HEAR MRS. SIMKHOVITCH

AN INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE.

"Woman's Invasion of the Industrial Field"—The First of Season of Winter Study Program.

"The Relation of Women to Economics" is the subject chosen by the Monday Afternoon Club for the fall and early winter's study, and the opening lecture was given Monday in the Hartridge School auditorium on "Woman's Invasion of the Industrial Field" by Mrs. Vladimir Simkhovitch. This gifted lecturer is director of Co-operative Social Settlement Society, New York, and her charming lecture evinced careful study of social conditions and their many puzzling problems.

The increase in the number of occupations open to women in recent years was dwelt upon by the speaker, who confined herself mainly to the consideration of the masses of women who work because they need money and whose wages are low, based on the supposition that they are supplemental and not the absolute support of the family. The women's wages did not compete with men's wages, being only one-half the amount. Only 8.1 per cent. of women wage-earners entered the professions, she said.

In giving many statistics of women bread-winners, Mrs. Simkhovitch said that the proportion of married women in the field of industry was smaller in the United States than in other countries. She dwelt at length on the occupations of these lowly bread-winners, as day's work, in the factory and in tenement sweat-shops, all of them resulting in failure of the home, exhaustion of strength, neglect of children and unsanitary conditions. The State, she believed, should support widows with families until the children could earn a living.

The smaller number of girls and unmarried women engaged in agricultural and domestic work, Mrs. Simkhovitch said, had given more women to the factory, the shop and the office, and the lack of training for life suggested many questions as to the effect on the woman and also on society. She told of the gain received in trade schools where accuracy, rapidity and purpose were the natural results, but deplored the short time given for education. Training for vocations and co-operation of schools and industries she considered desirable, and said that legislation could do much to shorten hours, prohibit night work and enforce sanitary conditions.

The key-note of the lecture was: the fate of every woman is bound up in that of every other woman.

BIDS RECEIVED FOR NEW PUMPING STATION

Bids were received at the September meeting of the Common Council for the proposed installation of a pumping station in the West End of the city to sewer a certain section where the conditions will not permit of the gravity system. Seven bids in all were submitted. One bidder arrived twenty minutes late, and Councilman Herbert Buxton stated that the man had been detained, his train being held up at Rahway. Today, however, decided that 8 o'clock was the hour for the reception of bids and he could not permit any to be presented after that hour. This seemed to be the only way of treating the other bidders fairly.

Those presenting bids were Blackhall & Baldwin Co., New York; Merritt & Co., Philadelphia; J. H. Sheehan, New Brunswick; James A. Christie, Newark; Miele & Bruno, Newark; Blaisdell Machine Company, Bradford, Pa., and Joseph B. O'Rourke, Boston.

The bids were all referred to the sewer committee and will be reported upon at a future meeting. James A. Christie, of Newark, was the lowest bidder on the entire contract, while Miele & Bruno, of Newark, was the lowest, not including anesthmate on the storage tank. The committee did not report back to the Common Council, last night, it being decided to consider the matter at greater length.

MISSIONARY AND AID SOCIETY HOLD AN ALL-DAY MEETING.

An all-day sewing meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel was held at the chapel parish house Thursday afternoon. o'clock in the morning under the direction of Mrs Henry Bishop. Quilts were quilted and sheets, pillow cases and aprons were made for the missionary box.

At 1 o'clock a hot luncheon was served in the infant class room, where fifty women sat down to a fine repast. Mrs. John Higgins, with a large corps of women as a committee, served the luncheon. Afterward sewing was continued until 4:30 o'clock.

CHESTNUT TREES DYING

Blight, Has Spread All Over the East is Caused by a Fungus.

WHOLE GROVES DESTROYED.

Trees in Plainfield and Vicinity Attacked—Havage Can't be Stopped—Only Thing to do is to Cut Them Down.

It is certain that neither worm nor bug is destroying the thousands of chestnut trees which are gradually dying over their entire range from Maine to the Allegheny mountains, but a fungus which has defied the best efforts of such entmologists as Dr. Frank Lutz, of the American Museum of Natural History; H. W. Merkel, of the Zoological Park, and many others throughout the eastern States. Enough money has been spent investigating the pest, but no remedy has yet been suggested to stop its ravages.

It is a blight, and what gives this topic immediate interest is its unchecked spread. Whole forests of chestnut trees have been wiped out by the fungus which attacks the trees in an insidious way and the end will not come until every last tree of the species is razed to the ground.

Among the notable groves of chestnuts which have been destroyed or are in process of decay through the disease are those of John D. Rockafeller, in the Pocantico Hills, Miss Helen Gould's estate, on the Hudson, at Hirah Bend, which magnificent grove on the borders of Lake Hopatcong and others too numerous to mention. Nearly all the chestnut trees in Bronx Park are at the mercy of the blight and they are being cut down and turned into lumber and firewood as fast as the fungus marks make their appearance.

An investigation through the woods adjacent to this city and out on the mountains has disclosed the fact that the trees in this vicinity are not escaping the inroads of the fungus. In Berkeley Heights section, and at South Plainfield and Oak Tree the story is the same—scarcely any crop of the delicious nuts and trees apparently dying. In many instances the foliage has been entirely destroyed and the inroads of the parasite are plainly visible even to the topmost branches. The owners of these trees are preparing to have them felled to be used for lumber where possible and for firewood as a last resort.

Many efforts have been made by the Forestry Commissions of different States to trace the origin of the disease in this country, but up to now nothing of a definite nature has been discovered to lead to the real source. It has been suggested that the blight was imported from Japan about seven years ago, but there is no authentic records of this fact. However, there remains the unalterable fact that the trees are doomed. The blight makes its appearance in small yellow blotches upon the bark of the tree. It works its way into the very heart and finally stretches upward until every branch and limb is affected. The leaves turn yellow in the midst of summer when the blossoms should be at their heartiest growth and they fall, browned, as though touched with the frost of winter.

Botanists will not admit that the blight did not exist long before it was discovered in the east, but if it did the death-dealing fungus was not noticed. In many cases where the yellow blotch was observed it did not attract attention, the death of the trees being attributed to the usual worm, with which the botanists were more familiar. Dr. William A. Murrill, assistant director of the New York Botanical Garden, says that most of our present chestnut trees are second growth, the offshoots of the original giants of the forests, and because of this second growth they are weaker and unable to withstand the ravages of the blight.

Dr. Murrill has been investigating the fungus. Cultures of the parasite developed in test tubes and glass dishes and applied to experimental saplings which speedily died. Thus the real nature of the pest, its nature, food, habits, progressive inroads were identified and labled, but for a every-day expression it has been called the chestnut canker without remedy for its inroads.

Now comes the latest devlopment in the wanton destruction of trees. The hickory has become infected in various parts of this State with a disease closely resembling the chestnut canker and many of the best bearing trees in and about this county, Essex and Sussex have become infected.

Experts who have been consulted on this last phase of the trouble practically agree that the hickory is doomed to a fate similar to the chestnuts. In summing up the cost of the chestnut trees already destroyed the figure in the eastern States alone amounts to over $20,000,000. Of course, this includes the amount that would have been considered a fair valuation of the trees for lumber purposes. In Pennsylvania alone last week the experts reported that of 10,000 trees examined nearly 90 per cent. of them were found to be afflicted with the fungus and they were ordered felled in an attempt to save a few of the old giants on some of the farms in that district.

CONNECT KENNSINGTON AVE. WITH PARK AVE

Steps were taken at the September meeting of the Common Council Monday night to open up Kensington avenue from Prospect to Park avenues, which improvement was opposed and laid over last year until some future time. Thursday night, October 20, was fixed as the time for a public hearing. Mr. Clay suggested that, inasmuch as Mr. Holt was detained at home by illness, it would be wise to again lay the matter over until he could be present and express his views. He also said that it was a new matter to himself and would like to inquire into it further. Mr. Gloak, who introduced the matter, said that in his opinion it had been delayed long enough and he believed it should be decided now. Mr. Maygatt agreed with Mr. Clay and seconded his motion to lay the ordinance on the table. He said that there was no need for any rush.

Mr. Montgomery favored the improvement, adding that while he did not care to be discourteous to Mr. Holt he felt sure that the latter fully understood the question and opposed it only on the basis of the cost of the improvement. A vote was then called for and the question to defer action was lost, Messrs. Gloak, Montgomery, C. C. Randolph, Taylor, Wilson and Tolles voting in the negative and Messrs. Bruton, Clay and Mygatt voting in the affirmative. On the motion to adopt the ordinance on preliminary reading, all but Mr. Clay voted in the affirmative.

DECIDE WEED HAS NO CLAIM AGAINST CITY

The greater part of the September meeting of the Common Council, Monday, was taken up with a consideration of numerous petitions of minor importance. Horace M. Stevens, of 1415 Prospect avenue, asked for a light in front of his property, and on motion of Mr. Montgomery was granted. On motion of the same member, four lights were ordered installed on Grant avenue, between West Eighth street and Monroe avenue, 300 feet apart.

Regarding the petition from Frank W. Weed, of West Front street, in which he presented a bill for $74.00 for damaged automobile tires as a result of an alleged condition of Lafayette street, Mr. Gloak reported that he had taken the matter up with Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh and that the latter had advised that the city is not liable for damages. Mr. Weed will be informed of Mr. Marsh's opinion.

The resignation of Andrew McConnell as a regular member of the fire department was accepted, and the appointment of William Gaub, of North Plainfield, as a regular member of the department, was confirmed.

The Public Service Corporation reported that it had located one light at East Front street and Bank place, as ordered. Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported having granted twenty-one permits during the past month. Overseer of the Poor Mr. Myers reported outside expenses for the past month to be $288.11, and those at the almshouse $407.92. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts of $192.42 for the past month, expenditures of $27.72, leaving a balance of $74.70.

On motion of Mr. Buxton, $1,500 was transferred from the general fund to the street fund, and the city treasurer was authorized to borrow the anticipation of taxes $500 for the poor fund and $3,000 for the fire fund, and $1,000 was also borrowed for sewer extension work.

Resolutions providing for the laying of sidewalks, where property-owners have failed to comply with the ordinance, were introduced by Mr. Gloak and adopted.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Taylor, which was adopted, the fire and building committee was authorized to install a fire box at the new Jefferson school on Myrtle avenue. On motion of Mr. Gloak, when the council adjourned it did so, to meet on Thursday, October 20.

DR. VANCE RAPS EDISON'S VIEW ON IMMORTALITY

Speaking from the pulpit of the North Reformed church, Newark, Sunday night, Rev. Dr. James I. Vance replied to recent utterances of Thomas A. Edison respecting immortality. Dr. Vance said that Mr. Edison's disbelief would not shake faith in the doctrine, but would have the effect of diminishing the respect that Mr. Edison has won by reason of his achievements in other fields.

The topic of Dr. Vance was "They Thought He Was Dead," text taken from Acts xiv., 19. The clergyman spoke, in part, as follows:

"Some friends with whom I was dining today called my attention to an article in the morning issue of a New York daily in which Thomas A. Edison, the electrician, discusses the immortality of the soul.

"Having devoted his life to electricity, Mr. Edison now turns to souls. Having spent his entire career amid the physical, he now essays the spiritual. Having lived until the afternoon of his life in a laboratory, he comes out for a brief hour before the sunset to instruct us as to the realm Beyond death.

"His conclusion is that there is no such thing as the immortality of the soul; that the race has been mistaken in its noblest faith, and that what we call the soul is a mere aggregation of brain cells.

"In a recent article in the New York Independent, Mr. Edison declared that 'we are living in the dogage of the world; that we don't know we just suspect, a few things.' It hardly becomes the author of such a statement to be too dogmatic about so sublime a theme as the immorality of the soul.

"Mr. Edison is perhaps the last man to give us a helpful discussion of such a subject. His entire career has unfitted him for handling those matters which are apprehended by faith. He has dealt altogether with physical facts, which require no faith, which must be admitted and accepted, whether they please us or not.

"Perhaps he has gone hunting for the soul with a microscope. He has gone into his laboratory to search for the soul as he would search for an electric current, and he emerges to inform us that he finds nothing but an aggregation of brain cells. Little indeed!

"The only effect of Mr. Edison's denial of the immortality of the soul will probably be to lower him in the estimation of many people, and to diminish the respect which the world has for a man who has won it in another different realm, a realm in which no man is better qualified to speak than he, has rendered an immense service to mankind.

"As to changing or destroying the belief of men in the immortality of the soul, his article will scarcely produce a ripple on the pond. We will go on believing that we are immortal; that the men who work in Mr. Edison's great factories are not mere animals, grinding out their tasks in the 'dog-age of the world' and then biting the dust of oblivion.

"Immortality is a racial faith. We believe it, because the soul within us affirms it, as well as because of the teaching of this Gospel that says: 'This mortal shall put on immortality.'"

FALL SHOE STYLES.

The advance styles for autumn shoes are in. Pay attention to them when buying your new shoes, so that you are not fooled into buying an old-fashioned pair.

The most prominent leathers are dull calf and Russian, as well as patent leather in combination with cloth or kid.

Black suede toppings are also seen and a few brown and quiet purples. These, too, have patent leather vamps

Heels are not so high as recently; one and seven-eighths inches is the highest for day wear.

Vamps are nearly all short; if you get a longer vamp, you must get a lower heel also.

Toes are either round or long; the latter are Frenchier and more favored by really fashionable women

Boston Brown Bread.

Scald one cup corn meal with one quart boiling milk and let stand fifteen minutes, add two tablespoons molasses, one teaspoon salt and let it cool; meanwhile dissolve one ounce of yeast in two tablespoons water and heat thoroughly into the corn meal batter; mix in three cups of rye meal, not flour; if you care sift out some of the bran, but keep three cups to mix with, put in an iron or steel pan, bake in a sponge cake oven, but let it stay in two hours at least, covering closely if there is a coffee brown top. The old way was to put it in for the last baking of the brick oven and let it stand all night. If the upper crust was too hard it was evenly sliced from the loaf, well browned and used for crust coffee brewis, either of which neds only to be known to be appreciated.

JOS. M'INTYRE CONCERTS

TO RENDER MASTERPIECES.

The many patrons and friends of the McIntyre chamber music concerts will be gratified to know that the series will be given as usual this season, and that the same high standard of excellence will be maintained as heretofore. Mr. McIntyre when seen today by a reporter for The Daily Press spoke of his determination to retain for these concerts the proud place they occupy in Plainfield's musical life and to give to his patrons always programs comprising the finest music without losing sight of the proper balancing of interest and pleasure, thus appealing to every music lover.

These concerts have been the means of allowing Plainfielders to hear masterpieces by the greatest composers and artists of the first calibre. Works by Beethoven, Haydn, Mozart, Saint Saens, Rubenstein, Mozart, Saint Saens, Rubenstein, Tschaikowsky, Arensky, Schubert, Mendelssohn are among those performed in the past seasons and a host of the names of the famous artists appearing at these concerts comprise Campanari, the great baritone of the Metropolitan opera; the Kneisel Quartette; Madame Shanna-Cumming, soprano; Glenn Hall, tenor now with the Metropolitan Opera Company; Mary Desmond, contralto of the Manhattan forces; Dr. Carl Duft, basso; Julian Walker-Barlow; Edith Chapman-Goold, soprano; Christine Miller, contralto, touring this season with Damrosch Orchestra and many others.

Mr. McIntyre modestly refrains from speaking until the last of his concerts of the splendid trio, which is the basis and foundation of these concerts. Their work and the standing of the artists comprising the trio place it among the finest organizations of this class in New York. This coming season will bring to a hearing new works as well as some choice favorites of past concerts.

The great master Brahms will be represented this year by a performance of his beautiful trio in B major. There is always a record of pleasant surprise at these affairs and the assisting artists this season will contain new names and faces, some never heard in Plainfield before.

The first concert will probably take place the last of October. More definite details will be given within a short time.

RELIGIOUS TRAINING IN HOMES HIS THEME

Considerable interest has been shown by mothers, pastors and teachers, in the lectures on the moral and religious training of boys in the home, which are to be delivered in Y. M. C. A. hall beginning Friday, afternoon, October 14. The lecturer, Rev. Franklin K. Mathews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, has a large acquaintance in this city, having occupied various pulpits here. He is also known to many as the editor of the "Daily Bible," the monthly organ of the "World's Modern Sunday School."

Mr. Mathews is admirably qualified to handle the subject of the moral and religious training of boys. While a pastor in Ridgewood he developed the boys' club of his church into the Y. M. C. A. of Ridgewood. He was also the organizer and promoter of a mothers' guild consisting of more than one hundred mothers who met under his leadership to discuss the problems of child training. At Chattanooga, Tenn., Mr. Mathews, while pastor of the Central Baptist church, organized a similar organization. As editor of the Daily Bible he is now vigorously attacking the problem of religious training in the home.

The purpose of the lectures, which will be free and to which all the mothers of boys in Plainfield, as well as teachers and pastors are invited, will be the prosecution of the work of religious education in the homes of Plainfield. The plan has received the heartiest endorsement of pastors, Sunday school teachers and public school teachers. The problems to be discussed are among the most vital of those dealt with by those who work with boys. Open discussion will follow each lecture and questions answered for all who desire to ask them.

Returned Missionary to Speak.

Mr. Dahl, a returned missionary from Tibet, will speak Friday night at the German Reformed church, Craig place and Duer street. He will tell an interesting story of his work, and home in Lamisary, Taochow, ten thousand feet above the sea, and will show costumes and curios from that land of mystery that is just now being opened to the world.

BOND ISSUE OF $30,000 TO BE MADE BY THE CITY

Resolutions were presented at the September meeting of the Common Council Monday, by Mr. Buxton, and adopted, authorizing the issue of $30,000 worth of street improvement bonds, thirty in all, $1,000 denomination each, bearing interest at 4 per cent. The city can retire the bonds after one year or prior to three years. The Council will meet on Thursday night, October 20, to receive bids for the sale of the bonds.

The above action was necessary because the Council at a previous meeting rescinded the resolution awarding the City National Bank the bonds without advertising for bids. Mayor Fisk called the attention of the members to the fact that according to law they must advertise for bids and steps were taken at once to do this.

Don't be a bargain hunter at the human counter.

Jealousy isn't green eyed; green is a peaceful color.

Some people wait for opportunity to ride up in an automobile and send in an engraved card.

When a man builds a fence around himself, the first thing he knows he's on the inside with no chance of getting out.

WHEN NO MAN'S A FAILURE

When he is more anxious to do favors than to ask them.

When he loves his work for itself as well as for what it brings.

When he gets on by helping others up instead of pulling them down.

When the harder he is knocked down the quicker he can pick himself up.

When he is willing to admit that he is in the wrong and unwilling to worry about it.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Gloucester City Council Friday passed an ordinance providing for a $25,000 street improvement bond issue.

Ground has been broken at the Millville Bottle Works for a continuous glass tank that will be one of the largest ever erected.

Upsetting a big bowl of hot soup, Samuel Messenger, thirty-seven years old, of Newton avenue, Camden, was badly scalded on the arms and legs.

While Reuben Stithens, a Millville athlete, was wrestling with a friend, a box of matches ignited in his coat pocket and he was painfully burned.

Falling downstairs at her home at Blue Anchor Friday night, Mrs. Mary Crow, seventy-five years old, broke an ankle and a wrist and was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital in Camden.

Two thousand acres of forest land, part of the immense game preserve of the Atlantic County Hunting and Fishing Club, will be inclosed by an eight-foot wire fence and maintained as a deer park.

William M. Bernshouse has plowed about 140 acres of land on an old seed farm, near Waterford, and sowed it in alfalfa for the New Jersey Alfalfa Land Company, making probably the largest piece of alfalfa planted in the State.

The Yacht Rainbow designed and built by Harry C. Ford for George W. Latta, of Burlington, was launched at Ford's shipyards at Bordentown Friday. It is forty feet in length and is fitted with modern improvements and a forty-horsepower motor.

Frank Blair, a Jersey City photographer, who attempted suicide by shooting himself in the breast, was arraigned before Judge Farmer in the First Criminal Court Friday. He expressed sorrow and was discharged upon his promise not to again attempt his life.

Archie Pollard, 1836 South Eighth street, Camden, received fatal injuries by a pile of lumber falling on him at the yard of David Baird, Front and Pearl streets. He was piling lumber when the pile toppled over. Death ensued an hour after his admission to the Cooper Hospital.

As an appreciation of his forty-three years' continuous service as its recording secretary, members of Beverly Lodge I. O. O. F., Friday night at their reunion, which marked the close of summer sessions and the opening of winter, presented J. Ritner Fraud with a handsome silver loving cup.

County Physician Souder Friday issued a certificate of death from natural causes in the case of Israel Williamson, an Atlantic City Boardwalk auctioneer, who expired two hours after he returned home Thursday night from a meeting of the lodge of Elks, which he said would be his last.

The work of remodeling the Thompson mansion at Gloucester City for the new immigrant station will not be commenced before the first of the year. At that time work will also be started on the new building and wharf. The contract for remodeling was awarded to Gilpin, Guernsey & Co., of Philadelphia.

Magistrate Daniel E. Izzard, Freeholder John S. Risley, Joseph Shaner and the driver, John Pratt, narrowly escaped death Friday afternoon at May's Landing, when the automobile in which they were riding came within a hair's breadth of running into an electric train. The incident occurred at the unprotected grade crossing, where the county boulevard intersects the electric road.

Adjudged guilty of cruelty to animals, Robert Caum, of Clementon, was fined $25 and costs by Justice of the Peace Huyett in Camden Friday. Robert Schellinger, another farmer, said he left a horse and a mule with the defendant to board and that the skeleton of the mule was found standing in a small stream where it was supposed to have become mired, and that the body of the horse also was found mired.

Godfrey Mann, of Philadelphia, and M. P. Strickler, his chauffeur, were fined in police court, Atlantic City, Friday, as a result of a clash with the police at 2:30 a. m., following the return of Mann's party from a long day's run to the Interstate Fair in Trenton. Trouble first occurred when a traffic policeman remonstrated with Strickler for driving the wrong side of the street, and was denounced, it was charged, by Mann.

To Contest Clinaman's Will.

A caveat was filed in the Surrogate's office in Newark Friday in behalf of Susan P. Kingston against the probate of one of two wills of Wong Hoey Hong, the Chinese protege of the late Miss Alethia Mason Carter, Hong died on September 23 in Newark. Miss Carter, who died on June 10, in her will bequeathed to Hong $6,000 and a fine house. The document against which the caveat is directed was executed on August 26. Neither of the two wills has been put on record yet, so the objection appeared in the Surrogate's office first.

STRONGLY DENOUNCING THE TARIFF AND OTHER REPUBLICAN MEASURES

Gubernatorial Nominee Speaks on Campaign Issues to One Thousand People While Hundreds Unable to get in Hall Attend an Open Air Overflow Meeting.

In his speech before a crowded house in Reform hall Thursday Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Democratic candidate for Governor, denounced the tariff, and gave his views on the public service commission's powers, the employers' liability question, direct primaries and corrupt practices act. He favored such legislation as would reform the present conditions of national expenditure so such an extent that the greater burden would be lifted from the shoulders of the people, and he attributed the present discontent to the continuing in power of the Republican party.

Red fire, a brass band and a big crowd greeted the candidate upon his arrival at Reform hall. He was ushered into the hall amid the cheers of 1,000 people while on the outside of the building 700 more yelled themselves hoarse. During the half hour preceding the doctor's arrival Dr. Albert A. Snowden, of New York University, led in singing some of the songs written especially for this campaign. In the audience nearly as many women as men helped out in the singing and split their gloves in the applause.

While Dr. Wilson was speaking in the hall, outside Hon. Joseph Tumulty, of Jersey City, and James E. Martine delivered speeches to the assembled hundreds. The subject of Mr. Tumulty's speech was the Democratic opportunity to return the State to the Democratic column, giving his reasons as the discontent of the people. Mr. Martine spoke at length on the tariff and took the opportunity to pay a high tribute to Judge Runyon. He said that the Judge was a conservative, honest, upright man and a Christian nobleman. These sentiments were wildly applauded by the crowd.

After the tumult following the arrival of Dr. Wilson in the hall had subsided former Mayor William A. Saunders introduced the candidate in the following words:

"It is but little more than a year ago that speeches were made in Congress predicting the death of the Democratic party; extremists said that they then saw signs of early dissolution. Pessimism and discouragement pervaded everything. It was common talk to hear men say that the Democratic party is dead.

"Republicans who felt that they could no longer follow the leaders of their party and who longed for haven in which to seek shelter came to us Democrats and said, 'Why do you not get a new lease of life? Put up good men. Give us a place to go and we will go. We do not like things as they are; but we will not join you unless you put up new men, men free from your old alliances, men of worth and independence.' There is not a Democrat in this hall who has not heard these lamentations. Now, we have taken you at your word, my Republican friends; we have followed your advice: you are born again, and in the good old State of New Jersey we have chosen for our leader one

'Whose life is gentle; and the elements
So mixed in him, that one may stand up
And say to all the world:
"This is a Man!"'

"It is but idle for me to recite the virtues of the President of Princeton University. He needs no eulogy; he speaks for himself, but in presenting this man to you people of Union and Somerset counties I want to remind you of what you have said and to ask you to now make good by your votes. I appeal to Republicans and Independents rather than to Democrats, for with such candidates no true Democrat will desert the standard.

"To maintain a wide gap between the two parties is dangerous to our institutions. Strict party adhesion is a fault and not a virtue. We have a mistaken idea of party loyalty. A man who boasts that he has never voted any other than a party ticket impeaches his own courage and intelligence. True party loyalty is to stick to your party so long as its leaders worthily carry out its policies. The best citizen is he who upholds the right through having the courage of his convictions. It is one of the greatest curses in our political system that men should vote, not as they think, but as directed by the lash of party adhesion. Does any one doubt that this mistaken idea of true party loyalty is responsible for the prolonged and corrupt rule of Quay, Platt and Croker?

"To err is human. As parties are personal they fall into error and deserve punishment—A sure proof that parties are personal is this revolution of the Democratic party. The best way to purify a party is to strike it by aiding its enemy—the other party. To support a third party is to lull yourself to sleep and iridescent dreams. We Democrats have in the past shown some freedom, and now we call upon you Republicans and Independents and ask your support for men whose hands are clean, whose heads are clear and whose hearts are pure.

"It is my privilege to present to you that 'pillar of a people's hope'—Dr. Woodrow Wilson."

Dr. Wilson said:

"You put me very much at ease by your cheering, for that is the atmosphere in which I live in at college, and yet I am haunted by the fear, as I face this audience in the dignified joy now there is upon me, that these are a good many Princeton men in it.

"I am cheered by the fact that I stand here as the representative, as I conceive, of a great body of men who have very definite hopes and purposes with regard to the reformation of government in New Jersey."

"There never was a time, I am convinced, when party bonds were quite so loose as they are at this moment in this country. There never was a time when there was more independent thinking being done than is now being done in this country. What is more, there never was a time when that thinking was more generally based upon a sympathy with the common needs of all classes of men. I have had men say to me, in very recent days, that they were ashamed of the things that they themselves had been engaged in pushing on the great economic interests of this country. They said: 'It seems to us as if the scales had fallen from our eyes, and we have at last realized the significance of the things we have been doing.' It is an extraordinary moment in public affairs in this country.

"Men are not stopping now to examine party labels; they are beginning to examine candidates; they are beginning to examine programs; they are beginning to ask whether they can rely upon definite promises, and if they are convinced upon these points they are ready to thrust aside all antecedent connections and prepossessions and vote for the men and for the things that they believe in.

"The Democratic party has strayed on at different times through many devious paths, but it has never forgotten its sympathy with the great bodies of toiling men; and it is that sympathy which will sustain it in respect to the task which continues true to it: for the Democratic party is renewed in our day, not by the rise of new men but by the impulse of a new time, which naturally expresses itself in new men. If I were asked to define the old party cries and shibboleths to the present state of politics, I should say at once that I did not see how it was possible; and the difficulty with the party which I am now trying to play my part in displacing is that it has stuck to old cries and shibboleths and has not noticed the change of the times.

"Why is it that there is a great insurgent movement in the Republican party? It is because great bodies of thoughtful men inside their party are beginning to perceive how that party has, not by movement, but by inertia, not by new policies, but by old, separated itself from the enlightened interests of the present movement. The proof of the Democratic argument is that the most intelligent, powerful bodies of insurgents within the Republican ranks.

"A gentleman who is an importer asked this question of a Republican friend of mine the other day. The Republican friend was one of those credulous persons who is willing to believe that the recent revision of the tariff was a revision downward. It takes an ingenious mind to construct the argument, but it can be constructed. He was asked by the importer if that is true, if the Payne-Aldrich tariff lowered the duties, why was it that every captain of a steamship was sent a wireless message to hurry into port before the act went into operation.

"You know how the ships were hurried to get into port. Now, if it is true that the Republican party is still carrying the true standards of the business men of this country why is it that thousands of its own are rebelling against their master? The reason is that they know that the best traditions of that party are being violated and that by bolding to policies which are outworn and unsuitable the Republican party has forgotten to keep up with the movement of the time.

"We are thinking of a great many things and we are talking about a great many things, but it is interesting to note that we are not doing anything in particular.

"The scandal of great sums of money can be stopped tomorrow by right statutes, because w have courts in this State, thank God, that administer the statutes. I say that New Jersey has just right to be proud of the reputation of her incorruptible courts. If you give our courts the chance they will show you whether it can be stopped or not, because under the present corrupt organized act it is the privilege of any citizen who knows anything to lay the thing before the proper tribunal and bring the whole thing to a stop if they were prosecuted in the courts under an efficient corrupt practices act. There is no decent organization suitable to do this, but there is no law by which it can be done. I could go on and illustrate, but the point is that we hold back and do not know why we do not go forward.

"Corruption in politics is a very subtle thing; it isn't all corruption of money; it is corruption of understanding. The trouble is that a batch of men representing different corporations can meet in any room and arrive at an understanding; no papers are drawn; no act of incorporation is asked for; there is nothing to show authority; the air of the room has not recorded what is spoken. Is it possible that there are compacts against the public?

"The point that I want to drive home is that when we get down to business we shall dispense with reckless and irresponsible criticism and come out on a basis of fact and propose definite things to be done that can be done. There are a great many things that are wrong that we do not yet see the way to set right and those are not the things we ought to make a shouting about. As I said to the Democratic convention the other day it is now either a case of putting up or shutting up. We have already discussed the point; the time now is to act in hearty co-operation with each other.

"The Public Service Commission is not intended merely to regulate rates; it is meant to regulate rates for fair ground. Judicious inquiry. It is not meant merely to register complaints but to correct abuses with regard to corporations as well as the public, not merely to serve one side but to serve both sides by pointing out what is right. The community need an extended service.

"I believe the tariff can be reformed in a way that will not disturb business too much and will meet the necessary and just demand. There is one argument that comes to me with peculiar force in this city which cannot be answered. There are various causes for the increase in the cost of living, but one cause which makes it rise more rapidly in America than anywhere else. Now what is the reason for that? It is the tariff wall that has been built so high that business concerns, being absolutely free against the danger of foreign competition, can get together and control prices and cost. There is just and reasonable protection the Republican party used to talk about of putting them in competition with foreign merchandise, but in such a position they can get together and command our fortunes by establishing a rate of price and also the amount of production.

"You know what happens when prices get too low, when the product is too abundant, then the amount produced is curtailed by a common agreement. If there were normal competition they would not dare curtail it. That is the tariff. And so all along the line, the minute you get down to a dispassionate businesslike discussion of the questions at issue you realize you don't remember that before you are a Republican or a Democrat, and are ready to act in the general interest of the country.

"Give us the power and if we misuse it, if we lose our opportunities we should be ready and glad to elect a Democratic President of the United States. It is not an easy thing to be asked to put to test. It is not a prudent thing to be asked to be put to the test, but for my part I am not interested in the game unless we can test ourselves and try ourselves out. I am tired of talk. I wish performance, and if we cannot deliver the goods, then I am satisfied for one to take a back seat.

"I am here merely to plead for what I think is the cause—the cause of reform and of good government and it pleases me to conceive that back of all this lies that ideal impulse of the American people which has so characterized us among the nations of the world."

C. E. Silver Anniversary.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will be held at the church Tuesday night at 8 o'clock when Rev. A. A. Pfaltzgraff, of Somerville, will make the address. All the young people's societies of the city have been invited to attend the affair.

A Pudding Garnish.

Skin of lemons or orange make nice garnishing if carefully prepared. Cut the peel into shreds two inches long; boil until soft in one gill of water with one ounce of loaf sugar; then put on a flat plate and stand in the refrigerator to get icy cold.

UNION COUNTY W. C. T. U. HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION

The Union County W. C. T. U. at its annual convention held in the Presbyterian church, Garwood Thursday, re-elected Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of this city, president. The other officers chosen were. Corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. L. Harlick, of Dunellen; recording secretary, Mrs. T. C. Bodine, of Plainfield; treasurer, Mrs. Mary T. Cox, of Cranford; honorary vice-presidents, Mrs. Scriven-Stoddard, of Elizabeth; Miss Julia A. Barker, of Rahway. Mrs. Bodine was elected delegate to the National convention at Baltimore, and Mrs. E. K. Fuller of Rahway, was chosen as alternate.

The address of the convention was delivered by Rev. Gordon M. Russell, pastor of the entertaining church. At the afternoon session a resolution was passed extending the congratulations of the convention to the Sons of Temperance of Elizabeth, which was holding its sixty-eighth anniversary during the day, and it is said to be the oldest temperance organization in the world.

The evening session was devoted to a silver medal oratorical and musical contest. There were seven essays and each was read by the competition. Mrs. E. R. Fuller, county superintendent of medal contests, presided.

AN INDELIBLE PENCIL COST HIM A NOMINATION

The use of an indelible lead pencil by a score of those who voted for him cost John A. Hec, the Democratic nomination for Council in the Third ward of Elizabeth, as the result of a recount held by the Union County Board of Elections in the Court house in Elizabeth Thursday. The district boards of the ward had declared his opponent, Thomas A. Flynn, the nominee by a majority of four votes, but on Hec's application to Supreme Court, Justice Bergen ordered the county board to recount the ballots. Singularly enough the use of the indelible pencil was not confined to either candidate's supporters for it appeared on ballots of both and moreover in all three districts in Hech's own district, the first, it was used more generally, costing him at least twenty votes. These and other ballots being rejected by the county board, Flynn's majority was announced as election.

The action of the district boards in Westfield in declaring Moses A. Hoppock nominated as a Republican candidate for Council by a majority of three over Harry W. Evans was reversed by the county board, which counted in Evans favor five votes which had been rejected as marked ballots. Former Assemblyman Edward Shamer as counsel for Hoppock took exception to the ruling and will appeal to the court. Paul Q. Oliver, of Westfield, represented Evans.

Officers were elected and plans for the season discussed at the meeting of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest held at the Thursday. The sewing began at 9 There was a large attendance and the work was undertaken with considerable enthusiasm. It was decided to hold a Christmas fair for two days, the first week in December the dates to be announced later. The sum of $100 was also pledged for the rectory fund and it was decided to purchase and distribute some literature among the parishoners.

These officers were elected: President, Rev. C. H. Mallery; secretary, Mrs. W. B. Grannatt; treasurer, Mrs. Charles Borden. The rector then appointed these two committees: Entertainment, Mrs. Charles Borden, chairman; Miss Mary Graves, Mrs. James McCall, Work, Mrs. Charles Ludgate, chaifman; Mrs. William Tabbing, Mrs. Charles Drake. A social hour was enjoyed after the business and refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Jennie Wenzell.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS JENNIE GRAY HELD.

The funeral of Miss Jennie Gray was held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home on West Fifth street, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, of which the young woman was a member. Among the many present were a number of school-mates of Miss Gray. Charles L. Lewis sang several selections during the services.

There were many beautiful floral tributes, including many from the young friends of the departed, the Epworth League of Monroe Avenue church and Plainfield Lodge No. 885, B. P. O. E., of which Miss Gray's brother, James Dodd, is a member. The burial was in Hillside cemetery, and the bearers were George H. Fisher, Jr., Frederick Jacobs, Louis Mulford, Elmer Morrison, Harry Lude and Harry Sawyer.

TRINITY JUNIORS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held its first meeting of the season Wednesday afternoon, it being in the nature of a rally, and officers for the year were elected and plans for work were discussed. Mrs. R. V. Kinney, superintendent, was in charge. There were forty-six boys and girls present, a majority being members of the society, and all entered upon the work with enthusiasm. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor, was present and spoke words of encouragement to the juniors. Badges were also presented to several members having the highest percentage for attendance last year and those enrolling yesterday.

It was also decided to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the society the latter part of next month, probably Sunday evening, October 23, with special exercises. These officers were elected yesterday:

President, Jennie Sears; vice-presidents, Elmer French, Charles Allegar, Nellie McAfee; secretary, Marion Woolley; assistant, May Stevens; treasurer, Louise Seader; assistant, William Sowden; superintendent, Mrs. R. V. Kinney; assistants, Lawrence French, Maude McAfee; superintendent of beginners, Mrs. Lafayette Rosenthl; assistants, Helen Leithheuser, Adelaide Cole. The meeting opened with a fifteen-minute devotional service conducted by Lawrence French.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY AT CLEVELAND'S BIRTHPLACE

Grover Cleveland's birthplace in Caldwell will be the objective point of a pilgrimage of Democrats of New Jersey on Columbus Day, October 12. Dr. Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate for governor, will address the gathering from the porch of the old homestead, in Bloomfield avenue. The Rev. Dr. Nelson B. Chester, pastor of the Caldwell Presbyterian church, who is the present occupant of the Cleveland birthplace, has consented to its use.

The pilgrimage is under the auspices of the Democratic Union of New Jersey, of which Dr. Woodrow Wilson is a member. James C. Spriggs, of Jersey City, who is chairman of the committee arranging the affair, announces that it is planned to make it the most important affair in the history of the democracy in this State in years. The women of the town will serve tea at the reception.

Dr. Wilson will speak at 4 o'clock and there will be a dinner for the gubernatorial candidate at Monomonock Inn at seven o'clock. Among the speakers expected to attend are Governor Hadley, of Maine; Richard Olney, Hoke Smith, of Georgia, and Charles S. Hamlin.

BROTHERHOOD REALTY CO. ACQUIRES PROPERTY.

The Brotherhood Real Estate Company, of which Morris Abrams and Jacob Fass are members, has acquired a tract of five hundred feet on West Fourth street, between Belmont avenue and John street, and will erect ten moderate price houses.

The company has also purchased from F. C. Lounsbury, through Albert Lederer, the property on West Second street between Elmwood place and Plainfield avenue, containing five houses, three double ones and two single ones. Mr. Abrams has purchased the property on West Front street, occupied by himself and will tear down the old structure and erect a modern three-story building with a sixty-four foot extension.

CHIFFON WRAP.

The girl who wants a chiffon cloth wrap but has not the price can make one for herself.

At this season the chiffon cloth can be bought, reduced, n desirable shades. Silk fringe to match is also to be found at bargain prices.

The simplest wrap of this sore is made with a dep square at back, falling well be'ow the hips, with shawl ends in front. All edges are finished with fringe.

For greater elaboration a two-inch kimono silk or soutache braid can be put on the chiffon an inch and an a half above the fringe. Somewhat newer is a narrower border of nteriaced scrolls in what is known as line designs.

More complicated is a wrap made with kimono sleeve and reaching almost to bottom of frock. It is edged around the sleeves and encircles the collarless neck and down each side of front with bias folds of satin the shade of chiffon. The bottom is banded in narrowness, with a deeper band of satin above deep silk fringe.

New Grocery for City Market.

The La Rue Realty Company will open an up to date cash grocery in the City Market next Saturday morning, stocked with the best the market affords.

MISS ELIZABETH BOYD WEDS JOSEPH EDGAR, JR.

Miss Elizabeth Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Boyd, of 955 West Sixth street, and Joseph Edgar, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edgar, Sr., of New Brunswick, were married at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from New Brunswick, New York, Brooklyn and this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. William Edgar, of Philadelphia, a cousin, of the bridegroom, George E. Edgar, of New Brunswick, brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride is a talented and accomplished young woman, being a vocalist of note. She is a member of the Schubert Choral Society, of New York, and has appeared at a number of the society's concerts and musicales.

Mr. Edgar, with his brother, George Edgar, is engaged in the butcher business at New and Codwise avenues, New Brunswick. After a wedding trip the couple will reside in this city, the groom commuting to New Brunswick. The bride received a number of beautiful gifts from relatives and friends. Among the guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edgar, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. James Edgar and family, of Highland Park, and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rapp, of Jersey City.

LAST SAD RITES FOR EARL W. LYNN

The funeral services of Earl W. Lynn, the eighteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Lynn, of Grant avenue, were held from the late home Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and were largely attended, especially by young friends of the departed. There was a large display of beautiful floral tributes from friends and neighbors and several societies including one from the Ransomie Concrete Company, where the young man was employed for a time; another from an afternoon club of which Mrs. Lynn is a member; also a floral horseshoe from the employees of Pond Tool Works, where Mr. Lynn is employed; and a wreath from Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., together with many cut flowers from other friends; also friends of Bethlehem, Pa.

Rev. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, of which the young man was a member, officiated, and he spoke impressively of the life and character of Mr. Lynn, of his interest in the church, Sunday school and Epworth League. During the services Judge William N. Runyon sang "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me."

The burial was in Hillside cemetery, and the bearers were William Craig, Robert Craig, William Clifton, Harry Brenhall, Joseph Burd and Fred Haynes.

MISS ANNA FLOSBACH G. B. HOWELL'S BRIDE.

Miss Anna Marie Flosbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Flosbach, of Midway avenue, Fanwood, and George B. Howell, also of Fanwood, were married Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, of which the couple are members, officiated. The bride was attended by Miss Rose Wilson, of Dunellen, and the best man was Ray Terry, of this city.

The bride was gowned in white silk poplin and the bridesmaid wore a gown of light blue pongee. The home was attractively decorated for the occasion. There were about thirty guests, and after the ceremony the couple was congratulated and supper was served. There was also a fine program of vocal and instrumental music. The couple will reside at Fanwood. The groom is engaged in business as an electrician.

FOR GIRLS WHO LIKE TO SEW.

Dark red linen makes a girlish dress that can be worn with a coat or lingerie waist. The material launders nicely.

When altering a blouse for any reason it is a great mistake to move the shoulder seam to the front. A far better plan is that of dropping it backward instead of forward.

Vanity bags for dancing parties are most attractively made of dainty ribbon, in the form of a tiny bag, which holds powder and puff ball, while the bottom on the outside has a mirror, held in place by a shirred piece of ribbon, after first being glued to the rib-covered cardboard, which forms the inside of the bag.

The Betraying Feature.

Mrs. Hubb—I believe it. She dusts the furniture exactly as the soubrette does it on the stage.—Boston Transcript.

GEORGE K. DOBSON WEDS MISS ADA ALICE BRIGHT

At 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, beneath a bower of roses, ferns and smilax, Miss Ada Alice Bright, of 427 West Seventh street, became the bride of Patrolman George K. Dobson, at the new home of the groom, 1235 Clinton avenue, in the presence of a company estimated to number over a hundred personal friends of the couple. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Elwyn G. Bowers, curate of Grace P. E. church. The best man was Edward S. Davis, of New York, and the bridesmaid, Miss May Day, of West Fourth street. The bride was given away by Thomas H. Leggett, of West Seventh street.

The ceremony was performed in the front parlor of the house which was decorated throughout with boxwood boughs. The bride's gown was of creme cachemere de soie made in surprise form and with lace yoke, crossings finished with large lace covered buttons, with the skirt slightly drawn at the side with a wide bias fold making just a suggestion of the bobble skirt. The veil was caught up with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of roses.

The bridesmaid was attired in a gown of white batiste with a touch of pale blue and carried a bouquet of white and pink roses. After the ceremony a reception was held to which all the guests remained. The wedding march was played on the piano by Charles Suhr, Jr.

The gifts to the bride were both numerous and costly. Among the notable presents were china dinner sets, solid silver water pitcher, cut glass in profusion, bronze statuettes, table linen carving sets, doilies and includ d a handsome cut glass fruit and jelly set from the Plainfield police department.

The police department was represented by Sergeant Overbaugh, Roundsman Higgins and Patrolmen Charles Flynn, Nick Meyers, Frank Sweeney, Daniel McDonald, Richard Birmingham. Others present were F. A. Duttenhoffer, Douglas Martin and others.

The bride's former home was in Bomford, England, and strangely enough the parents of the bride are aquainted with an uncle of the groom who is chief of police at Brentwood, England. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Dobson will return to live in the new house which has just been completed in anticipation of the wedding and furnished from top to bottom.

HOW AND WHAT TO READ.

There are a great many girls who have just finished high school or college, and it is not easy for those who have been mentally occupied for several years to all at once be entirely with the little details of housekeeping or sewing. Alert minds must have food, and while a girl may enjoy the social gayety for which she now has the freedom, and while she may be interested in domestic cares, she will still be somewhat oppressed by hours that drag, unless she can put into them something worth while.

It is not always easy to join classes and, indeed, too many clubs become a burden of expense, and encroach to much upon one's time. There is, too, more individuality developed by selecting our own line of reading and forming our own opinions. A club often makes us dependent on the criticisms of others, and I do not believe we get the pleasure or intimacy with an author by seeing him through the eyes of others, that we do when we find out his faults and his fascinations for ourselves.

While most of us enjoy fiction, and few of us dislike history, a little less of the former and more of the latter would usually be beneficial. I would suggest, therefore, that if fiction be read it have a purpose in your next winter's line of thought. Why not take up French and devote several months to the study of its people, its literature, its history, or, if you prefer, take some hero like Napoleon and read everything you can find about him.

There is perhaps no greater romance in all fiction than the life of this man. It is a story with a sad ending, and you may weep a little over the sorrows of Josephine, but you will be thrilled again and again by the marvelous power which for a time moved the world, and you will learn that ambition when it sweeps love and friendship out of the way, and when it places self above all else, can only end in tragedy.

At any library you can find the best books on Napoleon, and when you have read them read Victor Hugo's "Les Miserable," with its wonderful description of Waterloo, volution which brought the need of a leader like Napoleon, read Dicken's "Tale of Two Cities," which gives a realistic picture of that time of passion and of carnage.

Perhaps, however, you would enjoy more the tales of merry England. What do you know of Richard the Lion Hearted, or of Henry VIII., a veritable Bluebeard with his many wives? What do you know of Scotland and of that Mary who was beheaded? Of course, you may say that you have read of these people at school, but I want you to get intimate with them, so that they will seem, like personalities and not like the effigies in the wax works.

REV. MR. HOWARD RESIGNS

On Advice of Physician He Ends His Pastorate at Hope Chapel.

FOR SIX MONTHS NEEDED REST.

Much to the surprise of his congregation and friends throughout the city, Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard tendered his resignation as pastor of Hope chapel at the morning service Sunday. The occasion marked the ninth anniversary of his installation to the pastorate, and it was his first appearance at any gathering in several months. He had been in the Adirondacks and Maine during the past summer, and his decision to retire from active work came after the realization that only complete rest for at least half a year would enable him to continue in the ministry.

Mr. Howard informed the chapel members of his determination after the customary announcements, and spoke as follows:

"There is another announcement to be made this morning which I come to with hesitation and regret. Every member of this congregation has known that your pastor has not been perfectly well since the very hot weather of the summer. It is a great satisfaction to be able to announce that the most thorough medical examination has declared that there is no organic trouble, but on the other hand, the doctors have said that there is a condition resulting from strain that will require six months more of complete release from church work before perfect health can be obtained. In view of this fact, I have this past week written to the Session of the Crescent Avenue church, offering my resignation as pastor of Hope chapel, so that the way may be clear for the taking of immediate steps to secure a pastor to labor in the chapel with you.

"Today would have been the beginning of the tenth year since my coming to this place, and I am glad to be able to feel that the nine years have been years of much happy fellowship in the service of our Lord and Master in this community. I especially regret having to close this fellowship without the opportunity of going about to bid farewell personally to all the members of the congregation, but it seems to be one condition of that speedy and complete recovery which all desire that I shall get away as promptly as possible. Therefore I can only say good-bye to you all together, and ask you to pass on my farewell and Godspeed also to those who are not here this morning may receive them. Jesus Christ has been the Leader here, and will be still. My last word is only the old simple and earnest appeal to you each and all to follow Him—now and always. Follow Him and uphold the hands of every other servant of His who may seek to minister in this place."

The resignation will be considered by the Session of the Crescent Avenue church, this evening, but is final so far as Mr. Howard is concerned. He has completed plans to leave the latter part of the week for the home of his mother at Glencoe, Ill., and will be joined by his family on November 1. He will remain there indefinitely. His pulpit will be filled by supplies until a successor can be named.

Mr. Howard came to Hope chapel direct from Union Theological Seminary, New York, which he entered after being graduated from Williams College in 1898. He succeeded Rev. G. K. Newell, now pastor of the St. Cloud Memorial church at South Orange. Mr. Howard quickly endeared himself to the congregation and it has enjoyed a steady growth under his leadership. He was indefatigable in his work and only those with whom he came in contact are able to appreciate his efforts to minister to the needs of the sick and distressed. This was especially true of his visits to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he called every week and performed many little acts of kindness for every one irrespective of denomination.

Two years ago Mr. Howard broke down from overwork and since then he has not been in the best of health. His condition was further aggravated the past summer when making a trip from the Adirondacks to fill a hurried call to Mr. Newell's church he was overcome by the heat. This necessitated his going to Maine after his regular vacation but the expected recovery was not attained and his decision to relinquish all work came after a consultation with physicians.

MISS EMMA S. GRANNATT BRIDE OF W. A. LA MOTT

Announcement made today of the marriage of Miss Emma S. Grannatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bell Grannatt, of West Fourth street, and Wilbur A. La-Mott, of Elizabeth, came somewhat as a surprise to the many friends of the bride. The couple was married at the parish house of Trinity Episcopal church, New York, on September 14. While only the nearest and immediate relatives of the fact, it was not generally known until Saturday evening, when a reception was given to the bride and groom at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. Bradley S. Hall, 87 Fairview avenue, in honor of the event.

The immediate members of the family and friends were present to offer their congratulations and the bride received a large number of handsome presents. During the evening refreshments were served by DeMolfi & Co., caterers of this city.

Prior to her marriage, the bride, who is extremely pretty, held a responsible position in the office of County Registrar Frank H. Smith, at Elizabeth. The groom holds a like position with the electrical concern at Garwood. The couple is residing at Roselle Park, where the groom had a completely furnished home.

RALLY DAY EXERCISES AT TEMPLE BAPTIST

Rally day exercises in charge of Mrs. Edward Baker, Jr., superintendent of the intermediate department, took place in the Temple Baptist Sunday school Sunday afternoon. The school has the graded system. Promotions and the awarding of diplomas were the order of the day and L. W. Randolph addressed the school on the topic, "The Tree and Its Fruit."

From the junior to the intermediate department the following were advanced: Lucy Johnson, Christine Vestegarde, Gilberta Van Nest, May Touchon, Maria Renwantz, Weslie Giles, John Cartwright, William Simon, Arthur Campbell, Margaret Johnson, Percy Robinson and Leon Touchon.

Only six were promoted from the intermediate to the senior grade as follows: Carl Guilberg, Christopher Meyers, Jr., Harry Huff, Victor Crook, Alexander Campbell and George Lund.

Rewards for church attendance and for the completion of the home work of the intermediate department were given to Mary Conway, Harold Griffin, Esther Johnson, Beatie Griffin Enid Johnson, Wesley Giles and Isabel Lines.

Mr Randolph gave an interesting talk and held the attention of the children throughout his interpretation of the value of fruitfulness in every department of life. Miss Rose Baker recited the story of Jacob's vision. The wanderings of the Children of Israel in the wilderness were vividly described by Esther and Enid Johnson.

SUNDA DIES FOLLOWING AMPUTATION OF FOOT

Lawrence Sunda, the employe of the Public Service Corporation who fell from the work car on Richmond street on Friday and whose foot was amputated as a result of having that member crushed under the wheels of the car Sunday morning at 1.45 o'clock from shock and loss of blood. The body was removed to Cole's undertaking establishment and his friends notified.

Sunda was trying to pass from one end of the car to the other when he slipped and fell with his right foot under the trucks. One wheel passed over the foot before the car could be stopped, and while no time was lost in getting him to the hospital, he lost considerable blood, and the shock of amputation was more than he could stand.

Under the auspices of the Westfield Driving and Riding Club, a special race meet for prizes will be held at the Westfield track on Saturday afternoon, October 15, at 1 o'clock. There will be three races, a 2:25 trot and pace for a set of horse clothing; a 2:20 trot and pace for ten bags of oats and a free-for-all trot and pace for set of harness.

RUNAWAY GIRL CAUGHT AT NORTH AVE. STATION

Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy was much surprised shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon to see a little body, fatless and coatless, jump from the baggage car of the 1:24 train and hike it up the railroad tracks as fast as it could go. Becoming suspicious that the girl, for such it proved to be, was trying to evade somebody, he gave chase, and after a while came up with her. Not giving any satisfactory replies to the patrolman's questions, McCarthy took her to headquarters.

Captain Frederickson questioned the girl, who is small for her age, and finally got her to tell where she was from and why she was running away. She said she had been working for Mrs. Thomas Richards, of 32 High street, Somerville, but that she did not like it and wanted to get away. Captain Frederickson held her until Mr. Richards could be communicated with, and later he came and took her back to Somerville. The girl will be placed in an institution.

13 MONTHS OLD BOY CHOKED TO DEATH

Henry Craft Diem, the thirteen-months-old son of Frank M. Diem, of 87 Manning avenue, North Plainfield, was found hanging between the mattress and the footboard of his mother's bed Sunday morning, and when Dr. J. F. Lawson was called in to see the baby he pronounced him dead.

The child had been sleeping with his mother during the night, and when Mrs. Diem went out of the room to attend to her household duties the boy was asleep. An hour later Mr. Diem went into the room and discovered the body of his boy hanging as described above. Dr. Lawson was immediately summoned, but could do nothing for the child. It was beyond human help.

The only theory that has been advanced for the peculiar position of the child is that he awoke and finding himself alone started to get out of bed by crawling to the aperture between the footboard and mattress and suddenly slipping down feet first was unable to extricate himself and being choked could not make himself heard.

The funeral services will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the home of the parents.

MISS SUSAN DUNHAM WEDDED IN TENNESSEE.

Miss Susan Dunham, daughter of W. C. Dunham, of Atlantic City, formerly of Craig place, the borough, left Thursday for a suburb of Chattanooga, Tenn., where she was married Saturday night to Frank Berry, formerly a local resident. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a small gathering of relatives and friends.

Previous to her marriage the bride had been living with her aunt, Mrs. Giles, of Grove street. Mr. Berry was employed in New York by the Davis Construction Company and was recently sent by the firm to Tennessee to superintend the construction of a big bridge contract. He will be there for the next three years and he and his bride will make their home near Chattanooga.

Miss Amy C. Case, who was a resident of this city for about twenty-five years, died Saturday at the home of her niece, Mrs. Willis Sheppard, of Hopewell, following a long illness, and a stroke of paralysis about a week ago. She left Plainfield last fall to make her home with Mrs. Sheppard and since that time failed rapidly. While in Plainfield she made her home with Jeremiah Moore, of West Fourth street, being a housekeeper there for many years. She was a native of Flemington and was about fifty years of age.

She was a member of the First Baptist church, this city, and a regular attendant at the services and also the Sunday school. She was a devout Christian woman. She is survived by two sisters, one living at Ringoes and the other at Flemington; also one niece, Mrs. Sheppard.

Executive Committee Meeting.

A meeting of the Somerset county Democratic executive committee was held at the Ten Eyck House, Somerville, Saturday afternoon, at which all the county candidates were present. The itinerary of the latter for the campaign was made up and the situation in general was discussed. A resolution was introduced by secretary W. C. Linbarger, of the borough, endorsing the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson for Governor, Professor William C. Libbey for Congress, George Lamont for Assembly and George Mobus for sheriff.

DIED WHILE AT DINNER

Albert H. Leivers Fatally Stricken by Heart Disease on Saturday.

ONCE IN COMMON COUNCIL.

He Was a Member of Heavenly Rest Church and K. G. E.—Wife, Three Sons and Daughter Survive Him.

Albert Howard Leivers, a former resident of Jefferson avenue, this city, a machinist and at one time a member of the local Common Council died suddenly Saturday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock while eating his dinner at his home in Westfield. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Mr. Leivers had been complaining about his heart recently, but his condition was not considered serious. He had just taken his seat at the table, when he fell over, in what the members of the family thought was a faint. Before Dr. F. W. Westcott, of Fanwood, could reach the house the man was dead.

Mr. Leivers resided in this city for several years, being employed at the Pond Machine Tool Works. He served one term in 1897, as a member of the Common Council from the Fourth ward, succeeding Isaac S. Randolph, who resigned. He took Mr. Randolph's place on the various committees to which the former was assigned.

Mr. Leivers was a member of the Church of the Heavenly Rest and was a trustee of the church. He was also a past chi-f of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle. Since residing at Westfield, he was employed at the C. & C. Works, Garwood. He is survived by a wife, three sons, Frank L., George Howard and Henry and one daughter, Viola.

MRS. LOUIS O. BARTON SUES FOR A DIVORCE

The records in the Court of Chancery at Trenton, show that Mrs. Mattie A. Barton, of this city, has brought suit against her husband, Louis O. Barton, on charges of desertion and cruelty. Louis O. Barton disappeared some time ago and nothing has been heard from him. Notice of the suit which is being served by publication appears today in the local papers.

The couple were married on September 3, 1906, and wor a while appeared to live happily together, but trouble arose and Barton deserted his wife without any apparent reason-so aside from the frequent quarrels which are alleged to have taken place.

They were married by Rev. George A. Houghton n New York. In her petition Mrs. Barton asks permission to resume her maiden name, which was Smith. Barton was formerly a singer in the choir of the First M. E. church in this city and was employed in a law office as stenographer.

The notice by publication of Mrs. Barton's suit is because she does not know of her husband's whereabouts at the present time.

PROMOTION EXERCISES HELD AT HOPE CHAPEL

DINNER AT HUNT CLUB GIVEN BY E. S. HOOLEY

The weeky chase of the Watchung Hunt Club was enjoyed by a large number of riding members Saturday afternoon. Starting at the Netherwood Farms, the members chased the hounds over the mountains, the first check being on top of the mountains near the Mountain Park Inn. From that point they came down to Somerset street, and thence back to the clubhouse ,where Edwin S. Hooley entertained about fifty members and frinds at an elaborate dinner.

The Eureka Trio together with a song and dance artist provided a fine prdogram for the guests. Judge William N. Runyon, one of the guests, help to entertain with some popular songs. There were guests from New York, Brooklyn, Newark and this city.

Those who followed the hounds in the chase included Miss Mabel B. Hooley, Brown Rolston, H. A. Bourne, Albin Trojan, Schuyler Casey, Harry Rose, Henry L. Finch, Rufus C. Finch, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Brown, Huntsman Henry Watkins, Charles Wilcox, together with a number of grooms who were exercising their horses.

MISS MARY A. ARNOLD A NONAGENARIAN, DEAD

Miss Mary A. Arnold, aged 94 years, who has been a resident of this city for the past twenty years, died Saturday night at the home of her niece,Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, 819 First place. Death was due chiefly to advanced age, but it was hurried by a fall which Miss Arnold had about a week ago.

Miss Arnold was born at Tolland, Conn., where she lived up to twenty years ago, the time she removed to Plainfield and made her home with her niece. She was a life-long member of the Methodist church and during her residence here attended the First M. E. church and its Sunday school. Since coming to this city, Miss Arnold was blind and suffered other infirmities, but with them all she was cheerful and was a devout Christian woman, beloved by all who knew her. She was the last member of her family, having outlived them all.

MYSTERIOUS BLAZE CAUSES $250 DAMAGE

The borough fire department was summoned on the home of John Wakefield on Manning avenue, near Westervelt avenue, at 11:45 Sunday night ,where a mysterious blaze had broken out in the kitchen. The flames originated in the wall back of the stove and were eating their way to the second floor when the family was aroused by smoke.

With the arrival of the department in response to an alarm from box 132 the progress of the fire was speedily checked although the men worked an hour before it was entirely extinguished. The house is a two family affair, the other side being occupied by Nathan R. Lee. His premises practically escaped damage.

The building is owned by C. H. Rugg and the damage to it is placed at $200. The loss to Wakefield on furniture is estimated at $50. Both are covered by insurance.. Chief McCullough is conducting an investigation today in the hope of ascertaining the cause of the blaze.

TEN NEW MEMBERS ADDED TO TRINITY'S CHURCH ROLL.

Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of Rutgers Theological Seminary, was present and assisted Rev. John Y. Brook in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning.

Ten new members were added to the church roll, six by letter and four on confession of faith. Two children were baptised after the service in the morning.

FALL CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY AT PARK GOLF CLUB

One of the chief events at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, was the first round for the Fall championship, which aroused considerable interest among the players. There was also the weekly competition for the President's, Golf club and Oakmont cups and the Ladies' Autumn cup, all of which attracted a large field of players.

In the first round for the championship, E. Bird defeated Dr. H. K. Carroll, 2 up; W. E. Lough defeated Charles B. Morse, by default; R. V. Carpenter defeated U. G. Tingley, 4 up and 3 to play; W. Faber defeated A. M. Morrell by default. The play will continue next Saturday.

The best scores for the President's, golf club and Oakmont cups were as follows:

In the weekly competition for the Ladies' Autumn cup, nine holes, these scores were posted:

Miss Grace A. TenEyck, 75, 13-42; Miss Bird, 46, 3-43; Mrs. William Powell, 78, 30-48; Miss Harriet Shreve, 71, 15-56; Mrs. Charles J. McNab, 96, 30-66.

BY TAKING THIRD GAME SOMERVILLE WON SERIES

Jack Torpey won for Somerville the deciding game against Plainfield at the former place, Saturday afternoon, by hitting out a two-bagger in the tenth inning after two men were down. It was a heartbreaker for Plainfield for the team had held Somerville on even terms up to the tenth inning and had fair chances of winning, when Torpey came to the rescue and won the game. This gives Somerville two games out of the series of three, Plainfield taking the first contest at Somerville two weeks ago.

Ward and Nelson comprised the battery for Plainfield, and the former pitched a fine game. Clinton, who was in the points for Somerville, was in a little better form, holding his opponents to three hits, while Ward was touched for six. The final score was 3 to 2. The score by innings:

Plainfield	0 1 0 0 0 1 0 0 0	2	3

YALE'S BEQUESTS TOTAL $2,398,291

Total gifts to both income and principal of the Yale university finances amounting to $2,398,291 shown in the first annual report of the new treasurer of Yale university, George Parmley Day, made public Saturday, as compared with $1,250,932 for the previous year.

Additions to the university fund show a net increase of $1,906,448, as against $1,204,050 for the previous year.

The most important additions of the year to the fund have been the Yale Alumni fund of $94,750 on the boathouse subscription of $66,164; the Hewitt bequest of $350,000; the Laflan professorship fund of $100,000; the Sage gift of $550,000, the Salisbury trust fund, $331,677, and additions to the university endowment and extension fund of $344,418.

The most important additions to income were $49,000, from the alumni fund, and $34,351 from the Carnegie foundation. Financially, it has been the best year for Yale in her history. The total increases in the departmental funds have amounted to $335,062; as compared with $79,000 the previous year.

The revenue of the whole university and departments was $1,197,569, and the total expenditures $1,177,165, showing a credit balance for the year of $20,404.

The investment account shows holdings of real estate in New Haven of $440,113; in New York of $125,249, and in Chicago of $96,862. The treasurer announces as a policy restriction of mortgage loans to New Haven and New York.

Won First Prize at Fair.

Godwin (15) 3 up and 1 to play; O. W. Gott (12) beat S. H. Patterson (14) 1 up.

Third sixteen—Howard Huntington (18) beat G. F. Earl (18) 2 up and 1 to play; Harold Serrell (25) beat L. H. VanBuren (22) 2 up and 1 to play; C. M. Church (23) beat George S. Clay (20) 3 up and 1 to play; A. W. Klencke (25) beat B. F. Kraffert (20) 2 up and 1 to play; L. H. Hand (27) beat Henry L. Hall (21) 2 up and 1 to play; W. A. Bours, Jr., (26) beat J. A. Lane (15) 2 up; C. C. Riggs (20) beat G. M. Holstein (21) 5 up and 3 to play.

The committee has arranged for play for the bates eight of the first, second and third sixteen, this keeping all of the players who started in the tournament in play until the actual winner is declared, and prizes will be given the winners.

Mr. Hyde's Will Probated.

The will of Francis del. Hyde was admitted to probate at the Somerset County Surrogate's office at Somerville today. The estate is left one-third to his wife, Mrs. Carolyn Hyde, and two-thirds to be divided share and share alike among their children, Carolyn, Edward and Frank, Jr. Mrs. Hyde qualified as executrix. The value of the personality is not known, for no inventory has been filed.

Plainfield Defeats Thomas A. C.

The Plainfield Association Football Club defeated the Thomas A. C., of Kearney, at the latter place, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 1 to 0, in one of the fastest games of the season. The contest was witnessed by a large crowd of football enthusiasts. The Plainfielders played a consistent game throughout, and were highly complimented for shutting out the home team.

REV. DR. HERRING ON "APPROPRIATING CHRIST."

In his sermon last night, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church defined the difference between the admiration of Jesus Christ and appropriating Him. He took for his text Mark 10:17 and illustrated with anecdote the great difference which is shown in the contrast between admiring the Saviour and the actuality of taking Him into the every day occupations of life and permitting His influence to sway the actions and speech in every walk of life.

There is no surer way, he said, of appropriating Christ and making Him a part of our lives than by giving up all that would interfere with such a surrender and thenceforward enjoy to the full the communion which brings peace and happiness. Eternal life, he said, is to know God, and this may be accomplished through His son, Jesus Christ. If you strive upward Christ will reach down and help you to attain the goal.

CHEER RUNYON'S SPEECH

THE "TOOL" OF NOBODY.

Judge William N. Runyon, the Republican congressional nominee, made a splendid impression on the several hundred members of the Downtown Republican club, of Elizabeth, last night, when he spoke on the issues of the campaign. Frequently he was interrupted by applause, and on more than one occasion his audience cheered wildly, particularly when he paid a handsome tribute to the Democratic candidate for Governor, against whom a slighting remark had been made by another speaker.

"I never have been anybody's puppet and I am rather old to start now," said Judge William N. Runyon before an audience that taxed the G. A. R. hall at Elizabeth, to its capacity at the meeting of the Down Town Republican Club held there last night. "And the one who thinks that I am his tool is very much mistaken," continued the speaker. "Should I be elected to represent this district you can depend upon it that I will try to do what I think will suit the people. No one has asked me, no one will get, what isn't right. I am no tool and will act only upon my own judgment."

The club members jumped to their feet and cheered when the judge said: "My idea is to be fair with every one no matter who he is or what he represents.

This year means great fighting for us, and it is up to us to win or lose. The Democratic party has selected an honorable and a big man, one who is going to give us the hardest fight we have had in many years, and it is up to us to use every ounce of strength we have to win this heavy campaign." This tribute to Dr. Woodrow Wilson was widely applauded.

"Vivian M. Lewis, whose record of is one of duties well performed, has come from lower to higher offices. I don't think the Republican party could have selected a stronger standard-bearer. There are two good men and a character it behooves each and everyone of us to fight and place our man in office."

"Should I be elected, it will be my aim to help President Taft. The Democrats say our tariff talk is a fake, but they don't consider the reduction we have made. President Taft needs backing and that is one of my purposes should I be sent to Congress. This is no place for drones. At this late hour we need all the helping hands not the wealthy man alone, no, we want every one.

"I am in favor of the adoption of pure food laws to prevent such a case which occurred recently in your own city." Here the judge paid a tribute to the late Owen Parfitt, at the mention of whose name all the members rose to their feet and applauded loudly. "I ask your support, voters of Elizabeth, and I promise you faithfully to try and do the best of my ability while representing you and I ask you to take me at my word. I am a man true to my God and my fellow men, and if placed there I will remain the same way."

District Court Judge William Newman also addressed the members. He said incidentally: "This looks like a good year for us, and the only reason for it is that the people know who has given them so much. I am sure when they place Vivian Lewis in the gubernatorial chair he will be there to represent the people. I have no doubts as to the election returns when I see the candidates for office. I have lived in the city of Plainfield for twenty-one years and during that time I have never heard one word mar the character of our Congressional nominee William N. Runyon. Judge Runyon will not promise you to do something just for the sake of gaining public favor. The citizens of the Fifth district have made no mistake in selecting him for their candidate. If he is elected he will be on the "job" every day that Congress is in session."

Criswell McLoughlin, speaker from the national committee bureau, made a short address, asking the support of all Republican nominees. Peter Meisel, a nominee for Assembly, and Samuel J. Berry, Sr., nominee for mayor of Elizabeth, also spoke. Charles Wagner, president of the club, was in the chair.

In the Borough Court.

The assault case of Bedny Estrom against George Fatouros was heard in the borough court this morning. Recorder Dolliver declared Fatouros guilty and fined him $5.

GREET RECTOR AND WIFE

ATTENDED BY SIX HUNDRED.

Clergyman and His Bride Back From Their Honeymoon Are Given a Hearty Welcome.

There was a most hearty welcome extended to Rev. and Mrs. E. Vicars Stevenson in the parish house of Grace Episcopal church last night. The occasion was marked by the presence of over 600 friends who came to offer their congratulations to the rector of Grace church and his bride who have but recently returned from Europe where they went on the wedding trip. Mrs. Henry E. Titus, president of the women's guild of the church, assisted the rector and his wife in receiving.

Nearly every congregation in the city was represented by one or more members and the clergy were well represented. The entire house was handsomely decorated in southern smilax and Charles Suhr's string orchestra discoursed appropriate music during the reception. A collation was served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, caterer of the Park club.

Rev. Melville Knox Bailey, curate of Grace Episcopal church, New York, who performed the marriage ceremony for Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson, was present with Mrs. Bailey, as were also Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Jordan, of Newburgh, N. Y., the parents of Mrs. Stevenson. Among the clergymen present were Rev. George Warner, rector of Holy Cross; Rev. C. H. Mallory, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest; Rev. Elory G. Bowers, curate of Grace P. E. church; Rev. C. S. Wood, of Roselle; Rev. Howard Rush, of Westfield; Rev. A. W. Phelps, of Bound Brook; Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church; Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of Temple Baptist church. The wives of most of the ministers accompanied their husbands.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson received under a canopy of smilax in the southwest corner of the parish house hall. To give a full list of those present would require a printing of the entire social register. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson shook hands with everybody and were tired at the end of the reception, but perfectly happy.

REV. MAGUIRE TO GIVE WITTY LECTURE

Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, known as the "lecture platform as "The Irish Orator," will give his famous lecture at the church, tomorrow night, on "An Irishman in the Jungles of Africa." It is brimful of anecdotes and original wit so natural to the speaker. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the church. Wherever Mr. Maguire has delivered this lecture it has always made a great impression.

Mayor James G. Wyman, of Allegheny, Pa., says: "There are none better than Dr. Gabriel R. Maguire, in his lecture, 'With an Irishman Through the Jungles of Africa.' I listened for over two hours and was both entertained and instructed. Would enjoy hearing him again."

The Sabina, Ohio, Tribune says: "The actual experience of this dauntless explorer during his seven years' sojourn in Africa is worth a dozen ordinary lectures."

Rev. Dr. Robert A. George, pastor of Trinity Congregational church, Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Dr. Gabriel R. Maguire opened our East End entertainment course with his lecture, 'With an Irishman Through the Jungles of Africa.' It made a hit. He is an Irishman, pure goods, highest grade. His brogue, wit, pathos, eloquence, lofty theme, his love for Africa and her people, his great message, made it an evening that our people will never forget. We want him back again. Maguire more than makes good. If you want Irish wit, fun and a great message, put down Maguire."

Will Try Out Candidates.

All candidates wishing to try out with the Holy Cross football team are requested to be at the Cricket Field, Friday night at 7:30 o'clock. A game with the Laurels, of Bound Brook, will be arranged for Saturday, at the Cricket Field. Other games scheduled include P. H. S., Wilson Military Academy, Princeton Preps., Acorn A. C., of Brooklyn, Rutgers Prep., and other teams. Address all communications to Ira Vail, 120 Elmwood place, this city.

WM. L. SMALLEY SR. IS NINETY-TWO TODAY

William L. Smalley, Sr., is celebrating his ninety-second birthday today at the home of David C. Smalley, on East Front street, where he is receiving the friends and neighbors who wish to congratulate him. Mrs. Smalley, who is with him, is eighty-three and they have been married for sixty-four years.

Mr. Smalley was born at Millington, in the Passaic valley, in 1818, and when twenty years old traveled from there to the State of Illinois in a wagon to purchase stock for his butcher market. He was in business with W. H. Nott and had a market at 112 West Front street. Their slaughter house stood where Blimm's hotel is now situated. Mr. Smalley has told of his thrilling experiences on his famous ride to the West and back. On that trip into what was then practically a forest he was accompanied only by a couple of faithful dogs who had many a fight with wild animals on the trip.

Mr. Smalley has always taken an active interest in public affairs and was instrumental in having the township of North Plainfield separated from Warren township. While he is somewhat feeble and cannot see as well as he could a few years ago, he is vigorous in mind and retains all his faculties. He was much pleased this morning to know that his friends had remembered his birthday and greeted all with a smile and hearty welcome.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR MR. AND MRS. MANNING

A surprise that really was a surprise was given to Leland Manning, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Manning, of 1130 Myrtle avenue, last night, the occasion being his twenty-first birthday. Young Mr. Manning was enticed away from his home on some pretext and when he returned he found a gathering of relatives and friends to the number of twenty-five who proceeded to make the evening something for him.

A big full of gifts which Mr. Manning was compelled to unwrap disclosed tokens of love and friendship, but the big surprise came when his father presented him with a fine gold watch and fob.

Mrs. Aretta Manning read an original poem written for the occasion and during the reading Mrs. J. C. Manning, the mother of the young man, lighted the twenty-one candles on the huge birthday cake. References to the candles and their meaning as described in the poem made and impressive ceremony.

After a collation, which was served at a beautifully decorated table, the evening was spent in games and music until a late hour. Mr. Manning was congratulated on attaining his majority in a number of short speeches and replied as best as he could under the circumstances. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. James C. Manning, J. A. Manning, Leland Manning, J. H. Manning, Mrs. Aretta Manning, Miss Emeline Manning, Miss Lillian Dunn, Miss Helen Smith, Misses Ethel and Florence Prior, Miss Margaret Loizeaux, Miss Rachel Cantrill, Miss Edna Mosher, Miss Katharine Dye, Miss Alice Van Buskirk, Miss Lillian Teeter, Miss Mabel Cubberly, Messrs. Goodwin Fountain, William Briggs, Arthur Briggs, Leslie Bond, Charles Loizeaux and Herbert Smith.

RUN DOWN BY AUTO; YOUNG MAN INJURED.

While riding his motorcycle on Plainfield avenue near the city line, last evening between 6 and 7 o'clock, Walter Knowlton, the nineteen-year-old son of James R. Knowlton, of 450 West Front street, was in collision with an automobile driven by Hartley Mellick and thrown to the ground. Mr. Knowlton sustained a dislocated hip and severe bruises of the body, but his injuries are not serious.

According to the report given out this morning at Mr. Knowlton's home the responsibility for the accident cannot yet be determined. The young man was taken in Mr. Mellick's automobile to the office of Dr. A. P. Vanhorn, on Central avenue, where the limb was set and he was afterwards taken to his home in the ambulance. He was attended at his home by Drs. VanHorn and Norman W. Currie.

This morning it was said that Mr. Knowlton was resting quietly although he had suffered much pain during the night. He will be confined to his bed for some time.

Holds Great Reception.

ENDEAVORERS CELEBRATE

Trinity Reformed Society's Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Observance.

AN ENJOYABLE PROGRAM.

Excellent addresses and interesting reports for the past year and last quarter of a century, together with many social features, marked the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, last night. There was a large attendance of members, not only of the home society, but from all the other young peoples societies of the city and nearby towns, including Dunellen and New Market. The Sunday-school rooms were attractively decorated, the dates "1885-1910" were prominently displayed.

F. L. Soper, Jr., as president of the home society, had charge of the program, which opened with a selection by an orchestra comprising Martin A. Korff and Messrs. Soper, after which Rev. John Ettinger, pastor of the church, made the address of welcome. He extended a cordial welcome to everyone present in a happy speech, also taking occasion to offer some excellent advice. He said that while, perhaps, many things had been forgotten during the past quarter century, God does not forget. One cannot tell the extent of the influence of the society, of the many conversions and the characters helped and the young people should hope for greater power, strength and more mutual sympathy.

Pastor Brook impressed upon all the importance of being filled with inspiration for the future, adding that each should be the aim of every-one to live better lives in the present and future and to push forward all along the line in God's great work.

After a prayer by Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, Miss Ruth Stewart, president of the local Christian Endeavor Union, brought greetings from the union, as well as the society of the Temple Baptist church, of which he is a member. He spoke of the activities of the Trinity society and of the opportunities during the past twenty-five years, and he said that evidently the society had been very successful. In his opinion the future holds out a great deal for the society and it ought to mean greater opportunities.

Mr. Stewart urged every Endeavorer to be loyal to his society and his church, to be a real Endeavorer in all that the word implies, and to move forward in the work for the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom.

Rev. J. T. Sproul, president of the Christian Endeavor Society, being unable to attend, sent an interesting letter in which he congratulated the society and gave some timely advice for the future, expressing the hope that its usefulness would continue to grow.

The annual report of Miss Anna Bach, secretary of the society, was interesting, marking the completion of another year of endeavor. The report showed that at the beginning of the year the society numbered fifty-eight active and nine associate members, while last year the roll showed forty-six active and seven associate members. There was a gain of ten new members, six active and one associate, while last year thirteen new members were gained. The present enrollment is fifty-seven active and two associate members. Fifty meetings, not including business sessions, were held during the year. The total attendance of these was about 1,599, gaining an average of thirty-two for each meeting. Last year fifty meetings were held with a total attendance of about 1,881, and an average of thirty-six. The largest number present at any one meeting was on May 22, when a union meeting with the Juniors was held. The attendance was eighty-three.

One member has attended every consecration meeting and five have only missed one. Five others sent verses when they were obliged to be absent. The contributions to benevolent purposes have been as follows; foreign missions, $50, toward the support of Dr. Paul W. Harrison in Arabia; Indian missions, $15; domestic missions in general, $10, making a total of $75. In addition $5 was given to the State C. E. Union and $13.50 to the Union County C. E. Union for the boys' camp at Netherwood. The total receipts of the society were $178.97, the expenses $99.98, leaving a balance of $78.99. The balance of Miss Bach's report covered in general the work of the committees for the year, all of which was excellent.

The above report was followed with a resume of the work for the past twenty-five years by Miss Har-

ELECT WEST PRESIDENT OF THEIR MEN'S CLUB

At the meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church held in the church parlors last night, the following officers were elected: President, Thomas West; vice-president, Sidney W. Dunning; secretary, Philip Suffern; treasurer, H. C. Steiner. Mr. Steiner was the only officer re-elected, the others having declined renomination. Dr. Frank T. Clawson, who has been the president for three years, in declining a re-nomination, said that he thought someone else should have a chance. The other declinations were because of business occupations which prevented their giving the necessary attention to the club's affairs.

The executive committee consists of the officers and C. A. Rice and J. A. Fowlison. Several applications for membership were received last night. The matter of entertainments for the coming season was deferred until later when a special meeting will be called to discuss the question.

An address was given by J. D. Sharp, of New York, on "Methods of Bringing Men Into Closer Fellowship." Mr. Sharp suggested getting the workingmen interested in the church through a course of talks on topics which would interest them and awaken a desire for the companionship of intellectual and spiritual men.

Following the address a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments served. The club now has seventy-one members.

DISTRICT CONVENTION OF THE SWEDISH CHURCH

The district convention of the Swedish Evangelical church was held in this city yesterday at the church on Sixth street, corner of New. Rev. John Eastlund, the new pastor of the church, presided.

The afternoon was devoted to the routine business of the convention, and in the evening two sermons were preached. In his address to the Swedish people Rev. Mr. Eastlund gave a short history of the church. He said that it had been established in 1891 and had for its first pastor Rev. A. Oren, who had later taken another charge. Since Mr. Oren left the church had been supplied by students from the colleges, but the interest in the work among the Swedes in this city had not sabted. The church now has a membership of sixty and is continually adding to their number.

Sermons were preached at the evening session by Rev. C. H. Rask, of Ridgefield Park, and Rev. Augustus G. Olsen, of Staten Island. Both ministers, as well as the others, congratulated the Swedish congregation upon their vigorous growth and urged upon the members a continuance of the evangelization of the Swedish people in this city.

The congregation has purchased a lot at the corner of Richmond street and Carlton avenue and will propose building a church during the coming spring.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. SMITH.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Embry Smith, of 811 West Fifth street, celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary at their home last night by entertaining about forty of their friends at a card party, followed by a supper and dancing. The house was handsomely decorated with autumn branches, plants and cut flowers. Mrs. Smith wore her wedding gown and among the guests were the members of the original wedding party. They were Mrs. Ralph De Baun, maid of honor, Mrs. Raymond Randolph and Miss Daisy Davenport, bridesmaids. The former two have married since Mrs. Smith's wedding. The ushers were Walter and W. Prince Smith.

The prizes at the card tables were awarded to Mrs. Royle Phillips, Mrs. Charles Dickson, Mrs. J. H. Andrews and Arthur Vail, Harvey Marsh and G. B. Fletcher.

Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. Before departing the guests showered congratulations upon the Mr. and Mrs. Smith and wished them more years of happy life.

Charles Zuckswortb.

Charles Zuckswortb, well known here many years ago, when he conducted a tobacco and cigar business on Park avenue, died yesterday at the Firemen's Home, in Boonton, where he had been for several years. Mr. Zuckswortb was a member of the old Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, of this city, and during the early days was active in city affairs.

GALAXY OF CAMPAIGNERS

Vivian M. Lewis, Dr. J. D. Prince and Judge Runyon to Speak Here.

ON NEXT SATURDAY EVENING.

Three gifted speakers, who combine learning, wit and eloquence in their public utterances, will be heard here on Saturday night when the Republicans will hold a monster mass meeting at Reform Hall. They are State Banking Commissioner Vivian M. Lewis, the gubernatorial nominee; Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic county, formerly speaker of the Assembly, and Judge William N. Runyon, the Congressional candidate.

The Democrats have their Dr. Woodrow Wilson and the Republicans match them with their Dr. John D. Prince, who is also a scholar in politics. The senator was formerly dean of the New York University and is now of the distinguished professor of languages in Columbia University. In recognition of his voluminous writing on historical, philological and historic-legal subjects Johns Hopkins University conferred on him the degree of doctor of philosophy. He is a decidedly entertaining talker, the kind that does not weary his audience with statistics nor bore them with glittering generalities.

All three will speak on the issues of the campaign and it is expected that Dr. Prince will devote his time to answering some of the arguments of that distinguished word-coiner and catch-phrase-maker, the president of Princeton University. Judge Runyon will speak on national issues, particularly the tariff, while Mr. Lewis will devote his attention to State issues. Music will be provided, and a special invitation is extended to the women.

Auto Hits Carriage.

An automobile driven by Gus Barfuss and carrying Constantine Vohel as a passenger, ran into a carriage driven by James Henry, of Dunellen, at the corner of Park and North avenues at 8 o'clock last night. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vail, of Dunellen, were in the carriage, but neither was hurt and the damage to the vehicle was only slight.

TABLEAUX VIVANTS ON THURSDAY NOVEMBER 3

Thursday evening, Nov. 3, Miss Elizabeth Fisher, of Swiftwater, Pa., under the auspices of the Cheerful Workers Circle of King's Daughters, will attractively arrange and pose tableaux vivants, representing the early history of New Jersey and Shakespearian scenes. She has had great success in arranging similar entertainments at many places. Among them the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, at Ogontz School and in Brooklyn and Trenton. Tickets may be obtained on and after October 15 at Armstrong's drug store and from the following, who compose the circle:

Miss Isabelle Ashwell, Mrs. J. Whitney Baker, Mrs. W. A. Bours, Jr., Miss Euphemia Bakewell, Mrs. Eva Browne, Miss Grace Burke, Mrs. J. M. Charles, Mrs. Arthur M. Colton, Miss Florence Curtis, Miss Louise Curtis, Miss Dorothy Fleming, Miss Elsie Goddard, Miss Margaret Goddard, Miss Elsie Harman, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Virginia Hegeman, Mrs. Hayden Hood, Mrs. Charles L. Hyde, Mrs. Sherman Jones, Miss Margaret Neal, Miss Margaret Mead, Miss Ellen Merrill, Mrs. Chester B. Lawrence, Jr., Mrs. Walter Righter, Mrs. R. S. Rowland, Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Georgiana H. Smith, Mrs. Lewis Squires, Miss Alice Sykes, Mrs. Boardman Tyler, Mrs. William B. Tyler, Mrs. Laurens H. VanBuren, Miss Frances VanDeventer, Miss Marguerite VanDeventer.

Gas Jet Fires Curtain.

While in the act of dressing at her home on Madison avenue last evening, Miss Clara Geder accidentally swung a gas jet against a lace curtain. A burst of flame followed and a serious fire was threatened, but prevented by the prompt arrival of assistance in response to the young woman's screams. The blazing curtain was torn down before any great damage had been occasioned.

VETERANS HOLD REUNION

Forty Survivors of 11th Regt. N. J. Vols., in Session This Afternoon.

NEW OFFICERS ARE ELECTED.

Col. John Schoonover Chosen President—After Luncheon the Vets Listen to Good Speeches.

More than forty surviving members of the Eleventh Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, are holding their annual reunion today at Reform Hall, exchanging pleasant and sad reminiscences of the Civil War days. The veterans convened at 11 o'clock, for a business session, when these officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Co. John Schoonover, Trenton; first vice-president, Alonzo V. Searing, Dover; second vice-president, William Hand, Plainfield; treasurer, Captain Charles A. Oliver, New Brunswick; secretary, Bishop Mains, adjutant Soldiers' Home, Kearney; chaplain, E. Clark Cline, Phillipsburg.

Following the meeting all adjourned to the basement of the hall, where dinner was served under the direction of the Women's Relief Corps. There was a bountiful supply of good things for everyone present. At 1 o'clock the veterans returned to the auditorium, where informal speeches were made by officers of the regiment; also by James E. Martine, Judge William N. Runyon and Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and others. Mayor Charles J. Fisk expected to speak, but was called out of the city, and a letter was received from General Daniel E. Sickles, who was the commander of the Third Corps, expressing his regret to attend, having been called away. Gen. Sickles is the only corps commander now living and the veterans were particular anxious to have him here today.

Accompanying the letter from Gen. Sickles, was a copy of a letter written to him by Lieut. Gen. James Longstreet, of the Confederate Army, which was written November 19, 1902, and which was listened to with great interest by the veterans. The letter follows:

"My Dear General Sickles:—My plan and desire was to meet you at Gettysburg on the interesting ceremony attending the unveiling of the Slocum monument; but today I find myself in no condition to keep the promise made you when last we were together. I am quite disabled from a severe hurt in one of my feet, so that I am unable to stand more than a minute or two at a time. Please express my sincere regrets to the noble Army of the Potomac, and to accept them, especially for yourself.

"On that field you made your mark that will place you prominently before the world as one of the leading figures of the most important battle of the Civil War. As a Northern veteran once remarked to me: 'General Sickles can well afford to leave a leg on that field.'

"I believe that it is now conceded that the advanced position at the peach orchard, taken by your corps and under your orders saved that battlefield to the Union cause. It was the sorest and saddest reflection of my life for many years; but, today, I can say with full satisfaction, that it was and is the best that could have come to us all, North and South; and I hope that the nation, re-united, may always enjoy the honor and glory brought to it by that grand work.

"Please offer my kindest salutations to your Governor and your fellow-comrades of the Army of the Potomac."

The only surviving Plainfield member of this regiment are Chief T. O. Doane, Thomas B. Titsworth, John Goodman and William Hand. The headquarters of the regiment were at Trenton, when it was mustered into service on quick notice when Gen. McClellan and his forces were driven back from Richmond to Washington. The work of the Eleventh Regiment is well known, as well as the sacrifice made by the veterans.

FUNERAL OF MR. MALTBY IS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral of Erastus C. Maltby was held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from his late residence on Plainfield avenue and was largely attended. Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, officiated, and during the services Judge William N. Runyon sang two selections.

There were many handsome floral tributes from relatives and friends; also from former business associates. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were W. S. Maltby, W. S. Heyniger, Benjamin Grover and Harry Schuck and Frank Ewing.

MOY'S CAMPAIGN OPENS

Bi-Partisan League Candidate Alleges There Was Corruption at Primaries.

ATTACK ON ADMINISTRATION.

Charging that there was corruption at the recent Republican primaries and because of it he was absolved from any allegience to his party, George W. V. Moy, the Bi-partisan and Democratic candidate for the mayoralty, Tuesday night presented this and other reasons as a justification for his running for the office though defeated for the Republican nomination. After making his position clear on this matter, he delivered a severe arraignment of the local administration of affairs and promised to furnish a bill of particulars for his bitter denunciation of the heads of departments.

There were some 200 voters gathered at Reform hall to hear the candidate, a goodly proportion of whom were Democrats. City Clerk James T. MacMurray, until the defeat of Charles N. Fowler for the Congressional nomination one of the strongest so-called "machine" leaders, was conspicuous in the audience. Others included Howard C. Tracy, who has persistently fought the Republican organization and worked for Fowler and Moy at the Republican primaries; R. Henry Depew, who was defeated by Charles J. Fisk for the Republican primary nomination four years ago, and P. J. Reville, a Democrat, who once worked in the postoffice. As president of the league Mr. Depew acted as chairman, and he told his audience that "we have been fooled at every turn by the machine and the bosses."

Mr. Moy said:

"I am a candidate for Mayor as announced by me on a platform sometime ago. I am informed that Mr. Mac Cardell states that I am to receive a good licking, and as he is popularly supposed to carry the vote of the entire city in his vest pocket, perhaps I had better write 'finis' now, and yet it may be found that there are a sufficiency of independent voters in the city of Plainfield to elect an independent citizen. I feel encouraged to believe that it is so, and therefore I shall not give up yet.

"I learn from the opposition, the standpatters, that my platform is too narrow; a radical, and that I will raise hell if I get in there." I won't take it in with me, but I certainly will do something if I find it there. From the view point of the standpatter and the regular, job holder, anyone who sets up opposition to their personal wishes and desires is not to be tolerated. Party harmony must be maintained. Stand by the organization is always the cry, and anyone who fails to stand by the machine is a traitor.

"I have been informed that I am making a fatal mistake and that I now need look for nothing from the machine, that politically I am dead and buried; all of which strange to say does not depress me. Let me confess to you that it would be impossible for me or for a man of my views to be a machine candidate. If I had wanted that questionable honor I should have gone to the machine, and have made known my request; I should have gotten down on my knees and held up my hands for the shakles; I should have surrendered my conscience and my liberty, my right of free speech and of free action, and every other right that an American citizen holds most dear. Defeat is not pleasant but defeat with honor, is to me immeasurably sweeter and more to be cherished than could be any victory growing out of a surrender of my independence. It has been charged that I am inconsistent; that I should abide by the primary, and if I had gone into that primary as a regular it might perhaps be said with some show of reason that I was bound by it, providing, of course, that the primary was an honest primary, free from bribery, free from corruption, a conscientious expression of the people's will.

"Although when I look back into the history of this city, and find that my opponent some years ago, not being satisfied with the regular Republican primary, joined hands with our friends, the Democrats, entered the lists on what was known as the People's Union ticket, with a Democrat at the head of the ticket, which ticket was elected over the regular Republican ticket, I do not look upon this as a criticism of Mr. Coriell's conduct at that time, he was perfectly free to act as he did, but in view of this fact criticism from the opposition of me in not abiding by the result of the primary would be in poor grace if I were a regular pretending to abide by machine rule, but as I am an independent the criticism comes with still less force.

"I have also criticised for having accepted the Democratic nomination, which was given to me as an endorsement of my candidacy. It was unsolicited by me, and I have accepted it, after I had concluded to make an independent run. If you will go back to 1906 you will find that Mayor Fisk was endorsed by the Democratic party and that he accepted the Democratic endorsement. I may say, however, that Mr. Fisk's acceptance of the endorsement given him had no bearing whatever on my action.

"I am informed that Mr. Mason W. Tyler was endorsed by the Democratic party, and that he also accepted their endorsement. I cite these instances for the benefit of those who require a precedent for their every act. As for myself I accepted because I believed it was right. One man, Mr. Montgomery, has stated in an open letter to the Courier News that I was trying to work my way into the Democratic party.

"I have heard of Democrats working their way into the Republican party in Plainfield (Mr. Montgomery for instance) who first ran on the Democratic ticket for Council and was defeated. He then promptly became a Republican, and as such is now serving the city as a member of the Common Council. Truly we may say what is in a name.

"I have said that if I had been a regular candidate I might perhaps be bound, but the primary had been free of corruption. I am in possession of information which satisfies me beyond a doubt that money was freely used on primary day. Two witnesses have indicated to me that they saw a man at which the witnesses were stationed, and there some transaction would take place, and finally by close observation one witness observed the passing over of a one dollar bill to the voter, who immediately receiving the bill spread it out in plain sight and looked it over. This incident standing alone satisfies me that the primary was not conducted honestly and therefore binds no one.

"That bribery has been common in Plainfield is further evidenced to me by the statement of a man at one time prominent in political affairs here made a few days ago, and in the presence of a witness, to the effect that he had bought lots of votes. To this I replied, your brother told me sometime ago that he also bought votes. It would seem as though it ran in your family. There is also another question in connection with the conduct of the primary that appears to be very suspicious and which is now under investigation, and concerning which I will speak at a future time.

"The fact is that this machine is the result of discontent and dissatisfaction. The cry of discontent is sweeping this country from Maine to California, arising from the conditions that have been brought about and are the direct result of machine rule. You may begin at the top, receiving Cannon's machine in the House of Representatives, from which you may come down to the various States with their State machines and State bosses, and then to the county machines and county bosses, until you reach the city, with its machine and its self-constituted bosses. The people, the poor people at any rate, and God must love us because he has so many of us around, have become very weary, very weary indeed, of the results of the all together selfish dominion of the party machine as now constituted and the bosses who make up the machine.

"I do not think there has been a nomination of any importance in Union county for the past ten or more years, unless suggested by or acceptable to the Kean interests. Who owns the water plant? the Kean interests, with Bergen. Who owns the gas plant? the Public Service Corporation, with Bergen. How are these interests to be protected; by electing men subservient to these interests. Where do the people come in; the people don't come in, they don't count. I have said, I have said that we were discontented, and do you know that discontent with regard to wrongs suffered means progress; it means doing away with those wrongs.

"Discontent was responsible for the signing of Magna Charta by King John at Runny Mede which gave to the English people their rights; it was responsible for the Boston Tea Party; for the Declaration of Independence which gave this American people their rights, and for the development of Abraham Lincoln, who gave to the salves of this country their rights. Discontent is therefore not a bad thing. Plainfield people are discontented with a number of things. We are discontented with extravagance, evidenced in various ways, as remarked by me in a speech I made a few weeks ago. They are discontented because the taxes are not legally assessed and fairly apportioned. They are discontented because of favoritism in the public departments of the city; they are discontented because various city officials are receiving double salaries and fees in addition to salaries, because some officials are holding two jobs and drawing double pay, because we are discontented with certain officials because some of the officials do not give their time and attention to the performance of their duties to the city, because some of the officials of this city seem to be possessed of the idea that Plainfield is their private property. You say this is a strong array of facts, can you prove your case, and I say, I can, and I say, I will; and I want it distinctly understood that I am not criticising the officials who draw salaries, but only the law that permits this condition of affairs to exist.

"First. Why should the chief of the fire department and of the police department be permitted to take pleasure trips paid for with the people's money; whence comes the authority?

"Second. Why should't all officers of the police force receive the same treatment from the department; that every officer on the force should be treated the same as his fellow; he should be given to understand that his is a respectable responsible position, and that he need fear no man, nor be subservient to any man, so long as he properly performs his duty. This would mean pride in their work and efficient service.

"There are a number of officials who are receiving two salaries, several who receive salaries and fees in addition thereto, and such positions that should be abolished, and some who take the city's pay and hold positions elsewhere; all of whom are on a list I have."

Referring to the above offices in the city where salaries are paid for nothing Mr. Moy said that the overseer-of-the poor was drawing $800 a year while there was a man and his wife at the poorhouse doing all the work. He also declared that City Clerk James T. MacMurray had told him that he had received $1,000 in fees of the city clerk's office should be turned over to the city. He also wanted to know why there was a city physician drawing $400 a year as such and the same man was getting $1,200 more as a police surgeon, while the clerk to the assessors fills that job and also is assistant tax collector for which he gets the munificent sum of $750. Other instances of a similar character were mentioned in a song (which Mr. Moy did not read or continuing, he said:

"I believe that every official should be properly compensated and compelled to do his work, that the fee system should be abolished absolutely, as a needless hardship upon the people. That all unnecessary offices should be abolished, that no official should hold two jobs at one time, and that when an official has charges brought against him for misconduct in office, or for ineffiency he should be dismissed; I have no use for whitewash. I object to this city being run by a Get-Together Club, or any kind of a club.

"I cannot express too strongly my conviction with regard to the water supply question. Two committees have examined into it and have recommended city ownership and control. New Brunswick is something of an object lesson in this regard. In conversation with a former mayor of that city a few days ago, he stated, I think, that the city had cleared $40,000 last year on the sale of water but they are now brought to a realization of the fact that they have not taken sufficient precautions to guarantee a continuance of this supply, and that the present supply is polluted. I think we are in no great danger of pollution of an underground supply, but that the supply is being rapidly depleted, is beyond all doubt and millions of gallons are being diverted daily.

"There is one matter that I omitted to mention and that is an increase in the membership of the Board of Education. The law provides a method whereby a board of ten members may be chosen by appointed. I am firmly convinced that we should have a more representative board, and that it should be bipartisan in character.

"I believe in the utmost publicity in all matters in which the people have an interest. It seems unnecessary to attend a session of a public body for the purpose of hearing an open discussion of public affairs and then have the entire membership slip off into a side room for secret discussion of matters before them, and presented to you these matters as being of sufficient importance to interest you, and to open up a frank discussion. There are other matters to be touched upon, and to which I shall refer from time to time before the end of the campaign. This is not a party fight; it is the joining of hands in an effort to adjust local conditions which are rapidly becoming intolerable.

"In order to win we must have help. Silent help is good as far as it goes, but is not nearly as valuable as the aggressive variety. We have no apologies to make for the stand we have taken. We are doing that which we believe is right. If success come from our united efforts we shall be gratified because of the triumph of right, and I believe we will with because eventually right always prevails."

"If elected I shall act without fear or favor. I will have no favoritism and I will enforce the law. If you want that kind of a mayor you may safely vote for me. If you don't want that kind of a mayor I will be glad to stay home."

In introducing Mr. Moy, Mr. Depew said in part: We have been fought at every turn by the machine and the bosses. No matter how good our measures have been they have been met with opposition, and when of them have been adopted by the powers that be. The machine reminds us of calves which when prodded jump to one side or the other, but never go ahead if they can help it.

"Two years ago we (the Republicans) were invited to attend a mass meeting at the theatre where John W. Griggs and Foster M. Voorhees were to speak. We were thrown down—Griggs used a knife and Voorhees used a club and that is what we got. Then what did they do at Trenton? William P. Martin was to have been nominated for Governor. He worked hard for it and what did he get? What happened to Everett Colby? He received the nomination at the primaries, but he was told out for a sheriff.

"Cannon was elected Speaker of the house by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats. The Pennsylvania Railroad is a bi-partison organization. They are employing both Democrats, I hear, and why? So that they can get both parties to vote for measures that they want passed."

CHRISTAIN ENDEAVOR PARADE IN TRENTON

With a pardae by several hundred "juniors," for whom all street traffic halted, and an inspirational address by the Rev. Dr. Francis Clark, or "Father Endeavor," as he is better known in religious circles, a three days' convention of the Christian Endeavorers in New York City was closed at Trenton Friday evening.

The parade of the children was an unusual spectacle and attracted much attention, particularly when the little folks unfurled small American flags and waved them frantically at the admiring throngs along the sidewalk.

Dr. Clerk in his address told of the forming of the first Christian Endeavor Society about thirty years ago, when he was prompted to do something to rouse his young people to religious activity. Since then the organization has spread to all parts of the world.

Another speaker was the Rev. Dr. Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, of New York, whose subject was "Weaknesses of the Christian Church of Today." Lack of coherent reason in religious conviction, lack of actual experience of Christ, the insufficiency and unnotableness of Christian superiority and the expulsion of God from the life were the four points dicussed by him.

The Rev. Dr. A. Pohlman, of the Temple Lutheran church, of Philadelphia, spoke on "The Man in the Making."

RAT INVASION FEARED IN UPPER MONTCLAIR.

The piles of old cans on the Garretson farm, in Upper Montclair, which have been a source of complaint to residents for years, will soon be removed, but people in the vicinity now fear an invasion of their homes by rats. The town authorities, by whom the farm is leased as a garbage dump, have made arrangements to bury some of the material in carload lots to a firm in Jersey City. A large proportion of the waste receptacles have been on the ground so many years that they are now valueless to any one. This part of the rubbish will be buried.

In the recent appeal made to the State Board of Health by residents of Upper Montclair and the Brookdale section of Bloomfield that the Montclair garbage farm nuisance be abated, it was stated that the old can dump is a breeding place of millions of rats, which fed on the decaying refuse in the dumps. One of the objects in removing the old cans is to exterminate the rodents. It is believed by many in the immediate neighborhood that this can not be done unless the animals are poisoned. Mrs. William Kaesther, of Grove street, says that she has been fighting for years to keep rats out of her house, but that new arrivals from the old dumping ground can piles take the place of those killed.

The claim is made that unless some steps are taken to kill the rats before the cans are removed the rodents, deprived of their present home, will invade the whole Upper Montclair and Brookdale neighborhoods.

He's lively as a cricket
And he doesn't care a rap.
The Carlists all may threaten
And confusion fill the air;
But Phonny pulls the fire alarm
And chuckles at the scare.

Time was when kings were busy.
But Phonny's job is play;
He's giddy as a yearling
And most uncommon gay.
He lets the ancient kingdom
Her many burdens bear,
And deftly pulls the fire alarm
And chuckles at the scare.

JR. O. U. A. M. CELEBRATION

Rev. J. M. Reid and Others Speak at Twenty-Third Anniversary Observance.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL STRONG.

Its Assets Amount to $6,000—W. B. LaRue and W. H. Miers Among Those Who Congratulate the Organization.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., celebrated its twenty-third anniversary in Junior Hall, Thursday night, the affair being enjoyed by a large number of members, as well as those of the other councils of the city. Among those present who spoke were Rev. J. Morgan Reid, of Pennington Seminary, State treasurer of the order; State Vice-Councilor W. B. LeRue, of Bound Brook, and State Council Secretary W. H. Miers, of Trenton.

The program was in charge of Councilor Derr Silvious, and during the evening a short sketch of the council's growth was presented by the secretary. The council was instituted twenty-three years ago in Sons of Temperance Hall, which was then over the City National Bank, and it was the first one of the order to be organized in this city. The council has continued to grow until today it has a membership of 293 and new members are constantly being received.

Financially, the council is in excellent condition. It has a $2,000 building loan share expiring in the spring and altogether the council is worth in the neighborhood of $6,000. Its funds have been invested in building loan shares, bring good returns.

After the congratulatory speeches and presentation of reports, there was a social hour during which refreshments were served under the direction of the good and welfare committee, of which George D. Wilson is the chairman.

MARTINE DECLARES HE IS HIS PARTY'S CHOICE

Declaring that he is as much the nominee of the Democratic party for United States Senator as is Dr. Woodrow Wilson for governor, James E. Martine, said today that in the event of a Democratic Legislature, his party on joint ballot can not and dare not ignore his claim to succeed John Kean at Washington. As for the story that former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., accomplished the nomination of Dr. Wilson solely to make himself solid for the senatorship forecasting a Democratic landslide that would put the party in power in the Legislature, the "farmer citizen" declared he didn't care a fig for Mr. Smith's alleged aim. He takes to himself a share of the credit in the gubernatorial selection.

"I feel that I am as much a candidate before the people of the State of New Jersey for the position of United States Senator as is Dr. Wilson for our governor," said Mr. Martine. "At the primaries I received nearly 50,000 votes, expressive of the people's will, an overwhelming majority over my opponent, Mr. McDermit. This was quite an extra declaration of preference as the governor obtained at the State convention. I don't care a fig about this story of 'Jim' Smith's plans. He is dead to me as such sat in the State convention now to be voted for the platform which declared in favor of the election of United States Senator by the people. I am unwilling to believe that after such action he would plot to defeat the people's will. My contest is a serious matter. Without arrogating to myself superior wisdom, I feel that I am intellectually and morally as well fitted as either John Kean or Frank O. Briggs."

MISSION BAND.

Trinity Society Discusses Plans for Season.

The Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, held its first fall meeting at the church Friday afternoon, when plans for the coming season were discussed, and the work of preparing a Christmas box to be sent to a western missionary was begun. There was a large attendance of members and much enthusiasm was shown in the work of the band. Mrs. Leonard S. Smith, president, was in the chair.

It was decided to hold an entertainment about the middle of November, something similar to the "Country School" affair, held last year, and Charles L. Lewis will have charge. Members of the band will take various parts in the entertainment and it is hoped to make it fully as successful as the one of last year.

YOUNG PROFESSOR DIES

James M. Brown, of Leal's School, Succumbs to Heart Failure.

FOUND PROSTRATE IN STREET.

Leaves Widowed Mother for Whom He Had Sacrificed Himself—Was Graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Ct.

Just graduated from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., and only employed at Leal's school for a week, James M. Brown succumbed to an attack of illness on the street in front of the Park Avenue Baptist church last Saturday night and died two days later. The medical men who were called in to attend the young professor were unable to diagnose the case until after his death. Heart failure was the immediate cause.

The young professor's mother, who lives in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was notified and she immediately came to Plainfield to take care of the body, which was taken to Poughkeepsie for burial.

According to the story obtained by a reporter for this paper, the young man had been in financial straits and it was told of him that he had sacrificed everything for his mother, a widow, even going so far as to deny himself proper nourishment in order that she might be well taken care of, it was this fact that probably caused the young man to succumb. His vitality had been sapped through work and lack of nourishment.

The mother of the young man was heartbroken and it was only by the exercise of great fortitude that she was able at all to withstand her bereavement. It was said this morning that Professor Brown was endowed with unusual attainments and had already made a good impression among the students of the school as well as with the headmaster, Mr. Leal, and his death was deeply deplored.

Drs. E. S. Krans, J. S. Wooley and Wm. H. Anthony used their best efforts to save the young man.

Damage estimated at $150 was occasioned by a fire at the home of Spencer Conway, colored, 549 West Fourth street, Friday night. It was caused by an overheated stove being too near a wooden partition and had made its way to the ground floor when intercepted. The loss is covered by insurance.

There was no one at home when the fire broke out except a small boy asleep on the attic floor. When he awoke the smoke was so dense and stifling he was unable to get down stairs and smashed a window to get air. His cries gave the alarm and he was still hanging out of the opening when the fire men arrived in response to a call from box 34. He was bewildered by the conflicting cries of the crowd below until Dan Keiderling, driver for Chief Doane, climbed to the porch roof and directed him to jump. The boy did so and landed in Keiderling's arms without injury to himself but his rescuer received a sprained ankle through the suddenness of the impact.

The house was tightly shut up on every floor and the smoke was so dense the firemen had difficulty in getting to the flames. They were driven back several times before three chemical streams were finally gotten in to play. The blaze was entirely extinguished in about half an hour.

A. O. U. W. LODGE HEARS STIRRING ADDRESSES

Columbia Lodge, No. 59, Ancient Order United Workmen, received a visit Friday night from Grand Master Workman Clopper, of Camden, and there were delegations present from Upchurch Lodge, of Westfield; Central Lodge, No. 48, of this city, and from Millington and Basking Ridge. It was one of the largest gatherings of Workmen held in this city in a long time and much interest was aroused in the work of the order.

Grand Master Workman Clopper made a stirring address, telling the progress of the order and congratulating Plainfield members, and there were also interesting remarks by Past Grand Master Workman V. W. Nash, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Grand Inner Guard J. W. A. Bauerschs, of this city, and John Haas, of Millington.

Following the speech-making, refreshments were served, cigars were passed and the members enjoyed an informal musical program furnished by the members.

ECHOES OF CHARTER DAY.

Echoes of Plainfield's Charter Day celebration were heard at the October meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday, when the bill for $420.76 for badges used on that memorable (?) occacion, was presented and was followed by a lively discussion in which Williams Jeffery, Eugene M. Laing and Mayor C. J. Fisk took part. Mr. Jeffery said that the bill was a legacy left to the board, and the members were in honor bound to meet the obligation.

It was explained by the president that $200 had been paid on account of this bill, leaving a balance of about $220. He suggested that an entertainment of some sort be arranged to liquidate the indebtedness. He named George M. Christian as chairman of a committee for that purpose and said he would select the other members later.

Later in the evening when E. M. Laing appeared, there was further discussion concerning the bill, in which Mr. Laing had some unpleasant things to say of the National Press Club of New York, publishers of the official program, stating that though they had kept their agreement, the badge bill would have been paid long ago. Mr. Laing said that the committee had not received a dollar from the National Press, their latest proposition being to settle with the board for $51.62.

Mr. Jeffery admitted that the National Press "has it on" the board and there is nothing left to do but pay the bill. He said that there were so many loopholes in the contract with the New York concern that he could easily crawl out of its agreement.

A motion offered by Mayor Fisk that the bill be referred to the executive committee with power to settle, finally prevailed.

Mr. Jeffery then took the floor and opened a discussion of matters pertaining to the fire department. He had prepared a long list of desired improvements, including new mat*tresses for several fire-houses, a full* complement of horses for the department, new flooring for headquarters' house, a steamer for the East End house, better water pressure, more regular firemen with increased pay and more fire hydrants. He then suggested the adoption of a resolution to be sent to the Common Council favoring these improvements. It was seconded, but not adopted.

Responding to Mr. Jeffery, Mayor Fisk took up each suggested improvement, calling attention to the fact that new mattresses had been ordered, new furnishings were about to be installed in the West Second street house, but owing to the fact that this house will not warrant it, the fire committee refrained from spending any more money there than is absolutely necessary. Some day, it is hoped, a modern house will be erected.

Regarding a steamer for the East End house, Mr. Fisk said that the committee would like to equip headquarters with an auto-steamer and send the present steamer to the East End. As for the hose, he said that the committee plans to buy one thousand feet each year. He recognized that greater water pressure is needed and is awaiting until James Fuertes, the water expert, presents his report, before taking the matter up at greater length. As for more regular firemen with increased pay, he advised leaving that matter for the consideration of the fire committee.

The fire department matters being disposed of, the question of better lighting facilities for the business section was received. In the opinion *of Mr. Jeffery an attractive and in*expensive system should be established. He suggested Tungsten-lamps, about three on each pole, distributed about one hundred feet apart, alternately on both sides of the business streets. It was stated that on that basis, 168 lamps, the number specified at first, would cost about $1,640, and it was believed that the plans could be modified.

B. Frank Coriell advised the exercise of care in making this improvement, and it was also suggested that the plan be made to improve one street at a time. Mr. Fisk explained that lights are a special tax and the Common Council cannot exceed the levy. He suggested that the matter be taken up with the light company before the appropriation for next year is fixed. Personally, he favored an entirely new light contract, one that would bring about better results and more uniformity in the arrangement of the 990 lights.

The latter part of the evening was devoted to an illustrated talk, through the use of charts, on "The English Phonetic Alphabet," or "Anglophone," by Dr. J. W. Shearer, of Virginia. He spoke for nearly an hour, explaining the many intricate points in the English language as written and spoken, and it proved to be very interesting.

MR. BAXTER EXPLAINS CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles J. Baxter, in answer to a number of inquiries as to the proper interpretation of "corporal punishment" in public schools, which practice is prohibited by the State laws, gives his views against such infliction and warns the teachers not to indulge in the same.

Mr. Baxter says that any means of punishment inflicting physical pain, whether with the hand or rod, or causing undue physical weariness, is corporal punishment. Standing on some foot, holding down a nail, holding any form of weight with the extended arms, or any similar test of endurance, is corporal punishment, according to Mr. Baxter's interpretation of the words as applied to school discipline, regulation or management.

This question is frequently asked of the superintendent, and in some instances the teachers do not agree with the opinion. It is their idea that they have the right to moderately correct the child or pupil, but when they lay hands on the child they are liable to dismissal and prosecution, says Mr. Baxter, and it is this that he seeks to avoid by freely giving his opinion.

PARK AVE. BAPTISTS ENJOY ANNUAL SOCIAL

Instrumental and vocal music, recitations and short addresses together, with sociability, combined to make the social at the Park Avenue Baptist church Friday a delightful affair. It marked the resumption of activities for the fall and winter and every department of church work was represented in the large gathering of people. Everyone was enthusiastic in again taking up the work under the leadership of their pastor, Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire.

During the evening there was an informal program which included banjo selections by Fred VanEpps, vocal selections by Master Chester Chamberlain; recitations by Miss Arline Brown and soprano solos by Miss Bechtle. In addition there were short addresses by Rev. Mr. Maguire, the pastor, and Rev. F. St. John Fitch, of this city, in which they spoke of the promising future for the church, hoping that all would work together for one common end—that of the salvation of souls and the betterment of humanity in general.

Following the program there was a social hour and refreshments were served under the direction of the Ladie' Aid Society, of which Mrs. John H. Doane is the president. The various members assisted in the social features of the evening.

There will be two running events as well, and prizes will be awarded in each of the four races.

"TABLEAUX VIVANTS" THURSDAY NIGHT, NOV. 3.

Under the auspices of the Cheerful Works' Circle of the King's Daughters, an entertainment entitled, "Tableaux Vivants," will be given at the Plainfield High School auditorium, Thursday evening, November 3. The program promises to be unique and interesting. It will be given under the management of Miss Elizabeth Fisher, of Swift-water Pa.

Miss Fisher has had much experience in arranging "tableaux vivants," and these are to portray famous characters from Shakespearian history, comedies and tragedies, and also represent scenes from the early history of New Jersey. Tickets can be obtained at Armstrong's pharmacy on and after October 15.

VIVIAN M. LEWIS' RECORD

HE IS ALWAYS ON THE JOB.

Judging the Future by the Past, the Voters are Assured of Strict Attention to Duties when Elected.

Now that the Republican convention has named State Banking and Insurance Commissioner Vivian Lewis as the standard bearer of the party in the present gubernatorial campaign, there has been much searching of his record as a legislator, the idea being to get at what he has done in the past to show what he can be reasonably expected to do in the future. The old proverb that there is no way of judging of the future by the record of the past has led the investigators to go through the years 1899, 1900 and 1901 which were the years Mr. Lewis served in the county of Passaic as an assemblyman, and they found that for the three entire sessions the present gubernatorial candidate is recorded in his seat every time the speaker's gavel fell in opening the house.

This record was not approached by any other legislator for the three years. In consequence the friends of Mr. Lewis point to his attention to public business during years when there was no thought of his being governor of New Jersey as a certainty of his attention to the business of the people when he is elected governor of the State.

Last year, the press made many allusions to the record of Assemblyman Benjamin H. Crosby, of Ocean county, now parole agent of the New Jersey State Reformatory, when it was discovered that Mr. Crosby had not missed one session of the three years he was in the Legislature. Besides the record of Mr. Lewis and that of Mr. Crosby, there is not one other man, so far known, who went through a session of legislative work without missing an attendance roll call.

A further search of the records of the legislative years when Mr. Lewis was in the harness as representative of the people in the house of assembly shows that he was seldom out of his seat. During the year 1899 the house acted on 196 house bills, 140 senate bills and 3 senate joint resolutions, and Mr. Lewis is recorded on all of these measures except 12.

During the 1900 session Mr. Lewis is not recorded on but 12 bills although the house in that session acted on 246 house bills, 121 senate measures and two house and two senate joint resolutions.

For the session of 1901, the year Mr. Lewis was the leader of the house he failed to be recorded only on three measures, although the house that year acted on 246 house bills, 134 senate measures, two house joint resolutions and one senate joint resolution.

A search of the bills on which Mr. Lewis is not recorded shows that the measures were unimportant ones, and that likely he had been called out of his seat by the chief executive or some one else when they went through.

The friends of Mr. Lewis are delighted with the showing of diligence on his part in executing the business of the people and are claiming that this record is unsurpassed by any one.

They argue that such a record shows the man determined to give of his best thought to the people who elected him a representative, and, judging by this past, the future of Mr. Lewis as chief executive will be marked by as strict attention to the duties of the highest office in the gift of the people of New Jersey.

SOCIETY AT RECEPTION GIVEN AT 'RED COTTAGE

The first of two afternoon receptions held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Charles Sykes, of Fanwood, for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Francis Sykes, who was married early in August. It was a charming affair and was attended by a large number of society people from this city and Fanwood. The home was attractively decorated with autumn leaves, while pink roses were used in the dining room.

Mrs. Charles Sykes and Mrs. Thomas Francis Sykes received the guests, while Miss Ellen Merrill, of this city, and Mrs. Ross Mersereau, of Ridgewood, poured tea in the dining room. They were assisted by Miss Dorothy Fleming, Miss Isabelle Ashwell and Miss Alice Brown, of this city, and Miss Jane Walker, of New York. The second reception will be held Wednesday afternoon, October 12.

Chas. Suhr Returns to Theatre.

Charles Suhr, who furnished the music at The Plainfield theatre last season, has returned to his position, succeeding Prof. Denny, who opened this season. Music will be made a feature during the season.

WHAT IRRIGATION HAS DONE FOR COLORADO.

Irrigation is the Aladdin's lamp that has transformed Colorado from a mining to a farming State. Naturally, the immigration board's attention is concentrated on advertising the achievements and possibilities in the scientific application of water to Colorado soil. Then, fresh attention has been called to Colorado's importance agriculturally through the reclamation work now being carried on by the general Government and by private enterprise.

Up to January, in 1910, States a writer in The Review of Reviews, the government had expended in reclamation by irrigatio nin the State $2,956,614 of the total appropriation of $9,865,000. The remainder is to be used as soon as it is available. The expenditure by private enterprises has amounted to several times this sum.

"Today," remarks Governor Shafroth, "Colorado has 2,317,255 acres under irrigation, practically all of them producing the most remarkable crops in the history of the country."

Back in the other years, when Colorado was largely a burnt and desert land, many small and irresponsible irrigation projects were launched which were doomed to failure. Such projects have embraced perhaps 50,000 acres up to date. They, however, were largely born in the days before irrigation took its place as a science. No government enterprise has ever failed, nor have any organized under what is termed an irrigation district. This is formed under the laws of the State, and under it the farmers and land owners of the district come together and vote upon the proposal of assessing themselves for the expenses necessary to irrigate.

While there are no specific records available, it is estimated that practically all of the 175,200,000 acres, for the reclamation of which the various irrigation districts have been formed, have become tillable. John F. Field, a Denver civil engineer, who has given special attention to the subject, calculates that the storage of flood waters in immense reservoirs for use in the dry periods would allow a further development of from 400,000 to 500,000 acres.

Given a certain situation calling for quick thought and action, what would you do?

This was the question put to five women yesterday, members of a club which was lunching together in a cozy little tearoom.

"If you hadn't sat up and saw flames coming from the window of an occupied room of that office building opposite and knew that you yourself and all the people around you were in the greatest danger, what would you do?

"I should excuse myself quietly and 'phone to the fire department," answered the first.

"I shouldn't do that," said the second. "It might cause a panic when the people in the office building saw the engines. I should 'phone instead to the superintendent of the building and have him get the tenants out quickly."

"I'm afraid I shouldn't be so cool as all that," exclaimed the third, "I should just jump and scream "Fire."

"Well," remarked the fourth, "I know I'd simply faint with fright on the spot."

"And I," said the fifth, "should tell you all quietly about it and ask you what to do."

I wonder? I know what I should do myself. I should sit there without worrying and wait for the firemen to get both me and the people opposite. I know that buildings of that sore nowadays are always fireproof.

TESTS FOR LINEN.

Great-grandmother, were she here today, would attend the linen sales armed with a good magnifying glass and through this she would scan the threads to see that they lay flat and close, as linen threads should do.

Then she would wet a corner of the material with the tips of her fingers and expect to see moisture appear very quickly on the other side. Finally she would crumple a corner of it to make sure there was no dressing of chalk, scan the threads again to make sure that warp and woof were of equal quality, and then, no doubt, she would nalst on buying that which so many people in the cotton districts still do.

"Six pounds of linen sheeting" does sound a queer order, but if this fashion of purchasing linen by weight were revived, granted that the material is free from the heavy dressings of chalk and lime which now delude buyers, there would be some chance of once again having family linen to hand down to granddaughters.

TEETH CLEANING.

Do it.
Do it often.
Do it thoroughly.
Do it with regularity.
Tooth powder costs but little.
Very good powders are made at home.

The tooth brush should be firm, but not too stiff.

Any discoloration will disappear before powdered pumice applied on a bit of wood.

THE FREAKY HOBBLE; ITEMS OF INSTRUCTION

"Please be seated and don't interrupt me. Don't speak don't disturb me in any way; and—don't look!"

These commands burst upon the ears of a friend who called upon an actress and was shown into her drawing-room.

"Sit down; try not to look surprised, and—well, as a special favor, I'll let you watch me," said the actress, as the friend stood regarding her with amazed eyes. "What am I learning to do? I'm learning to hobble, of course.

"Why? Because in my new play there is a comedy woman who always wears the latest oddities.

"Do I like it? I do not, and if I were the audience I would boo it off the stage, but as it is I am helpless. The lady is in financial troubles because of her extravagance in dress and there is only from her modiste. In one scene I stand and read aloud the items, and one item is a hobble gown, price at present unmentionable; and there I am—I must hobble or die.

"I loathe it. I have a friend, an actress, who is pigeon-toed. On the stage she subdues the tendency to pigeon-toe a little, but in the street she strikes out and toes in to her heart's content. The first time she put on a hobble skirt she donned it in fear and trembling, for her modiste told her how difficult it was to walk in it without tripping; but to her astonishment nothing was easier. She walked at once and so proudly that she was a model to walkers. The modiste told her it was because she was pigeon-toed.

"If you are going to hobble prettily you must master these items:

"You must be quite loose around the waist line, as you can't be tied in around the belt and around the ankles too.

"If you want to hobble you must learn to take short but quite decided steps. They are not exactly mincing, but they are not long. They are the brisk little steps of the military man who must keep in step with a man shorter than himself. It is almost a repressed step.

"To hobble picturesquely you must walk slowly. The woman who hurries in a hobble skirt is lost.

"The woman who positively cannot wear a hobble is the tall woman who strikes her knees out as she walks. The hobbler must learn to keep her knees to herself, so to speak.

"All hobble shoes should have a brilliant polish; polished shoes look small.

"Hobble shoes should be very long and have small toes, for the length of the foot does not show as conspecuously as the breadth. Long, narrow shoes, stuffed at the toes with cotton, are the ideal thing for those who have been tempted to hobble."

EMBROIDERED LETTERS.

"Do you try to introduce some novelty into the embroidered initials on household linen?" a harassed housewife of artistic tendencies said to one recently.

Well, here are a few suggestions. Besides the regulation old English and script letters, there are long French or Venetian letters; squat, rounded Chinese ones, with the letters run into each other, giving the entire name of the owner in a little space as the initials or monogram usually takes up; thin square, willow letters; long, pointed old Irish ones. The assortment is almost endless; and any book on illuminating and lettering will give plenty of further ideas for the embroiderer.

Besides, the letters may be worked in various ways—solid, outline, seeded, or with any combination of these. The really original needlework will take long to exhaust the lettering possibilities that lie at the end and adapt what she sees to the capabilities of her needle and her art.

CORRESPONDING.

For some girls there seems to be a special fascination about an aimless and silly correspondence with every man they have ever met, even those in the same city as themselves. This correspondence is always useless, and is likely to degenerate into a false and pernicious sentimentalism.

There is no reason why a man and a girl who are on approximately friendly terms should not occasionally write to each other of their doings and those of their common friends, when the two live in different towns, when each has interesting experiences and opinons to give, and when the girl's mother knows and likes the man. But this mere writing for the sake of writing, indulged in by so many young girls simply, it would seem, for the joy of being able to write to and receive letters from men is a harmful and ridiculous practice that should be brought to a speedy end by those in authority over the girl.

A Mere Looker-on.

"Freddy failed to propose?"

"No, worse than that. I saw a great bargain in shoes and had a hole in one of my stockings."—Exchange.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

HERE THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20.

Three Sessions are to be Held at First M. E. Church—Rev. John Y. Brock Among List of Speakers.

Sunday-school workers here have received copie s of the provisional program for the annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association, to be held in the First M. E. church, Thursday, October 20, at which all of the Sunday-schools of the city and county will be represented. There will be three sessions, 10 o'clock in the morning, 2 o'clock in the afternoon and 7:30 o'clock in the evening. This will be the first time in several years that the convention has been held in Plainfield.

The theme for the morning session will be "The Preparation of the Teacher," and will be opened with devotions by Rev. John Y. Broker, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, followed with greetings by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson. Rev. S G. Snowden, of Elizabeth, recording secretary, will present the report of the executive committee, and Rev. C. C. Woodruff, of Rahway, will give the report of the Teacher Training department, to be followed with an address on "How Every Sunday-school May Have Trained Teachers," by L. H. Koehler, State secretary. There will then conduct an open conference.

The theme for the afternoon session will be "The Intermediate Department," and this program will be followed:

2:00, devotional service; 2:10, report of the county secretary-treasurer and the distribution of certificates, G. M. Gabler; 2:25, report of the elementary department. Miss A. A. Valentine, Elizabeth; 2:40, address, "The Next Step in Graduation," Miss A. B. Hamlin, Newark; 2:55, address, "The Challenge of Adolescence," Rev. M. S. Littlefield, Brooklyn; 3:45, address, "The Superintendent of the Intermediates," Mrs. W. L. Smith, East Orange; 4:00, "The Intermediate Boy," J. L. Alexander, New York; 4:35, report of the home department, Mrs. A. W. Karnell, Union; 4:45 convention business; 5:00, song, prayer and benediction; 5:15-6, conferences: Intermediate, M. S. Littlefield; organized adult, J. E. Church; "Work with Boys," L. H. Koehler; "The Boy Scouts," J. L. Alexander.

The theme of the evening session will be "The Sunday-school and World Evangelism," and the program will be as follows:

7:30, devotional service; 7:45, reports of the auditing committee and committee on resolutions; 7:55 offering for the work of the missionary department, Miss Harriett Halloway; 8:15, address, R. E. Diffendorfer, New York; closing service with report of enrollment committee; 9:15, adjournment.

Both luncheon and supper will be served in the church by a large committee of women from the various Sunday-schools of the city.

The local Y. M. C. A. has appointed Secretary H. E. Parker and Henry W. Herman, of the board of Directors, as delegates to the triennial convention of the North American Y. M. C. A. at Toronto, Can., October 28 to 31. It promises to be the most important gathering of the kind ever held in the United States or Canada, and will draw many of the most noted literary and religious workers in the country.

The list of speakers already announced includes Dr. John R. Mott, of New York. Dr. James L. Gordon, of Winnepeg; Hon. J. McDonald, Toronto; Alfred Marling, New York; Christian Phildins, Geneva, Switzerland; Ernest Thompson Seton, New York; and F. S. Brockman, national secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in China.

New Jersey Baptists to Meet.

The anniversary meetings of the New Jersey Baptists will be held at Atlantic City, October 24, 25, and 26, and it is expected that the gathering will be the largest in the history of the denomination. A social union dinner will be held at the Grand Atlantic Hotel, Wednesday night, October 26, the chief speaker being Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, who is pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city.

Announce Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Berton Dennis, of 738 East Seventh street, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ada Irene Dennis and Elmer Hummer, of this city. The affair will be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Tuesday evening, November 8, at 7 o'clock.

Compulsory Egotism.

"I hate to talk about myself," said the energetic statesman.

"Indeed!"

"Yes. But I'd rather do it than let my enemies do all the talking about me."—Exchange.

MRS WM. H. LOIZEAUX OBTAINS A SEPARATION

Mrs. William H. Loizeaux, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. E. P. Williams, of West Eighth street, has obtained a legal separation from her husband, whose whereabouts are unknown to her but who is believed to be in New York. Shortly before coming East a week ago, she received a decree in the courts at Los Angeles, Cal., where she has resided since 1903. At that time Mrs. Loizeaux went West with her father, both in search of health, and he died shortly after they arrived at Los Angeles. According to a member of the wife's family, intemperance and non-support were the grounds set forth in the petition.

Mrs. Loizeaux, who was Miss Florence Williams, was considered one of the handsomest young women in society here at the time of her marriage to Mr. Loizeaux. It is reported that shortly after their marriage the husband cleaned up $200,000 in a speculation on a western railroad stock, but he soon lost his fortune, it is claimed. When asked whether a divorce would follow, one of the family stated that in all probability it would.

ESSENTIALS OF LIFE.

Sleep, like food and drink, is one of the essentials of life. Seven, eight, or possibly nine hours, in the opinion of Good Health, are required for the rest and the refreshment of our physical energies. He who cuts down sleep is burning the candle at both ends. The man or woman who successfully courts sound sleep on reaching the pillow, and who takes as much as nature requires, is laying up an enormous amount of hard work daily.

Sleeplessness is a grave symptom. Its warning should be promptly heeded before it is too late, for insomnia is often a precursor of most grave or long brain disturbances.

And one feels to add a word of caution to those who are slighting sleep in various ways. Not a few are planning to earn money while working at one thing to fit themselves for another sphere. If it can be done, well and good, but it is suicidal not to take necessary time for sleep, good regular meals and some outdoor exercise.

FORT'S PROCLAMATION ON BERGEN CELEBRATION.

Governor Fort today issued a proclamation calling upon the people of the State to unite with Jersey City in its celebration of the 250th anniversary of the first permanent settlement between the Hudson and Delaware rivers in the State, the festivities in honor of which will be continued from October 17th to 22d. This settlement preceded the colonial government. It was the village of Bergen, now a part of Jersey City.

In the proclamation the Governor requested that on Friday, October 21, the schools of the State, so far as practicable give at least half an time and has had much success in of the history incident to the founding "of the village of Bergen beyond Communipaw."

No More Rats.

One of the many milliners of the city, who has been in New York during the last fortnight looking over the hats, says that it is wonderful the change in hairdressing. "Why, the women don't wear a sign of a rat," she said. "When the hats are not on their heads the hair looks like a rat's nest. So used have we become to the pompadour. But when the hat is on the head they push the hair about in a way that makes it look very stylish."

Speak at Teachers' Institute.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire will lecture before the Teachers' Institute at Waynesburg, Greene county, Pa., on October 18. His topic will be Africa. On the succeeding days Dr. Edward Amherst and Dr. Frank W. Gonsaulus, both of Chicago, will speak.

New Members of Board of Trade.

George L. Babcock and V. W. Nash were elected members of the Board of Trade at the October meeting, Thursday night. The promoters of the Pan-American Fair to be held at New Orleans again asked the board to adopt resolutions endorsing the movement, and inform them of the action.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE FOR MR. AND MRS. CRANE.

A brthday surprise party was given to Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Crane, of Westervelt avenue, Friday night, in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. There were about twenty-five guests present the evening the couple was presented with a large cut glass water pitcher, silver syrup cup and tray, and Mrs. Crane was also given a large bunch of roses.

Progressive euchre was a feature of the evening and vocal and instrumental music was enjoyed by the company. The affair was arranged by the Afternoon Euchre Club, of which Mrs. Crane is a member. Mr. and Mrs. Crane have been residents of this city for several years and they have a large number of friends.

RUNAWAY DAUGTH ERWED

DESPITE PARENTS' PROTEST.

Joseph Witmann, of Mt. Bethel, Took Her as His Wife—The Couple Were Located Thursday.

In spite of her parents' wishes, Miss Lilly Bremmer was married Thursday to Joseph Witmann, a carpenter, of Mt. Bethel, by Rev. Carl Girtanner, pastor of the First German Reformed church, of Newark, after the couple had been held up by the police of that city awaiting the appearance of the father of the girl, who had been searching for her since Monday, September 26.

Thus ended the disappearance and re-appearance of the young woman who has caused her father and mother so much anxiety. She declared yesterday, when her father tried to induce her to return home, that she was of age and could marry whomsoever she wanted and that she had chosen the widower who had been wooing her for the past year.

Witmann has two children and is about 45 years old. He is quite well off and so he can take good care of his new wife.

When questioned as to her absence Mrs. Witmann said that when she found that she had lost the money she had earned at Norfolk, N. Y., she became frightened and did not want to go home to her parents. So she obtained employment in a department store in Manhattan and was getting along nicely until she became homesick. She went as far as Newark, met Witmann and through the application for a license to marry her parents obtained knowledge of her whereabouts. The couple have gone to Mt. Bethel to live.

Mrs. Witmann did not say where she lost the money.

BOROUGH ORDINANCE PUT BACK FOR PASSAGE

Owing to an irregularity the ordinance for the sale of sewer bonds is to be re-passed by the Borough Council. It was previously put through first reading when the reading was slightly changed and the matter then held in abeyance. Sherrard Depue, counsel for the sewage commission, noted this action on illegality and advised that it be repassed. It was brought up on first and second reading at the regular monthly meeting, Friday and will be regularly passed later.

The remainder of the business transacted at the session was purely routine. Recorder Dolliver's report for September showed twenty arrests and $60 in fines received. The fire department expenses for the month were reported to be $261.73, and money for the regular marshal's winter uniforms was ordered appropriated.

The following building permits were granted: George Winans, Somerset street, alterations to residence; F. W. Whitely, Steiner place, changing barn to residence; George Kirch, Manning avenue, barn in rear of lot.

Bills amounting to $2,614.62 were ordered paid. One of them amounting $10 for the bond of Fred Martine as assistant tax collector caused some discussion. Heretofore it has been paid by Collector Brown. The bill was passed with only Councilman Stahl voting against it.

WEST END TABERNACLE DIME SOCIAL HELD.

A dime social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Miller, of Everett place Friday night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the West End Tabernacle and for the benefit of the work there. Miss Try Mattox gave several recitations to the enjoyment of all present and received a number of encores. Selections of old-time melodies were played on the piano by Mrs. William Horner.

Phonographic selections were rendered by Milton Miller, who possesses a fine machine. Games of various kinds were introduced and enjoyed and refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society, after which all joined hands and sang "God be With You Till We Meet Again."

DOUBLE SALARIES BOSH.

That deceptive phrase "double salaries" is being used by the defeated candidate of the Republican primary, George W. V. Moy, who hopes to get into office by allying himself with the enemies of his own party. It is hardly necessary, however, to pay any attention to his attempts to mislead the voters for "you cannot fool all of the people all of the time," as Mr. Moy and his friends will find to their sorrow on Election day.

An attack, for instance, is made by him on Andrew J. Gavett, or to be more accurate on the ordinances which permit Mr. Gavett to draw salaries for the splendid work he is doing in two capacities. As is well known, this painstaking and efficient official receives $1,200 a year as commissioner of sewers and $1,800 a year as street commissioner, making a total of $2,000. If the same official did not perform both duties. It would be necessary to have two men, one for each position. Now where would Mr. Moy get as capable a man as Mr. Gavett to serve as commissioner of sewers for $1,200 a year? Where would he find a man, equally competent, to discharge the duties of street commissioner for $1,800 a year? The sum it up, where would in evidence a man who would fill both jobs as ably as Mr. Gavett does for $3,000? Let him first investigate the real worth of the man he attempts to make the voters believe is receiving too much for his services before he makes such undeserved and injurious statements. If he does not know whose opinion would be worth while, we take the liberty of referring him to State Road Supervisor Robert A. Meeker, of this city; State Road Commissioner Gilkyson, of Trenton, and to Joseph O. Osgood and Wm. L. Saunders, both of North Plainfield. One of these today declared that the equal of Mr. Gavett could not be obtained in the city for less than $5,000 a year.

Just one more reference to this alleged "double-salary" buncombe. T. O. Doane is singled out because he receives $1,100 a year as fire chief and $500 annually as building inspector. We want to ask Mr. Moy the same questions in his case. Where would the critical candidate duplicate this experienced public servant's services as a fire chief for $1,100 a year? Where would he find a man who for $500 a year would perform his duties as building inspector so well? As in Mr. Gavett's case, neither office requires all his time and the duties are such that they can be more properly performed by one and the same man. Candidate Moy will not deny this assertion. Neither will he deny that Gavett and Doane are both thoroughgoing and competent officials.

Why, then, all this hue and cry on his part? There is but one answer. Mr. Moy is being backed by and listening to the counsel of a handful of disgruntled and disappointed office-seeking kickers. They have ulterior purposes in view and as a means to an end they are shamefully using an excellent citizen, of undoubted integrity and ability. Unwittingly he is a "tool," but he won't believe that now. No, not until after Election day when he finds that he has been the victim of his so-called friends and has gone down in defeat.

THE REPUBLICAN RECORD.

In a speech delivered on Saturday night, Vivian M. Lewis, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, reminded his aduience of what the Republican party has done in the line for the people's welfare. The telling points made by him furnish food for thought for those within the party who would restore the notorious Democratic regime by voting for the inexperienced Dr. Woodrow Wilson and the minority party's candidates for the Legislature. For their benefit he called attention to these facts:

Republicans ended corrupt rule.

Fifteen years good service has been given by the party.

Prosperity and Republican rule have come together.

Corporations have yielded great State revenues.

Great public improvements have been made.

No direct State tax has been imposed upon the people.

No scandals have occurred, and the high character of courts has been maintained.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"The Concert" which David Belasco presents at the Belasco Theatre has for its hero a type that has thus far escaped the avid dramatist's imagination—the piano virtuoso. Just why nobody ever before hit upon such a succulent subject for stage presentation it is difficult to guess, and David Belasco no doubt had this in mind when he engaged Leo Ditrichstein to make the American version of Herman Bahr's "Das Concert," which, more than a year, has been playing to crowded houses in Vienna, Berlin and other German capitals. The action of the play revolves around the matchless wisdom and philosophy with which the piano virtuoso's faithful wife treats the many affairs of different affairs on the part of her husband's hysterical women admirers and her eventual triumph in winning him in the end, and holding him safe against all such intruders.

The prosperous season at the N. Y. Hippodrome continues in full swing with the three big spectacles "The International Cup," "The Ballet of Niagara" and "The Earthquake." Amongst the special features which draw crowds to the large playhouse, credit must be given to the circus, which is particularly good this year and even exceeds the Hippodrome's standard for novelty. Louise Stickney has a dainty equestrienne act while Mme. Bedini and her baby bears are another strong attraction. Performing lions and elephants are also part of the circus show. The Metzettis, who perform triple somersaults in the air, the four Lukens in a remarkable trapeze act and other excellent features are included in this part of the bill. The Niagara ballet with its picturesque Indian costumes and magnificent scenic background, calls forth much admiration and equal wonder is provoked by the many ingenious mechanical and scenic effects, including the Yacht Race, The Shipwreck, The Earthquake and Tidal Wave, the race between the locomotive and running horses, as well as the glittering finale in which the great water tank of the Hippodrome is utilized, add surprises of stage craft.

Henry W. Savage offers "The Little Damozel" at the Comedy theatre, the most charming play of character, wit and sentiment in many seasons. This wedding of the romantic and the real was not unexpected in view of the great success won by this drama in London last season—when it was thrice "commanded" by the late King Edward at Sandringham—but the name alone is a guarantee to those who have the best interests of the playhouse at heart. "The Little Damozel" is a study of life in London's bohemian circles, by Monckton Hoffe and, in the view of the Washington critics, is singularly and peculiarly delightful not alone for its interesting story, its well conceived character-drawing and its keen humor, but for the good sense its author has shown in not seeking to stage over the heads of the of the play's people. Great praise has also been accorded the acting, those especially mentioned including May Buckley, Cyril Keightley, George Graham, Frank Lacy, Henry Vogel, Henry Wenman and Mary Corso.

This is the third week of the whirlwind laughing engagement of Sam Bernard in "He Came from Milwaukee" at the Casino Theatre, under the management of the Messrs. Shubert. Sam Bernard's humor than ever before is the funniest and most elaborate vehicle with which he has ever been equipped. Sam Bernard plays the role of Herman Van Schellenvein, a brewer, concerning whom it is important to note that "He Came from Milwaukee," and could not lose the atmosphere of the "place that made beer shameless," even when impersonating His Grace, the Duke of Zurach. It is needless to say that the piece is produced without admiring the art of Mr. Bernard and laughing heartily at his indescribable humor, without being captivated by the daintiness of the musical numbers, without being charmed by the lavish costumes and festivities, without taking a romantic interest in the plot with its infinitude of surprising comic situations, and without wondering where the Shuberts ever found so many pretty girls for the chorus.

OAK FARM COMPANY RE-ORGANIZES FOR SEASON.

The Oak Farm Dramatic Society has re-organized for the coming season and will again present the rural drama, "Oak Farm." The premiere presentation will be made in Y. M. C. A. hall on November 3, and a week later the company will appear at Scotch Plains. Dates have been established later at South Plainfield, Dunellen and Berkeley Heights.

The company is again under the leadership and management of William Richards and the roster includes Mumford, Aleck Dressell, Claire Hilchal, Elmer Walker, Jack Downie, Mrs. Fredericks, Mrs. Wyckoff, Miss Margaret Bird and Miss Try Mattox.

Why do you always read the first few chapters of a novel by that author and then skip to the last one?

The Idiocy of Man

"I'm!" said Aunt Amelia as she turned with unnecessary fervor the heel of the stocking she was knitting.

The good-looking matronly woman who was watering the Boston fern turned quickly. "Now, Aunt Amelia," she exclaimed, "what have I done that's wrong? You used to make exactly that same disapproving noise when I was ten years old and stole cookies. I was merely telling Rosamund things for her own good. She's a pretty girl if she is my own daughter and I want her to be popular and worthy to be liked?"

"H'm!" said Aunt Amelia again. She poked a knitting needle reflectively through the lace at her wrist. "I don't know," she admitted, "that you said anything wrong. You were advising Rosie to be self-sacrificing and thoughtful of others and to get up early mornings so she could accomplish more. That's exactly what the proper sort of mother is expected to say. Still, if Rosie follows your advice she'll be left at the post, all right."

"I've just been let in a bit of slang since the boys down home went to college," Aunt Amelia explained, with an air of pride. "I've kept up with the times since you were married, Anastasia! And you notice lots of things as you grow older.

"I was just thinking," went on Aunt Amelia "about two girls down at home and wondering why every human man is an exception to the rule. You give any man the sort of girl he ought to like and he backs away and looks for the door over the other kind and then expects you to congratulate him on having succeeded in making his whole life miserable.

"There were the Green girls, Emma and Bessie, and when you married and went away they were making mud pies. Well, when they grew up if ever there was a selfish bit of humanity it was Bessie Green. She was not indolent, she was just plain, downright lazy. People didn't think much about her faults though, because her eyes had a trick of sparkling through her lashes at you and she was always *ready for any good time that was go*ing.

"Emma was just as pretty as Bessie, but she was quiet and she didn't look at you through her eyelashes. She had great gray eyes as open and clear as lakes and a fashion of seeing down to the bottom of your mind before you knew it was open to her agreeable part of yourself and thought it hidden. Not that Emma was a prig—she was just an exceptionally lovely, sweet-minded girl.

"Their mother was delicate and Emma used to get up early and see that breakfast was right for father and the boys. Usually Bessie had her breakfast sent upstairs. She said that since Emma was up for breakfast there really was no sense in her get ting up, too. Emma knew how the cook and Bessie frankly said she loathed the kitchen and all concerned with it and would rather live on toast and tea than burn her face and hands and get a headache.

"Emma made herself the prettiest sort of dresses and blouses and liesse got hers ready-made or hired a dressmaker. She said she didn't know how to sew and wasn't ever going to learn.

"In short, Emma spent her time doing things for other people because she was naturally so generous and sweet she couldn't help it. She had all the virtues of a model woman besides plenty of good looks, and she was considered a splendid housekeeper. When they went out anywhere there might be an older man or so who would hunt out Emma because they had sufficient brains to appreciate her, but you ought to have seen the young circle about Bessie.

"Well, after Bessie had driven two men to drink and two others had quarreled about her and several more had had the blues for months she got engaged to the cashier in a bank just because Emma liked him. Oh, no, she didn't marry him—she coolly threw him over when a rich man came along. She promptly married the rich man.

"You ought to see her house! She won't bother her head over it, because she says there are servants to do that. Her husband never got a decent meal at home and nothing in the place is ever put away where it belongs. Her husband sees to his own buttons and carries up her breakfast to her before he leaves in the morning. If she sheds tears about anything he buys her diamonds, and if she wants to be let her go to Europe.

"Emma? She married the bank cashier finally and they are ordinarily happy. You see, like all men who marry good wives, he takes his perfectly run home as a matter of course. Sometimes when he comes home she looks at him through her eyelashes in the old way and his heart thumps."

The good-looking matronly woman stared out of the window. "I'd better run along and let you get busy shop for cultivation and tell her to stop thinking about anybody but herself, if she is to be happy in future—is that what you mean?" she asked with a little sigh.

"I believe you might as well," replied Aunt Amelia, "the world being so perfectly idiotic in these present times."

riet C. Randall, chairman of the prayer meeting committee. This report showed that twenty-five years ago Christian Endeavor was almost unknown in this State. It was five years before that time that Rev. Francis E. Clark organized the first society at Portland, Maine. Trinity Reformed church was one of the first in New Jersey to take up the movement and form a society. A number of young people had been meeting for evenings, having formed a Bible class, and it was suggested by the pastor, Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, that an Endeavor society be organized.

This was done on the evening of October 1, 1890, the young people meeting in the lecture room for that purpose. The society started with forty-one members, twenty-nine active and twelve associate. These were the first officers: President, H. E. Gayle; vice-president, H. Bolsterli; secretary, Miss Fanny Mattison; treasurer, Miss Emma Gillem.

During the next two years 117 new names were added, while the average attendance at the meetings for the year ending 1893 was eighty-one. The following year the model constitution was adopted.

In November, 1890, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, then pastor, thought it wise to organize a Junior Endeavor society, which began work with fifty-three active members. The society has continued to grow and has proved a great blessing. In 1893 the plan of giving two cents a week was adopted and the money has been regularly sent to the mission. For two years a watch night service was held and in 1902 the society began holding a sunrise meeting on Easter Sunday morning. In 1901 the music committee held song services each month of the year and also formed a chorus choir in 1903. Two years later the society was incorporated in the local union and in 1906 the meeting night was changed from Monday to Sunday. These presidents have served the society:

H. E. Gayle, 1885-87; Charles D. Wheeler, 1888; Fred Lucas and Fred S. Dunn, 1889; Fred S. Dunn, 1890; T. H. Hardy, 1891; Miss Ella C. Benedict, 1892; Bergen Carter, 1893; F. E. Smith, 1894-95; W. A. Crawford, 1896; A. K. Willett, 1897; Horace J. Martin, 1898-99; Edgar F. Sheppard, 1900-01; H. F. Crawford, 1902; Miss Mabel Wilson, 1903-04; H. F. Crawford, 1905; E. D. Young, 1906; William H. Kriney, 1907; William LaTourette, 1908; Miss Harriet C. Randall, 1909; P. L. Soper, Jr., 1910.

Miss Randall called attention to the fact that the present enrollment is fifty-seven active members; two associate and ninety-five honorary members.

Following the report Miss Etta Raybert, soprano soloist of the church, sang a solo, "Consecration," in a pleasing manner. She was accompanied by Miss Lillian A. Force on the piano.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. A. A. Postlethl, pastor of the Second Reformed church, Somerville, and his happy remarks kept everyone in good humor. He related many amusing stories, appropriate to the occasion, not forgetting to give much excellent advice. He urged all to be faithful workers in their work for the Master and to be sincere and willing to do what the hands find to do. If the Kingdom of God is to be advanced, Christians must be in earnest and do their very best and have Christ's spirit. The speaker cautioned his hearers not to serve only for duty's sake and to act as though they were carrying a great burden, for in that way they would never attain the desired end. In these days of flying machines, express trains, church members should not be dragging along behind. He also urged the endeavorers to be thorough as well as sincere, and to consecrate their lives to the service of the Lord.

A social hour then followed, and after all present marched about the room, while the orchestra rendered an appropriate selection, refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served The committee having charge of the affair comprised Miss May A. Randolph, chairman; Miss Clara Swain, Miss Edna Dole, Miss Edna Dilts, Alfred W. Donovan, Elmer Gayle, Russell Doeringer, Miss Minnie Hahn and Miss Marie Hahn. This committee was assisted by other members of the society in serving refreshments.

The Republican candidate for Governor, Vivian M. Lewis, with Hon. Benjamin F. Howell, candidate for Congress, and Assembly candidates Von Minden, Hann and Ten Broeck, will arrive at Dunellen at 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon of October 18 in their tour through Middlesex county.

These candidates will address the voters of Dunellen from a platform to be erected in front of the postoffice. All Dunellen voters are expected to be present and hear the issue of the campaign discussed.

Touraine Cub Ball.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE PARADE

Miss Bates Describes "Votes for Women" Demonstration in London.

MRS. SHAW'S RECOMMENDATION.

Organization of Political Districts Her Suggestion—Mr. Saunders to Speak Before the Local League.

At the opening meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, held Monday at the home of Mrs. Stephen Hall, 954 West Seventh street, the chief matter to come up for consideration was a communication from the National American Woman Suffrage Association. This important communication was prefaced by the statement from the president, Rev. Anna Shaw, that "The whole woman suffrage movement has now grown so significant that it has become imperative for us, as a national association, to decide upon which of the many possible lines of work we should concentrate our efforts."

Mrs. Shaw recommends organizing according to political districts after the manner that it has become operative for us, as a national association, to decide upon which of the many possible lines of work we should concentrate our efforts."

Mrs. Shaw recommends organizing according to political districts after the manner that it has become operative in New York city, and she gives as the meaning of this new district organization that a large body of enrolled suffragists will be prepared at a given time to exert effective pressure upon legislative candidates.

Further on in the letter Mrs. Shaw says that there is some legal authority for the opinion that the State of New Jersey has unlawfully disfranchised its women citizens who once had the ballot, and she asks if it would be good policy to carry through test cases.

After the business meeting Miss Zoe Russell Bateman gave a stirring account of the devotion to their cause, of the English suffragists, whom she had met in London, returned from England, where she spent the summer, was one of those who marched in the great procession of June 18. Miss Bateman said in part:

"The first thing that strikes an outsider is the amount of interest aroused by the movement in England. Neutrality is quite impossible and the feeling for and against runs so high that at certain dinner tables the guest is taken seriously to task. The devotion, earnestness, and enthusiasm of the English suffragists for their cause is most inspiring and the bitterest enemies of women's suffrage cannot deny the good it is doing in bringing to level the many distinctions and unite women of all ranks in one great sisterhood of work. Women of all grades of society are found in the ranks, titled women, professional women, artists, literary women, factory hands, and dwellers in the East End of London.

"This was especially noticeable in the monster women's demonstration and procession through London from Blackfriars Bridge to the Albert Hall, a distance of six miles, on June 18 last. The women assembled at 5:30 on a lovely June afternoon and the fact that the date fixed, the 18th, was the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, was considered a good omen by all.

"Most of the women wore white dresses with scarfs of purple, white and green the colors of the Women's Social and Political Union, of which union Mrs. Pankhurst is the leading spirit.

"The procession formed up under the trees of the embankment, each detachment of women finding its allotted place marked by the banner of its club or society. It was headed by Miss Charlotee Marsh, who suffered 11 months of the horrible feeding rather than abandon the hunger strike. She carried aloft the standard of the Women's Social and Political Union, the organizers of the procession. She was followed by the mounted marshals, three women whose plucky riding was the admiration of the crowd.

"Then came the political prisoners, 613 in number, who had suffered imprisonments of ranging duration for the cause. They carried long wands surmounted by silver broad arrows, the English prison badge, and amongst their number walked Mrs. Pankhurst, Mrs. Pelwick Lawrence, Lady Constance Lytton and many other notable women who had shared in the imprisonments and hunger strike. They were headed by the Women's Drum and Fife band who came in for a goodly share of admiration, not only for their spirited music but also for their smart attractive appearance in their short skirted purple uniforms, purple gaiters and military caps.

Then followed contingents of university women in caps and gowns their hoods of the many colors showing the university at which their degrees were obtained; artists carrying palettes tied with the purple, white and green ribbons; actresses with bunches of red roses tied to the end of long sticks; a contingent of hospital nurses in their neat uniforms; musicians headed by Lady Emily Lutgens; women's Suffrage clubs from every city in England, Scotland and Ireland, women from enfranchised Norway, New Zealand and Australia; a contingent of Americans, whose stars and stripes were cheered by the crowds as they passed; factory girls, coster girls and even a small contingent of the Cambridge University League of men sympathizers who came in for no small amount of chaffing in their progress through the streets. The rear of the procession was brought up by friends and sympathizers and carriages containing those unable to walk.

"Seven hundred banners, some of them very beautiful and bearing mottoes pithy and amusing such as 'Where there's a will there's a way,' fluttered gaily overhead and forty bands of music enlivened the marching.

"Promptly at 6:30 we started ten thousand strong bearing in our arms sheaves of purple and white irises and green leaves. The order was given in sections marshals and division captains giving us our orders as, four deep, the long line of women marched through the traffic cleared streets between dense crowds of curious and sympathetic spectators kept in place by cordons of police.

"At 9 o'clock when the end of the procession reached the Albert Hall which was packed from floor to ceiling with an enthusiastic crowd of some ten thousand people. Mrs. Pankhurst, Mrs. Peltwick Lawrence, Miss Christabel Pankhurst and Lord Lytton spoke in support of the Conciliation Bill then lying before the House of Commons for a second reading. The whole meeting went wild with enthusiasm when a movement was put calling on the House of Commons to pass into law the bill for the enfranchisement of women.

"Subscriptions to the campaign fund were called for and in less than twenty minutes over twenty-five thousand dollars were added to the fund. High praise as to the excellence and efficiency of the organization of the procession is given by various professional organizers and many people considered it one of the prettiest and most attractive processions ever seen in the London streets.

"This demonstration did much to open the public eyes to the deep earnestness and widespread nature of the movement and to the high intellectual level of the women who want the vote.

"English women are still waiting for the final desiny of the bill to be made known, but in the meantime they are conducting an energetic campaign of meetings and also of propaganda work in selling literature and interviewing members of Parliament."

"It is quite a common sight to see fashionable women standing at the corner of some busy London thoroughfare selling "Votes for Women" the organ of the movement. Surely such energy and devotion deserve to be crowned with success and that right soon."

The next meeting of the Equal Suffrage League will be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on Tuesday evening, October 18 at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be addressed by former Mayor William L. Saunders who will present a comprehensive argument for woman suffrage. Admission will be free to all lectures given under the auspices of the league.

NEWARK MAN TO BUILD THE SEWER EXTENSION

At a special meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, James A Christie, of Newark, was awarded the sanitary sewer contract for an extension of the system in the west end of the city. The total bid was about $29,000, which includes everything except the machinery for the pumping station. The bid was in two sections, it being optional with the Council in awarding one or both.

The bid for one section of the work amounted to $19,000, and that for the other section $10,000. While the bid of M.. Christie, which was the lowest was accepted, it does not mean that the city will have to undertake the whole work at once. The meeting was called only for this purpose and immediately after adopting the resolution awarding the contract the members adjourned to Reform hall, where a Republican mass meeting was held.

Date for Murder Trial.

Judge James J. Bergen today set October 24 as the date for trial of Francisco Antonnozzi, charged with the murder of Batista Laghi in this city on September 25. William G. De Meza was assigned as counsel for the defense.

D. G. Garabrant Will Speak.

D. G. Garabrant, of Bloomfield, will speak at the First Baptist church on Sunday, in reference to the work of the State Baptist convention in its efforts to help weak churches, build new ones and spread the gospel in general. The convention also plans to do evangelistic work and labor among the foreigners who settle in this State.

LANGHORNE RECOVERS, TELLS OF HIS MISHAP

F. C. Langhorne, the photographer, whose narrow escape from drowning after being run down by a Pennsylvania tugboat, last Wednesday, has been told in these columns, was about town this morning, apparently none the worse for his experience. Mr. Langhorne said that the captain of the vessel which struck the boat, from which he and Mr. Craig were fishing, did not blow a warning whistle and the tug was upon them before they were aware of its approach.

The little rowboa, which was the only boat out that day, was struck a crushing blow and both men were thrown into the water. Mr. Craig was fortunate enough to escape the blows from the prow of the vessel, but Mr. Langhorne was struck on the head and immediately sank. On coming to the surface he was again struck by the keel of the scow which the tug was towing, and, being nearly drowned, he did not realize how badly off he was.

Mr. Langhorne described the near drowning sensations as most pleasant. He merely thought that he was in the water, a comfortable way, and any troubles he might have had disappeared as if by magic. When he was hauled aboard the craft that had run him down he was brought to his senses by the rough treatment received at the hands of the sailors on the tug, who began rolling him over a barrel, trying to pump the water out of his stomach.

A few bruises on his head and arms are all that Mr. Langhorne has to show for his experience, but he declares that these are quite enough. He declared that the Elks took good care of him at Perth Amboy. He was in the hospital only until 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the accident. The blame for the occurrence he places entirely upon the captain of the tugboat.

The Plainfield Association Football Club continued its good work Saturday afternoon, on the Clinton Avenue grounds, by defeating the Elizabeth Unitedb by a score of 4 to 2. This was one of the amateur soccer league contests and the locals were particularly anxious to come out victorious. Thus far they have not lost a game in the league series.

After playing their opponents an even game in the first half, Saturday, the Elizabeth eleven weakened in the final period, allowing the locals to score two more goals, making the final score 4 to 2. Every member of the Plainfield team played a fine game and they clearly proved their superiority over the visitors.

At the end of the first half the score was 2 to 1 in favor of the visitors, the two elevens being very evenly matched up to that point. The Plainfielders then braced up for the second half and tallied two more goals, and at the same time holding their opponents to their two tallies. The lineup:

Boyle	goal	Whitehead
Craig	right fullback	Thomas
Renney	right halfback	Mitchell
Kenburgh	centre halfback	Jones
Spalding	right wing	Wassel
Marks	right wing	Elliott
Heaume	centre	Crombie

FRED ROSE'S TRIAL MONDAY, OCTOBER 17.

Fred Rose, the young man who it is alleged was implicated in holdups on the Lehigh Valley Railroad freight and coal cars, will be brought to trial on Monday, October 17, at Somerville. His fellow workmen at the Spicer Mfg. Co. have subscribed *to a fund which will be used to de*fend him. Robert Newton Crane has been retained by Rose's friends to undertake the defense.

According to the police records, it is alleged that Rose was formerly a member of the "Dutch Ides" gang and while with that outfit he was sent to jail for two years. On his release he made up his mind to live a good life and obtained a position with the firm he was with when arrested, and it is said he was doing well and keeping strictly "on the level", as the saying goes.

MR. M'KINLEY DEFENDS PRESENT TARIFF LAW

McCARTHY RAPS DR. WILSON.

County Attorney Wm. R. Codington Presides at First of Series of Local Mass Meetings.

Mr. McKinley spoke of a trip he took abroad, and of the labor conditions as he found them there, explaining the low rate of wages paid as compared with those in this country. In his opinion it is the great hordes of people from Asia that this country must fear, and American labor must be guareded.

James W. McCarthy, the next speaker, accepted the opportunity to say a few words in behalf of the candidacy of William N. Runyon, the congressional nominee, adding that if elected he will represent his district honestly and fairly. He said that the voters of this district cannot do anything else but send Mr. Runyon to Washington.

"Progressive principles can only prevail through the Republican party," said Mr. McCarthy, "and not through the efforts of the Democrats. Where does the Democratic candidate for governor stand this year? He says that he has been interested in the affairs of State. Has he been heard as going on record in favor of any progressive idea or any important measure. No; he deals in glittering generalities, nothing specific. You cannot get him to say where he stands.

"What impression did he leave here a few weeks ago regarding rate-making power? There is no question as to his ability and intelligence, but he does not come out squarely on any important thing. How did Dr. Wilson get the nomination?"

The speaker then told the story of a meeting held in the Equitable Life Insurance Company building six months ago, at which Dr. Wilson, Jacob Smith, James Nugent, Robert Davis and Col. Harvey were present, and said that it was then decided that Dr. Wilson should be the nominee of the Democratic party for Governor. Mr. McCarthy then referred to the fact that Col. Harvey was the secretary of the late W. C. Whitney, and that it was J. P. Morgan who rescued Harper's Weekly and put Col. Harvey in control, and intimated that it is Morgan and Wall street that want Wilson elected Governor so that he may represent their interests.

"Why," said Mr. McCarthy, "Dr. Wilson admitted that he had not voted in three years and yet he says that he has been interested in State affairs. Two years ago he said he did not vote for Bryan because he considered him a menace to the country.

"Would James Smith allow Dr. Wilson to express his views on rate-making power as an important issues of the campaign? Why, James Smith was afraid to stand for a direct nomination for United States Senator, but instead put up a stalking horse. If Wilson is elected Governor, James Smith, James Nugent and Bob Davis will be his advisers. Isn't it the same old crowd that is behind Dr. Wilson? The old race track crowd that rode rough-shod over the people a few years ago, when Tom Ryan sat in the speaker's chair and refused to give audience to the women and clergy of the State who were present to protest against race track evils.

"The Republicans have made errors, but the record of the party is snow white as compared to that of the Democratic party when it was in power. A few months ago Dr. Wilson at the Millionaires' Club in Philadelphia, said that the labor interests were a menace to the country. A few weeks ago he said they were a boon to the country. That is the trouble with this candidate. He says one thing in one place and something else in another.

"The Republican party is the only progressive party and other is party conducting a progressive fight. The Democratic party has no progressive ideas; it is as dead as Caesar. The party is tagging on behind. In Wilson it claims to have a Moses to lead it out of the wilderness, but instead he will lead them further into the wilderness." Frequently throughout Mr. McCarthy's speech the audience applauded his remarks.

JUDGE W. E. SMITH HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Judge W. E. Smith, of South Plainfield, is nursing some sore ribs and other bruises as a result of tumbling from the hay loft in his barn yesterday. He was at work in the loft when he stepped into the open hatchway and crashed to the floor below.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, who was hastily summoned, found that no bones were broken, but the judge's body was badly bruised, and he is suffering greatly from shock. It is considered a miracle that he was not killed outright.

Women's Suffrage Convention.

The Women's Suffrage Association of New Jersey will hold its annual convention in Y. M. C. A. hall on the evenings of November 1 and 2. The opening session of November 1 will be opened with prayer by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church. Mayor Charles J. Fisk will make the address of welcome and Earl Barnes, of New York, will address the convention on a special subject to be determined later. An invitation is extended to all who are interested in the association to be present on that occasion.

Tailored Waists Popular.

The indications are that the severely tailored waist, which opens in front and is made of heavy embroideries or linens, will be much more in favor for winter wear than the lighter lingerie fabrics.

MOY THANKS DEMOCRATS

Bi-Partisan League Mayoralty Candidate Accepts Their Nomination.

NEVER REGULAR REPUBLICAN.

George W. V. Moy told the members of the Democratic club Monday night why he accepted their endorsement and how much the confidence the club placed in him had touched him. He also told the members some of the things which to his mind now obtain in municipal affairs and why he proposed to do his utmost to straighten them out. A. P. Morris, of Union township, candidate for the Assembly and H. J. McLoughlin, of Elizabeth, another Assembly candidate, also spoke.

LeRoy J. Ellis, president of the club, presided and explained the reason for the endorsement of Mr. Moy before introducing him. Mr. Moy said in part:

"I regard you all as my friends and neighbors. My first regard for my friend is that he is an American citizen. We are all under the old flag and patriotism should be the aim of our desires. We independent Republicans and Democrats are one people in ourselves. In this independent movement I only become the one object we all have in view. We are trying to remedy the conditions which have caused dissatisfaction.

"I have in reality never been a 'regular,' and I went into the primary fight as an independent, and the only people who can have influence with me are the common people. I didn't spend any money for votes or whiskey on primary day. On that day and the preceding one I was trying a case in the Court of Chancery, and the vote I received was a purely voluntary one from those who were in sympathy with my purpose. Every special interest was against me and a change of 250 votes for that day would have given me the nomination anyway.

"The endorsement of my candidacy by this club was a voluntary act, but one which I had to consider deeply. You have more than endorsed me, and I want to tell you that I was touched by the evidence. Mr. Ivins refused to declare himself, so I accepted the compliment which you paid me. Had I not accepted, the Democratic party would have been without a candidate to head their ticket. I have been against the machine for twenty years, and have never subscribed to their doctrines."

Mr. Moy scored Andrew MacCardell, F. L. Montgomery, William L. Gloak and W. W. Wilson. All these, he said, were former Democrats, but got the Republican religion and were converted. "It makes no difference to me whether I am elected or not; I will at least have the satisfaction of having exposed things as they exist and shown the people of the city the whole truth about municipal affairs."

Mr. Morris spoke upon the disposition of the school funds after declaring that Mr. Moy should be supported by every Democrat in the city.

In introducing Mr. Moy, President Ellis said:

"The Plainfield Democratic club at a number of meetings canvassed the question of an available candidate for the mayoralty. We could find none that would consent to run, and it was the unanimous opinion that a Democrat could not be elected. Among those who were suggested and whose consent to run was D. C. Ivins. Mr. Martine reported on Thursday preceding the date on which nominations were required to be filed that Mr. Ivins had positively declined to run, and that it was useless to consider his name. At a subsequent meeting of the club the question of making Mr. Moy the party's nominee was discussed, and it was deemed best to let the ticket for the primary be blank as to the mayor, a number of us deciding to write the Mr. Moy's name on the ticket (Democratic).

"On the day of the primary election some friends of Mr. Ivins, discovering that the Democratic ballot was blank as to the mayoralty, started a movement to fill in the blank with Mr. Ivins' name. When the Democratic ballots were counted it was discovered that 61 votes were cast for Mr. Moy and 25 for Mr. Ivins. After the primary Mr. Ivins was called on and asked if he would accept the nomination to fill in the blank, but he felt that it was for Mr. Moy to first state his position, and declined to commit himself until Mr. Moy had declared his intentions. W. A. Coddington, who was mainly instrumental in having Mr. Ivins voted for, was told that the question of the club's position would come up at the next meeting and invited him to attend. He did not attend. At that meeting the facts just recited were reported, and after some discussion it was unanimously resolved that this club endorses the candidacy of Mr. Moy and urges him to accept the nomination offered him by the Democrats at the primaries, and pledges him its support."

"The club in doing this felt that it was helping the cause of good government in Plainfield; that in Mr. Moy it had an aggressive, independent and conscientious candidate whose knowledge of the weaknesses of his own party organization in the city and the needs of the city would make him of great service to the city as mayor."

BOWLING CLUB ENJOYS CRUISE ON "HYDRAULIC"

Members of the Electric Bowling Club, of New York, together with several friends from this city, enjoyed a trip Saturday on the pleasure yacht, "Hydraulic," to Sea Bright, where the day was spent fishing for bass. Despite a stiff northeast wind, which was kicking up a heavy sea, the party enjoyed itself until the fishing grounds were reached. Twenty-five members of the party became seasick. It was impossible to get any fish owing to weather conditions, so the yacht was turned about and a trip through New York harbor proved more enjoyable.

The trip included a sail about the U. S. battleships and then to Poughkeepsie and return. Three colored artists furnished entertainment about the yacht, and a bountiful luncheon and supper were served.

Roland H. Leveridge, of Oak Tree, formerly of this city, planned the day's outing. He was assisted by Thomas D. Watson. Among the Plainfielders aboard were Peter C. Sweet, Charles H. Leveridge, John Snyder, Edward Craig and Roland H. Leveridge, R. H. Randolph and John Morrison, of Oak Tree.

FINE FOURSOME MATCH PLAYED ON CRANFORD LINKS

Edward M. Wild and Max Marston, of the Cranford Golf Club, played an 18-hole foursome against W. B. Bremmer, of the Montclair Golf Club and Joseph I'Anson, the Cranford professional, Sunday afternoon on the links of the Cranford club. Jerome D. Travers, who was to have played with Mr. Bremmer, was unable to keep his engagement. Wild and Marston were defeated in the match by 2 up and 1 to play.

The play was close throughout, the contestants being followed by a large gallery. On the fifth hole, Wild and I'Anson both secured a 4. On the sixth hole, I'Anson ran down a fine put for a three. The scores for the 18 holes were as follows: W. B. Bremmer, 83; Joseph I'Anson, 82; Edward M. Wild, 82; Max Marston, 84. In a threesome in the morning, Edward M. Wild secured a 35 for the first nine holes and W. B. Bremmer a 38, both very low scores for the Cranford links.

HERE AND THERE.

Charles M. Raybert, of East Second street, is exhibiting to his friends a pretty little silver-appearing bell of which he is justly proud, not so much because of its value but for the associations it recalls. It is one of a quantity cast from the old bell of the Reformed church of Brookdale, two miles above Bloomfield, which was partially destroyed by fire last fall, and which was Mr. Raybert's boyhood church. The church was over a century old and the congregation conceived the idea of using the old bell that had rang out for so many years to secure some of the money needed for rebuilding the old church. It was melted down and the minature bells made from it were sold. They were quickly bought up and Mr. Raybert considers himself fortunate in securing one. The bell is about four inches in height and has a very pretty tone. It bears the inscription "Brookdale Reformed church 1802-1910."

A WORTHY APPEAL.

Boy Loses $38 Belonging to Poor, Invalid Father.

A citizen who is interested has brought to the noticeof this newspaper the loss sustained by a young boy, a farmer's son, who after disposing of his vegetables in the market last Saturday, had collected enough to lose the roll of money, about $38, which he had received for the produce. According to this citizen, the boy's father is an invalid and the farm has not done well this year and the loss of this amount of money is a great shock to the family. The farm which is a rented one, has not produced enough this season to pay the expenses of running it. The loss of the money therefore is a great hardship.

The citizen in his letter subscribes $5 toward the amount and would like to see other readers of The Daily Press contribute toward a fund to make up the entire loss. The name of the unfortunate man may be obtained at this office.

Mr. Santz' New Shop.

The new barber shop which is to be opened at 232 West Second street will be conducted by Joseph Santz, not Charles Pagliuci, as has been stated. Mr. Santz will open up for business as soon as he obtains his permit from the Board of Health, which will be some day this week.

DISCUSS TWP. TAXATION

TAX BENEFITS ARE VERY FEW.

Agitation Regarding Abolition of Freeholders Board and Substitution of Commission Government.

The present high rate of taxation in the district, the relative merits of boards of freeholders and commissioners, respectively, for county management and divers other matters of importance were discussed at the regular meeting of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society at Texier's mill, Watchung Monday night. President Anderson was in the chair, and a large and decidedly interested attendance made the session a lively one.

In the discussion of the tax rate, while the tax committee reported was now $2.40, an increase of seventeen points, the presiding officer declared it is exorbitant in view of the fact that the people get no sewers, no water, no lights and few good roads in return for the money. It was stated that much of the blame for the high taxation rests with the county equalization board, which is unfair in its treatment of this district. The board, it was declared, is a big expense, costing the citizens $3,600 a year, while the members give only a few days' work in return for it. Later in the meeting a motion made by H. Texier to the effect that the county board be abolished as a needless expense and should be abolished, was passed unanimously.

The subject as to whether it is better to have freeholders or commissioners in the county resulted in many arguments for and against, the principal speakers being President Anderson, George Hughes, M. A. Cleaves, E. E. Wheeler and H. Texier. A vote was taken on the question and it showed the members to be equally divided. The matter will again be taken up later.

The town hall and fire committee reported that the fire department was now fully organized with forty-five members, and that a combination chemical and hose wagon had been bought and paid for. The entertainment committee reported that a dance at the conclusion of every meeting has proven too much of tax on the funds and advised that one be held only every fourth meeting with some other form of entertainment in between. The motion was carried.

E. F. Feickert tendered his resignation as secretary because of increasing duties in private business, and William Demler, Jr., was elected to succeed him. Miss Ida Demler was elected to membership. An invitation from the Temple Builders of the Wilson Memorial chapel to attend a series of meetings was accepted. A rising vote of thanks was given H. Texier for his donation of the mill as a meeting place. It was also decided that all tax assessments should be published.

At the close of the session light refreshments were served and the members enjoyed dancing until a late hour.

TO PERFORM CEREMONY AT RELATIVE'S WEDDING.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss will leave on Thursday for Charleston, West Virginia, to attend the wedding of their granddaughter, Miss Mary Caperton, at which Dr. Chambliss will officiate. Miss Caperton, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Caperton, of Charleston, has visited in Plainfield several times, where she has made many friends and been much admired for her beauty and charm.

Dr. Eugene Blake, of New Haven, Conn., whom Miss Caperton will wed, is an instructor in the medical school of Yale University, and is an eye specialist. The wedding will take place in the First Presbyterian church, Charleston, Monday, October 17. Miss Caperton is a member of that church.

NETHERWOOD REFORMED CHURCH'S ACTIVITY.

The consistory of the Netherwood Reformed church met Monday night and decided to change its time of meeting from the second Friday to the second Monday of the month. Various activities of the church were discussed and the heads of several committees chosen. Claude Gonod was made chairman of the music committee and D. C. Hansen chairman of the building committee. William Carson was elected the head of a committee to arrange for a supper for the men, when a Men's Association will be formed, and Samuel O. Bush was elected chairman of a general entertainment committee. The Christian Endeavor Society also held a meeting and decided to give a play about the holidays called "The New Minister." Mrs. F. H. Wood, president of the society, together with the Misses Florence and Maud Disbrow, comprise the committee in charge of the affair. The rehearsals will be held every Thursday night.

VILLAGE'S MEANEST MAN

POSTMASTER DAY VICTIM.

Twenty Years Ago His Stable Was Sprinkled with Coal Oil—Day's Enemy Unknown to Him.

For downright malignity, venom or pure cussedness, whatever one chooses to call it, New Market comes forward today with a man who should be awarded the blue ribbon. His name is unknown at the present time, but the entire village in general and Postmaster Charles E. Day in particular would give several large, red apples to learn his identity.

Postmaster Day is the proprietor of an up-to-date meat market which he opened just two weeks ago in the A. G. Nelson building, and it was on this that the unknown devoted his efforts Monday night. He forced entrance through a window, and once inside took all the meats from the ice box, the hams and bacons from the hooks, and whatever food stuff he could locate, piling them all up in the center of the floor. Then with a lavish and indiscriminating hand, he poured kerosene over the collection, until every piece had a decided coal-oil flavor, rendering it unfit for human consumption. He must have had an unlimited supply of the fluid, as he also saturated the counters, chopping blocks and other fixtures with it until the place smelled like an empty Standard Oil tank, such as they have at Constable Hook. He undoubtedly had no intention of setting fire to the place, as everything was accomplished in a deliberate manner and left so his cussedness could not be mistaken.

The sorry state of affairs was discovered early this morning when William Northrop, manager of the shop, came around to open up. The intruder worked quietly, as Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Osmun, who live over the store, heard no suspicious sounds through the night. The meat destroyed represents something over $100, while it will cost an equal amount to replace the fixtures rendered useless.

Mr. Day states he is at a loss to understand why he should have been thus singled out, but has a possible hint that an enemy is on his track through the memory that twenty years ago a similar happening took place in his stable. A horse and cart stall were sprinkled with kerosene and it was believed then that someone had intended setting fire to the place but was frightened off before accomplishing his purpose. Now it is thought that it was the same fellow who paid his respects last night. Mr. Day is also proprietor of one of New Market's grocery stores, and will hereafter keep a sharp watch for fear the kerosene cuss may try his hand at saturating sugar and soap.

Although the general tendency is to do away with unnecessary marks of punctuation the hyphen is still necessarily retained in "to-day," "to-night" and "to-morrow." That the retaining of the hyphen in these words is not only useless but absolutely criminal is easily demonstrated by a bit of simple mathematics.

There are 2,645,000 English-speaking people. The words "to-day," "to-night" and "to-morrow" are together used forty-eight times daily by every person—five of these being written out in long-hand. Thus the daily output of hyphens in these words reaches a total of 634,800. Taking the average of a written hyphen to be one-quarter of an inch you have a straight line 3,864 miles long. At the usual rate of writing it would take one man seventy-six years to write the hyphens in these words, and his salary would amount to $78,436.

But, avoidin' all theory, "to-day," "to-night" and "to-morrow" are daily hyphenated four times each on 234,192 typewriters, and three times daily on 184,221 linotype machines. Remembering that a pressure of five ounce is required to strike a typewriter key and two and one-half ounces to depress a linotype, we see that in writing these hyphens a total of 352,974 foot-pounds of energy is expended, or enough to draw a passenger car two miles and a half up a steep incline.

To avoid appearing pica-yunish no mention has been amde of the use of ink and paper, but this would approximate in value the daily bread supply of the State of New York.

The hyphen in "to-day," "to-night" and "to-morrow" should be discontinued today.—Lippincott's Magazine.

C. E. Union Meeting Postponed.

The mass meeting of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, which was to have been held at Elizabeth Thursday night, has been postponed until further notice. This meeting was to have been held under the auspices of the County Christian Citizenship committee and being unable to secure the desired speaker, decided to postpone the meeting.

FIRST BAPTIST Y. P. S. HAS AN ENTERTAINMENT

The fall rally, entertainment and social held at the First Baptist church Monday, under the auspices of the Young People's Society, was largely attended and enjoyed. The Sunday-school rooms were tastefully decorated with American flags and the season's colors, making an attractive picture. Chinese lanterns were also used with good effect.

An informal program was presented, consisting of readings and recitations of southern dialect stories by Mrs. George H. Campbell, of the borough, and several soprano solos by Mrs. Charles T. Shreve, of this city, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan.

Games were enjoyed afterward. Harold Serrell being awarded first honors and Louis Bennett the second honors. Others receiving prizes were Mrs. George White, Arthur Briggs and Francis K. Anderson. The rest of the evening was given up to sociability, and ice cream and cake were served. The committee in charge comprised Miss Carrie Dealer, chairman; Miss Helen Armstrong, Miss Ruth Day, William Briggs, Harold Robins, Sydney Mackey and Hollis Cubberly.

Both Licenses Refused.

The protests of the people of North Plainfield have been heeded by Judges Case and Parker and licenses for the Manhattan and Arlington Hotels have been refused. Also Mr. Blizz, of Mt. Bethel, was also denied a license.

ANTERIOR POLIOMYELITIS

Local Physicians Ordered to Report Infantile Paralysis Cases.

BOARD OF HEALTH REPORT.

During August There Were 40 Births, 18 Marriages and 21 Deaths—18 Communicable Cases.

The Board of Health, at its October meeting Wednesday adopted resolutions providing that physicians shall, in the future, report all cases of "Anterior Poliomyelitis," or infantile paralysis, a disease that has been spreading rapidly throughout the State, as well as the country. The resolution provided that the secretary of the board be instructed to notify all physicians practicing in Plainfield, that infantile paralysis has been added to the list of diseases which must be reported, and that in the future all cases of this disease coming under the care of physicians must be reported as provided by the sanitary code.

Reports showing the sanitary condition of the city to be excellent were presented. The communicable diseases reported were as follows: Scarlet fever, 4, one death; diphtheria, 1; typhoid fever, 6, three deaths; tuberculosis, 7, making a total of eighteen cases and four deaths.

In addition to the above, one case of scarlet fever and one of typhoid fever were removed to Muhlenberg Hospital during the month from out of the city. Two of the deaths from typhoid were cases which were reported the previous month. At present there are seven cases of typhoid in the city, including the one from out of the city; two of scarlet fever, also including the imported case, and three of diphtheria, two of which were reported since the first of the month.

The following inspections were reported as having been made since September 1: Plumbing and sewer work, 77; milk supply, 136; general work, 1,282; a total of 1,495. The latter included inspections on complaint, one year; vaults, closets, bakeries ice cream places, dumps, restaurants, etc. The regular sample of city water was taken for analysis and the result showed it to be of usual excellent quality. Thirty samples of milk and thirty-nine samples of ice cream were analyzed during the month. The milk was of good quality, but the bacteria was somewhat higher than during the previous month. The ice cream was satisfactory.

Claude Hand and Leo Fay submitted bonds to do plumbing work, and the same were signed and ordered filed. The application for a permit to collect garbage, made by George H. Carter, was referred to the assistant health officer with power. These disinfections were made during September:

Scarlet fever, three houses; two wagons; four rooms; diphtheria, one house, two rooms; tuberculosis, three houses; twenty-five rooms; by request, three houses; thirty-four rooms. These returns were made during the month: marriages, 18; births, 40; deaths, 21.

THE CHARM OF SACHETS.

The indefinable scent which most women prefer is giving to wearing apparel by sachets that are of various shapes and sizes, and are successful and lasting when chosen and prepared in a certain way.

Orris root is a favorite choice. It gives the faint smell of a bunch of violets, and is by no means so clinging as even fresh verbena or rose essence. To make it lasting there is but one secret. A sachet powder remains fresh but a very short time if it be merely enclosed in a bag of muslin and laid among the undermuslin or handkerchiefs. If it is baked in the oven, however, between layers of wadding, there will be a different story to tell. This is an ingenious discovery which answers the problem of preserving the strength for weeks together.

Every one nowadays uses coat as well as skirt hangers in the wardrobe. It is difficult to imagine how we could keep shoulders flat and bodices in place yet without a bodice or skirt hanger." The chief point of interest just now is, however, to scent them, and this is done by tying small bags of perfumed wool to the end of each.

Instead of placing bags and sachets to scent the lingerie and blouse drawers, there is a better plan today. Drawer linings are made of a double fold of white muslin, open like a pillowcase at one end, and into which a pad of wadding is slipped, slightly perfumed. Thes can be washed frequently and for this reason are more economical in the end than white paper, which requires constant renewal. Luxurious tastes incline to white washink silk instead of muslin, the same drawer linings performing a double purpose of blouse sachets when traveling, into which the clean lingerie whites are slipped and kept from crushing at the top of the trunk.

B. P. HALL, OF FANWOOD, APPOINTED FREEHOLDER

The Fanwood township and borough committees in joint meeting held Wednesday selected Burton P. Hall to succeed the late John Robinson as a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Robinson. Mr. Hall is the nominee of both the Democrats and Republicans for the place and will undoubtedly be elected for the full term of three years at the coming election.

The emeeting was held in the Borough Council rooms. The two municipalities are entitled to but one representative on the board, and for many years the office has fallen to the township not only because the township could outvote the borough, but because Mr. Robison filled the office with credit to both borough and township, and for that reason there was no desire to make any change.

The governing bodies decided that Mr. Hall was the man for the place, and appointed him forthwith unanimously.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL O. U. A. M. GETS CHARTER

Plainfield Council, O. U. A. M., received its charter Wednesday at the hands of State Vice-Councilor Jas. E. Church, in the presence of nearly a hundred members of the reinstated order. There are 97 names on the charter, and an application for membership was received last night. Speeches were made by P. H. Latourette and Mr. Church and others of the order in which its benefits and principles were the main topics. After the ceremonies and speeches the entire company enjoyed a smoker.

The members of the lodge were much in favor of a contest for increasing the membership, and with vigor with which they promised to prosecute this work augurs well for the future. It is hoped to increase the membership to 125 within a couple of months.

The officers of the lodge are: Senior past councilor, J. F. Boterle; junior past councilor, J. O. Randall; councilor Lewis Bimble; vice-councilor, W. J. Firstbrook; recording secretary, J. L. Bennett; financial secretary, R. V. Kinney; treasurer, W. E. Day.

It was expected that some others of the State officers would be present last night to help the local membrs enjoy the evening, but some unfortunate circumstance prevented their coming.

PATENT LEATHER BELTS.

Many of the new lingerie dress models show patent leather belts instead of the embroidered ones that might be expected. Perhaps this is the forerunner of a return to the tailored, ante-frilling styles; at any rate, it is welcome news for the maid whose patent leather belts have lain in idleness or been dedicated to tennis these many seasons.

Mostly they are black, but often they are edged with white or color, and really all shades are seen.

The buckles are nearly always square and of metal; the leather covered buckles are no more. They are large, relatively speaking, and no tag end to them; seems again to be them; they really fasten the belt.

With fabric cross tags over tucked vests, and rows of buttons with no apparent reasons except prettiness for being, the day of the tailor-made, buckled, as have said, by the patent leather bit, seems again to be drawing.

PLAINFIELD ELKS TO OWN NEW CLUB HOUSE.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., has purchased the property at 116 Watchung avenue, and will shortly begin the razing of the wooden structure now standing there and start the excavations for their new club house. The dimensions are fifty-two feet front on Watchung avenue by 165 feet in depth. The selection of this property was made after a committee having the matter in charge had visited several sites which were offered for sale.

It is proposed to erect on this big lot an up-to-date club house with everything necessary to make it one of the best in the state. It is a notable fact that a lodges of this order are building their own club houses gradually bringing the order to the front ranks of fraternal organizations. The plans for the building have not yet been drawn.

The Nat Levy & Co. employes gave a dance in the new addition of the concern on Watchung avenue, Friday night, there being over three hundred guests at the house of the affair was the music furnished by Suhr's Imperial Orchestra, a popular program of selections being rendered throughout the evening. At midnight refreshments were served. The committee in charge comprised Clarence Angleman, chairman; P. B. McDonough, S. Shapiro and Geo. Huff. Dancing was continued until an early hour this morning.

THOMAS M. PAFF DEAD

ONCE RESTAURACTEUR HERE.

Ten Years Ago He Removed to the Plains, Where He Was Engaged in the Real Estate Business.

Thomas Morse Paff, one of the best known residents in this section of the county, died shortly after midnight Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Grant, on West Front street. The infirmities of age aggravated by intense grieving over the loss of his wife a year ago last June, is given as the indirect cause of death. He had been in failing health for a year, but had been confined to his bed only for a short time.

Mr. Paff was born at Hempstead, L. I., in 1836, his father being a retired New York business man. He came to Plainfield about forty years ago and soon purchased the property on West Front street now occupied by P. J. Kreitling. It cost him $100 a front foot, a price considered almost fabulous in those days. Mr. Paff opened a restaurant in the building and soon built up a substantial business, but was compelled to close it out because of failing eyesight. He removed to Scotch Plains about ten years later and opened a real estate office and conducted it until a short time ago. Since the death of his wife he had lived with his daughter.

Mr. Paff enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout the county and by his genial disposition made friends wherever he went. He never took an active part in politics or affiliated with any organizations, but was always thoroughly conversant with public affairs.

Beside Mrs. Grant, Mr. Paff is survived by one son, Thomas M. Paff, Jr., of Scotch Plains, and a sister, Mrs. Madeline Duryea, of Brooklyn, now in her eighty-sixth year.

DOCTORS AND MORPHINE.

A so-called "morphine fiend" has appealed to the medical profession to stop converting sick persons into hopeless mental and physical wrecks by dosing them with opium."

Such an appeal as this is worthy of more than passing notice. It is worthy of attention from every member of the medical profession every person in every person interested in human welfare.

There has long been no room for doubt that some doctors resort recklessly to morphine to repress symptoms of disease which are unable to diagnose or too indifferent to treat properly.

Every great city has its crops of regularly licensed physicians who in their entire practice use little other medicine than morphine in its various forms. It is true, these do not rank as standing with the honorable members of their profession. But the fact that they can exist is a ceaseless reproach to all.

And unfortunately, the free administration of the seductive drug is often confined to physicians of low standing and loose morals. Leading physicians are prone to resort promptly to this ready method of relieving pain.

The result of using the drug is easily fixed and hard to break, and it may be traced probably in a great number of instances to physicians' prescriptions for the temporary alleviation of pain.

Whether ignorance, laziness or carelessness causes such results, it is morally inexcusable f not actually criminal.

It is less cruel to permit a man to suffer from temporary ills than to permanently deprive him of health, mind and moral responsibility.

Every case of morphine habit traceabl to a doctor is a reproach to the medical profession and for their own credit physicians are bound to find a remedy for the evil.

It is a matter that societies exercising control over the medical profession can not consider too seriously.—Illinois State Journal.

Tom Muir Will Entertain.

In connection with the Hope chapl Industrial Fair, to be held at the chapel, October 26-28, there will be a special entertainment in the gymnasium every evening, presenting from Tom Muir, the original Plainfield comedian, under the auspices of the Judge William N. Runyon Association and Young Men's Bible class. The Ladies' Aid Society will serve a regular supper every evening from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Funeral of Thomas M. Paff.

The funeral of Thomas Morse Paff, whose death occurred early Thursday, was held Saturday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Grant, of West Front street. It was conducted by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of Scotch Plains, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. There were several large floral offerings. Burial was made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery, relatives of the family acting as pall bearers.

EDUCATION AS AN ASSET

PERSISTENCY WILL WIN OUT.

Declares That Women Will Soon Equal Men in the Business World—Luck Doesn't Count.

Rev. Madison C. Peters, of New York, lectured before a large gathering of members of the Young Men's Hebrew Association in Y. M. H. A. hall Wednesday. It was the second in the series of lectures provided for the young men by the governing board and was decidedly interesting. Mr. Peters took for his topic, "How to Make Things Go."

Speaking along the line of special endeavor the minister referred to the lives of such men as Robert Fulton, Thomas A. Edison, Daniel Webster and others, who specialized their life work and made successes of their undertakings. He urged his hearers to do likewise.

Mr. Peters interspersed his talk with humorous anecdotes which added much to the interest of his speech for they invariably pointed a moral and brought out more forcibly the points he wished to make.

Referring to woman's sphere, Mr. Peters declared that before long women would hold the same place with man in the business world and that she deserved that place because of her determination to succeed in everything she undertook. He declared that those who poohpoohed the idea of technical and college education are the very ones who will never succeed in any specialty. Today, he said, if you put an ad. in the papers for men at $1.50 per day they will break down your doors in an effort to land the job, but if you want a $25,000 technical man you have got to go over the country with a fine tooth cmob to get him. He is a rare bird and hard to find.

"Some men say that the world owes them a living," said the speaker, "but I tell you that they owe something to the world. This big sphere was here first and man owes to the creator his very best endeavors. There is no such thing as luck. Nothing but work accomplishes anything in this world. Be ambitious. Pick out something you know you are fitted for and keep everlastingly at it. Some girls have an idea that unless a man has a college education they don't amount to anything, but that is all wrong. I have known of good blacksmiths, drygoods men, butchers and other tradesmen who have made eminent successes in their lines, but many of them never had anything more than a common school education to start on and might have failed.

If you find that your occupation is not what you are fitted for find something better or more suited to your particular needs and hammer away at it until you know you are succeeding. P. T. Barnum tried fourteen other things before he discovered that his mission in the world was to humbug the people. He was a gigantic success at that game. Edison worked eighteen months to perfect the phonograph that it would enunciate properly the word 'specie.' Be just as persistent yourselves in what you undertake and you'll succeed."

MATRIMONY AS A BUSINESS.

The idea that modern woman is not fitted for business is erroneous. Women are proving this every day. Not only are many of them trusted employees of large concerns, but quite as many more are in business on their own account. Some are shrewd and sharp enough to take care of themselves and their investments in the most trying circumstances. Even in the speculative line they have proved to be daring plungers, and some have recouped their losses by almost Napoleonic strategy. An instance of this kind is found in a young and pretty woman who lost $2,000 in a bucketshop. She called at her broker's to learn where her money had gone. Successive visits led to a wedding between her and the broker. Two months later she had divorced him, and she is now enjoying an alimony of $2,600 a year.

There is no reason why women should not succeed in business. Many have recuperative powers greater than those of men.—Chicago Tribune.

MISS LILLIAN ARNOLD RADCLIFFE BACON'S BRIDE.

Miss Lillian Arnold, daughter of Mrs. Minnie Arnold, of New York, and a cousin of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, was married Thursday afternoon to Radcliffe Bacon, also of New York. The ceremony took place at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Herring in "The Bristol," on West Front street.

Rev. Dr. Herring performed the ceremony, and those who attended the couple were Mrs. Herring and Mrs. Walter Bacon. After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in New York, where the groom is engaged in business.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE DOCTOR OF HUMANITIRE

If the fate of every woman is bound up in that of every other woman, all women were honored when Wednesday Julia Ward Howe, in her ninety-second year, was brought in a wheel chair to the platform at Smith College to receive the degree of Doctor of Humanitire and the entire audience rose to its feet. After the degree had been conferred there was a tremendous burst of applause and the large audience, numbering about 3,000, sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Mrs. Howe's best known composition.

The occasion was the inauguration of the new president, Rev. Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, of Brooklyn, who succeds President Emeritus Seelye.

In addition to honoring Julia Ward Howe, "poet and patriot," the degree of Doctor of Humanitire was conferred on Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mt. Holyoke Seminary, and Jane Adams, head of Hail house, Chicago.

MISS ROCKEFELLER WEDS FRANK J. ZIMMERMAN

Miss Cecil H. Rockefeller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rockefeller, of 1426 Wilwer street, and Frank J. Zimmerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Zimmerman, of Bound Brook, were married at 7 Wednesday night at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Locke, pastor of the First M. E. church. The house was thronged with relatives and friends of the couple.

The bride, [illegible] in white, and carrying a bouquet of bride roses, was attended by her cousin, Miss Lula Trewin, of this city, who also wore a gown of white material. The best man was Henry Zimmerman, brother of the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony congratulations were offered, and supper was served. Later in the evening the young people enjoyed a fine program of music, also dancing. The bride received a large collection of handsome gifts from relatives and friends. After a wedding trip the couple will reside at South Bound Brook, where the groom is engaged in business as a contracting painter.

MISS VIOLA GERNON WEDS K. G. GRAHAM

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Gerwin, at 142 Crescent avenue, was the scene of a charming home wedding Thursday, when Miss Viola Maud Gernon was given in marriage to Kenneth Thorley Graham, of Liverpool, England. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, officiating. The home was beautified and decorated with cosmos, the bridal pair standing beneath an arch of green, through which streamed the light from screened electric bulbs.

Miss Gernon was given away by her father, Miss Audrew Gernon, her youngest sister, acting as her maid-of-honor. The bride was gownd in white satin trimmed with velvet and fine lace. She wore the groom's gift, a diamond pendant.

Miss Gernon is an ardent music lover and a pupil of the late Edward MacDowell. She had prepared a special musical program which was finely rendered by the De Nike Trio, of New York.

Invitations to the wedding included none but relatives and intimate friends. The American and English friends of the young couple remembered them with many handsome gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will make their home in Liverpool.

SUNFLOWER PHILOSOPHY.

Some idle people are not annoying; but there isn't one in a thousand.

A steady man doesn't have to spend much of his time looking for a steady job.

There are people who only listen to the prosecution, and others who are able to hear only the defense.

It sometimes develops that when a man begins printing notices to the effect that he will no longer be responsible for any debts contracted by his wife that he never really was; that the tendency not to was what sent her away from home.

The expression is often heard that "business is sordid." As a matter of fact, business is the most important thing in the world. Your business means your living. The men who say "business is sordid" are selfish and mischievous. Unless you pay close attention to your business you cannot do anything for yourself or your country. Close attention to business on the part of different workmen has made this wonderful country what it is.—Atchison Globe.

PROBLEM IN INEBRIETY MAY SOON BE SOLVED

Drunkenness as a cause of poverty is a matter of every day knowledge. Inebriety is the source of many important problems of government. Yet we have been content almost everywhere to adopt a laissez faire attitude. The improvidence of the drunkard is proverbial. The improvidence of State and local government agencies is equally a fact.

The drunkard's family has been the insoluble problem in home relief. Authorities on insanity credit alcoholism as one of the most potent causes of that malady. General hospitals often bar their doors against the inebriate. The alcoholic ward is a source of ever recurring trouble. The tuberculosis campaign is largely also one against intemperance. The lower courts are clogged with habitual drunkards. The higher tribunals are distracted by questions as to the responsibilities of the criminal who is part or on the road to an alcoholic insanity.

One reason the public has failed to pay intelligent attention to the problem has been that many cannot enter heartily into the ordinary "temperance campaign." Until recently, also, there was little scientific proof of the alleged evil effects of alcohol.

The State Charities Aid Association of New York has made a study of the results of the present treatment of the problem by the courts. About 80 per cent arrested for intoxication are dismissed. Most of the rest are either fined or sentenced for a short term. So far as fines are paid, they are usually met by friends or relatives. It is useless so far as the person fined. The short sentence is even more ineffective, for the man, when dismissed, is often without friends or money. He secures shelter in a saloon and gets a drink by performing some small services for the bartender. The alcoholic repeater is the result. In Utica, N. Y., one person has been before the police court 100 times for intoxication.

The Survey in the October issue summarize quite fully some of the recent measures by which progressive States are combating the problem. Seven States, it points out, provide for the commitment of habitual drunkards on the petition of relatives accompanied by proper medical certification as that it is not necessary for a person who has lost his self-control to become so obnoxious as to be a public nuisance before he can be sent to an institution.

In Massachusetts a person arrested for the first time can be released without court appearance. The permissive law enacted for the city of New York in 1910 provides for a comprehensive plan for dealing with persons arrested for intoxication according to their past records and degree of inebriety. Effective means of identifying previous offenders is provided for by the finger print system.

The success of the farm colony treatment which isolates the person addicted from alcohol for a continuous period of time and supplies the prime necessities of light, fresh air, therapeutic baths and outdoor work is fully described in the October Survey. Such colonies will remove wounders from the streets, courts and prisons, relieve overburdened families and by supplying a wholesome life give a real opportunity for the drunkard to be cured.

ASSESSMENT TOO HIGH; JERSEY RAILROADS SAY.

Counsel for the Jersey Central, Erie and Lackawanna railroads have asked the State Board of Assessors at Trenton, for a reduction of twenty per cent on the valuations placed upon their terminal properties in Jersey City.

The application was based upon a decision of the Supreme Court, later affirmed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, holding that the State board in placing its valuations upon the terminal properties had improperly included the value of the franchises.

The taxes involved in the litigation were those assessed for 1907 and 1908. The court referred the assessments back to the State board that a reassessment might be made in accordance with the decision. The court did not attempt to pass upon the true value of the property, nor did the decision throw any light upon the extent to which they had been overhauled.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gavett Receive Handsome After-Dinner Silver Service.

WARREN CHAPEL'S GIFT.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett, who celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding Wednesday, were given a pleasant surprise at Warren chapel in the evening, following the mid-week prayer meeting. It was because Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman was to give a talk on the "Passion Play" which she witnessed last summer, that both Mr. and Mrs. Gavett attended the service, and afterward Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, invited the couple to the parlors on the second floor

As he did so, Mrs. McKelvey began playing a wedding march, giving Mr. and Mrs. Gavett the first intimation as to what was to follow. They were followed by the large number of people present, and when all reached the parlors the scene was a pleasant one. The parlors were attractively decorated for the occasion with American flags, and there was also displayed in silver figures "1885-1910." Extending from the mantlepiece to the ceiling there were purple and white streamers. The decorations were complete through an arrangement of palms and a large floral bell of white carnations, the gift of the Ladies' Aid Society.

After everyone entered the parlors, Mr. McKelvey, in a few well chosen words, congratulated the couple, adding that he had sent to the land of love to learn what would be suitable for such an occasion, and that Cupid had said that he was present at the wedding ceremony twenty-five years ago and that he would attend to the celebration.

Just then the doors at one end of the parlors opened and in walked Arthur Jordan, four years old, dressed all in white, representing Cupid. He was harnessed with white ribbons to a small cart, also decorated in white. Walking across the room, he approached Mr. and Mrs. Gavett, and, addressing Mrs. Gavett, said: "This is for you dear lady," at the same time handing her a card suitably inscribed.

Mr. McKelvey then, on behalf of all present, gave Mr. and Mrs. Gavett a solid silver After-dinner service. The gift was such a surprise that it was several minutes before either one could reply. Mr. McKelvey said that it represented the highest esteem and regard of the couple's loving friends in the chapel. Forward Mr. and Mrs. Gavett made appropriate expression to their feelings, thanking everyone for the beautiful gift. Then followed a social hour and exchange of good wishes.

Mr. Gavett is the superintendent of the chapel Sunday-school and has been for many years. Both he and his wife are very active in all departments of the work at the chapel.

Every branch of the chapel was represented in last night's affair, including the Missionary and Aid Society, the Men's Association, the Christian Endeavor Society, the Sunday-school and church proper. Mrs. J. O. McKelvey planned the whole affair. The decorating committee comprised Alfred Everitt, chairman; Mrs. John Schenck and Miss Dolly Bolsterli.

FACTORY CHIMNEY IN WALES TWO MILES LONG.

"I felt like a cat in a strange garret this summer when I went across the pond with a crowd of Irishmen, all bound for the famous 'home-coming,'" confessed Evan T. Price, of Pittsburg, at the Raleigh, states the Pittsburg Dispatch. "The fact is that I had no business in that bunch for I'm pure Welsh.

"My home was in Gamorganshire, where the manufacture of copper is one of the chief industries. One of the most peculiar sights of my trip was one of these copper factories.

"What would you say to a statement that this factory has a chimney two miles long? You think I'm joking, don't you? Let me explain. The works are at the foot of a long and high hill. The chimney runs from the roof of the factory up the side of the hill to the very top, where it shoots straight upward for about 1,000 feet like an ordinary chimney. A little brook trickles through this flue from a small spring near the top of the hill. This condenses the smoke and makes the draft more effective.

"Formerly the chimney of the factory was an ordinary one. But the copper smoke did so much damage that the present system had to be adopted. It killed thousands of acres of grass, and affected the hoofs of the horses and cattle so that the animals became useless. The new chimney takes the smoke out of the valley and it is dissipated in the air. The chimney on the top of the hill can be seen forty miles away on a clear day."

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 16, 1910.

Topic—Your amusements—do they build up or tear down?—Rom. xv. 1-2; Ps. xxxvi, 5-12. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The question of amusements is a very serious one, especially when it is applied to youth and young people. It is at these ages in our life when we find most pleasure—I mean physical pleasure—of one kind or another, and yet it is sad to say that it is at these very ages that great harm may be done and we least understand at the same time the dangers of these amusements. Our whole aim is to enjoy ourselves, to have a good time and never count the cost. Life is made up largely of amusements and work, and therefore I feel, even at what seems to be the most dangerous time, wants to get our amusement proclivities out of our system, so that when we have to settle down to business and the serious part of life it should be gone and not interfere with our work. If, again, youth makes errors, even serious ones, they may be lived down on the plea of youth and lack of experience, but if a full grown man commits a serious wrong little mercy is shown to him upon the basis that "he was old enough to know better." But amusements do not altogether cease with age. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." The same is true of men and women.

Amusements, being such a constant factor in life from childhood to old age, it is well to consider "our amusements," not somebody else's, and what effect they have upon us. If they build up we should rejoice and continue in them, remembering, however, that even innocent amusements, if abused, may become harmful. Who would call croquet anything but an innocent game? And yet who has played it frequently without knowing that it is one of the easiest of games to arouse the temper, to lead to deceit and fraud? Hence if one cannot play croquet without these results he should give it up, for to him it is a debasing and harmful game. But today how many innocent games there are for the young! There are all kinds of athletic sports, indoors and out, countless games that can be played in the evening in the home, and thus do away with cards, for instance. I am no crank against cards and theaters. I never go to either myself, and yet I help young people against them as much as possible. It takes not a moment to see that clubs of women for playing "bridge" are wrong.

Hearts are broken in the loss of the purse; envy and jealousy are aroused. Moreover, the giving of handsome prizes is gambling. When it has been tested in the courts it has been in some cases so decided. I am opposed to boys playing cards, and the mother who plays and sets him the example or even teaches him to play may live to rue the day when she ever saw a card. Cards, no matter what may be said, are gamblers' greatest tools. And who knows what the boy of tender years at home may pass through in a lifetime? If he does not know how to play he cannot be tempted, but if he does and is lonesome and weary in a strange city he is likely to be spotted and perhaps led into a gamblers' hell, for no fire burns worse than that which possesses the gambler. To do dancing and theater going, people must decide largely for themselves. But as a general proposition it is as well to avoid them.

Nor are these things all. Others are worse. They may be elevated by music at the opera and the presentation of the great dramas and tragedies of literature. But even Shakespeare is vile and foul in the language which he sometimes uses. But these are the least of the programs. Where a few see "Julius Caesar" or "Faust" or hear the great operas the thousands see a very different cast upon the stage, and if men of intelligence would tell the plain, unvarnished truth they would say that the average theater tears down the average character and does not build it up, it debases and corrupts, and if it does these things it is wrong for those who are thus affected and for those who are not. For the strong should help the weak, and if weak and strong would stay away theater going would stop and theaters would be closed by the empty seats.

Then there are amusements which are positively sinful—intemperance, impurity and all things which are directly forbidden by the word of God.

But how may we know when an amusement is wrong? Young people say, "They don't hurt me," and that settles it for them. "A glass of wine, a cigarette—I feel no effects," they say. The present moment is not the time to judge. Some one has said, "You pay for wet feet twenty years afterward," and there may be some truth in it. To discover whether an amusement uplifts or degrades look twenty-five years ahead. See boys who were never hurt by cigarettes when they were boys. What are they if they continue the habit and it increases, which it does as the years go by? Wrecks, the vast majority of them. So it is with all other vicious amusements. You are young now, strong, possess a healthy nervous system, but keep on and sooner or later the fearful results will come. Now is the easiest time to give them up. By the grace of God do it and find your pleasure in true social joy and in the things that do uplift—religion, music, art, good books and good companions.

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. i, 10-19; Eccl. xii, 1, 13, 14; Ps. xvi, 1-11; xxvii; I Cor. vi, 12; viii, 7-13; x, 1-7, 11 Cor. vi, 14-18; I Thn. v, 8; I John ii, 15-17; Rev. xxi, 1-7.

COLORS IMPORTANT WHEN FURNISHING.

All girls long for pleasant and satisfying rooms, which are their own; and nearly all girls have to consider the cost. But fortunately pretty things are not necessarily always the expensive ones. Real success in furnishing a room depends much more upon the thought that is spent upon it than the money. People talk somewhat vaguely sometimes about the "atmosphere" of a room or a house, but though one may not understand exactly what is meant by the word, it is the result that every one seeks in furnishing—namely, the creation of an interior effect that satisfies and pleases, that, in short, produces a pleasant "atmosphere."

This atmosphere is the resultant effect of all the things in the room, also of its shape, size, location, lighting and furnishing. Usually one is not able to control all of these things and must take them just as they are and make the best of them. So it is apt to be by no means the fault of the furnishing or decorating of the room that a girl can put her impress upon it and stamp it with her own individuality.

Colors are first of all "warm" or "cold", blue, the color of the sky, or of deep water, and blue-greens are good examples of what are meant by "cold" colors. While yellow, in all its shades and tints, including many browns and greens, are "warm" colors. In a general way it is safer to use the warm colors in furnishing. However, it is quite permissible in a bedroom, and especially in a girl's room, to choose blue, or pink or lavender, if one of these is the favorite color of the occupant, because such a room is sure to have a magical effect, by contrasting effect about, such as books, pictures, ornaments and the like that there is little danger of a severe monotone of color.

If the room lies on the north or east side of the house, or is badly lighted, try then the effect of buff, tan and yellow. It is marvelous, the effect of sunlight that can be produced by a thin yellow net curtain over a north window.

DISHWASHING MADE AESY.

One of the unnecessary things in housekeeping is the continuous washing and wiping of dishes. It is queer how some women will wear themselves out rather than step aside from the beaten path. To many women the bugbear of the home work is dishwashing. Why wash dishes three times a day? Do it in the morning when fresh; scrape the dinner dishes, stack in a large pan filled with cold water, and cover. Treat the supper dishes in the same way. Do not wash them at all, unless you have need of them? Surely this should be done if it can be at the expense of heat and light only.

Two districts, Westfield and Garwood, conducted with success such school last year, the former enrolling 257, the latter 85. I hope your board will give this matter serious consideration.

"The next teachers' examination will be held at the courthouse, Elizabeth, October 15 and 16. All teachers not having valid certificates now must procure them at this examination. No teacher can legally draw her pay unless she holds a valid license. Wishing you a pleasant and profitable school year, I am

"Yours very truly,

"J. J. SAVITZ."

Try the next morning if you will try this way. After washing each piece in hot suds and rinsing in hot (not warm) water put them, piece by piece, in the wire drainer set nearly on edge or slant as possible, and let them stand until dry. Glasses, of course, and silver must be wiped; but the former can be left filled after using and the latter put into a pitcher or deep jug until some odd minute when you are not so weary with well-doing that another turn of the screw seems next to impossible.

MADE-OVER GARMENT.

"When I have a dress to make over," said a practical woman, "I slip it completely, clean and press it, and put it away for two seasons. Then when I take it out again and fashion it in the latest mode, I have a dress that not my closest friends will recognize. People's memories last over one season, but never two.

"If the material is a very striking color, I often dye it a slightly darker shade. Then if somebody remarks that my new garment is very like my old cerise, I answer complacently, 'Yes, very like,' and no one is the wiser."

ON STORE COUNTERS.

Fur hat pompons of shaded tans and browns and blues are 50 cents and 75 cents.

White wool blankets, with pink and blue borders and taffeta silk bindings to match, are $4.50 a pair.

A Useful Holiday.

"I don't believe one ought to spend one's holiday in just going about in a small town or a country village and lolling about there, not caring a jot about the place or anything connected with it," writes a reader. "I call that wasting a holiday, not spending it.

"When I go to a place I read up all the books I can find about it before I start—guide-books, histories, novels which have the place for their scene, and so on.

"Then I get really interested in the locality and go to all the points of interest knowing something about them.

"When I come back I feel I have learned something, added to my little stock of knowledge. I can talk to people about my holiday. If the place is mentioned in the course of conversation I have something interesting to say about it."

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN EDUCATION BOARDS

Dr. J. J. Savitz, county superintendent of schools, has sent a letter to all of the boards of education, outside of city boards, regarding the provisions of the law in relation to compulsory education, night schools and teachers' certificates. The letter is as follows:

"To the Union County Boards of Education:

"I wish to call your attention to the compulsory attendance act passed by the Legislature during the 1909 session.

"This law provides that every child between the ages of 7 and 17 years must attend some school unless the grammar school course has been completed and the child is employed, otherwise he must attend a high school.

"There is a provision in the law that a pupil 15 years of age may be excused from attendance if he prove proves to the Board of Education that he must work and that he has secured employment. Remember, the pupil must be excused by the Board of Education and pupils must not be allowed to remain away from school unless excused. I am required to report to the State superintendent whether or not this law is enforced in each district. I am enclosing blanks which are used by the aGrwood board and, no doubt, similar ones would prove convenient to boards of education elsewhere.

"It will also be to call your attention to the fact that the State makes liberal provisions for evening school work. Eighty dollars is allowed for each teacher in such school and in Union county six and one-quarter cents for each evening a student attends. For a class of twenty-five pupils this is therefore no expense to the district.

"In districts where there are a large number of foreigners who should know the English language, where there are a number of young people who leave school early, or where the young people are engaged in occupations requiring knowledge which could be furnished by the school, as bookkeeping, stenography, chemistry, physics, manual training, industrial drawing, etc., these schools should be established. They vastly increase efficiency and earning power.

"School buildings are open for use from 9 to 3 o'clock daily. Is there any good reason why they should not be open at all times to such as have need of them? Surely this should be done if it can be at the expense of heat and light only.

Two districts, Westfield and Garwood, conducted with success such school last year, the former enrolling 257, the latter 85. I hope your board will give this matter serious consideration.

"The next teachers' examination will be held at the courthouse, Elizabeth, October 15 and 16. All teachers not having valid certificates now must procure them at this examination. No teacher can legally draw her pay unless she holds a valid license. Wishing you a pleasant and profitable school year, I am

RUNAWAY BOSSY STRAYS INTO FAIR, WINS PRIZE.

Judge Edmund Waddill, of the United States District Court, of Richmond, Va., has recovered his valuable Jerrey cow, which strayed from his country home, near the Virginia State fair grounds, and she is now more valuable than ever for, during her absence, unassisted by any groomsign, she won a red ribbon at the fair.

The cow was discovered in the fair grounds by an attendant, who thought she was an exhibit and placed her in the proper place for cows of her class. When the judging came off yesterday she was given the ribbon.

Wednesday the attendant who discovered her in the grounds saw an advertisement in a local paper accurately describing his find, and on investigation returned to the judge his prize milker and benefited to the extent of the cash prize she had captured.

A Special.

"That steak you sent home was tough," said the housekeeper.

"It must have been one of our specials that we gave you by mistake," answered the dealer.

"A special!"

"Yes; one that we send out with a durability guarantee."—Washington Evening Star.

Judging by Appearances.

"Dat tree has been struck three times by lightnin', boss," said Sam.

"Impossible, Sam;" replied the other. "Lightning never strikes twice in the same place."

"Well, boss, the thing what struck it las' night bears a strikin' semblance to what struck it befo'."—Exchange.

"Ever been locked up?" demanded counsel.

"I have been," admitted the witness.

"Aha! And what had you been doing to get yourself locked up?"

"I had been doing jury duty."—Pittsburg Post.

HERE AND THERE.

It all came about through a pork pie. The housewives of Leicester, be it noted, are famous for their pork pies. This particular pie was sent some eighteen months ago to Henry Hill, a business man of Milwaukee and a native of Leicester, by a home staying friend.

The pie reminded Henry Hill so much of those his mother used to make that he got homesick for the first time after forty-three years' sojourn under the Stars and Stripes. Why not, he suggested send out to all the world an invitation to old Leicester boys to meet in a given week in the old town?

And so that pie marked the birth of the homecoming week, which Leicester is celebrating just now with bands, banners and fireworks. Some 250 homecomers are doing themselves a pie worship of the city and all wear on the lapels of their coats a wyvern, which is a fearsome heraldic monster, a cross between a dragon and a griffin, which justifies its existence by figuring on the city arms.

A brother of Sparks, Nevada, (and Leicester) shook hands for the first time after thirty years with a brother of Bangalore, northern India (and Leicester) with a solemn "How do, George?" thus proving conclusively that British stolidity is a thing of the past, as some would have us believe. There were some dramatic meetings, though, especially in the case of a Leicesterite of New Zealand, who had not seen his native town for fifty years.

The festive 250 came from Africa, north, east, south and central, from Canada, from Australia, from India, south America and from various points in Europe. The Milwaukee contingent was the most numerous, probably because Milwaukee and Leicester are equally prominent in the shoe trade. Mr. Hill brought special greetings from the mayor of the American city and from various notabilities and with him was Lawrence Hurley, the tallest policeman in Milwaukee, also an old Leicesterite.

Many others made the pilgrimage from San Francisco, Philadelphia, Kansas and New York. All wore badges with the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack crossed and got each policeman in Milwaukee, also an old Leicesterite.

The only thing that is cold about Leicester is the British climate, but pork pies keep you warm, and the consumption of pork pies in Leicester just now is surprising.

"PIRATICAL" TALK AS COMING FROM BROKER.

"We are pirates and when a man comes to us with $1,000 or $5,000 it is up to us not to let the money get away."

That is what William W. Tracey in substance said to his partner, Robert D. Covington, according to Covington's testimony before Justice Lewis O'Gorman in the Criminal court, New York, where Tracey is on trial for the larceny of $5,200 worth of securities that belonged to Herman Kahle, Jr., of The Bronx.

Later when Tracy took the stand in his own behalf he denied using the expression or giving any such advice to Covington.

According to Covington, Tracy talked about being pirates just a few days before the firm of Tracy & Co., of Wall street, went to the wall with liabilities of something like $1,250,000 and assets of $150,000. Covington had remarked that he had given to a customer advice by which he believed the customer would make some money. Tracy took him to task for letting the chance get away from the firm.

Matter of Mind, Not Body.

Let those women who are afraid that there is no place in the world for a woman who has grown old remember that Mrs. Ella Flagg Young has been a teacher for forty-seven years and was 65 years old when she was elected superintendent of the most exacting schools in the country. Her mind is not old, however, and she has kept it young by never letting the scope of its activities narrow down to a few worn-out theories. She is always ready for the best of the new things. Her salary in her present position is $10,000 a year.

Chicken Liver-Mushrooms.

For one pound each mushrooms and chicken livers put a piece of butter larger than an egg into the blazer with the chicken livers and cook ten minutes from the time they begin to cook. Add one pint of cream and a pound of mushrooms, discarding most of the stems. Cook ten minutes after the cream begins to boil. Add one tablespoonful flour dssolved in a little cold milk. If the cream is very heavy it needs but half the flour. Boil up a moment longer, add salt and pepper to taste. Serve on toast.

If I were asked (although, of course, nobody would ever think of asking me) what I considered to be the most useful American institution, I should very unhesitatingly say, genius for industrial organization, the American girl and summer amusement. And I should bracket the American girl and summer amusement—they are so very inextricably interwoven—Frederic Thompson in the August Metropolitan Magazine.

A WHITE THROAT.

At this season the girl who has gone collarless the summer through is beginning to be anxious about the state of her throat. The day of drastic treatment is at hand if her neck is to look well in winter. The throat is browned from exposure to the sun.

To whiten it rub it each night with lemon, letting it stay on all night. If there are rough places in the skin it can be gone over with a fine pumicestone dipped in lemon juice.

In the morning rinse off with warm water, in which a little almond meal has been dissolved. This whitens and smoothes the skin.

A mote decded bleach is made from eight ounces of alcohol, four ounces of rosewater and a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin. Saturate a thin piece of linen in the liquid and pin around the throat and let it stay on for an hour. Then massage with a good cucumber cream.

One such treatment will show beneficial effects, though a number will be necessary if the skin be badly tanned.

When the neck is freckled hard work is in store for it, as freckles never come off so more quickly than from arms and neck.

A simple remedy for these is to dissolve half a teaspoon of powdered camphor in an ounce of olive oil. Touch the spots with a brush dipped in this lotion morning and evening.

Another lotion is composed of two tablespoonfuls of pure glycerin and a few drops of tincture of iodine, a also said to be good. This must be used carefully so as to not get in the eyes. Iodine also poisons some skins.

A home remedy for a dark line around the throat is to slice and pound a ripe cucumber into a paste and put it on a thick linen cloth and tie around the throat over night. This may have to be repeated every night for a week.

LATEST FLAT SILVER.

The latest passion with girls who follow the artistic trend in table furnishings is the new flat silver in Tudor design.

This lovely model is severely plain, the distinction being in its most unusual shape, and all ordinary models pale before it with those who like the something a little different, so that once seen nothing else quite satisfies.

This pattern is obtained only at the large shops by order well in advance of the date for which it is wanted.

Another artistic pattern which expresses the vogue of art and simplicity is the Colonial, which, it less exclusive than the Tudor, is charming nevertheless, considerably cheaper and more readily obtained.

Engraved glass, which has completely superseded cut glass of all patterns with the same discriminating class of buyers, a constantly appearing in new and delightful designs which add greatly to the chic of table or buffet.

MEDICAL AND DENTAL INSPECTORS APPOINTED.

Practically nothing beyond routine business was transacted at the regular meeting of the Board of Education Monday. Bills amounting to $3,800 were ordered paid, and the Finance Committee was authorized to borrow $12,000 for teachers' salaries and current expenses. The custodian's report showed a balance of $2,873.70 and the collector reported receiving $545.39 during September.

Drs. T. H. Tomlinson and A. F. Van Horn were appointed medical inspectors, and Drs. W. E. Stelle and C. E. Hillman, dental examiners. Superintendent Maxson was authorized to provide lectures for the teachers at a cost not to exceed $100.

Some of the pretty foulard petticoats are finished with lace-trimmed ruffles. A muslin ruffle under the outer ruffle helps to lengthen the life of the skirt.

The short coats range in length from hip to within two inches of the knees. So far the really short coat and the Eton jacket have not gained any secure position.

The new corset is a good deal lower in the bust than was the case last year. Its waist is still long, but its hips are narrow, straight and long.

Gilt buttons are used for trimmings as well as for fastenings on the trim linen suits for young girls.

APPLE GINGER.

Six pounds of a hard kind of apple, prepared; 6 pounds of loaf sugar, 4½ pints water, 3 ounces tincture ginger.

Pare, core and cut apples into even sized pieces, put them into a bowl of cold water until required.

Boil sugar and water until they form a rich syrup, adding ginger when it boils.

Put pieces of apple into jars, pour over syrup. Carefully exclude air, seal, keep in a dry place.

EGOTISTICAL MEN

"Is there anything on earth," in quired the fluffy-haired blonde, "that makes you so utterly weary as the condescending action of some man you know who assures you in that complacent way peculiar to the type, that he is going to call upon you very soon? As if," she added, with an air of disgust, "we were all sitting around holding our breaths waiting for the telephone to ring, in the fond hope that it will prove to be some masculine admirer who desires to honor us with his company! I'm sick of it!"

"Me, too!" chimed in with ungrammatical fervor the girl with the coronation braid.

The fluffy-haired blonde embroidered two polka dots with a puzzled frown. "You see," she said, "if the girl has a large and well-worn sense of humor she merely smiles to herself and wonders if it would pay to jolt the man into a state of enlightenment. But if her sense of humor is undeveloped she asks herself with disturbing qualms if it is really possible that the creature thinks she is crazy about him."

She regarded the entire row of polka dots with disfavor, preparatory to beginning on another. "Not long ago," she continued, "I had the satisfaction of freeing my mind on the subject."

"It was just by accident," explained the fluffy-haired blonde.

"You know," she proceeded, "I was visiting Marie in Milwaukee last month." The others nodded. "Well, a certain man whom we will call George and whom I have always known, happened to be there at the same time, on business. Now, I'm fond of George, in a way.

"When he called up the house where I was visiting and informed me that he was 'going to get out to call,' I was very amiable about it. He wanted to see me, but he naturally couldn't make an engagement without consulting my hostess. So Marie and I talked it over, and she insisted upon shifting the entire week's calendar in order to leave an evening open for George to call. We had something interesting on hand for every night, too, but Marie felt that it would be rude not to receive George. Finally we managed it for Saturday, and I wrote George a note to that effect.

"In the course of time Saturday came, and so did George. This is the way he began: 'Well, well, you've been here ten days, have you? Really, I did mean to come out before this. I hope you'll excuse me. I've been up to my ears in work.'"

The members of the sewing circle exploded with mirth, but the fluffy-haired blonde was too indignant at the recollection even to smile. "He thought," she said, "that the joy of my visit was blighted by his inattention!"

"I was perfectly paralyzed for a moment, and then I proceeded, without heat or prejudice, to elucidate certain ethical points upon which it seemed to me George's education had been deficient.

"He listened with startled attention until I had finished, then he said, in a surprised voice: 'You mean, then, that you think I am egotistical?'

"'Painfully so,' I told him.

"'But really,' he assured me, looking shocked, 'really, you don't know me at all if you think that not at all! Besides, I honestly was awfully busy, or I would have come out—'

The fluffy-haired blonde stopped and sighed reminiscently. "Then Marie came down," she said, "and took in the situation."

"It has just occurred to me,' suggested Marie, 'that if we all three like motoring, we can telephone to Charles King. He asked us to go out tonight, you know, and seemed very much disappointed when we had an engagement.' She turned to George so suddenly that he was naturally obliged to acquiesce, but I noticed that he was thoughtful all evening."

The sewing circle giggled again.

"Of course," murmured the girl with the coronation braid, "men are not all like that."

"Indeed they aren't," agreed the fluffy-haired blonde, with satisfaction. "When Marie comes to visit me I want to show her that my friends are not all like George's. Why, we marry the nice, unassuming ones—"

"We mostly do," said young Mrs. Allison, soothingly. "The others remain bachelors, and their egotism grows upon them."

Not Good Empire, After All.

Somehow it shrinks the breadth of our country when we know that an old man can walk across it, from sea to sea, in 77 days.—Philadelphia Record.

The One Place.

A gentleman was standing in the lobby of one of Birmingham's leading hotels when some one made a remark about it being so easy to get a little "wet refreshments" in the Magic city. The young man said: "I have been in Birmingham for nine days and I have never found that wet spot yet, and I want to tell you I have looked for it, too."

The "never sleep" negro porter of this hostelry had become interested in the conversation, and advancing close enough to the speaker to tip his cap politely, asked this question: "Boss, where is you been stopping since you come to town—in de cemetery?"—Birmingham News.

HOUSEKEEPING ON A LITTLE.

The old saying about "a penny saved" being a "penny earned" is too often forgotten nowadays, and we moderns are much too ready to say, "Oh, I am no good at housekeeping! I cannot sew, I have no idea how to cook, I was never taught housekeeping," and so on. And consider that full excuse for not teaching ourselves all these things.

The fact is, that not two married women in a million are so stupid, so dense, that they could not become good economical housekeepers, home dressmakers and cooks, if they chose to do so. It is not nearly as hard a lesson as the history or German or arithmetic one learns at school.

"It entails much self-sacrifice, however; and a good many sweet, good wives, who would be fitter presidresses on a desert island, would be a shipwreck, would nurse their husbands through plague or smallpox without a murmur, cannot seem to see that it is just as heroic to energetically force oneself to "make ends meet" on a painfully inadequate income; to move into the small house in the dowdy street, to go oneself to the shops and pay cash, instead of sitting coolly by the fire and giving orders on credit; to ask one's friends to tea and home-made cake instead of dinner; to make one's own garments with the aid of a dressmaking course and a paper pattern, instead of buying expensive, soon-worn-out, ready-made finery.

Nor can they believe the simple truth that there is more satisfaction in "doing no man anything" than in the most generous home kept up on credit. And the other little fact, that it is silly to "keep up appearances" you cannot pay for, because everybody always sees through them, and laughs at you for it.

Raffia, which comes in all colors, may be put to many uses fitting up rooms inexpensively. Sofa pillows and couch covers worked on coarse canvas with the fiber are especially effective for summer and are easily and quickly done, because of the coarseness of the fiber. Any coarse stamped pattern lends itself to the task and any color chosen, but the strong Indian effects or pronounced craftsman designs are best suited to it.

One very practical employment for raffia is in the covering of bowls and baskets in a variety of fiber. This is simply a series of knots easily learned, which make a wide, open mesh over the porcelain. Green basket work covering for a vase that is suited to the color will give a note of freshness to a corner or table. Bowls for flowers or plants may be covered with it and have strong cords of the same fiber by which to hang them.

All sorts of pretty baskets are made of raffia, but they go slower than the coarser ones, though these are plentiful. Lovely favors in the shape of baskets filled with sweets are made of raffia or willow at small expense of money and. If willow is used, at little outlay of time. One of the most practical uses of raffia is in workings lined with silk. The raffia—a soft green is pretty for summer—is knotted in wide mesh net style over a stick as a guide to keep the meshes even, into as large a square or oblong as is wanted. Then a lining of the fiber is added at the bottom with the same kind of knots, and a Persian silk lining completes the very effective receptacle for summer needlework. If one does not understand knoting there are directions for making the work are easily procured. Public libraries have works upon basketry which also tell how to make useful knots.

FREEHOLDERS' COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE HOSPITAL

Director King, at the October meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders, Thursday, appointed Freeholders Krausse, Swain and Gruner a committee to investigate the case of the admission of a male patient from Rahway at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Elizabeth. The board gives this hospital $3,000 a year, and while the man was finally admitted to the institution, there was, what the board believes, unnecessary delay. City Attorney W. E. Outcalt will assist the committee in its investigation.

The patient who applied for admission to the hospital was too poor to pay for an operation and treatment, and, it is alleged, he was refused admission at first unless he consented to pay for treatment. The Freeholders' committee will make a full investigation of the matter and report at the next meeting to be held on Tuesday.

J. A. Staats, who in company with Dr. P. J. Zeglio and Fred Sandford is now having a hunting and fishing trip in Nova Scotia, had great luck last Saturday, when he shot a 600-pound moose, five miles from the camp, which is located at Bronte Lake. It took the combined efforts of the three men all day to get the moose to camp.

"WHITEWASH" PLAINFIELD

CLINTON DOES GREAT WORK.

Somerville Has Won Three of the Four Contests—Plainfield to Meet Bound Brook Saturday.

Inability to connect with the deceptive curves of "Jimmy" Clinton explains the defeat of the Plainfield baseball club at the hands of its old rivals, Somerville, on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon. All that the locals could gather from the twists and benders of Clinton was four singles, and under such circumstances, victory was out of the question. He fanned every member of the Plainfield aggregation and some of them more than once.

Coupled with the failure of the Plainfielders to hit the ball, were eight errors, made at inopportune times for them, and which allowed the visitors to score four runs. That was all they could get, but throughout the nine innings the locals were unable to get a run over the plate.

Skillman, formerly of Princeton, was in the box for Plainfield, and he pitched a fine game, good enough to win, provided his team behind him had been there with the stick. He held Somerville to four singles, but they came at the right time and combined with four errors by the locals, gave them their runs.

The Plainfielders distinguished themselves in the double play. Jack Martin catching a line drive and doubling up a runner at first. To Brit Martin and Carlstrom belong the credit of making the two hits, but the other batters to follow were quickly cut down by Clinton, who was in exceptionally good form.

With Saturday's victory, Somerville has won four games, while Plainfield only succeeded in taking the first contest between the teams, which took place at Somerville. In all five games were arranged, but the fifth one will not be played. Plainfield will meet Bound Brook next Saturday. The score:

RALLY DAY EXERCISES AT MONROE AVENUE CHURCH

Rally day exercises were held at Monroe Avenue church, Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school. There was an attendance of 266. Instead of having an outside speaker, the superintendent, Walter M. McGee, by request, made the address himself. The subject was "Be Useful," and he succeeded in impressing it upon all his hearers by a number of illustrations.

Mr. McGee referred to his accepting the responsibility of superintendent some twenty years ago, when his pastor put it before him, as a young man, as an opening gate of opportunity for usefulness. At the evening service, Norman Brough, of Bayonne, sang "Crossing the Bar," and "The Publican," very acceptably.

Mint Cucumber Sandwiches.

Delicious sandwiches may be made by dipping thin slices of fresh young cucumbers in well-seasoned French dressing and placing, with a sprinkling of finely shopped fresh mint, between slices of white bread spread with unsalted butter. These sandwiches should be put together as short a time as possible before serving, and, except the butter, everything used should be very cold.

Weston Williams will be one of the ushers. A reception will follow the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John M. Linsley.

BLAME HOBBLE SKIRT FOR BASEBALL DEFEAT

Baseball teams made up of young and young men engaged in a lively contest on the Watchung Hunt club grounds, Saturday afternoon, the young women winning by a score of 11 to 9. The fact that the young men were handicapped by being obliged to wear "hobble skirts," and bat and throw left-handed, accounts in a large measure for their defeat.

Miss Susanne Wharton and Miss Jean Wharton captained the women's team, while William Flanders directed the destinies of his aggregation. E. S. Hooley acted as umpire, and the young men agree that he favored the fair sex in all of his decisions.

Among the young women who played were Miss Florence Stewart, pitcher; Miss Susanne Wharton, catcher; and the Misses Elizabeth Mc Gee, Jean Wharton, Marion Hall, who filled other positions. William Flanders, Phillip Larned, Jack Van Deventer, William Grandee were among the men who played.

CLERGYMAN PLEADS FOR GARBAGE SYSTEM

Incidental to his sermon in the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday night, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire touched upon the city's lack of a system of garbage disposal. He declared that the present condition to be a disgrace to the community and among other things said.

"I have often noticed the foul, ill-smelling carts moving through the streets and many times have opened my nose in them. The present system is one that should be done away with as speedily as possible for the sake of all."

Mr. Maguire's sermon was on the subject, "The Widow's Son," with the text: "Young man, I say unto thee, arise," Luke 7-14. He referred to Christ's miracle in restoring the widow's son to life after he had been mourned as dead. He mentioned the funeral which he described as a city funeral.

"There is no difference today between a city and county funeral. In the latter, the bell tolls, the mourners move slowly and there is respect shown everywhere, but in the city the funeral procession is jostled by cars and foul, ill-smelling wagons." This led to Mr. Maguire's references to the antiquated system of garbage disposal, after which he proceeded along the original discourse.

MISS GRACE KARR'S PUPILS GIVE A RECITAL.

An informal recital was given Saturday afternoon by the pupils and friends of Miss Grace P. Karr, at the home of the latter, 1105 Putnam avenue. A special feature was the duet from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, by Miss Kubierschky and Miss Karr. Other selections, both classical and popular, were rendered by Miss Ruth Kubierschky, Miss Lucy B. West, Miss Grace A. West, Miss Eleanor V. Searing, Miss Marjorie P. Searing, Miss Minnie Bantle, Miss Catherine H. Stout. Recitations were given by Miss Lucy B. West, Miss Muriel C. Kubierschky, Miss Eleanor J. Bucklin and Miss Marjorie P. Searing.

REV. C. H. MALLERY OBSERVES FIRST ANNIVERSARY AS RECTOR

Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, observed the first anniversary of his rectorship in this city, Sunday, conducting the usual services at his church. During the past year Mr. Mallery has performed a good work, increasing the membership of his parish, as well as the interest in every department. He and his people are united and the coming year looks especially promising for the work in the West End of the city.

The various societies have resumed their work for the fall and winter, and many affairs are being planned to assist in increasing the membership and interest. The Men's Club and the Young People's Society are among the leading interests in the parish, while the Ladies' Guild, under the rector's direction is doing a good work.

The personal property of Aaron Bender, in storage on Park avenue, was attached Saturday on proceedings brought in the District court by L. C. Whitall. It is charged that Bender is an absconding debtor.

Finals in Tennis Tournament.

C. L. Hand and Miss Irene Dunham defeated R. B. Titsworth and Miss Louise Fuller, 6-4, 6-3, in the finals of the tennis tournament at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, thereby winning the trophy offered by the club. The match was well played, the couples being evenly paired.

The chief event of interest at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, was the second round of play for the championship, first, second and third sixteens and the first round for the defeated at-bits of the first, second and third sixteens, for which prizes were offered. The course was thronged with players throughout the day, and many fine scores were returned in competition. The results of the play follow:

Second round—championship—C. B. Morgan defeated W. Lester Glenney, 3 up and 1 to play; Arthur Murphy defeated J. Whitney Baker, 1 up, (21 holes); H. R. Stockton defeated W. T. Glenney, 1 up; Frank C. Talmadge defeated S. D. Lounsbery, 1 up.

Second round—second sixteen—W. R. Kaufman 16, defeated E. B. Shoemaker, 12, by default; L. G. Carman 12, defeated E. T. Willson 10, 2 up; C. W. King 25, defeated S. P. Wood 19, 1 up; R. H. Cox 20, defeated O. W. Gott 13, 2 up.

Second round—third sixteen—P. H. Stewart, jr., defeated Howard Huntington 18, by default; C. M. Church 23, defeated Harold Serrell 25, 6 up and 4 to play; L. H. Gates 27, deefated A. W. Kleinecke 25, 1 up; W. A. Bourn 26, defeated C. C. Riggs 24(0), 1 up (2 holes).

First round defeated eight—first sixteen—H. D. Hibbard defeated W. H. Rogers, 1 up; R. G. Morse defeated Dudley H. Barrows, by default; R. S. Rowland defeated Willard Wadsworth, 4 up and 3 to play; Morris J. Dumont defeated J. E. Erickson, 1 up.

First round defeated eight—second sixteen—C. C. Burke 15, defeated E. J. Patterson 19, 2 up and 1 to play; 16-17, E. Hopton 24, defeated A. M. Collens 12, by default; H. P. Fox, 18, defeated Clifton Wharton, Jr., 14, by default; E. P. Goodwin 15, defeated S. H. Patterson 14, 7 up and 5 to play.

First round defeated eight—third sixteen—D. G. Weems 27, defeated G. F. Earl 18, by default; G. S. Clay 20, defeated L. H. VanBuren 22, 4 up and 3 to play; B. F. Kraffert 20, defeated H. L. Hall 21, 1 up (19 holes); one match not finished.

W. E. LOUGH AND R. V. CARPENTER IN FINAL

The event of greatest interest at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, was, perhaps, the semifinal round for the club championship. W. E. Lough defeated E. Bird, 2 up and R. V. Carpenter together in the final round which is to be played on Wednesday, and it should result in a close and exciting match as they are two of this club's best players.

In the weekly competition for the President's, golf club and Oakmont cups, there scores were posted:

U. G. Tingley, 90, 24-66; W. V. Byard, 94, 21-73; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 93, 16-77; R. V. Carpenter, 108, 28-80; W. E. Lough, 106, 23-83; Dr. E. A. Rundquist, 93, 8-85.

The club tried to arrange another match game with the Colonia Country Club next Saturday, but was unable to do so. Instead, a game will be played with the golf club from Bound Brook on the local links. Last season these clubs played a match, and the result was very close.

DAVID J. SCOTT WEDS MISS MARY ANDERSON.

Miss Mary Anderson, daughter of Mrs. George Anderson, of Clearview, Somerville, and David J. Scott, son of the late Walter Scott, of this city, were married Saturday afternoon, at the home of the bride's mother by Rev. Clarence Clark Sylvester, rector of St. John's P. E. church, Somerville. Owing to a recent death in the family of the bride the wedding was attended only by the immediate relatives of the couple. There were no attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott are motoring through the State on their wedding trip and will be at home to their friends after November 1. The groom is general manager of the Walter Scott Company. He is a graduate of Yale Un'versity.

PLANTS IN A ROOM.

We cannot esteem too highly the value of plants about a room. They become in time real friends. Hardiest and best is the aspidistra, for neither draught nor gas affects it and if a little neglected in the matter of watering it shows no notice, and summer and winter its glossy green leaves bear witness to the care bestowed upon it. Palms, though graceful and very ornamental, are delicate and disappointing plants. Ferns need constant attention, but always repay care.

For the centre of a springtime dining table nothing can be prettier than a china bowl planted with small ferns and hyacinths, or ferns and tulips; and as the bulbs die off they can be drawn out, and the gaps can always be filled with cut daffodils. There is no limit to the delight given by flowers. In our sadness they are our constant friends.

R. C. FINCH'S HARD LUCK

"Nasturtium" Last of Valuable Stable of Hunters is Dead.

HAD TO SHOOT THE ANIMAL

"Harry Baylor," "Lady Potentate" and "Bounder" Are Also Gone —A Series of Mishaps Costly to Mr. Finch.

Closely following the death of "Harry Baylor," the fine hunter owned by Rufus C. Finch, of Park avenue, which occurred a week ago at Millbrook, N. Y., as the result of an injury, Mr. Finch sustained another severe loss on Saturday when his thoroughbred hunter, "Nasturtium," fell at the driving club track, broke his leg and had to be shot. The animal was being trained for the hunts this fall, Hollis, Mr. Finch's stable boy, being up. In some unaccountable way the horse stumbled and broke its leg. The owner was notified and he gave orders to have the animal shot.

This makes the fifth valuable hunter lost by Finch during the past two years, representing a value of about $3,000. About a year and a half ago, Mr. Finch lost "Bounder," whose sire won the Baltimore Derby, and three weeks later "Lady Potentate" died. The death of "Bounder" was quite remarkable. The animal broke its neck in a race at Cedarhurst and ran a quarter of a mile, when it fell dead. "Lady Potentate" had to be shot, having broken its leg at Elkwood Park. He also lost "Demi-Tasse" through an injury.

"Harry Baylor" sprained a tendon in the leg while training at Millbrook, the leg swelling to such an extent that the combined efforts of several expert veterinaries proved futile. This fine animal was formerly owned by Hugh Gormley and had a great record as a hunter and jumper.

"Nasturtium," was a recent purchase by Mr. Finch and the animal gave promise of doing fine work in the coming hunts. Mr. Finch, who keenly feels his losses, has the sympathy of his many friends.

WALP FOUND GUILTY; SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Mayor Fisk rendered the following decision Monday in the city court in the case of Patrolman Andrew Saffron against Warren Walp, whom the patrolman charged had been disorderly. "The question for the Court to decide was 'was the arrest warranted and is the defendant guilty?' From the evidence submitted the Court is of the opinion that the arrest was justified, and if citizens expect and exact courtesy from an officer he must in return respect the authority of the officer.

"The evidence plainly shows that the defendant in this action deliberately and intentionally, both times he passed Patrolman Saffron, did scoff at him in a sneering and contemptuous manner, holding the officer up to public ridicule. If this sort of thing is allowed to continue our police officers will lose the respect of the public and their influence and power to maintain order would be seriously impaired.

"If a police officer is to maintain order in an effective way he must command respect. I therefore find the defendant guilty and suspend sentence."

Walp attempted to take exception to this verdict, but he was not allowed to proceed with a speech he wanted to make to the Mayor.

SOME INTERESTING MATCHES IN P. C. C. TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The mixed doubles tennis tournament started at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, will be continued on Wednesday. On Saturday, in the first round, Miss Schuyler and W. H. Merrihow defeated Mr. and Mrs. Frank Frost; Miss Fleming and Owen Fleming defeated Miss Brown and Harold Brown, their score being 6-2, 4-6, 6-3; Miss Bakewell and Henry Brower defeated Mrs. W. R. Tyler and Arthur Lovell; Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Collens defeated Miss Elsie Goddard and Lawrence Tweedy, 6-2, 6-2; Miss Titus and Mr. Stevenson defeated Miss Florence Wildey and E. A. Stevenson.

In the second round Mr. and Mrs. Collens lost one set to Miss Fleming and Owen Fleming, and the second set was all even; Percy Brown and Miss Ashwell and Miss Wildey and Edward A. Stevenson were all even on two sets.

Attendants at Brooklyn Wedding.

Miss Ruth Alpers, of Westfield, was one of the bridesmaids at the marriage on Saturday evening in St. Agnes Chapel, Brooklyn, of Miss Irene Goodrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Goodrich, to Edward Newall Hodges. Monroe H. Long, of this city and Ernest Alpers, of Westfield, are included among the ushers.

RECORD SCORES WILSON AS POLITICAL BLUFFER

George L. Record, of Jersey City, has made public a statement concerning the action of Dr. Woodrow Wilson regarding Mr. Record's acceptance of Dr. Wilson's challenge to joint debate. Mr. Record says:

"The great Dr. Wilson, who is to lift the politics of New Jersey to a new and higher plane, at the first test has gone down to the 'Jim' Nugent plane and begins to dodge and pettifog. On Monday night he issued a challenge in these words: 'I challenge any politician in New Jersey to publicly debate on the public platform with me any public question.'

"This was a proper challenge, and from a man of Dr. Wilson's high standing it promised immense advantage to the public. It meant that we would have discussed before the people in a series of great meetings the important public questions of the day. It meant that the pernicious evil of our politics would be thoroughly aired; that the proposed remedies would be discussed in such a way as to arouse an overwhelming public opinion for specific reform measures.

"All of this Dr. Wilson ought to welcome. It means purer politics, an enlightened public opinion and the dragging of politics from dark and secret places out into the open. I accepted this challenge in the spirit in which it was made. I am qualified by my long continued and manifested interest in the specific public questions which are now before the public to discuss them intelligently at least, if not as ably as some others.

"The moment I accept this challenge, however, he comes back at me through 'Jim' Nugent with a new condition, designed obviously to prevent the coming off of any real debate. The new condition is that the Republican State Committee shall put me forward as its accredited and avowed representative.

"Whatever the committee may do, it is perfectly plain that this condition is put forward in the hope and in the belief that the State committee will refuse to accept his condition, under cover of which refusal he obviously plans to run away.

"He issues boldly an unqualified challenge, and when it is accepted immediately hedges and puts up a qualification designed to prevent the debate. This is plain dodge, and will so be construed by the public.

"Dr. Wilson had a perfect right to put up a challenge to the State committee that it put forward Mr. Lewis or any accredited representative, but those instead to challenge any politician in New Jersey upon any public question. The challenge was worthy of Dr. Wilson as the public have hitherto looked upon him. The dodge will come as a shock to his admirers, and if persisted in will destroy whatever chance of election he previously had."

The Past.

Still shall the soul around it call
The shadows which it gathered here,
And painted on the eternal wall
The past shall reappear.

Think ye the notes of holy song
On Milton's tuneful ear have died?
Think ye that Raphael's angel throng
Has vanished from his side?

Oh, no! We live our life again;
Our warmth touched or coldly dim
The pictures of the past remain,
Man's work shall follow him!

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Affair Given for Miss Madeline Blair.

A pleasant birthday or "dove" party was given Saturday evening for Miss Madeline Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Blair, at her home on Duer street. Miss Blair's birthday anniversary occurred a week ago, but the party could not be arranged until Saturday night. The party of young people called while Miss Blair was out, and when she returned she found them all seated in the parlor and the surprise was complete. The evening was spent playing games and enjoying a program of music after which refreshments were served. Miss Blair received a number of handsome gifts.

STATE FEDERATION AT WESTFIELD ON OCT. 22

Officers of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs met recently and arranged for the fall meeting of the clubs, which will take place in Westfield, Saturday, October 22.

The topics for discussion are to be timely. "Honest Weights and Measures" will be one. The speaker, Commissioner Driscoll, of New York city. Mme. Von Klenner, president of the New York Woman's Press Club, will make an address on "The possibility of a State Musical Festival." Mrs. William Cummings Story will then discuss, "Civil Administration." "Women on School Boards" will be another subject discussed, and Miss Florence Winchell, of the Teachers' College, Columbia University, will describe "Textile Adulteration." Mr. William H. George, Boundbrook, of the George, Jr., Republic at Freehold, N. Y., will tell of the New Jersey branch of the republic at Flemington. Miss Lucia Forest Eastman will furnish a musical program. Miss Lydia M. Hayes has been chosen to speak of the work of the State Commission for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Blind.

A part of the day's program will be a survey of the biennial meeting of the general federation. Mrs. Henry H. Dawson will speak of "The Working Side of the Biennial," and Mrs. Galen J. Perrett, Mrs. H. C. Warren and Mrs. Elizabeth Cone will report, and Mrs. E. H. V. Mansell, of the State Home for Girls, will tell of the value of clubs for girls and boys.

ERASTUS C. MALTBY, AGED 67 YRS. DEAD

Erastus C. Maltby, aged 67 years, a well-known resident of this city for thirty years, died at his home on Plainfield avenue, Saturday night from apoplexy. He had been in failing health for several months, but was only confined to his home for the past five weeks. Mr. Maltby was a native of New York city, and during his residence here he lived in retirement, although he was a familiar figure on the street, he took no active interest in city affairs.

Mr. Maltby's brother, Charles R. Maltby, died on March 30, last. The latter was a well known wholesale grocer in New York and at Corning, N. Y. The former's wife died about eight years ago. He is survived by a son, Charles S. Maltby and one daughter, Mrs. Harry McIntosh; also one brother who lives at Corning, N. Y.

STATE TRUST CO. OFFICES INSPECTED BY BIG CROWD.

At least 2,500 people inspected the new quarters of the State Trust Company on Saturday night and many complimentary remarks were heard about the new equipment. The greatest interest centered around the big steel vault whose mechanism and burglar-proof qualities were explained by F. H. Bucklin, vice-president of the Manganese Steel Safe Co., and other officials.

Handsome floral pieces of the event were distributed until late, but the interest did not abate on that account. The marvelous construction and operation of the door of the vault kept the curiosity of the visitors up to concert pitch until the doors were closed. The bank was handsomely decorated with green and potted ferns, and the officials used every endeavor to make the reception a pleasing one to their visitors.

"My husband's."

"It is hung with fatal effect."

"So was my husband."—Chicago Journal.

More than seven thousand people knelt when at 5:30 Sunday afternoon Rev. Dean Martin Gessner, the venerable pastor of St. Patrick's church, Elizabeth, pronounced the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at the close of the services of the rally of the Holy Name Societies of the Catholic church. Five thousand members of the society paraded the streets from four until five o'clock, gathering in a solid mass at St. Mary's school park to listen to speeches from eminent members of the society and the clergy. Fourteen bands accompanied the marchers many of them from out of town.

Forming on Watchung avenue at 3:45 the line of march led up Watchung avenue to Manning avenue in the borough, thence to Somerset street, to Central avenue, to Grant avenue, to West Fifth street the church grounds. Every marcher was provided with a blue pennant inscribed H. N. S. and they presented with their banners and the American flags an imposing sight.

On arrival at the park, where the surrounding streets were thronged with thousands of people, Rev. R. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's, delivered a short speech of welcome in which he expressed his gratitude for the presence of so many societies of the church and society. He then introduced the principal speaker, Rev. Dr. Joseph J. McMahon, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, of New York, who spoke in part as follows:

"Such an outpouring of men must have a profound meaning. It is power and the motive of a great idea that binds you together. Order and discipline are set forth upon your banners which renders this celebration unique. It is a protestation of your faith in the Holy Name of God, your protest against profanity and shows your loyalty to your faith. It also makes sure that if your minds being pure you will tolerate nothing impure, and your actions in your whole lives will show the outward grace.

"It is because of your inward feelings of veneration for the name of God that your public utterances are clean. You are banded together to put down blasphemy wherever you hear it and therefore you are a power to be reckoned with. Unbridled power may become a means of ruin and ruin. You represent a great moral force in the communities in which you live and your obligation extends to every other individual. Your lives should be such that your church can be judged by them. You are the living example of the concrete church and upon each of you rests a great responsibility. If you do not live what you profess to believe you are not right with God.

"Many members are pilloried in the public press because of their slipping back, but Christian, Catholic morality is needed in commercial, social and political life to insure success and those who have gone back have none to blame but themselves. Practical devotion to Jesus Christ will accomplish everything for all of you. The test of your devotion to God is to be found in your practical love for Him. How shall the Kingdom of God come into the hearts of men? First, by protecting and reserving peaceful the church on earth; second, by never being separated from God. His soul shall sanctify us as we live clean, upright lives and last, the acceptance of the Blessed Sacrament and by fighting evil thoughts and putting on the whole armor of God.

"Live up to and think only of that One who died for you."

Following Dr. McMahon J. A. Donnelly, former assistant attorney general of New York State, delivered a short address and declared that he is an inactive Catholic who can only look upon the big gathering without being impressed. He said that a man who would fail to be found among the Christian people for fear of ridicule was of absolutely no use in the community in which he lives. He congratulated Father Bogan upon the great showing made in his church and for their loyalty to the church.

In the interim between the speeches Father Bogan read a cablegram sent to Pope Pius X, deploring and condemning the utterances of Mayor Nathan, of Rome.

Rev. Father Bogan desires The Daily Press to extend his appreciation to Mayors Charles J. Fisk and Newton B. Smalley for their courtesy in the matter of permits and the police assistance, and to the police department itself for the able manner in which the immense crowd was handled.

LEWIS TOURS MIDDLESEX

TELLS WHERE HE STANDS.

Favors Improvement in Automobile and Public Utilities Laws—To Fulfill His Pledges.

In an automobile tour of Middlesex county yesterday afternoon, Vivian M. Lewis, Republican candidate for governor, stopped at Dunellen, New Market, South Plainfield and other suburban towns. At each one he was greeted by a large crowd that received his addresses with evidences of sincere enthusiasm.

The gubernatorial candidate spoke to the largest gathering of the afternoon at Dunellen, where fully 500 people had congregated in front of the postoffice. He spoke for fully half an hour and was frequently interrupted by applause. The meeting was opened by County Committeeman W. S. Frederick, a personal friend of Mr. Lewis, who introduced Mayor William Sandford. The latter spoke for ten minutes and then presented the candidate.

Mr. Lewis prefaced his remarks with praise for Woodrow Wilson who he asserted to be a capable man as far as intelligence and learning is concerned, but not the kind that makes a successful governor. He told the citizens that in the event of his election he would absolutely hold to the promises he has made and give the people the best legislation in his power. He declared himself in favor of changes to the employers' liability act and urged improvements to the rate question in the Public Utilities act. Mr. Lewis also referred to the automobile law and stated that he is in favor of a reconstruction that will be fair and impartial to owners and non-owners alike. He avoided figures and statistics but presented his views on everything in a way that appealed to his listeners.

Mr. Lewis was accompanied by Congressman B. F. Howell and the Middlesex Assembly candidates. Messrs. Von Minden, Schenck and Ten Broeck, but none of them spoke owing to limited time. The party proceeded to Perth Amboy, where a big rally was held last night.

Wilson S. Frederick, who introduced Mr. Lewis to the Dunellen voters individually, is a boyhood friend of the candidate. They were born within three miles of each other in Passaic county only a month apart.

FRANK J. SHATTLE, SR., DIES ON BIRTHDAY

Frank J. Shattle, Sr., one of the oldest employees of the Potter Printing Press Works and a well-known machinist, died at his boarding house 240 Spooner avenue last night from chronic Bright's disease. Mr. Shattle had just completed his seventieth year, his birthday occuring yesterday. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Frank, Jr., and Elmer E. Shattle.

Mr. Shattle was born in Wittenberg, Germany, and came to this country when a young man of twenty. He was an accomplished machinist which trade he followed all his life. He was in the employ of the Potter concern for thirty-nine years, having come to Plainfield with that company when it moved here from Norwich, Conn. He was highly esteemed by the firm for whom he worked so long and was looked up to as a good model to follow by his younger fellow workers, with whom he was a favorite.

Surprise for Miss Martin.

A surprise party was given to Miss Dorothy Martin, of Duer street, Monday night, the affair being arranged by Miss Madeline Blair. The evening was spent playing games and having a good social time, after which refreshments were served. Those present were the Misses Rose Andrews, Charlotte Wadams, Lucy Douglass, Mabel Douglass, Marion Blair and Madeline Blair and Harold Wadsworth, Clarence Higgins, Walter Smith, Ronald Schenck, Walter Thomas and Arthur Martin.

Will Tell of Vacation.

Rev. John S. Zelie will give an account of his summer's experiences among the cathedrals and churches of England and Wales at the mid-week meeting which takes place tonight at 8 o'clock in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church Sunday school room.

HUMANE SOCIETIES MEET

MANY FOREIGN DELEGATES.

Representatives From Persia, Japan, China and Other Foreign Countries Discuss Animal Problems.

Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood, special agent of the local S. P. C. A. who attendd the recent convention of the American International Humane Society at Washington, D. C., has returned home and given out some interesting data of the convention, which had representatives from nearly every country in Europe and Asia as well as delgates from the various states. Two receptions and a banquet marked the entertainment provided by the Washington association.

Ali Kuli Kahn, Charge d 'Affaires, of the Persian Legation, gave a talk on the work the society is doing in his country. He said that through the children the parents of that country are learning to see that anima's are deserving of humane treatment Masyiro Honda, the Japanese delegate, said that as civilization has come into their country it brought with it some of the practices of the westerners who introduced it, but that their religion teaches the Japanese to be kind to animals. Judge Li Fang Ah Loo, of the Supreme court of China, at Peking, said that kindness in replacing cruelty in China with humans as well as dumb animals. Especially is this true with foot binding of the girls.

Joseph N. Francolini, the Italian representative, stated that in his country it required the evidence of but one witness to convict of cruelty but that in other crimes this one witness business was a handicap. E. G. Fairholme, an English delegate, said that the society in London has a system as nearly perfect as the police system. They have telephone and telephone outfits of equal efficiency and are consequently enabled to great work. Of the sixteen animal ambulances in the city of London one was the gift of Alfred Vanderbilt.

MISS GALVIN WEDS FREDERICK F. NOLAN

Miss Nellie Galvin, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Galvin, of Raritan, and Frederick F. Nolan, of this city, were married at 3 o'clock this afternoon in St. Bernard's church, Raritan, in the presence of a large numebr of relatives and friends. Father Zimmer, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride was attended by Miss Margaret Mc Williams, formerly of Raritan, but now of Plainfield, as bridesmaid, and Fred J. Harding, also of this city was the best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George A. Liebold, in Raritan. After the wedding trip the couple will reside in this city.

The bride is well-known here, where she has visited frequently, and many friends from this city attended the wedding. The groom is a popular ball player, being a member of the Bound Brook club. He formerly played with the New Brunswick and Plainfield clubs. The members of the Bound Brook club presented Mr. Nolan with a handsome parlor table, and many other costly gifts were received by the couple.

Mr. Nolan is in the employ of the New Jersey Central, having charge of the signals on the line in the Plainfield district. He formerly was employed by the Levering &Garrigues Iron and Steel Company.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES THE CAUSE OF FIGHT.

Martin Duffy, of East Second street, was arraigned on a charge of intoxication and fighting this morning, the fracas having occurred in Westcott's saloon shortly before 11 o'clock last night. Mayor Fisk, who presided in the city court this morning in the absence of Judge William N. Runyon, suspended sentence because of mitigating circumstances. Duffy was represented by William G. DeMeza.

A charge of non-support which has also been lodged against Duffy by his wife, was postponed for a hearing on November 10. The scrap of last night was the outcome of Duffy's domestic troubles in which one Charles Hagrarty, of Newark, is alleged to be implicated.

Miss Helen O'Keefe, of West Sixth street, is entertaining friends from New York.

RECORD QUIZZES WILSON

Eighteen Questions are Put to Democratic Nominee to Answer.

ARE CONTAINED IN A LETTER.

Writer Says He Doesn't Believe in "Boss" System and Asks for a Solution of Problem.

With the publication yesterday of a letter written to Dr. Woodrow Wilson by George L. Record began the epistolary debate which is to be participated in by the Republican candidate for Representative from the Ninth Congressional district and the democratic gubernatorial nominee. When Mr. Record accepted the challenge of Dr. Wilson to debate, the Princeton educator said that he believed that it would be found that he and Mr. Record were agreed substantially on the issues now before the voters and that they probably differed only in details.

To bring out the truth of error of Dr. Wilson's surmise, Mr. Record in his letter sets forth the cardinal principles of the progressive-Republicans in such a way that Dr. Wilson may answer "yes" or "no" to each of them. Where Mr. Record desires something more than a categorical answer he says so. An illustration of the latter kind of question is that of the "boss system." Mr. Record undertakes to describe what he understands by the term and asks Dr. Wilson if he believes it should be abolished and, if so, how he means to abolish it.

"The trolley company in Jersey City obtained from our public officers extremely valuable franchises in our streets," says Mr. Record. "The value of these franchises may be seen by comparing Jersey City with Toronto. Jersey City gets for these privileges exceeding $6,000 a year; Toronto a much smaller city, gets some $600,000 a year. Robert Davis, one of your principal backers in the State Convention, was then, as now, the democratic boss of Hudson county. Influential with officials and powerful in controlling democratic nominations for office. Subsequently the son of Davis and another of his political followers, Representative Kinkead, turn up as the owners of the very valuable privilege of the advertising in the street cars, not only of Jersey City but of all North Jersey, a privilege said to net these gentlemen the tidy sum of $40,000 a year. Neither Davis nor Kinkead knew anything about this business, nor did they pay for getting the highest bid. That it was a political and not a business arrangement is shown by the fact that when Everett Colby ran for Senator in Essex county Kinkead refused to receive his advertisement at any price. Can you deny openly that not fair to assume that more is done secretly?

"I call this the boss system. I do not hesitate to call it the most dangerous condition in the public life of our State and nation today—an evil that has destroyed representative government, for the time being at least, and in its place set up a government privilege. I say that while this system manifests itself more plainly in the party that is in the majority, the minority party organization is always secretly in the game. This system, and this alone, accounts for the Republican 'Board of Guardians,' under whose leadership bills aimed at corporation privilege are in power, and the Democratic 'Overlords,' under whose leadership exactly thes ame thing occurs when the Democrats are in power.

"In order that your position on this vital question may be made clear, I ask the following questions:

"Do you admit that the boss system exists as I have described it? If so, how do you propse to abolish it?

"In referring to the 'Board of Guardians' do you mean such Republican leaders as Baird, Murphy, Kean, and Stokes? Wherein do the relations to the special interests of such leaders differ from the relations of the same interests of such democratic leaders as Smith, Nugent and David?

"I join you in condemning the republican 'Board of Guardians.' I have been fighting them for years, and shall continue to fight them. Will you join me in denouncing the democratic 'Overlords' as parties to the same political system? If not, why not?

"You say the Democratic party has been reorganized and the Republican party has not. Can a political party be reorganized without changing either its leaders or its old leaders changing their point of view and their political character? Will you claim that either of these events has taken place in the Democratic party? If yes, upon what do you base your conclusion?"

In all eighteen questions are asked by Mr. Record, and he has intimated

TORTURED SQUIRREL; FINED FIVE DOLLARS

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Mayor C. J. Fisk to Charles Nichols, of West Fourth street, this morning in the city court. "A great big man like you torturing a squirrel. It's a fine example to set your children. It makes me disgusted. I'll fine you five dollars, but you ought to be locked up."

The Mayor's ire was roused when George O. Stevens told him this morning of the attempt that Nichols had made to capture a squirrel last Sunday afternoon by stoning the little animal. He even went so far as to pull some of the hair from the squirrel's tail.

According to Mr. Stevens' story he saw a crowd on West Fourth street composed of men and boys nearly all of whom were throwing stones into a tree. He inquired what was up and learned that the crowd was stoning a squirrel. He protested twice, but no attention was paid to him. He telephoned police headquarters and returned to the scene, but the stone throwing had stopped. He was subject to some saucy talk from Nichols and then determined to push the case which he did with the above result. His action was warmly commended by Rev. Charles S. Kemble.

MRS. LILLARD BRIDE OF LOUIS H. JACOBI JR.

Mrs. Theo White Lillard, daughter of Mrs. Clara White, formerly of Elmira, N. Y., but now of Plainfield, was married at 8 o'clock last night to Louis Harold Jacobi, Jr., also of this city. The ceremony was performed in the apartments of the bride in the Stirling building on Park avenue, Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of the Uniterian church, officiating. Only the imediate relatives and a few friends of the bride and groom were present. There were no attendants.

The bride is talented as a violinist, being a pupil of several well-known teachers and she is now a teacher of violin and violin soloist, which she will continue here. She recently removed from Elmira, where she lived for many years. She is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, of North Plainfield.

The groom is associated with the Hallet & Davis Piano Company, of this city, and is also a talented musician, being bass soloistat the Church of the Holy Cross. The couple will reside in the Stirling building.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Mrs. Clara White, mother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. R. M. White, of Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. James Towart, of Montour Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. John T. Davidson, of Elmira, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Miller and Miss Hope Irene Miller, of the borough, and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ochs, of this city; Mrs. Ochs was a schoolmate of the bride.

MISS MARY F. THOMPSON WEDS W. H. M'NEIL

Miss Mary Forbes Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Thompson, of Rockview avenue, the borough, and Laurence Harvey Mc Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mc Neill, of Mobile, Alabama, were married at noon yesterday at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few friends. Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' church, performed the ceremony. The bride was gowned in white and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Frank Thompson, brother of the bride, was best man.

A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony and the couple left for a short trip. They will return on Saturday, when a large reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents, two hundred invitations having been issued for the affair.

The bride has been a resident of the borough for several years. She is a graduate of the Teachers' College in New York, and last year she was principal of a teacher at Rye Seminary, Rye, N. Y.

The groom is engaged as an architect by the Board of Education of Mobile, where he and his family are well and favorably known. He is a brother of Mrs. Mary Senelloss, the novelist, whose nom de plume of none de plume of "Sidney McCall," are well-known throughout this country. After an extended wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. McNeill will make their home in Mobile.

FOR 'VOTES FOR WOMEN'

PRESENTS STRONG ARGUMENT.

That interest is increasing in the Equal Suffrage movement in this city was manifest last night when upward of a hundred women and several of the sterner sex gathered in Y. M. C. A. hall to hear a lecture on "Right and Strength in Equal Suffrage" given under the auspices of the Plainfield and North Plainfield Equal Suffrage League by former Mayor William L. Saunders. Mr. Saunders spoke for about two hours and held the attention of his audience throughout.

Mr. Saunders reviewed the work that has been done in recent years by members of the leagues in various parts of the world, laying particular stress upon the admirable results obtained in the state of Western states. Before touching his subject, the speaker paid a tribute to the late Mrs. Julia Ward Howe in which he said: "One can ill afford to speak on the subject which has brought us here tonight without first paying tribute to that grand mother and teacher who but yesterday was called to her last resting place. Julia Ward Howe was great among women; a true patriot; a friend of the oppressed; an earnest suffragist. At the age of eighty-four she addressed the legislature of Massachusetts as follows: 'We shall not obtain suffrage simply because we want it, nor shall we fail to do so because others don't want it. We shall get it because it is right that we should have it. Civilization will sweep away these barriers so evidently a relic of absolute barbarism.'

"As we pay the tribute of our admiration and our tears to this prophetical soul, let us say, 'Calm on the bosom of thy God, Fair spirit, rest thee now.'"

Among other things Mr. Saunders said: "To vote is simply to express one's opinion. A ballot is the instrument used. Speaking generally the only real qualification governing its use is intelligence, for without intelligence one's opinion on any subject is worthless. A class in Sunday school will vote upon the question of making the teacher a present, the members of a board of directors vote upon resolutions; directors of companies vote upon questions relating to the business. The practice of voting is carried on wherever people having common interests are desirous of recording the opinion of a majority. Limitations are placed upon voters, as for instance in a club, failure to pay dues disqualifies; stockholders vote according to their holdings but except in matters of government, who ever heard of disqualification because of gender?

"If we accept that great democratic principle that all just powers of government are derived from the consent of the governed and if we agree with our revolutionary fathers that taxation without representation is tyranny, then is it not true that the political disfranchisement because of sex is wrong.

"It is a striking impeachment of our laws when we realize that this male, a creature but little removed from the animal, might emigrate to America, live in the United States for five years, and then cast his vote for a representative who might levy a tax upon Mrs. Harriman, Mrs. Sage and Miss Gould! That the only difference between the mental faculties of the sexes is one of education, civilization and environment is generally admitted by thinking people. As someone has said, 'We sit down at the breakfast table as human beings not as men and women.' Intelligence is not a matter of sex. Education and privilege to wor kare now extended equally to men and women.

"Even admitting the right to vote depends on one's capacity to defend the laws, we must recognize the changed conditions governing defense. Fighting is no longer a matter of physical force, but of resource. Money is mightier than the sword. War is now conducted on mechanical, not physical lines. It is now more a matter of machinery than men. Can it be disputed that women have the power to supply the machinery of war? One might name four women in the United States who have wealth enough to pay all the expenses of a great war.

"If no men were allowed to vote except those who are able and willing to do millitary and police duty, women might consistently be debarred for that reason. But so long as the old, the infirm, the halt, the lame and the blind are freely admitted to the ballot box, some better reason

HEART DISEASE THE CAUSE.

While Waiting for Trolley to Plainfield, She is Stricken and Passes Away Shortly Afterwards.

Mrs. Hugo Maul, wife of the proprietor of the Washingtonville hotel at Watchung, died suddenly, last evening, as she was waiting for a trolley car in Roselle to return to this city. Death came before she could tell who she was and as there was nothing about her clothing to reveal identification the body remained unclaimed in Pratt's morgue until noon today. Her relatives had been searching for her all morning and a son-in-law, Walter DeVerre, of Roselle Park, at whose home she had been yesterday, called to see if the unknown woman was she. He identified the body immediately and word was sent to her relatives at Watchung.

Mrs. Maul left home yesterday in response to word that Mrs. DeVerre was ill and it caused her to become somewhat excited. She spent the day at her daughter's home, leaving there last evening to return to Watchung. The car was just approaching a she collapsed and fell. She was carried to the home of U. W. Smith's house at First avenue and Chestnut street, where she died as Dr. Strickland arrived in response to a hurry call. The physician pronounced heart failure as the cause.

Mrs. Maul was about sixty-three years old and was widely known in this vicinty. The family lived on West Seventh street before taking possession of the hotel at Watchung a few years ago. Beside Mrs. DeVerre she leaves another daughter, Mrs. Augusta, Furmah, of Warrenville, and two sons, Otto Maul, of New York, and Hugo Maul, Jr., of Watchung.

FELL OFF A LADDER AND FRACTURED ANKLE

Theodore LaRue, of 610 New street, who is employed by John H. Cose, the slater fell off a ladder while working on U. B. Crane's one-story building on East Front street at 11 o'clock this morning, and fractured his left leg at the ankle. Dr. Albert Pitts, whose office is close by, was summoned and had Mr. LaRue removed to the hospital in the police patrol. An X-ray examination was made at the hospital, when the break at the ankle was disclosed. Mr. LaRue will be detained for several weeks.

Mr. LaRue, at the time of the accident, was engaged in repairing the tar roof on Mr. Crane's building. He was ascending the ladder with a bucket of tar, when the ladder tilted, causing Mr. LaRue to lose his balance and fall to the ground. The ladder did not go over, neither did any of the hot tar fall on Mr. LaRue fortunately.

MISS PAULINE SMITH WEDS ARTHUR R. LOIZEAUX.

Last evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Craig place, Miss Pauline Anna Smith, became the bride of Arthur Rushmore Loizeaux, of New York, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the couple. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Duerschner, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church.

After the ceremony, a supper was served and the couple started on their wedding trip to Niagara Falls. The groom is in the publishing business with his father in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Loizeaux will reside in Brooklyn. The wedding march and other music was rendered by George Smith, brother of the bride.

Organized class No. 24, of Trinity Reformed Sunday school, held its quarterly meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Harry Davidson, Laramie road. Twenty-two members and friends of the class were present who, after the business meeting was over, enjoyed a social time and refreshments.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed the class to be in a flourishing condition both financially and in numbers and interest.

Miss Eliza Rangsdale and J. Wesley Garner, colored, of this city, were married Saturday night at Westfield, by Rev. P. W. Ross, pastor of the colored baptist church of that place.

G. O. P. MUNICIPAL RALLY

Fisk and Coriell to Speak at Mass Meeting Monday Night.

TO DISCUSS THE LOCAL ISSUES.

Demonstration to be Held Under the Direction of the City Committee to be a Big Affair.

What is planned as the biggest mass meeting in the campaign here will be held in Reform Hall on Monday night, when the speakers will confine themselves to a presentation of the issues of the municipal election. A rousing ovation is being arranged for the Republican mayoralty nominee, former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, who it is expected will be the chief speaker of the evening.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk has consented to address the voters. His remarks will be devoted to a review of the present Republican administration of affairs. It is his aim to clear up any misunderstandings that may be in the minds of some of the taxpayers as to the handling of the many problems which have confronted his administration. The alleged 'double salary' talk indulged in by Mr. Coriell's opponent will be satisfactorily explained by his honor as will also the work accomplished in the equalization of taxes, as well as the efforts for a solution of the water and sewage disposal problems.

If possible, Judge William N. Runyon, who is touring Morris, Union and Warren counties, will say a few words at the meeting which will be held under the auspices of the City Republican committee. Chairman Walter L. Hetfield will announce the list of speakers and vice presidents within a few days.

MEXICO IS DISCUSSED BY MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Two interesting papers were presented at the meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Mrs. Calvin Boice gave the first paper on "The Geography of Mexico," She said that though geographically near and having been in commercial relations with the rest of the world for over 350 years, there is probably less known about Mexico today than of almost any other country claiming to be civilized. Marvellously picturesque, she said, it had been called a tropical Venice, a semi-barbarous Spain and a new Holy Land. The climate, mines, volcanos and physical aspects were treated by Mrs. Boice who summarized the country as one with extreme of heat and cold, poverty and riches, filth and cleanliness, education and gross ignorance.

A second paper on "The Toltecs," prepared by Miss Marion F. Randolph was read by Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph. The paper was an interesting history of this Mexican people who are supposed to have preceded the Aztecs, and from whom the latter people have inherited many civilized customs and arts common among them, according to tradition. Miss Randolph said the Toltecs had their capital at Tollen in the midst of a very fertile region, the town itself a natural citadel built on the highway of travel. While the people have entirely disappeared their name is a synonym for artificer, so skillful were they in the prosecution of useful arts. Miss Randolph quoted from the historian, Edward John Payne, who said: "To the Toltecs among the early people of the new world, the first place, no less indisputably belongs, than to the Greeks of the old."

Mrs. Ruben Knox, from recent observations made while touring through Mexico, spoke of the great need of the Gospel, the Mexican people though nominally Christians, being as much heathens as the tribes of Africa.

The papers were preceded by a devotional service led by Mrs. George A. Robing.

Hedge Damaged by Fire.

A long, high hedge on what is known as the Stillman property at Grant and Sherman avenues, caught fire at 8.50 last night and threatened serious damage. An alarm was turned in from box 79 and the arrival of the city department checked the flames, about twenty feet of the hedge was destroyed.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN S. S.

Dinner of Officers and Teachers Including Home Department.

BANQUET, MUSIC AND SPEECH.

Adult Bible Class to be Increased—Devotion to the Cause—Rev. Dr. Herring and Others Speak.

The officers and teachers together with the members of the adult Bible class and home department of the First Presbyterian church met for a banquet and social time Friday and heidentally to discuss questions appertaining to the development of the home department as well as the Bible study class. Speeches were made by Rev. Lewis G. Bond, F. O. Dunning, L. I. Gates, superintendent of the Sunday school; L. A. Hunmer and I. B. Hill. G. P. Hinman was an admirable toastmaster. Mrs. B. H. Tugwell rendered several vocal solos, to which encore were demanded and graciously given and Robert Murray sang a Gaelic song besides entertaining the gathering of 110 people with selections on the phonograph. Clifford A. Braider, accompanied Mrs. Tugwell on the piano.

Mr. Hinman in introducing Rev. Mr. Bond said that here was a man who actually filled two positions, but had the distinction of not getting any salary at all, in contra distinction to some of our city officials. Mr. Bond gave an interesting history of the work of the home department of which he is superintendent. The membership has increased from 39 to 145, of which 42 are men. Mr. Bond is also superintendent of the Italian mission, the pastor of which was expected to be on hand to tell of the work. Owing to his absence the topic was not discussed. Those who assist in that department are Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbery, Mrs. William Manning, Mrs. J. Burroughs and Mrs. Howard Mudd. Mr. Bond said the home department was part of the Sunday school proper and as such was a part of the church. The home department is for the study of the Scriptures and is carried on just as vigorously as is the Sunday school.

Mr. Dunning. Speaking of the adult Bible class, said that there are now forty members in the class and that there was room for many more. The teachers are recruited from this class and the more members there are the better. He urged the members of the home department to join as it would be a help to them in their work.

Mr. Gates and Dr. Herring talked upon the subject of Bible study and the necessity for the training of teachers in that particular work so that their usefulness could be increased. Mr. Hill talked about "a has been," or the one who has been identified with the work for years and give some interesting experiences.

TRINITY COMMANDERY ATTENDS A RECEPTION

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., to the number of about twenty, went to Brooklyn Friday upon invitation, and attended the reception given by Clinton Commandery, K. T., of that city, and other Masonic bodies, to Right Eminent Sir John Cardinal Logan, grand commander of the Grand Commandery of the State of New York. Clinton Commandery planned the affair for the reason that Mr. Louden is a member of that commandery.

The Sir Knights met at the Mosque of Khiram Temple, Brooklyn, there being about 600 in line, and several commanderies formed under their individual banners, marched to the residence of Mr. Louden and escorted him to the reception, where he received all the honors due him because of his exalted position.

Among those present were the past commanders of all the commanderies of the metropolitan district; also Most Excellent Grand High Priest Kline and associate officers of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter, together with the select masters of New York State and the Grand Master and associate officers and the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of the State of New York. It was one of the most auspicious Masonic gatherings in the history of New York in several years. Trinity Commandery was the only one outside of the metropolitan district that was invited to the affair.

FASHIONABLE FALL FABRICS.

Simplicity and elegance are the keynote of the new fabrics for fall wear. Chief among them are velvet and its sister, velveteen. The latest variety in the former is what is known as "mouseline velvet," which is of a weight similar to chiffon velvet, but with the pile less closely sheared. These fabrics are nearly always plain colors, such as black and navy blue, but some novelties are shown, such as changeable velvets of black woven with a color. Brocaded velvets, stamped and embossed patterns, hollow-cit cords and corduroys are also included in the list. Satin stripe on serge will also be used in the fall gowns.

Among woolen materials first place must be given to the new material know as ratine. This is a fabric with a soft, semi-rough surface, broken by knots. Wool fabric printed in cashmere patterns and having a velvety surface is also popular, though as yet unnamed.

Satin in black and navy blue is worn more than ever and is used for suits and street wear as it has not been for years. For this purpose the new cloth-backed satin is used, being more durable and warmer than the usual variety.

Moire, taffeta and such transparent goods, as chiffon, marquisettes and mousseline are among the favorites especially when woven with metal wools of dull gold, silver and steel.

Beading continues in favor, beaded cotton crepe and marquisette being well thought of. Damasses and brocades are also seen.

Among regular suitings serges, woven from both loose and tight yarns; India cashmere in the old oriental patterns, soft camel-hair fabrics, mohairs and cotton voiles are the prime favorite.

From all of which there is surely a wide enough choice to suit the most fastidious of women.

A Difficult Reformation.

"Didn't you tell me that if I'd quit smoking I would have several hundred dollars in a few years?"

"Yes," said the ready advisor.

"Well, I stopped five years ago and I haven't saved that money you were talking about."

"But if you had gone on smoking you might have been that much in debt."

"That's so. By the way, if I started to smoke now do you think there is anybody who will lend me that much money?"

For Stout Women.

When the stout woman buys a silk petticoat she seldom finds one to fit her; they seem to come only in the smaller sizes. But let her buy one so much too long that it will fit around the waist and then shorten it by a deep tuck, or by cutting it off at the top and finishing it by a bias seam that will make the petticoat cover the ankles. She will find that she is not then debarred from that extravagance which is really the greatest economy—a good silk petticoat.

LEWIS AND UNION LABOR

Republican Candidate an Advocate of Organized Labor Measures.

HIS WORK IN LEGISLATURE.

Many Beneficial Laws on New Jersey's Statute Books Championed by Him when One of the Lawmakers.

The record of Vivian M. Lewis in the New Jersey Legislature has been searched by those who appreciate labor in an effort to discover why labor organizations classed Mr. Lewis as their friend, and Mr. Lewis' record for the years 1899, 1900 and 1901 shows the following: During 1899 Mr. Lewis voted affirmatively for the house bill to prohibit the sale of goods made or manufactured in any prison, penitentiary, jail, or public reformatory institution located in New Jersey. The bill got through the house by a vote of 26 to 14. Mr. Lewis voted for chapter 202 of the session laws of 1899, which compelled the employment of union labor upon all state public works. Mr. Lewis also voted for the 1899 attempt to kill that evil to labor known as the company store, or stores kept by corporations which must be patronized by their employes. This bill did not succeed, but did go through the house. Mr. Lewis voting for it.

Another attempt of Mr. Lewis to shorten the hours of labor in line with modern union ideas was the vote for the 1899 bill making eight hours a day's work upon all public works or improvements. He also voted for and helped make the 1899 law which secures to mechanics their money for erecting buildings, and he voted for the bill to license stationary engineers.

The agitation against employing children of too tender ages in factories received the affirmative action of Mr. Lewis when he voted for the 1899 act, chapter 159 of 1899," limiting the age of employment of children and women.

So that designing lawyers could not mulct their labor clients, Mr. Lewis voted for the 1899 act which limits the compensation lawyers can get for bringing damage action for injuries. He also voted for the 1899 bill, which supplemented the mechanics' lien law, and he showed his regard for the health of the laboring man by voting for the 1899 bill, which sought to compel manufacturers to install dust machines. Mr. Lewis also voted for another attempt in 1899 to further reduce the age limit at which children could be employed in factories.

The humorous side to Mr. Lewis' labor record comes from the history of a serious attempt to get through the legislature a measure making nine hours a legal day's work for reporters. The feature of this bill was allowing reporters to work longer than nine hours a day providing that they were financially embarrassed, but in this event the newspaper boss was to be paid double rates. This bill did not become a law.

Not only did Mr. Lewis give of his time and attention to bills for labor in the house, but he supported the two labor bills which originated in the senate. In 1899, Mr. Lewis voted the act which created the state bureau of labor statistics, and the measure which became chapter 27 of the 1899 laws and which provides for payment of wages in lawful money of the United States every two weeks.

Seeing that he was the friend of labor, the workingman voted for Mr. Lewis again for the 1900 session, and during that term he voted for the measure to provide free state employment bureaus in cities, the measure requiring the union label on all state printing, a measure designed to secure to operatives in factories their wages and a new amendment to the child labor act, raising the age limit under which children could be employed. None of these measures got through the legislature, and there were no labor measures originating in the senate for that year.

During the 1901 session, the year Mr. Lewis was leader of the house majority, the record shows that he forced through the legislature and got on the statute books chapter 159 which further secured to mechanics their money for erecting buildings by making their bills liens on such structures. He got on the statute books chapters 127 and 128, which secured to dyers of all kinds of goods their money by making their bills liens on such goods. He also got through the house another supplement to the child labor laws, a further supplement to the law under which factory operatives were secure in their wages, a further amendment to the mechanics' lien law, a further supplement to the law requiring the payment of wages weekly and the first attempt to create a state board of arbitration, although none of these acts could be gotten through the senate.

Because of the disposition of Mr. Lewis to support all labor measures, whether they were local or of state-broad character, labor feels that he can be depended on as a friend, and that is why all classes of labor speak well of the Republican gubernatorial candidate.

TO SENTENCE CHESHIRE FOR ALLEGED BURGLARY

In the county court Friday, before Judge Atwater, Clarence Cheshire, who was arrested here in June together with George Francis and Raymond Latourette for alleged burglary, pleaded non vult to six indictments found against him and not guilty to a seventh charge. He will be sentenced on November 2.

Both Francis and Latourette pleaded not guilty to two indictments each and their cases were set down for trial on October 28. At the time of their arrest the young men were accused of breaking into several stores on West Front street, including Rowley's drug store, Miss Stephenson's art store at 251 West Front street and the Eastern Bottling Works establishment at the corner of West Second and Central avenue.

Latourette and Francis are being defended by William G. DeMeza, while V. W. Nash, Jr., looked after the interests of Cheshire.

TONE OVERTON HURT IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT

Tone Overton, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Overton, of the borough, a student at Rutgers College and a member of the varsity football team there, was slightly injured Thursday night in an automobile accident while returning to New Brunswick from this city. Mr. Overton with several other students including Morrison, of Rochfield Park; Howe Halstead, of New Brunswick, and Willis Earle Rochford, of Trenton, was riding in William Carpender's car, which he was driving.

The young men had been here and were returning to the college by the way of Mettlar's lane, New Brunswick. They were rounding a curve *on which there was some new crush*ed stone, which caused the wheels of the auto to suddenly turn under the car.

Carpender, who is a careful driver, applied the emergency brake, but it refused to work and the car skidded and turned turtle, throwing the *occupants out and pinning them be*neath the machine. All were badly bruised and shaken up, but no bones were broken, except in the case of Carpender, whose nose was fractured. Roehford had a sprained wrist. As a result of the accident, Overton will be unable to play the football games for a time. He will be missed greatly, as he is considered one of the strongest men on the eleven.

TEMPLE BAPTISTS PLAN A SERIES OF ENTERTAINMENTS

Under the auspices of the Temple Baptist church and for the benefit of the building fund, a series of four entertainments of exceptional merit is to be given at the First Baptist church, when the first will be a lecture on Thursday night, November 3, by Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton, of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York. He will lecture on "Widening Influence in American Life." Dr. Eaton has been heard here on several occasions and is well known as an entertaining and instructive speaker.

The second entertainment will be a lecture, "An Irishman in the Jungles of Africa," by Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church. This will be the last opportunity Plainfielders will have to hear this great lecture. It will be given on November 10. The third entertainment will be on November 17, when L. V. F. Randolph will lecture on "Ancient Carthage and Modern Tunis." The fourth entertainment will be an evening of music under the direction of Howard M. Case, tue date to be announced later.

STRING EMBROIDERY.

A clever French woman has described how she came to discover what a splendid combination string and linen would make. She was first attracted by the rough, "even, surface of unbleached linen as an acceptable drapery for walls."

Once when trying to improve the rather dull appearance of a large surface of linen, by embroidering it with silks and crewels, she found this spoiled the sober tone of the linen in its natural state, and after trying different kinds of cottons all too thin to *give any appreciable ef*fect to the linen, she tried a ball of string.

As a result of her discovery this charming woman has given to the lovers of decorative needlework a beautiful invention full of resources, which combines art with economy.

MRS. HONEYMAN HONORED

RECEIVES GREAT OVATION.

Inspiring Sight When the Members Give Chautauqua Salute—She Makes a Helpful Address.

For the twenty-fifth time, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, of this city, was elected president of the Women's Synodical Society of Home Missions in the Synod of New Jersey at its thirty-third annual meeting Thursday afternoon in the Second Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. The Chautauqua salute, the waving of handkerchie'fs, was given her, led by Mrs. J. H. Owens, of Paterson. It was all a surprise to her and she just managed to say a few words of thanks to the delegates. It was an inspiring sight. Many sincere tributes were paid the president during the meeting. Exultant smiles spread over the features of the women when she announced that the last thing her husband told her as she left home for this meeting was to hand in her resignation. Instead of that she accepted another nomination.

Representatives were present from every Presbyterian society in the State and the enthusiasm was marked. The next annual meeting will be held in Haddonfield. The committee on next place of meeting recommended this place and the report was accepted, viva voce, unanimously.

The speakers of the afternoon were President Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, Mrs. Delos E. Stinks, editor of the Home Mission Monthly; the Rev. Edgar Whitaker Work, New York. Mrs. Honeyman, in opening her address, paid a tribute to the contributions of the Jersey City Presbyterian Society which were exceptionally generous of late. "We must make out best bow to Jersey City," she said. She declared the falling off of gifts in other societies and emphasized the necessity for regular pledge work.

In speaking on her subject "Our Opportunity" she treated "opportunity" as "an open door of privilege." Every opportunity was but a chance to do something to further the cause. She touched upon the work among the Italians and complimented the society on its increase in membership. The corresponding secretary reported an increase in membership this year of 2,500.

Mrs. Honeyman is one of the most zealous church workers in this community. She has been the most active worker at Warren chapel for years.

H. K. CARROLL REVIEWS WORLD MISSION MEETING

At the First Presbyterian church Wednesday Mr. Carroll spoke of his impressions of the recent missionary conference held in Edinburgh, Scotland last June. He said that the scope of the conference was to consider missions among non-Christian people and of these there are about a thousand millions. He spoke glowingly of the wonderful hospitality of the people of Edinburgh, and of the time he had during the two weeks of the conference.

The conference demonstrated, he said, the essential unity of evangelical Protestantism. Men who spoke at its sessions were of all denominations: High Church, Low Church and Broad Church Episcopalians, Protestant monks, missionaries of all denominations, Oriental Christians in their native costumes, etc. It demonstrated also not only a unity of fellowship of these various denominations but a unity in regard to the great fundamentals of the Christian faith, in loyalty to the Bible and the divinity of Jesus Christ.

Furthermore, he continued, it demonstrated that the Gospel was sufficient to meet the social and intellectual difficulties of all men. It demonstrated that the settled purpose of evangelical Christianity is to give the Gospel to the whole world immediately. There are untold difficulties in the way. One of these is that there are yet in the world 113,000,000 of people who have never heard of Jesus Christ.

The outcome of the conference, concluded Dr. Carroll, was that we all received a new realization of the sufficiency of God as we looked at the many new difficulties in mission work, a new realization of the power of united purpose, and the power of prayer.

RECOVERS FOR FAILURE TO DELIVER AN ORDER

After securing a compromise verdict once and having it set aside as inadequate by the Supreme Court, George Voehl, formerly a baker in this city, recovered the entire amount with interest for which he had sued Smith & Morehouse, of Newark, on a contract for 1,000 barrels of flour. The amount claimed by Mr. Voehl was $460, being the difference in price on 400 barrels, which the selling firm failed to deliver owing to a rise in price of $1.15 per barrel. Francis J. Blatz represented Mr. Voehl at the trial before Judge Vail in the county court in Elizabeth, Friday.

According to the evidence submitted by Mr. Voehl, he had made a contract with the firm for the delivery of the thousand barrels of flour at a certain price, but at the time of signing the contract no time limit was set for the delivery. The evidence showed that the firm had made deliveries in January, April and June, 1907, although they claimed that there was a time limit of ninety days. The jury gave a verdict for the full amount, with interest added, bringing the total up to $552.

TEMPLE BAPTIST WOMEN GIVE AN ENTERTAINMENT

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Temple Baptist church, a social and entertainment was held at the church, Friday the affair being largely attended by members and friends. A feature of the program was selections by the Temple Quartet, comprising W. A. Conger, organ; Dr. J. F. Berg, 'cello; Arthur Mosher, violin; Elmer E. Wheeler, flute. This program was followed:

Piano duet, Miss Verna Stewart and Miss Alice Smith; vocal solo, Mrs. Charles Quint; recitation, Miss Grace Baker; piano solo, Mrs. William Crow; vocal duet, the Misses Mattie and Christine Viebrock; selection, Temple Quartet; vocal solo, Mrs Charles Quint; vocal solo, Miss Mattie Viebrock; piano duet, Miss Marie Viebrock and Mrs. William Crow.

During the evening there were remarks by Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor, and L. W. Randolph, superintendent of the Sunday school. A business session was held, when Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, treasurer, presented her report. This showed expenditures of $561.74 for the year, with a balance on hand of $33.95. There is $12 in the missionary fund. Mrs. A. Pierson, secretary, reported that eleven new members were added during the year. These are the officers of the society:

President, Mrs. J. W. Musson; secretary Mrs. Albert Pierson; treasurer, Mrs. Valentine Utzinger; missionary treasurer, Mrs. Charles Griffin.

A "CONVERSATION" EVENING.

This is a "bright idea" for entertaining a party of friends. When a girl hostess sends out invitation cards for this particular form of entertainment she writes "Conversation" in one corner, and it is an understood thing among her guests that "The Almighty I" is a forbidden subject. They may talk of anything under the sun they think will interest their "partner," who is drawn by lot every quarter of an hour, but they must not fall back on their own experiences and talk "shop." An occasional evening spent in this way is an excellent corrective to egotism, and it is a shock to many young people to realize their own sweet selves, and what they like and what they don't like, may not be discussed.

Fish Chowder.

Take any fresh fish, clean and cut into slices about an inch thick. Place in the bottom of an iron pot six thin slices of fat salt pork and over these three thinly sliced Irish potatoes.

Next arrange a layer of fish seasoned with salt, pepper and a little minced onion and parsley. Over this should come a layer of cold boiled rice.

Next put in thin slices of bread or pilot biscuit with salt, pepper and bits of butter.

Repeat these alternative layers of pork, potatoes, fish, bread and seasoning; add two cups hot water, cover closely and simmer gently half an hour. Take off the lid, add two cups hot cream or milk and serve.

It is excellent also without milk, and some prefer it put through a puree strainer.

J. A. Smith a Candidate.

HOW TO KNOW OUR BOYS

Lecture by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of Scotch Plains at Y. M. C. A.

PROFESSION OF MOTHERHOOD.

The Task a Divine One—The Boys' Inalienable Rights—The Duties of Mothers.

Nearly one hundred mothers listened attentively to an interesting and illuminating lecture on "The Profession of Motherhood" given by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, in Y. M. C. A. hall Friday afternon. This lecture was the first of a series of nine to be given by Mr. Mathiews to mothers of boys on the general subject "How to Know our Boys." The subject of the lecture to be given next Friday afternoon will be "How to Secure Obedience?"

Mr. Mathiews said, among other things, that the twentieth century woman's advance to a position of intellectual equality with man has not changed her sphere. She is still the housekeeper and the homebuilder. But so much of new knowledge, of domestic science on the one hand and of the nature and nurture of the child on the other is now available for her that motherhood is fairly to be termed a new profession.

The speaker said that "it is the duty of woman to emphasize children rather than women's rights. A child's inalienable rights are three: The right to be loved, the right to patiently dealt with and the right to be understood. The humble, child-like attitude of mind qualifying, according to Huxley, for entrance to the kingdom of science, must be that of the mother toward the child if she would enter the kingdom of childhood.

Mr. Mathiews warned mothers against the fallacy that in sending children to the public school the teacher assumes that the child is capable of intellectual development so in the home the mother must take it for granted that the child is capable of moral and religious growth. The problem of moral and religious training, he stated to be that of throwing around the child such an environment that the child will be constantly tempted to be good.

Continuing, Mr. Mathiews said that "the highest conception of motherhood is that it is a divine task appointed of God, that we learn to love, to be patient, learn self-control as we attempt to teach these virtues to our children." The object of the lecture Mr. Mathiews said, and very strikingly, is to be similar to that which inspired certain graduates of Yale to erect a tablet to a class-mate who gave his life for his country. The inscription on the tablet reads "This tablet is erected for the strengthening of hearts." That the mothers present might be heartened for their tremendous task," he declared to be the purpose of the addresses and discussions which follow.

He announced during the open discussion which followed that Miss Bowman the librarian, of the Public Library, has prepared a list of all the books in the library dealing with the subject and that these books are now available. The next lecture will be given next Friday afternoon.

Judge Runyon to Open Fair.

The general committee in charge of the Hope chapel industrial fair to be given on October 26, 27 and 28, will hold a meeting Monday night to complete all arrangements. The preliminary work is moving along satisfactorily and the committee promises many surprises. Judge Runyon has consented to be present on the night and make the opening address.

SUES FOR ABSOLUTE DIVORCE ON DESERTION CHARGE.

Mrs. Alice Peel, of Washington street, has applied through her counsel, Frank J. Blatz, for an absolute divorce from her husband, William Peel, who is now somewhere in Pennsylvania. The ground for the application is desertion and failure to support.

The couple were married in St. Luke's church Dublin, Ireland, many years ago, and Peel left his wife about seven years ago and she has not seen him since.

Wrought Leather Display.

Invitations have been issued for an exhibition of hand wrought leather goods by Miss Minnie B. Serrell, of 931 Union street, for Friday, October 21, and Saturday, October 22, from 3 until 6 o'clock. Miss Serrell held her first exhibit five years ago at her home and since then she has held exhibitions in New York, Milwaukee and Chicago.

DEMOCRATIC ARGUMENTS

HUGH F. FOX THE CHAIRMAN.

Wilson a Scientific, Not a Practical, Politician, Declares One of the Speakers at Reform Hall.

National and State issues of the campaign from a Democratic standpoint were discussed at a mass meeting of that party held in Reform hall, Thursday, by Former Justice Chauncey H. Beasley, of Newark; Congressman Ambleman, A. S. Alexander, of Hoboken; former Judge Robert S. Hudspeth, of Hudson county, and General Charles McC. Reeve, U. S. A., retired. Hugh F. Fox, of this city, presided at the meeting, which was largely attended by both Republicans and Democrats, together with a number of women.

Besides the speakers on the platform, others who presented themselves to give evidence of their support to the party ticket were William L. Saunders, Patrick J. Reville, David J. Carney, Walter L. Hetfield, David T. Kenney, Frank J. Shattle, J. O. Stevens, and LeRoy J. Ellis, the last named president of the Plainfield Democratic Club.

"We are here for a serious purpose tonight," said Mr. Fox in opening the meeting "that of taking account of stock of our affairs and learn what is wrong, and to promote those things which will be for our mutual benefit. Our Federal and State governments seem to be controlled by a favored few and for selfish purposes. I know how the tariff is made, for I attended sessions when this was done under the McKinley, Dingley and Sherman bills, and when the Dingley bill was in process of adoption, Congressman Butterworth said to me, 'If I scratch you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours.' He was afterward read out of his party for his opposition to such methods.

"Internal corruption, wild extravagance seems to be marking the tendency of the prosperous times. High taxes don't concern us so much, it is the fact that we don't get the results. Progress reforms are in the hands of an unwilling legislature. This is shown in the action concerning a child's labor law and liability act. What we want is an efficient Democracy.

"The Democratic party stands for conservation of resources, its citizens and public funds. The question is, can we afford to take chances with the Progressive Republicans or shall the Democrats take the reins."

The first speaker, former Justice Beasley, declared that the days of bossism and Cannonism are passed. The Republican party is split, there is nothing left of it. The Republicans don't know where they are insurgents, mugwumps, suffragists or what they are, but all they care about are the spoils.

The speaker in referring to New Jersey as a great corporation State, suggested that David Baird would make a good president to represent such interest and that Samuel Dickinson would make a good distributor of the funds. He paid his compliments to Leon Abbett, declaring that he was always a fighter and a thorn in the side of the trusts. Speaking of the high cost of living, Mr. Beasley said that the tariff had been raised so high that ordinary people cannot buy the necessities. The consolidation of trusts was responsible, too, for the high prices. "New York may have its Gaynor, Ohio its Harmon, but New Jersey has its Woodrow Wilson," declared the speaker, "and we are going to elect our candidate."

"We are going to have a schoolmaster in the gubernatorial chair after November 5, and he is going to teach some of the people of the State a lesson, but his hands will be tied unless you give him a legislature. I urge you to support the entire Democratic ticket and in 1912 Woodrow Wilson will be nominated and elected President of the United States."

The next speaker, former Assemblyman A. S. Alexander, devoted his few remarks to affairs of State as he found them when a member of the lower house of the legislature. He quoted from the platform of the Republican party in the Legislative Manual, showing how the party had failed to keep promises made three years ago in reference to franchises, public utilities how the party offered, and how it failed to mean anything. He referred to the great amount of work being done on State roads by the Ambleside Company, which concern was formed by a cousin of State Road Commissioner Gilkyson.

"It has been charged," said Mr. Alexander, "that our candidate is not a friend of labor; neither is he a friend of capital. He says that if the labor unions do wrong he is for correcting those wrongs and in this respect he takes a manly stand. We have had enough of the practical politician now we want a scientific politician in the gubernatorial chair."

In referring to the Republican party, Judge Hudspeth, the next speaker, likened it to Zaccheus of Bible times, as being "up a tree." He said that he had allied himself to the party of Jackson and Johnson, which was near to the heart of the people. The first part of Mr. Hudspeth's talk dealt with generalities, during which he paid his compliments to the women, quoting that phrase, "that the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." In this connection he recalled a political address made by James E. Martine in Jersey City some time ago. There was one lone woman in the gallery at this meeting, and the "farmer orator" the speaker said, talked to her for over an hour. As a result her five sons voted the Democratic ticket at the next election.

"What is there such a revolution of feeling all over this country," said the speaker. "It is because there has been too much spathy. The people are aroused and are going to do something. The party has been defeated in the past, but it is now rejuvenated. Dr. Wilson secured his nomination not through the bosses or through any ulterior motive, but because the people want him. The opposition is trying to be little our candidate and the efforts of the party. They refer to him as a schoolmaster and that the 'same old gang' is behind him.

"The Republican party has been a wonderful organization, and it has achieved great things, but it is now helpless. I am not charging corruption, but by certain methods they have taken away the right of self-government.

"I have known Vivian Lewis for years. He is a fine young man, has ability and has been in office for years, fulfilling his duties satisfactorily. But when John W. Griggs attempts to compare a man like Lewis with Dr. Wilson, he is simply trading on the credulity of the people. Mr. Lewis is not on record as favoring any of the great measures before the people. I wish I had time to tell you the record of Mr. Lewis the three years he was leader of the Assembly. He never formulated anything during his legislative career. I ask you are you going to forget the scenes of out last session of the Legislature, and how the members were controlled body and breeches by the corporate interests?"

The last speaker was Gen. C. McC. Reeve, who delved into the national issues, telling the voters why they should support the Democratic ticket.

GEORGE LUHR ENTERTAINS FRIENDS ON BIRTHDAY.

In honor of the forty-first anniversary of his birthday, George Luhr, division superintendent of the Public Service Railway, entertained a large company of friends at his home on W. Front street, Thursday night, at a roast pig dinner. The genial host, assisted by his good wife, prepared a bountiful spread for the guests and everyone had a fine time. During the evening there were informal congratulatory remarks and the guest of honor favored the guests with several fine piano selections. Mr. Luhr was remembered by the employes on the main line, who sent him a beautiful bouquet of flowers. There was also a birthday cake, bearing forty-one lighted candles.

Those present were Chief P. S. Kiely, Captain Chris. Frederickson, Detective-Sergeant John Flynn, Patrolman William Messler, J. J. Gettings, Joseph W. Harrigan, George Johnson, Joseph Cooper, William Huenke, Hugh Higgins, Frank Keenan, Special Officer R. H. B. Dalley, Councilman Frank DeWitt C. Randolph ,of this city; Chief of Police O'Neil, of Westfield, and Frank Girard, of Elizabeth.

Will Open New Store Here

Alexander Neuman, of New York, the well known clothier, has leased the store, 126 East Front street, for a number of years. He will open on or about November 1 with a full line of men's, young men's and children's clothing. Mr. Neuman will have an up-to-date store. He will make a specialty of making suits to order for $12.50 and up. Mr. Neuman says he is on the wrong side of 40 street, but will keep the goods and prices he offers it will attract the people.

Dutch Arms to Meet.

The Dutch Arms men's association, of Trinity Reformed church, has arranged an attractive program for its first fall meeting on Friday evening, October 21, when a high-class musical and literary entertainment will be followed by a "Real Dutch Supper." Each member of the association is urged to attend and bring another fellow with him.

TELLS OF LIFE IN JUNGLE

STORY OF A MISSIONARY.

Graphic Descriptions Reveal Pastor in New Light—Sings Native Love Song.

There were no dull moments during Thursday at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Six hundred people alternately laughed or kept silent as though hypnotized while Rev. Forbrief Reid Maguire graphically described his seven years' experiences in the heart of Africa, and exhibited the trophies brought from the Dark Continent, trophies not won in war, but gathered in the native wilds with the spirit of love as the impulse for presenting them to the "big missionary."

Mr. Maguire described his entry into the missionary field in Africa from the purchase of the outfit in Liverpool to his arrival on the beach at Mayondi, where he took charge of other occupation at the moment he wept at the dreary prospect. However, he soon was met by others who had preceded him, and was glad that one of his new friends was, like himself, an Irishman. The church will join in welcome in the true Irish fashion.

At the outset Mr. Maguire deplored the fact that he had to introduce himself, and started out with a few verses of an original poem, the first two lines of which were "From Ireland he came and Maguire is his name." At the conclusion of the ditty the church was in an uproar with laughter. Speaking of the native costume the lecturer said: "It is customary to appear, when one is lecturing, in the costume of the country which one is to lecture about, but I hardly dare to assume the African dress. It is too scant, I therefore apologize for appearing in conventional broadcloth."

Mr. Maguire described an incident which occurred on the steamer which carried him to his destination. While at sea, just after leaving Liverpool, a steamer hove in sight having the American flag at the forepeak. When the vessel was near enough Mr. Maguire let go three hearty cheers for Old Glory. An Englishman who was standing near asked rather petulantly why he did not cheer for the English flag which floated above them on their own vessel. "Well," replied the domine, "if you don't know why I'll tell you. It is because the stars in my flag are like the stars in the blue above. And to force the similie home I'll tell why they are like the stars above. There is no power on earth strong enough to pull them down." Thunderous applause greeted this sally.

The visit of Father Neptune when the ship was crossing the equator was vividly and comically described by the lecturer in incidents of the sailor. His attempt to kiss the Blarney stone almost convulsed the audience.

With a caravan of twenty-five men, including porters, guides and an interpreter, Mr. Maguire penetrated into the very depths of the jungle in search of the tribes to whom he was bringing the message of the gospel. Once found his labors began as did the fevers which left him a mere skeleton compared with his present avoirdupois of 240 pounds. He traveled in the center of his men, twelve in front and thirteen following. These precautions are necessary because of the number of wild animals usually encountered on the march through the forests. Mr. Maguire exhibited a pair of gauntlets made from the skin of a leopard shot by himself. He declared that they were the finest pair of automobile gloves in this city. Stepping out to the front and swinging from right to left alternating with a backward and forward movement, Mr. Maguire gave an imitation of the ceremony of cutting out of the hearts of victims of the witch doctor (Nganga). These men had been condemned as harboring evil spirits. They were first poisoned then mutilated and finally burned piece meal. After the dance he said "If any you men think this is an easy 'stunt' come up here and try it." This provoked a hearty laugh.

The speaker declared that conformity to the customs of the natives and patience form the white man's safeguard in the jungle. Any white man, he said, could travel in perfect safety from coast to coast by observing these precautions. He brought another roar of laughter when after blowing the witch doctor's curved horn, he said that the audience had at last heard "Gabriel blow his horn." The instrument is used by the witch doctor to blow away evil spirits. Mr. Maguire showed considerable histronic ability in the description of his reception by the chiefs of the tribes and told how heartily disgusted he was while attempting to eat the "peace feast." "One of the happiest moments of my life," he declared, "was when I stood for the first time in my own hut." This was purchased for a few pieces of cloth and some brass buttons. With the hut went about two acres of hilly land.

The exorcising of evil spirits a month after I began to speculate.".

brought Mr. Maguire's acting ability to the fore in wonderful facial contortions to say nothing of imitating the native dances. He said that the natives have no sense of wit. They attempt to cure diseases with the powered dried snake heads and practiced unheard of cruelties on those afflicted with the evil spirits. When any thing strikes the native as supernatural they take to the tall grass in a hurry. A certain bishop, who wore a wig accidentally pulled his top knot off. The natives ran away screaming that he had lost his head. A baby in the audience began to whimper at this point just as the lecturer was about to play a solo on an African piano. "That's good music," cried the speaker, "I like to hear babies cry, it shows that they are alive." Mr. Maguire received an encore for his effort and played a short tune on the native reed organ (two reeds).

Coming to the serious part of his talk the pastor described the Christian transformation of the witch doctor and finally of the princess of the tribe. Their conversions were absolute.

Mr. Maguire concluded his lecture with a love song sung in the Mayombi tongue. It was a series of tuneful sounds with a tendency to minor keys, but was musical.

It was the opinion of many that the lecture was equal to anything if not superior to many others of the kind and there were murmurs of "He'll have to lecture again soon."

HEAVENLY REST MEN'S ASSOCIATION MEETING

About forty members of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest attended the first annual meeting Thursday in the parish house. The church will also evening was the election of officers for the ensuing year. The committee on constitution and by-laws made its report, as did the treasurer. The retiring president Juan Babcock, was presented with a handsome gold watch, by unanimous vote and the balance of the evening was devoted to a social time with refreshments.

The report of the treasurer showed a neat balance on hand with which to begin the new year. The officers elected were as follows: President, J. A. Maynard; vice-president, Charles Graves; recording secretary, John Ludgate; financial secretary, James Harris; treasurer, Samuel Forster. The new officers assumed their duties immediately. On seating the chair Mr. Babcock spoke feelingly of the past year's work and thanked the members for the support they had given him. President Maynard responded to Mr. Babcock and asked for the co-operation of each member during his term of office.

There was practically no contention for the offices, all the selections being made by acclamation. Joel Pennington, chairman of the committee on constitution and by-laws, read the revised articles. They are similar to those in force but better adapted to meet the needs of the club. Action on the new rules was deferred until the next meeting, October 27. The board of governors and committees will be appointed at the same meeting. William Ochltree presented to Juan Babcock in a neat speech the fob mentioned above to which Mr. Babcock responded. The gift was a complete surprise to its recipient.

It was announced that at the next meeting Rev. Robert MacKellar, of Red Bank, would entertain the club with a lecture. The evening was enjoyed by all present.

SECOND RECEPTION AT THE RED COTTAGE.

The second and last afternoon reception was given Wednesday by Mrs. Charles L. Sykes and Mrs. Thomas Francis Sykes, at their home, "The Red Cottage," Scotch Plains, the affair being in honor of Mrs. Thomas Francis Sykes, who was recently married. The reception was largely attended by society people from New York, Scotch Plains and this city. The home was attractively decorated with garden flowers. Cosmos were used in the dining room, nasturtiums in the library and chrysanthemums in the drawing room.

Mrs. Charles L. Sykes and Mrs. Thomas Francis Sykes received the guests. Those in the dining room were Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, of this city; Mrs. Rutherford M. Shepherd, of Scotch Plains; Mrs. Rolf Merserau, of Ridgewood, and Miss Jane Walker, of New York. They were assisted by Miss Isabella Ashwell, Miss Dorothy Fleming and Miss Elsie Goddard, of this city, and Miss Abi Sykes, of Scotch Plains.

Miss Anna Case to Sing Here.

Miss Anna Case, lyric soprano from the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will be remembered as the soprano soloist at the First Presbyterian church, will give a concert at the Plainfield High School Auditorium, Saturday evening, October 28, at 8:15 o'clock. She will be assisted by Karl Klein, a noted violinist, and Arthur Depew will be at the piano.

DEGRY BOY SCOUTS ARMY

RESOLUTION OPPOSES IDEA.

The military features of the Boy Scouts, General Leonard Wood's plan to introduce military training in the public schools and other schemes to innoculate Young America with a smattering of the science of war, were severely condemned in a resolution adopted by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey in convention at the First Presbyterian church, Newark, Thursday. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, president of the Plainfield W. C. T. U., took a part in the discussion.

The convention also went on record as opposing lynching and prize-fighting. The witnessing of executions was declared to be brutal.

The matter was brought before the convention by Miss Emily B. Stokes, of Woodbury, in her report on the peace and arbitration department. In her report, which she read from manuscript, she stated that a New Jersey branch of the American School Peace League had been organized, with State Superintendent of Public Instruction C. J. Baxter as president. Miss Stokes went on to say in her report that Mr. Baxter, notwithstanding his arduous duties as the head of public instruction, gladly consented to lead the new organization.

The report was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Mrs. E. V. Stout, of Beverly, as superintendent of the department on Sunday schools, reported that the attendance in the Sunday schools during the past year was 237,994, and of that number 9,135 signed pledges.

During the afternoon a memorial service was held for 168 members who died during the past year.

Mrs. Margaret D. Ellis, who was secretary of the State Union for fifteen years, and who is now chairman of the legislative bureau at Washington, D. C., made a verbal report of the recent international convention in Edinburgh, Scotland, at which she said twenty-eight countries were represented. She said that there were 480 delegates present, and of that number 350 were from the United States.

Mrs. Ellis also gave a brief review of the work accomplished by the bureaus at Washington.

Mrs. Ellis also gave a brief review of the work accomplished by the bureau at Washington.

Mrs. Emma Bourne, who is State president, and, also directing the convention, in her report, which will be her last as State head, said the State organization owing to her declination to serve again, stated that $350 had been donated by the Lambertville Union as a memorial to Miss Maria Walker, who had been the presiding officer of the union for many years, and like sum had been received from the estate of Henry B. Howell, of Trenton. She also stated that there was more unity among the nations for the betterment of man, that the Asiatic States law had been enacted against the white slave traffic, and that children were better protected by the establishing of juvenile courts and the laws against child labor.

Miss Lillian Page, as treasurer, announced that the receipts for the year were $6,010.76; disbursements, $4,488.93, leaving a balance of $1,521.83.

"I agree with Richmond Pearson Hobson," said Mrs. Frances E. Gresham, musical director of the National W. C. T. U., speaking at the evening session, "that every child should be made to feel that every saloon is an assassin. We do not realize the importance of the work among the children, and it is among them we are going to win our victories tomorrow." Mrs. Graham, who spent the summer abroad, being sent as a delegate to the great conference at Glasgow, Scotland, told of the methods employed in the work in that country, and of the people whom she met at the conference.

Mrs. Graham, whose duty it is to introduce the musical element into the W. C. T. U. work by sending songs about to the unions and teaching the children to sing, interspersed her remarks with musical selections. During the evening letters were read from absent members by the president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, who occupied the chair.

Gulick—Barlow.

Rev. Dr. William H. Nellsen, of East Ninth street, officiated at the marriage on Wednesday at St. James' Episcopal church, Piscataway, of Miss Hester Barlow and Clarence Gulick, of New Brunswick. This wedding is the first there has been in this church for thirteen years.

MISS RUTH GARDNER WEDS WALTER E. NELSON

The First Baptist church at New Market was the scene of a wedding at 6 Wednesday evening when Miss Ruth Allen Gardner, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George H. Gardner, was made the wife of Walter Ernest Nelson, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Nelson, of New Market. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, who is pastor of the church and was witnessed by several hundred relatives and friends from Boston, Plainfield, Conn., Englewood, Trenton, New Brunswick, Plainfield, Dunellen and New Market.

Miss Gardner was attended by her sister, Mrs. E. E. Pitch, of Boston, as matron of honor, while another sister, Miss Frances E. Gardner, and Miss Bertha Nelson, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaids. Miss Elinor Bond, of Plantsville, was flower girl. The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin trimmed with pearls and Irish point lace. She carried a wreath of lilies-of-the-valley and bride roses. Her attendants were gowned in pink messaline with braided trimmings and carried pink carnations.

John E. Nelson, brother of the groom, was best man, and Dr. J. O. Camp, of Plantsville, and Lester Nelson, of New Market, acted as ushers. They were assisted by three ribbon holders, the Misses Hazel Piddington, Virginia Wall and Hannah Nelson. The Euterpean orchestra rendered the Mendelssohn wedding march as the bridal party entered and played appropriate numbers later. The double ring ceremony was used.

The church was elaborately decorated for the occasion, the interior presenting a most attractive appearance. Pink and white were the prevailing colors used. The bride and groom stood beneath an arch and suspended bell.

The church service was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Prospect avenue, New Market. Supper was served by Caterer Demarest and at its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Nelson left for a wedding trip. On returning they will make their home in New Market. The groom is a graduate of Rutgers college and was captain of the "varsity baseball team. He had been engaged to the Plainfield Baseball club during the past season and is widely known as a player. He is employed by the Central Railroad as a civil engineer.

The bride and groom received a large number of presents, the array including silver, cut glass and furniture. The groom presented the best man and ushers with gold stick pins while the bride gave her attendants moon stone rings in Tiffany settings.

COURTSHIP OF 23 YEARS: TO WED IN PORTO RICO

Miss Addie Weaver, daughter of Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, of the New Madison, will leave on October 29, for San Juan, Porto Rico, where upon her arrival she will be married to Walter N. Martin, formerly of this city. The wedding will be the culmination of a romance, which began twenty-three years ago, when the couple lived here as boy and girl. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war in 1898, Mr. Martin went to Cuba to represent Clifton & Campbell in the produce business. Later he was employed by Swift & Co., managing the concern's big beef plant in the Islands, and a few years ago he engaged in business for himself at San Juan.

Throughout the long absence, the couple have corresponded and arrangements were finally made for the wedding which will take place immediately upon her arrival in San Juan. Miss Weaver has been a resident of Plainfield for many years. During the past few years she has been engaged as a trained nurse. Mr. Martin has established a fine home in San Juan, having purchased which he and his bride will occupy at once following the ceremony.

W. E. Lough the Champion.

In the finals for the fall championship at the Park Golf club Wednesday, W. E. Lough won the honors by defeating R. L. Carpenter, up and 3 to play. The match was a close one throughout, and was followed by a number of friends. The two players were evenly matched, but Mr. Lough was going particularly strong Wednesday and won the trophy offered by the club.

P. H. S. Defeats New Brunswick.

The Plainfield High School football team defeated New Brunswick High School at the latter place Wednesday afternoon by the score of 6 to 6. This was the first game for the locals, and the players and their supporters are pleased with the result. The Plainfield boys showed up strong and gave a fine exhibition of the game under the new rules.

With her voice hushed in the sobbing of more than 300 women, Mrs. Mary Copeland, of Union Hill, a delegate to the annual convention of the State W. C. T. U., in session in the First Presbyterian church, prayed yesterday during that Providence would guide the convention in its choice of a president to succeed Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark. Mrs. Bourne has served the organization for the last nineteen years, and refused to accept the office for another term.

Following Mrs. Copeland's prayer the 328 delegates cast a secret vote for president and Miss E. H. Elfreth, of Haddonfield, was elected on the first elective ballot. She received 202 votes, the balance being scattered among the following nominees: Mrs. May P. Sparks, of Bridgeton; Mrs. I. H. Demarest, of Closter; Dr. Eva M. Lake, of Arlington; Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, of Plainfield; Mrs. Eva Gebhard, of Clinton; Mrs. M. C. Campbell, Mrs. Ella Holmes and Mrs. M. L. Johnson, all of Newark.

Just prior to the election, Mrs. Demarest presented Mrs. Bourne with a diamond ring, as a gift from the State union. As she placed the ring on Mrs. Bourne's finger she quoted that part of the marriage service that reads "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder," inferring, she explained, that the tie between Mrs. Bourne and the women of New Jersey was so strong that it could never be severed.

Mrs. Bourne was also presented with a seal leather reticule and a gift of money from the women of Closter.

Mrs. Frances W. Graham, musical director of the National Union, in opening her "Musical Temperance Lecture last night, said:

"I am an optimist, singing an optimist's song—"The Coming Day."

Continuing, Mrs. Graham spoke of the gains of the year, and asked why should we be pessimistic? Her talk was interspersed with many songs, closing with "Victory."

The church was filled with delegates and their friends. The lecture was preceded by a song service, led by Mrs. Graham.

Gains made in the cause of prohibition in the United States formed the subject of statistics read by Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, superintendent of legislation of the National W. C. T. U., at the session yesterday afternoon. Saloons to the number of 13,000 have been closed in the last two years, Mrs. Ellis pointed out, and 41,000,000 people are living under prohibitory laws.

At the close of Mrs. Ellis' address Mrs. Bourne, the State president, spoke of Mrs. Ellis' works in Washington, where she keeps an eye on proposed legislation.

More than four hundred delegates and visitors attended the session, which was largely devoted to the reading of the reports of the various department. The committee on anti-narcotics told of great activity in the work among boys. In the interest of Christian citizenship it was reported that $1,104.48 had been spent by the union.

Large gains in the Sunday-school branch, particularly in this county, were described. Further reports had to do with evangelistic work for purity in literature and art, the Young Women's Christian Leagues and the department of organization.

Mrs. Florence Graham, of Lockport, N. Y., was introduced and warmly greeted. She extended the good wishes of the New York union to the delegates.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Henry W. Savage presents "The Little Damozel," at the Nazimova theatre. It ran all last season in London, making new records of attendance at Wyndham's, while it achieved the rare distinction of being thrice "commanded" at Sandringham by the late King Edward, one of the most exciting of drama's patrons. "The Little Damozel" is a comedy of sentiment that is unusually rich in that elusive thing called "atmosphere" and that pictures with great charm the reckless-ly gay bohemians who are to be found in the Soho district of London, semi-declasse life. In addition there that center of the British capital's is said to be a moving love story and a great deal of piquant satirical humor. In the cast Mr. Savage has a number of well known English players, including Cyril Keightly, Frank Lacy, George Graham, Henry Wenman and Mary Horse, while he has entrusted the title role to the delightful California actress, May Buckley. Others of note in the company include Henry Vogel, Harry Fraser, Raphael Newman and Harry Child.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," under the direction of Joseph Brooks, has scored a big success at the Republic theatre, New York city. The dramatization of the Rebecca stories made by the author, Kate Douglas Wiggin, and Charlotte Thompson. Edith Taliaferro plays the role of the little heroine. Mrs. Wiggin took an active part in the rehearsals. Roughly speaking, "Rebecca" is intended to appeal to young people between eight and eighty! But no astute author or manager could wish to fix an age limit in his audience. I should be sorry to see "Rebecca" gain a following in a mixed audience, for it would gradually grow feeble and emasculated if played to young people alone, though we hope they will always find enjoyment in it. Incidentally I suppose it might be useful to have a few entertainments to which the old fashioned girl might go without seeing all the commandments broken before her very eyes. However, one must be universal and not write for the "jeune fille" alone.

"Baby Mine," the new farce by Margaret Mayo, is a rage at Daly's Theatre, New York. Wm. A. Brady will shortly produce it in London. Later productions will follow in Paris and Berlin. New York managers are now refusing to accept new farces, claiming "Baby Mine" has reached the limit in that style of stage entertainment.

When William A. Brady first read "Mother," by Jules Eckert Goodman, he declared that he had one of the greatest plays he ever ran across. Before he produced it at the Hackett Theatre his Fall he reiterated what he had said before. "Mother" deserves to succeed. It is a homely, but none the less effective, glorification of motherhood. It is a big play, and we shall be most grievously disappointed if it does not become one of the classics of our stage.

COURT PLAINFIELD PLANS FOR BANQUET AND ENTERTAINMENT

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, at its meeting last night, decided to have a collation and entertainment on Friday night, November 11, the committee in charge being Capt. R. Cline, chairman; Fredrick Breem, Louis Feiring, James T. McCarty and John F. Casey. Three applications for members were received and one candidate initiated. Two new members were elected.

The final report from the finance committee for the past six months was accepted and the assets of the Court were found to be about $4,000. The membership of the Court is now 500 and the members are working hard to make it 500 by January 1 next.

Culverts in Bad Condition.

Residents of the West End who have occasion to pass the corner at Fourth street and Plainfield avenue, are complaining of the dangerous condition in which two of the culverts have been left. The top pieces were removed several months ago and since then it has caused many people to step into the opening. More than one one of the unwary has received severe bruises while several serious accidents have been narrow'y averted.

LITERARY

"The Life Story of J. Pierpont Morgan," which begins in the October Metropolitan, is described as a biography of the financier, rather than a theory of Wall street or an argument about the money power. The first instalment gives many hitherto unpublished facts about Mr. Morgan's ancestry and early life. Another feature of the October issue is a new serial, "Mrs. Maxon Protests," by Anthony Hope. An authorized statement of President Taft's views on conservation introduces H. J. Whigham's article on "Guarding the People's Property," an account of what the Taft administration has accomplished for conservation.

Another superb article of the State Series, entitled "Florida, Land of Enchantment," appears in the November National Magazine. An especially striking cover design of a sunset, glorious with the incomparable hues of the Floridian sea and sky, forming a magnificent background against which are silhouetted luxuriant palms, forms an alluring invitation to peruse the sixty-four pages of text by Garrantt Agassiz, which present Florida and her great resources as they have never been before presented in any periodical.

REV. DR. C. A. EATON TO DELIVER LECTURE.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York, who will deliver the first lecture in a series of entertainments at the First Baptist church, on November 7, will take for his subject, "Widening Horizons in American Life." These entertainments will be given for the benefit of the building fund of the Temple Baptist church.

Dr. Eaton in his lecture will consider the great changes in our economic life, the widening of our international relationship with the foreign powers which has made this country a world power, the great racial changes and the broadening of thought from a theological standpoint.

Daniel White a Benedict.

Daniel J. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. James White, of West Fourth street, and a former well known resident, was married at Erie, Pa., Saturday, his bride being Miss Louise M. Fletcher, of that place. The ceremony was performed in the Erie Catholic church in the presence of a few relatives and friends. The young couple will make their home in New York. Mr. White was at one time employed by John J. Kenney and resigned to study for the priesthood, but was compelled to stop because of impaired eyesight.

Gave a Surprise Party.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Miriam Emery and George Gray at the home of the former on Friday night. The evening was spent in dancing and games. There were piano selections by the Misses Lakey, Ayers and Graves and recitations by Miss Pennington, and James Fitzgerald, Joseph Smith, Mrs George Gray, Mrs. J. Donaldson, Archie Gilbert and Percy Emery gave a dialogue, entitled "Andy's Matrimanial Difficulties," which was much enjoyed. During the evening supper was served.

MISS MARY CAPERTON WEDDED TO DR. BLAKE

Miss Mary Caperton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Caperton, of Charleston, West Virginia, and Dr. Eugene Blake, of New Haven, Conn., were married Monday in the First Presbyterian church, of Charleston, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, including several guests from this city. The bride is a granddaughter of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of this city, and he performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Gifford Cooley, of the borough, as matron-of-honor, and Miss Bessie Flanders, also of the borough, as bridesmaid. Following the ceremony a large reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by hundreds of guests from various points in the south, as well as the north.

The bride has frequently visited in Plainfield, where she has many friends and where she has been admired. Dr. Blake is an instructor in the medical school at Yale University and is an eye specialist. The bride's father is president of the Consolidated Coal and Coke Companies, of West Virginia and the family is prominent in the religious and social life of Charleston.

Will Rival Mary Garden.

Miss Anna L. Case, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company forces, will give a concert at the Plainfield High School, Saturday evening, October 29, assisted by Karl Klein, noted violinist. Arthur Depew will be at the piano. The New York Commercial in speaking of Miss Case, says: "Special praise is due Miss Case for her rendition of the aria from "Mireille," by Gounod. Miss Case has appeared in secondary roles in grand opera. With her marvelous gift of song, she must soon make her appearance with the foremost. In timbre and shading, she bids fair to rival our own Mary Garden."

A NEW $10 COUNTERFEIT U. S. NOTE DISCOVERED.

The Treasury Department was advised Monday of a fresh counterfeit discovered in circulation at Buffalo, N. Y. The secret service describes the spurious issue as follows:

"New counterfeit ten dollar United States note, series of 1901, check letter B, J. W. Lyons, Register of the Treasury; Charles H. Treat Treasurer of the United States. Portraits of Lewis and Clark.

Harry Sedley New Director.

Harry Sedley, a well known state director, having had an extensive experience on the stage, has been engaged for that position at The Plainfield theatre and is now in charge of the stock company and its productions. Mr. Sedley's wife and daughter are now appearing in well known New York productions, the latter being in "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

FAILS TO GET DAMAGES

AFTERMATH OF "JOY RIDE."

In the Circuit Court at Elizabeth Monday, the case of George J. Mitchell against Frank L. C. Martin, in two counts in tort, aggregating $20,000, was settled in favor of Mr. Martin. The two counts were one for alleged malicious prosecution, $10,000, and the other for slander, $10,000. The plaintiff's counsel Judge Benjamin A. Vail directed the jury to give a verdict for Mr. Martin and on the other the jury returned a verdict of "no cause for action."

According to the evidence brought out at the trial Mitchell accompanied by Hugh Mclver and Walter Kettering went to Perth Amboy in a car owned by a customer of Mr. Martin's without having the consent of Mr. Martin to take the car out. Before starting the men had several rounds of drinks at the Iroquois hotel, it was alleged, and after they had found a friend, William Voorhees, at Perth Amboy the drinking, it was alleged, was continued in several places in that town.

On the way back the car was wrecked and Mitchell was pinned under the car suffering some slight injuries. On representations of the case made to Motor Vehicle Commissioner J. B. R. Smith, the quartet were arrested and brought to Plainfield. At the trial Mitchell and Kettering were acquitted but both chauffeurs lost their licenses. Kettering's license was restored to him, but owing to actions of Mitchell Commissioner Smith did not return his license. Hence the action against Mr. Martin.

It was shown that Mr. Martin had acted upon the advice of Walter Hetfield, Jr., assistant prosecutor, in all the action he took against the men.

Judge Runyon is Right.

Judge William N. Runyon, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Fifth district, has shown a degree of political sagacity, courtesy and good politics that editors and platform orators throughout the State would do well to imitate.

At a recent mass meeting in Elizabeth the judge deplored and condemned the methods of his own party associates in endeavoring to belittle Woodrow Wilson by attacks on his personal character and by unwarranted innuendo.

"The Democratic party," said Judge Runyon, "has nominated an honorable gentleman for the office of Governor, and in him the Republican party had a foeman worthy of its steel. It will need united action on the part of the Republicans to elect their candidate, and the speeches belittling Mr. Wilson's political ability will only serve to strengthen his cause by causing Republicans who know him to desert their own candidate. Such attacks on the personal character of Dr. Wilson should not be tolerated by the Republicans. The spirit of fair play should prevail, and only honorable means should be used in contesting the election."

Unfair campaigning is the resort of unfair politicians. Attempts to belittle, disparage and ridicule an able, capable and conscientious candidate are absolute proofs that his opponents fear him, and dare not meet him fairly and squarely.

Dr. Wilson has been subjected to the sort of argument that includes such appellations as "Thomas," "schoolmaster," "decoy duck," "tool of the old gang," etc., but it hasn't changed the opinions of any intelligent men who had made up their minds to vote for him. In fact, this sort of campaigning generally reacts on those who use it, as it gives the public a good idea of their spirit and an excellent yardstick for measuring their intelligence.

Judge Runyon's warning to his party is timely and true, and the fact that he has had the courage to utter it will in no way reduce his strength as a Congressional candidate in the Fifth district.—Newark Evening News.

Buchner—Hoffman.

Miss Rose Mary Buchner and Clarence Hoffman, both of Perth Amboy, were married Saturday evening at the home of W. E. VanCourt, Oak Tree, by Rev. J. T. Lansdale, pastor of Marconnier chapel. Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Buckner, also of Perth Amboy, were the attendants. Among the guests were Mr. Buchner, father, and Miss Clara L. Buchner, sister of the bride. The groom is employed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Perth Amboy.

"Preachers are horrified at the thought of admitting women to vote when they cannot fight, thought not one in twenty of their own number is fit for military duty. Of the editors who denounce woman suffrage, only about one in four could shoulder arms. Again, it must be remembered that some men are rejected while whenever a soldier is born into the world. Mrs. Z. G. Wallace, of Indiana, from whom Gen. Lew Wallace drew the portrait of his mother in 'Ben Hur,' asked 'If women do not fight, they give to the State all its soldiers.' This ought in all fairness to be taken as an offset for the military service that women do not render. As Lady Henry Somerset says, she who bears soldiers does not need to bear arms."

"The old foolish talk about the home and the cradle has now pretty well rocked itself to sleep among the archives of the kindergarten. This is a great practical question. It concerns the well being of home, city, State and nation. I have endeavored to show that equal suffrage is right and just, but it will now add to it will add strength to our institutions. Fortunately we may deal with this question as a condition and not merely a theory. We may therefore argue from history rather than from prophesy. Equal suffrage has been tried for forty years.

"One great advantage of equal suffrage is the introduction of a class with leisure. Of all busy men, the wealthy man of affairs is the busiest. But his wife and daughters have leisure in superabundance. Only such women use and by the wives and daughters of thousands of business and professional men, the time necessary for the proper study of political and social questions can be easily given; and the opportunity of useful work often proves extremely acceptable.

"For the consideration of all problems women have one great advantage, in that they do not by predisposition attach the same importance to precedent and form. Even the best men are inclined to bow down and worship before the altar of red tape, and this routine tendency in the case of the average male often produces the most deplorable results. A striking concrete illustration of the inherent difference between the sexes in this regard is afforded by the advent of Florence Nightingale in the Crimean War. The wounded were perishing for stores which could not be issued without official order and Miss Nightingale had the doors of the store house broken open and the stores distributed.

"The strongest argument for equal suffrage is the greatly increased power that it gives to 'family vote' over that of a comparatively irresponsible and floating population."

Mr. Saunders quoted from the governors and mayors of four states Wyoming, Idaho, Utah and Colorado, showing the beneficial effects in those communities where the vote is given to women. The political intrigue has been removed or nearly so and corruption at the polls eliminated.

Continuing Mr. Saunders said: "One of the arguments against woman suffrage was that it would create discord in the family. Colorado has never heard of a case of family discord that was even alleged to have originated in woman suffrage. The members of a family are inclined to stand together upon political questions, much as they are on religious questions; but this fact broadens the family interest in public affairs. While woman suffrage increases the number of votes, it gives no increased breadth of public interest in social welfare. Their right to vote has not made them less dutiful as mothers and wives. If any woman in Colrado is bold and brazen she is not so on account of woman suffrage.

"It is contended that women do not wish to vote. The women in Colorado vote solidly when there is anything in a campaign that appeals to their interest; and in all elections their vote is large. Among them, of course, there are some bad women, just as among men there are some bad men, but I apprehend that nobody has any scheme by which the suffrage can be restricted so as to exclude persons who are evil minded. There is not a city in the world where the vote of evil women could be of enough consequence to be worthy of serious consideration. Do not mislead yourself into thinking that you dislike woman suffrage because you would not like to see your wife going to the polls, amid surroundings so disgusting to a refined woman. That is moonshine, for under woman suffrage, as we have seen in Colorado, the voting booths are placed in most respectable quarters, largely in private houses, with surroundings that offer no opportunity for criticism.

"One of the main reasons for our bad political condition is because of too great party adhesion. Men wear the collar of a party and have a foolish notion that party loyalty is a virtue. This spirit invades municipal elections which have really nothing to do with national politics. Does anyone doubt that the whip of party adhesion enabled Quay, Platt and Croker to control, to the shame of our free institutions, city, and State governments for almost a generation?

"One cure for the ills of bossism is to enlarge the independent vote. It is this vote which holds the balance of power. It elected Cleveland to the presidency, Harmon to the governorship and Low to the mayoralty. Is it not reasonable to expect that women are less apt to wear the stamp of party than men? They may not be as wise or as practical, but they are more moral and are likely to be less inclined to sacrifice principles to party. I once overheard the following conversation in a New York cafe, an older to a younger man: 'Vote the Democratic ticket, never mind who is on it, vote the ticket. Always vote the Democratic ticket, the party is responsible for the men on it, vote the ticket.'"

In conclusion Mr. Saunders quoted Dr. Lyman Abbott from his book "Spirit of Democracy," in which the venerable doctor says: "The builders of this nation are not the men at Washington, but the fathers, mothers, teachers." "Let them build from youth up, so that a wholesome and effective influence for good may be indellibly impressed upon those who are to govern this nation."

In introducing Mr. Saunders Mrs. Charlotte Hiller, president of the league, said: "Last year criticism was made of the league for holding their meetings too privately. It was said that there were many who were interested in equal suffrage, though not committed to it, who felt some embarrassment in attending meetings held in private houses. We have profited by this criticism and are going to held four evening meetings in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium during the winter. Everyon interested is invited to attend. They will also be four meetings held in private houses and to these the same invitation is extended." that more will be forthcoming. Among them are considered the matters of rate making powers for a public utility corporations, extension of the primary law to Gubernatorial and Congressional nominations, direct election of United States Senators, ballot reform, appointment of election and primary officials by some impartial agency, corrupt practices act, employers' liability law, whether or not there is a progressive movement within the Democratic party and the pledging of candidates before election to vote for certain reforms.

TIGERS AGAIN RECEIVE A BIG SHAKEUP

The Princeton football team is now radically changed from what it was on Saturday, and it is expected that the changes will add greatly to the team's power and efficiency.

The most important shift is that of Captain Eddie Hart from fullback to tackle and Head Coach Roper said last night that it would be permanent as far as he could say at that time. Hart used to play the line position at Exeter, and it was there that he earned his reputation as a player. There is little doubt that Hart will be able to make a hole through the best man that he is likely to meet this season, and the Tigers have other backs who will readily enough get through after the big captain clears the way.

The change is no reflection on Hart or his back-field play, but it simply means that the other linesmen have been found wanting on offensive play. Princeton had plenty of chances to score a touchdown on Lafayette Saturday, but the line wouldn't make a hole for the backs.

It would surprise no one, however, if Hart played fullback on the defense. The line can take care of itself on the defense, and Hart's secondary defensive play has been wonderful.

With the other men, Bissell has gone to the scrubs, though he still has a chance to beat out McCormick, Macgregor or the other candidates for the position. White will probably continue to play end, with Coleman or Dunlap opposite him.

There is plenty of good material to choose a successor to Hart from. Sawyer is a fast, aggressive man and would be a fitting mate for Pendleton and Sparks behind the line. He is a good deal like Pendleton in his play, being light and elusive of tacklers, while Hart might be shifted to fullback for the heavy line plunging that has been done by Hart in the past.

Monday's practice was devoted to devising some play, not of the old-style straight football that won't gain an inch within the twenty-yard line for a team that is evenly opposed, but either by a trick or an open play. Roper got up an outside tackle play that looks fairly good and a delayed pass that might work once in a game, but not very much more. The rest of the time was devoted to signal drill. Pendleton, Sparks and McLean were some of the varsity men who laid off.

Mrs. Clifford A. Braider, of Putnam avenue, who has been detained at home by illness for the past two months, continues to improve slowly.

Miss Jennie Wilson, of Newark, who has been spending several days here with friends, has returned home.

ROSE ADJUDGED GUILTY

CASE IS TO BE APPEALED.

Fred Rose was convicted of highway robbery in the Somerset county court at Somerville, Monday. He was found guilty of having held up and robbed Paul Wagner of $1.24 and four lead pencils on the night of June 28, but his counsel, Robert Crane, says he will take the case to the Supreme Court on appeal.

The testimony of Detective Sergeant John J. Flynn, Roundsman Higgins and Mrs. Bessie Duffy, Rose's boarding mistress, all went to show that Rose was in his room on the night of the alleged hold-up half an hour before the crime was committed, but the jury after an hour and a half of deliberation brought in a verdict against the young man.

Mrs. Duffy said this morning that she came to her the very day he had obtained a position in the Spicer Universal Joint Co.'s plant and she took him to board. Every morning at 6 o'clock Rose went to his work and returned at 7 o'clock in the evening. On the evening of June 28 he was in the house at 8:30 and with her son passed the evening in conversation, and the two young men retired at about 9:30.

Mrs. Duffy also said that she remembered the circumstance well because Rose had been swimming on that evening in the brook near Grand avenue, and thinking the water was deep enough he dove and cut his face on the bottom. Her husband went to the drug store and bought some lotion to put on the cuts, and after the talk with her son Rose went to bed. She said she had always taken a motherly interest in the young man, and knowing his history was glad to see him making a man of himself. He was always well behaved and took pride in always dressing neatly.

Winfred Harris, office manager of the Spicer Co., testified yesterday that from the time Rose went to work with them he had not lost a day. His hours were from 6:30 in the morning to 6:30 in the evening, and he was keen on his job and giving good service. The payrolls of the company were produced to confirm this testimony. Other witnesses for Rose, including Patrolman Vanderweg, testified as to Rose's habits at night. He had been convicted before because of previous record, but absolutely nothing could be found against his recent behavior.

Aside from the testimony of Detective Doody, of the Central Railroad police, the only evidence against Rose was that furnished by Wagner, whose identification was rather shkey. Judge Case admitted as testimony a statement made by Frank Mathews, of Roselle, after a vigorous objection by Mr. Crane, that Rose was the man who held him up on the night of April 13, although he had made no complaint to the police. Mr. Crane questioned the admissibility of this evidence, but Judge Case admitted it after deliberation. The jury was taken from the court room twice during the arguing of the contested points.

Prosecutor Fred Pope conducted the case for the State. Mr. Crane has such confidence in the innocence of Rose that he will use every means at his command to have the verdict set aside by the Supreme Court and a new trial ordered. Rose has been in jail since July 22. On that day, hearing that the police wanted to see him, he gave himself up.

COBB AND LAJOIE GOT AUTOMOBILES YESTERDAY.

Just before the second game of the world's series at Shibe Park yesterday, Ty Cobb and Napoleon Lajoie were presented with the automobiles which they won in the major league batting contest this year. Hugh Chalmers, the donor of the big prizes, made the presentation in person. Mr. Chalmers originally offered one car to the champion batter of the big leagues, but when the race between Cobb and Lajoie became so close that Cobb ended the season with a lead of one per cent. in favor of the Tiger batter, the donor requested the National Commission to accept automobiles for both of these great batsmen.

At a meeting of the commission Monday it was decided that Cobb and Lajoie deserved the honor of a public presentation in the presence of the world's series fans.

The cars they received are duplicates in every particular. Ty Cobb is already in attendance at the world's series reporting the games for several newspapers.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jones, of Trenton, have returned home after a visit with friends in this city.

COLORED VOTERS MEET

REV. MR. MORRIS' SPEECH.

Reform Hall was crowded to the doors Monday when the mass meeting of colored voters was called to order by Dr. James F. Lawson, who introduced Rev. J. T. Diggs, as chairman of the meeting. Rev. C. S. Morris, who afterwards made the principal speech of the evening, began the proceedings by offering prayer. Before starting the speeches Rev. Mr. Diggs made a short address in which he urged his fellow men to vote for Judge Runyon and to support the entire Republican ticket. Of Judge Runyon he said: "He has shown himself to be a man from every viewpoint and there are opportunities now for him to become greater and it is up to us to push him to higher things. There is no switch in the track on which we run our train and we don't have to switch from one party to the other. Vote for Mr. Corbett for Mayor on the regular ticket." He then introduced Rev. Mr. Morris, who said in part:

"The ship at sea indicates her true course by the wake she leaves, man and bird and animal leave their imprints on the sands of time, and political parties leave their marks upon the country as indelibly impressed as either and by these marks you shall judge them. The ballot is the mightiest power you colored men wield for the protection of your rights. There is nothing left for the salvation of the race but the power to vote and in this you are being defrauded every day of your lives because of disfranchisement, not here in the north, but south of Mason and Dixon's line.

"I am always suspicious of the Virginia negro Democrat. He is right down in his heart a Republican, but he has sold his birth right for a mess of pottage and his soul is not his own. In the Southern States the schools are closed to the negro because an illiterate negro may not vote. Since Woodrow Wilson has been connected with Princeton University the doors of that institution have been closed against colored students, while Harvard, Brown, Columbia and Yale have welcomed them. The reason for this is that Dr. Wilson is a Virginia Democrat and in Virginia they enforce the Jim Crow car upon the negroes and don't let them vote. Do you want such a man as that for Governor?" Cries of no, no, never, answered the question.

"No man has any reason to lose confidence in the Republican party. Cannonism and Aldrichism are being driven out and the party is having a general house cleaning. The tariff is not to blame for the high cost of living, but the abandoned farms, the idle acres in the land, caused by the emigration from the farms, to the cities and other centers of population. It is the same all over the world."

A. Mark Harris, secretary of the United States Baptist Union, concluded his remarks to Dr. Wilson calling him a word juggler. Mr. Harris got beyond his depth, though, when he tried to give an imitation of the college president's easy vocabulary. He said that Dr. Wilson was nominated by Nugent and "Bob" Davis, but it didn't realize the kind of company he was in.

Former Congressman George H. White of New York, told a number of humorous stories all of which had a inevitable point, always that of voting on the right side of the party which had brought such remarkable progress to the country. He asked his audience to think, to look back on the achievements of the Republican party from the start given it by Abraham Lincoln, the greatest Republican of them all. He defined mugwump as the child of a Democratic mother and a Republican father and said the hybrid was no good.

Mr. White said that he was afraid Woodrow Wilson, because he knew the place he came from and what his sentiments towards the negro race are. He said: "Woodrow Wilson declared in the Academy of Music, in Philadelphia, a year ago that the crime of the age was committed when the negro was given a vote,' and I am afraid of such a man, and afraid of his sauve ague."

Mr. White urged the voters present to avoid Mr. Moy, and to vote for Mr. Corbett. He ended by making an impassioned appeal to the democrats present to stand by the party that had given them their freedom and franchise.

Congregational Meeting.

A congregational meeting of Trinity Reformed church will be held Monday night, October 26, for the annual election of church officers.

G. L. RECORD OPENS THE WILSON "QUIZ"

The first record of George L. Record to Woodrow Wilson, designed to elicit the views of the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, has been sent to Mr. Wilson and was released to the newspapers at noon yesterday. It is lengthy and asks categorical replies to twelve questions, dealing with policies and principles in the abstract. The candidate is asked if he believes in or favors rate-making powers for the Public Utilities Commission, the physical valuation of railroads, the use of the physical valuation of railroads as a basis for rates, and similar issues.

There are six additional questions asking for statements concerning Mr. Wilson's attitude toward individuals who, Mr. Record asserts, exercise undue control in the Democratic party, the boss system, Smith, Nugent and Davis in the Democratic organization, as compared with Baird Murphy, Kean and Stokes in the Republican; the Democratic "over-lords" whom Mr. Record declares identical in purpose with the Republican Board of Guardians. He asks when, where and how the Democratic party has been purged and reorganized. He asks if there is any organized movement in the Democratic party similar to the "Progressive movement" in the Republican party, and then wishes to know if the Democratic nominee will agree to sell publicly with the Republican and Democratic candidates for the Legislature to pledge themselves in writing prior to election in favor of such of the previously mentioned reforms as Mr. Wilson may personally favor, if not, why not?" closes this question.

STATE TO INVESTIGATE WATER DIVERSION STORY

Rumors of a diversion of New Jersey water into Pennsylvania that have reached the State Water Supply Commission prompted that body to include the region about the Delaware Water Gap in its itinerary of watershed inspection on which it started Monday. The commissioners are accompanied by their engineer, Morris R. Sherrerd.

The rumors are that the village of Shawnee, Pa., is about to be supplied with water from Sunfish Pond, in the mountains of Monroe county, back of the Gap. The assertion has been made that pipes to carry out this project have already been ordered.

When the alleged plans for this diversion of water were made known to the commissioners, just before starting on their trip, they expressed doubt that any one would attempt to put through such a scheme in face of the laws that prohibit such an act. Whether or not this is the matter in dispute, however, in which it was deliberately stated that such a course was contemplated, the State officials decided that something should be done at once.

According to the Philadelphia report the water of Sunfish Pond, which is in Buckwood Park, the private game preserve of Charles C. Worthington, will be piped to Shawnee, the line dipping beneath the Delaware River at a point but a few miles above the Water Gap. The pond is 1,378 feet above tide water and several hundred feet above Shawnee. This would mean a gravity flow that would be a most economical source of water supply for the Philadelphia district.

"I think there must be some mistake about this," declared Commissioner Harry R. Humphreys. "I know Mr. Worthington personally. He is building a golf links in connection with his Buckwood estate. The links, I suppose, were on the New Jersey side of the river. The Philadelphia dispatch points out that the links are on the Pennsylvania side, and it would seem from that that the water was also to be used in connection with the golf course. Mr. Worthington undoubtedly intends to use this pond for supplying his links, but I think they are on this side of the river. This is probably what has given rise to the other story."

GIRL WANDERER SAYS SHE'S FROM NEWARK.

A young woman, who said she was Mary Dorman, twenty-two years old, was picked up late Monday night by a policeman wandering about the streets in Elizabeth and was locked up for safe keeping. She said that she came from Newark, where she had been living.

The prisoner also told the police that, with some other girls, she had been caught in a raid made by the Newark police on a Chinese den in that city, which they had been frequenting, and that they had all been committed to jail for thirty days. She is still being held at police headquarters, and will probably be committed to the county jail for vagrancy.

Fort Asked to Speak.

On the personal invitation of David Baird, Governor Fort has arranged to deliver a political speech in behalf of the candidacy of Vivian M. Lewis at a Republican mass meeting to be held in Camden on October 28.

WOMEN'S LEGAL STATUS

Leighton Calkins Made Address Before Monday Afternoon Club.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE TOUCHED.

Referred to Desirability of Uniform Marriage and Divorce Laws—History of Women's Rights.

Peculiar interest attaches to the lecture given Monday before the Monday Afternoon Club at the Hartridge School Auditorium from the fact that the lecturer, Leighton Calkins, is a Plainfielder and his well known character and ability bespoke for him the sympathetic endrosement of his listeners. His subject was "The Legal Status of Woman," and the lecture was one in the series on "The Relation of Women to Economics," the subject of club study at the present time.

Mr. Calkins referred to the past and to the belief of some that women had no souls, citing the Roman and Hindu systems of law in which family groups, the wife, children, slaves and property belonged to the patriarch absolutely. He told of the old time ideas of training for women confined to limits of domesticity and that her education should be relative to man and his pleasure and comfort. The old common law of England, or Canon Law, he said, gave to the husband complete legal subjection of his wife.

In the feudal system, Mr. Calkins said, woman's position was even worse. She had no right except the right to marry, and if she did not marry, her life was most monotonous.

The lecturer said the democratic idea of the family is freedom, equality and justice. He told how harsh laws had crumbled and said that in New Jersey a woman had a right to her property both real estate and personal and she has a right to her own earnings. The husband's consent is necessary in the transfer of real estate. On the other hand, he said, a man was bound to support his wife, but has the right to determine the domicile. He said further, a married woman can bring action in a suit at law, and can give evidence, but neither husband or wife against each other. A woman's right to make a will, adopt children, with the consent of her husband, and enter into business was also discussed by the lecturer. In some States, Mr. Calkins said, a mother had no legal right over her own children.

Mr. Calkins spoke of the desirability of uniform laws for marriage and divorce and the consideration of the children in advocating or opposing divorce.

Woman's suffrage was lightly touched upon by the lecturer, who said it disagreed in most cases, sat upon the top rail of the fence, but he believed all would get the vote when one side goes over to the other. He believed in equality or rights, but not equality of function.

Mr. Calkins cited the western States, where equal suffrage had been granted and showed some of the good results accomplished, such as the better guardianship of children, juvenile courts, better protection of homes and election of better men to office.

He said further, he could not but fear the increase of the illiterate vote, unless equal suffrage could go hand in hand with restricted suffrage.

In Mr. Calkin's lecture he made a plea for the wise conduct of homes, where equality of rights was not identity of rights, but where the whole influence was uplifting, tending to the betterment of each individual in the home.

AUTOMOBILES CRASH, EXPLANATIONS MADE.

While F. J. Wetzel, of South Clinton avenue, Trenton, was driving a big touring car Saturday, he ran into a small car operated by George Van Nest near Harlingen. Van Nest was thrown into the road and his car badly damaged, while Wetzel speeded his machine toward Somerville without stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage.

A telephone message was sent to the authorities at Somerville requesting them to apprehend Wetzel. He was stopped at Main and Bridge streets, Somerville, by Prosecutor Frederick A. Pope and Policeman Joseph Hanlon. Wetzel expressed surprise, but confessed that he had smashed into Van Nest's machine while running in the same direction on the road. He stated that the car did not stop to find out the extent of the damages was because he was sore on Van Nest.

Wetzel was released by Prosecutor Pope after he had promised to appear when summoned before the court.

Barn Struck by Lightning.

During the thunder storm, Saturday night, a barn belonging to David M. Kellogg and located on the Holly Grove Farm, at Oak Tree, was struck by lightning. A pile of straw was set on fire. The blaze was discovered by Leonard Sandford VanCourt, who promptly extinguished it before any damage resulted.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

BETTER RESULTS THE IDEA.

Schwed, Schuldenfrei and Greenwood as a Committee—Campaign for Better Lights in Business Section.

At a meeting of the Merchants' Association in its rooms in the Coward building Monday, preliminary steps were taken to bring about the amalgamation of the organization with the Board of Trade, and the Plainfield Protective Association. The matter was broached by President William Jeffrey, of the Board of Trade, and was received with enthusiasm. A committee composed of Herman Schwed, H. P. Greenwood and H. Schuldenfrei was appointed to confer with similar committees from the other bodies mentioned.

The idea as broached is to unite the three organizations into one as a chamber of commerce or on this order. It is believed that by concentrating the three a great deal more good for the city can be accomplished. Heretofore each one has been acting on independent lines. The Board of Trade and Merchants' Association are both in favor of the idea, but the position of the Protective Association has not yet been defined. This will be made known at the next meeting of the merchants.

The subject of better lights for the business district was again broached at last night's session. The matter was discussed at some length and J. V. E. Vanderhoof was appointed a committee of one to interview the two candidates for mayor as to their position on the subject, and what their intentions would be in the event of election. The merchants are still eager for better illumination and will follow the matter up the coming winter.

The male clerks of the city were the special guests of the association last night, and they listened to an interesting address by President A. B. Force and other members. The Elks' quartet, composed of William Smith, John Todd, Harry Blimm and Elmer Cutting, rendered vocal numbers and refreshments were served at the close.

A motion was made that a committee of five be appointed to arrange a dance for all the local clerks within a short time. President Force did not announce the committee last night, but will do so later.

FOR YOUR HEALTH'S SAKE.

Be cheerful, don't worry about anything. Let the other fellow do the worrying.

Follow this method of breathing pure air for five or ten minutes morning and night, and great benefit will result.

Keep away from all alcholic drinks and ice water. Buttermilk, lemonade or ice tea would be a fine contract, not with ice dissolved in it—are the safest.

Perspiration is caused by parts of the fluid of the blood being driven out through the pores of the skin when the body is heated. It always retains a certain amount of waste matter which should always be got rid of by washing or dry rubbing, so that it may not be reabsorbed into the blood.

To have suffered, nay to suffer, sets a keen edge on what remains of the agreeable. This is a great truth, and has to be learned in the fire.

SOLIOQUIES OF A BENEDICT.

There is no hope for the man who points to his weaknesses as virtues.

Some people are so pessimistic that they are optimistic that everything's going wrong.

To avoid falling in love keep away from blondes and brunettes.

The fairy tales are wrong—they did get married, but they didn't live happily ever after.

Republicans Complete Organization.

Members of the advisory committee, in accordance with the provision in the constitution, met in the Dix building, Elizabeth, Friday night. Chairman R. H. Smith was given power to make such appointments as desired, and the meeting was held to perfect an organization. Mayor C. J. Fisk was chosen chairman; W. H. Groves, of Elizabeth, secretary; Edward Atwater, Jr., of Elizabeth, treasurer and Peter Tillman of Rahway and W. W. Wodruff, of Elizabeth, vice-presidents. Encouraging reports were received from all parts of the county.

TO RIGIDLY ENFORCE THE PURE FOOD LAWS

Assistant Health Officer John O'Brien, Jr., has today sent to all dealers in food stuffs a notice similar to that issued by the Board of Health on September 1, together with a letter in which he says that the law against exposing the possible infection by flies or other means will be enforced beginning November 1.

The letter states that owing to the fact that the strict enforcement of the new law previous to this date would have worked some hardship on the dealers who were not prepared for the change action was deferred. From now on the pure food laws will be strictly enforced.

BIOGRAPHICAL BOOKS AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

These biographical volumes have recently been added to the Public Library collection:

Bronner, Milton—Maurice Hewlett: Being a critical review of his prose and poetry. "The biographical matter in the book is briefly and discreetly given. If here and there the present judge is a bit too kind in his verdict, it is not because he has spared the pains to weigh the evidence. His analysis of Mr. Hewlett's different books is interesting and discriminating."—N. Y. Times.

Broks, J. G.—American citizen; the life of William Henry Baldwin, Jr. "The biography of a railroad executive which is important because it reveals the many qualities of the man who turned his back on the usual questionable methods looked upon by many officials as unavoidable, and attained success in railroad administration without the loss of integrity. His whole book, indeed is a serviceable contribution to the study of an extraordinary example of efficient American citizenship."—N. Y. Times.

Franklin, Fabian—Life of Daniel Coit Gilman. "This copious biography is practically a history of education in this country, or rather, of the new school of education, for almost half a century."—Lit. D.

"Associated with the beginnings of the Sheffield scientific school, with the New Haven and the University of California, with the establishment of Johns Hopkins University, and with the inauguration of the work of the Carnegie institution, Daniel Coit Gilman's life was devoted to the business of furthering higher education."

Moses, Belle.—Louisa May Alcott, dreamer and worker; a story of achievement. "The author of 'Little Women' attracted her readers as much by the revelation of her own buoyant and optimistic nature, her love of freedom, and the wholesome strength of her inspiration, as by her delightful stories."—Lit. D.

"This very readable biography brings out admirably the best qualities in the life of Louisa Alcott, and will be a source of inspiration and enjoyment to both young and old."—A. L. A. Bkl.

Reed, C. B.—First great Canadian, the story of Pierre Le Moyne, sieur d'Iberville. "A story in which are worked together for the first time the scattered incidents in the life of Le Moyne d'Iberville whose daring exploits during the epoch when France was busy establishing a footing in America stand out on the pages of late 17th century history."—Bk. R. Digest.

"Dr. Reed's book is altogether a notable contribution to the literature of early American history."—Nation.

Spargo, John.—Karl Marx; his life and work. "The first biography of Karl Marx for the English reader which the author has spent thirteen years gathering his material in many European countries aided by the socialist's daughter and friends."—Bk. R. Digest.

"For an understanding of his life and work this book is indispensable."—Ind.

Thompson, S. P.—Life of William Thomson, baron Kelvin of Largs. "A biography guided by the wishes of Lord Kelvin which has resulted in a book with a special appeal to men in sympathy to the aims and efforts of his life, and necessarily a bit difficult in some of its passages for unscientific folk."—N. Y. Times.

"This admirable biography is a worthy memorial."—Spec.

Howells, W. D.—My Mark Twain; reminiscences and criticisms. "Their friendship extended through forty-five years, and Mr. Howells has drawn a unique picture of Mark Twain. Nothing more sympathetic and veracious will ever be written about him. All lovers of Mark Twain have been waiting for some such appreciation from Mr. Howells; for no one else can speak with quite the same authority or from the same point of view."

Awarded Heating Contract.

The contract for installation of a steam heating plant in the Knights of Columbus clubhouse has been awarded Arthur Newman, of Spooner avenue. It will be of the very latest design and complete in every detail. The work of re-constructing the building is now progressing rapidly in charge of Contractor H. H. Hoffman.

TWO DIE AFTER CHURCH IN ORANGE

Within a few hours after they had attended church services Sunday night two residents of Orange died. Charles Youngs Little, for many years a prominent member of the Orange Methodist church, was apparently in good health when he attended the service. During the night, however, he was taken ill at his home, 13 Park place, with acute indigestion and died at 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

John H. Springstead, colored, was also in good health when he attended the evening service at the Union Baptist church. He had returned to his home, 56 Hill street, and was about to retire when he was stricken with heart disease. He died before the arrival of a physician.

Mr. Little was born in Orange county, N. Y., seventy years ago and was the youngest of fourteen children. His father fought in the War of 1813. At an early age Mr. Little went to New York and learned the paint manufacturing trade. He followed this business all his life and was at work last week. On account of his long years of faithfulness he was promoted to the paint manufacturing company in New York several years ago but continued to work.

Mr. Little had lived in Orange for thirty-seven years. He was former member of the Ordway Methodist church, East Orange, where he served for a number of years on the official board. Several years ago he transferred his membership to the Orange church, and has since been an active member there. Yesterday he attended both the morning and evening services as well as the Men's Bible class in the afternoon. Mr. Little is survived by a widow and two sons, Geo. V. Little and Charles H. Little, both of Hanover.

Mr. Springstead was fifty-six years old and had been a resident of Orange nearly all his life. He is survived by a widow, six daughters and one son.

G. O. P. STATE CHAIRMAN CERTAIN OF A VICTORY

United States Senator Frank O. Briggs, chairman of the Republican State committee, yesterday issued a statement forecasting the election of Vivian M. Lewis, notable for its apparent doubt of the ability of the Republicans to carry the county of Mercer, and its apparent admission that the Democrats will carry Essex. The forecast is as follows:

"I have no hesitation in saying that Atlantic county will give Lewis at least 2,000 more majority than it gave Fort. Everything in that county indicates that that figure is a conservative estimate. We believe also that Mercer county is sure to be found in the Lewis column. In 1907 the county gave Katzenbach 800, but we figure that our man will come out this year with a 1,200 lead.

"When there is no split in our party in Monmouth we always carry that county. We lost it in 1907 by 1,400. I believe this year that we will make a gain in that county of easily 2,000 votes because there is complete harmony there. That will give us Monmouth county.

"The Democrats claim Bergen county, but that is a joke. Our next big gain will be in Passaic county, where Mr. Lewis lives. We won there in 1907 by 600 votes, but will make a gain of at least 2,000 more there.

"Now just do a little figuring. Fort carried the State by 8,000. If we start with that and then add the 3,000 gain, we are sure to make in the counties I have mentioned, it will take a bigger loss than even the pessimists say we will meet in Essex and other North Jersey counties to wipe out our long lead."

Plan a Fine Hunt.

The Watchung Hunt Club has planned for a fine hunt on Saturday, meeting at the water tower, Netherwood. The first check will be at the Brass Kettle Inn on the Springfield road, where all members are invited by invitation of the master, Rufus C. Pisch, to partake of light refreshments. In the evening, C. W. Holland will give a dinner at the club house for the members of the club.

Scotch Plains Boys' Club.

Through the kindness of the Scotch Plains Baptist church trustees the boys of that village are to have a club and club room, having given them two rooms on the ground floor of the post-office building. Fourteen charter members were received on Saturday night. All boys between the ages of 10 and 14 years are eligible for membership. The meeting was incharge of Clarence Murphy, of this city, who is one of the 125 chosen leaders of the Ernest Thompson Seton Camp club. Rev. Franklin K. Mathews, pastor of the church, also gave the members a short talk.

William Taggart, Jr.

William Taggart, Jr., aged fourteen days, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Taggart, of Laramie road, who died October 14, was buried in Calvary cemetery, New York.

When Zeb Acted

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"Pa—Zeb—Jimmy! Mary has gone! Her bed ain't been slept in!"

Farmer John White, Zeb Hastings, his hired man, and his son Jimmy were sitting down to breakfast when Mrs. White, who had been upstairs to see why the daughter Mary didn't come down, stood at the foot of the stairs and made the above announcement.

"What do you mean, ma?" slowly asked the husband, while Zeb turned pale and rose up, and Jimmy, the 14-year-old son, had a guilty look.

"Come right upstairs and see for yourselves. I tell you her bed ain't been slept in, and I shouldn't a bit wonder if most of her clothes was gone!"

The husband, wife and Zeb filed up the stairway and gazed at the bed, while Jimmy made a sneak for the barn. The bed was there, without a crease or a crinkle in it, and Mary's best things were missing.

"Wouldn't hang herself in the garret, would she?" asked the father.

"She wouldn't drown herself in the well, would she?" asked the white-faced wife, as she wrung her hands.

Zeb Hastings had been a farmer's hired man since he was 13. He was steady and hard-working. He had been with the Whites for three years, and for two years he had been in love with the daughter Mary. He hadn't exactly said so, but the father knew it, the mother knew it and Mary knew it. Zeb was a little slow—that's all.

"Zeb'll make Mary a good man," was the comment between husband and wife.

Mary liked Zeb. As for loving him, she didn't know. She had let things drift along without asking herself the question. She had seen little of men. No young man had come courting, and not once at fortnight had she driven into the village. She was better educated than Zeb, but she did not criticize. Hard work had given him a bit of a stoop, and his hands were big and red and his face unshaven most of the time, but she made no comparisons to his detriment.

It Was Great Acting.

But for the arrival of a summer boarder things would have continued to drift. He was a young man of good looks, wore clothes of the latest pattern and was a new being to the isolated girl. He told her of the outside world—appealed to romance, ambition and curiosity—and, after a stay of a fortnight, gave the farmer a worthless bank check for his board and disappeared.

It was a week later that Mary failed to come down to breakfast. Zeb had been jealous of the boarder and had heaved a sigh of relief at his departure.

"For the land's sake, what is it, and what are you goin' to do?" asked Mrs. White, looking at Zeb instead of her husband.

Without a word in answer, Zeb turned and walked downstairs and made his way to the barn. The granary door was shut. He opened it and got a firm hold of the collar of the hiding Jimmy and lifted him out on the barn floor and shook him three or four times, and demanded:

"Tell me where she went! You know all about it."

"She's—she's run away!" blubbered the youth.

"And, gol darn you, you knew she was going and kept still about it! Go on and tell me everything or I'll shake the head off you!"

He was led into the house to sob out his story. The summer boarder was an actor-manager. In no other way could he have appealed so strongly to the girl. She had never seen a play, but she had read. She had but to be cast as Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and romance, fame and the world were hers. At first she had doubted her talents, but after committing a 50-word speech to memory and repeating it to the manager, he had pronounced her a marvel, and she had doubted no more.

Brother Jimmy had overheard enough, so that they were obliged to take him into their confidence. In fact, on the night Mary left the house he had carried her satchel for three miles on the way to the village.

When his story had been finished—and there were many other details—both father and mother looked at Zeb. Never before had they seen a paleness through his sunburn—his eyes look so steely, his jaw so hard set. They didn't ask what he was going to do; they could read it in his face. The "New York Uncle Tom's Cabin company" was to forego after that night at a village 25 miles away for rehearsal previous to taking the road. The boy Jimmie had it all down pat. If he had only been a year or two older, so he had been told, he would have been taken along to play the part of George Harris.

Zeb Hastings went upstairs and changed to his Sunday suit. When he came down he went to the barn and harnessed the old mare to the democrat wagon. He had the barnyard gate open to drive out when Mrs. White came out and asked between her sobs:

"Zeb, what you goin' to do?"

"Goin' to tip over Uncle Tom's cabin."

He drove to the village where Mary must have taken the train, put up the horse at the tavern barn and then went to the depot to wait for his train. Men who knew him for a good fellow shook hands or slapped him on the back, and, after looking at him in his Sunday suit asked if he was going away to be married. To their surprise he replied that he was. He wasn't mentioning names, but he expected to bring a wife back with him.

At two o'clock in the afternoon Zeb Hastings was landed at the depot in Schofield. He made a few inquiries, got a bite to eat and then made his way to Turner's hall. A citizen named Turner had the enterprise to turn the second story of his hardware store into a place where outraged taxpayers and other bodies might meet. Theatricals had been given there and there were bills on the walls and boards announcing that the Uncle Tom company would take its chances at an early date.

A rehearsal had been called for two o'clock and as Zeb made his way into the hall it was just beginning. He paused for a moment to locate two of the actors—Mary White and the summer boarder. Then he advanced and lifted himself upon the stage. Mary stared and turned pale and trembled. The summer boarder didn't recognize the farmer's hired man, and he advanced and demanded why the intrusion.

"I have come to act!" replied Zeb, and he proceeded to do so.

It was great acting. It never will be beaten. It brought down the manager and the house—the manager first. Zeb didn't have many speeches, but the action was superb. He seized that manager by the hair and shook him silly. Then he mopped the stage with him. Then he booted him about. The women of the company crowded together and shrieked and screamed. They were real shrieks and screams—warranted three-ply. The gentlemen in the cast woke up after a bit and pitched into Zeb in a body. There was no make-believe in the fight, but they were as straws in a 40-mile gale. Down went Uncle Tom, and down went Legree. The Lawyer Marks was tossed aside like a chip and George Harris received two black eyes in one-two succession.

It took Zeb Hastings just nine minutes to tip over Uncle Tom's cabin and Uncle Tom and everybody connected with it and bring about a financial wreck. When he had finished he beckoned to Mary White. She came over and took his arm, and they left the hall together. It was 11 o'clock that night when they drove up to the farmhouse. The family rushed forward with extended arms to cry:

"Mary, how could you—how could—!"

"Cut it out!" interrupted Zeb. "Mary and me was married before we left Schofield, and there's been acting 'nuff for one day!"

How Elvins Got to Congress.

When Pollitte Evans made his run for congress he adopted a unique and novel method of getting his name before the people. He sent out thousands of letters, on the back of which was a colored map of his district and a picture of himself. The body of the letter went like this: "Success in politics is largely a matter of industry. I am working hard to win. I want you to spend a penny for me. Then you'll be a stockholder in my boom for congress. A penny isn't much to you, but it may mean a vote for me, and one vote may elect me." It closed in the letter was a souvenir postcard, on which he wanted the recipient to put a one cent stamp and send to a friend couched in terms like "Jim, I wish you would vote for this young fellow," or "Bill, I want you to give this chap a lift for my sake." His method of canvass bore fruit, and Pollitte was elected by 207 votes to represent the Thirteenth district of Missouri in the Sixty-first congress.—Washington Herald.

Inference Easily Drawn.

"I guess that that near-sighted fellow that calls on sister is getting worse," said a small boy, aged twelve, possibly called Jimmie.

"That is enough from you," said the indignant sister.

"What makes you think he is getting worse?" inquired the father of the son, possibly called Jimmie.

"Because I heard sister ask him last night if he thought she was the blarney stone," replied the boy, possibly called Jimmie.

REPUBLICANS ENTHUSED AT THE DOLLAR DINNER

Speeches of Lewis, Griggs and Runyon are Roundly Cheered by Union County G. O. P. Workers at Big Banquet.

Vivian M. Lewis and Judge William N. Runyon, candidates for governor and congress, respectively, received ovations from the several hundred attendants at the dollar dinner Wednesday in Turn Hall, Elizabeth, under the auspices of the Elizabeth Downtown Republican club and the Union county Republican committee. The chief speech of the evening, however, was made by former Governor John W. Griggs, who riddled Woodrow Wilson's arguments for a change in State government, challenged him to show where a dollar of the State's money had been unwisely expended, and scored him sharply for declaring that he was opposed to the whole protective principle.

Charles N. Fowler had been announced in the list of guests, but he was a no-show. So was Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield candidate for the assembly, who is 81. Others at the guest table were United States Senator John Kean, who was booked for a speech, but begged to be excused because of the lateness of the hour; Samuel G. Berry, candidate for mayor, and Augustus W. Schwartz and Peter H. Meisel, the two other candidates for the assembly.

When Vivian M. Lewis, candidate for governor, was introduced, he apologized for being late, telling how he had attended the dedication of the Elks' home in Paterson, and feared he would be kept until 11 o'clock to attend to a toast he drank to President Taft. All present then joined in the singing of America.

Mr. Lewis declared he believed in party government and in the Republican party, but he did not believe the boss should flourish anywhere. Then he began an account of what the Republicans had done for the State and country, declaring that the period in history during which the Republicans had been in control had been its golden era. "It has," he said, "given to the country the great Rail Splitter, Lincoln, he great soldier Grant, the wise statesman and martyr, William McKinley, the intrepid Roosevelt, and the present able occupant of the White House." He told of the Democratic management of State affairs, and how the power to make appropriations had been abdicated by the legislature and vested in the governor. When the Republicans assumed control there found the State on the verge of bankruptcy. Then Mr. Lewis showed how marvelous had been the increase in business in 15 years; how the amount of money invested in manufactures had multiplied and the wages paid to employes jumped from $83,000 on to $162,000. Without taking responsibility for all of this gain, he declared that it would not have been possible except for the wise management of affairs by the Republican party.

What the Republicans have done for the State's schools, health, water supply and roads was briefly rehearsed, and all, he said, without one break of scandal, a single defalcation or direct taxation. He showed how the Republicans had made the big corporations pay the increased taxation, and was vigorously applauded when he reminded his hearers that the State was not only without debt but had a million dollar balance in the treasury.

Mr. Lewis referred to the passage of the public utility law by the legislature last winter and the plank in the Republican platform therein demanding a clause in that law giving the utility board the power to fix rates. If such a measure came to him, as governor, he said, he would sign it. He promised to sign, too, a bill for the extension of the direct primary law, and declared in favor of any improvement in the ballot law that would permit the voters at the polls to express their wishes more clearly.

Mr. Griggs said he was a stalwart Republican. He was not a halfbreed. He deprecated the fashion in some quarters of talking of a change. He praised the Republican party for its achievements. The word Reform, he said, as applied to the Republican party, did not please him. The Republican party, he declared, was not in need of reform. It had nothing to apologize for. Progress onward, he said, is not reform.

Mr. Griggs said a party had to have leaders. Even a mob has leaders or a school of bluefish. He did not favor throwing a leader overboard, either, because he failed to suit everybody, any more than Columbus should have been thrown overboard because he would not heed the demand of his mutinous crew.

Mr. Griggs did not think the time had ever come for bolting the Republican party, though he praised those Democrats who had had the courage in 1896 to vote for him and for McKinley and to vote ever since against Bryanism. He scored Woodrow Wilson for his declaration that he never votes a Republican ticket, even while Bryanism menaced the country. Grover Cleveland, he said, even spoke against the new heresies of the Democratic party, and practically advised Democrats to vote for McKinley.

The speaker denounced the Democratic candidate for governor for his declaration that he was opposed to the protective tariff principle. He riddled the doctor's argument that labor unions and not protection had advanced American laborers' wages, showing that wages rose years before labor unions were thought of. He showed Dr. Wilson's inconsistency in this respect by quoting the doctor's slurry remarks about labor unions and his belief, as expressed, that they had never done anything for the American workingman.

The free traders, the speaker declared, are, of course, earnestly supporting Dr. Wilson, for they hope by his election to break down the bulwark of protection. Regarding Dr. Wilson's charge of extravagance in the State government by the Republicans, he challenged Dr. Wilson to go over the appropriations for the past year and show where any money had been wasted. He described the manner in which Dr. Wilson was nominated, scored him for his professed ignorance that any one got the nomination for him, and said the machine leaders picked him because they knew they could not win with one of their own record.

Mr. Griggs told about the way Democrats used to do things in the State government and the changes effected for the better in 15 years.

Judge Runyon lauded President Taft, who, he declared, had accomplished more in carrying out the pledges of his party's platform than any other occupant of the White House. He urged that Republican congressmen be sent to Washington to aid the President in carrying out pledges as yet unfulfilled. He defended the new tariff from its critics, saying that few realized what it had done in turning a deficit into a surplus. Necessary changes, he said, would be effected by the commission appointed by the president. The judge said it was no time for the Republicans to go to sleep. He admitted that the Democrats are putting up a strong fight, and that if the Republicans do not nominated capable, honest man for governor they might be on the defensive. He, too, praised the Republican party for its many accomplishments, and asked personal support that he might help at Washington to uphold President Taft. If elected he promised to do his best. He expected to make mistakes but they would be honest mistakes. He would be no one's puppet, and his hands would not be tied in any respect. He predicted victory if the party acts unitedly and every member works as he should, for its success.

ARRANEMENTS MADE FOR THANKSGIVING SERVICE

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Ministers' Association in Grace M. E. church Thursday afternoon, arrangements made for the annual union Thanksgiving service. It will be held in the First Baptist church Thanksgiving morning and Rev. John Hanks Nash, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was selected to deliver the sermon. A committee composed of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Revs. C. S. Kemble and Gabriel R. Maguire was appointed to perfect the plans.

A discussion as to the advisability of holding the union service in a different church each year resulted in favorable action. Heretofore it has been the custom to assemble in the same church on each occasion.

Rev. C. S. Kemble was appointed a committee of one to draft resolutions of regret at the withdrawal of Rev. L. R. Howard from the local ministerial field and congratulations were extended Rev. J. O. McKelvey on his victory in the fight against the granting of licenses to North Plainfield saloons.

At the close of the session the ministers enjoyed refreshments provided by Rev. O. J. Shoop. The next meeting will be held the second Thursday in December at the home of Rev. C. L. Goodrich.

Music for Patrolmen's Ball.

Owing to the retirement of Benjamin Lavere from the leadership of his orchestra the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association has concluded a contract with L. R. Anderson, musical director, of Newark, to furnish the music for the annual ball. From the Snyder agency Billy Redmond and Billy Collins, two well known entertainers, have been secured for the same event. Badges for the committees and others are expected next week. The ticket committee reports a big sale of tickets.

IN MEMORY OF COLUMBUS

AT THE HOTEL WALDORF.

Fathers Bogan and Miller and Others Respond to Toasts—P. H. Burns Toastmaster—An Excellent Menu.

Not the least of the Columbus Day celebrations was the banquet of Watchung Council, No. 552 Knights of Columbus, held at the Waldorf Wednesday. Sixty-four members of the order enjoyed one of Mr. Windhams famous culinary efforts and listened to some eloquent speeches, the last one ending in three cheers for the discoverer of America. Rev. B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, was the principal speaker, taking for his topic "Indifference." The other speakers were District deputy J. F. O'Neill, of Jersey City; Rev. William H. Miller, pastor of the St. Joseph's church, in Plainfield, and A. E. Kenney, also of the borough. Paul H. Burns, was a capable toastmaster. Mr. Burns said that this was his maiden effort, but he appeared to have been to the manner born, acquitting himself with the ease of an old hand.

Several allusions were made during the entertainment part of the program to several of the candidates now running for office, some of which brought forth cheers while others were accompanied with groans. On the whole the evening was a pleasant one for all who attended the dinner and the event will no doubt be repeated in years to come as a regular function.

Owing to the lateness of the hour at which the last course was disposed of some of the speeches were brief and the order of sequence was changed in order to allow Mr. O'Neil to catch a train. Mr. O'Neil said that in order to properly appreciate what Columbus had really done we would have to go back about 450 years to the time when we can in fancy see a man looking for help in the great enterprise in which his soul was wrapped. And taking another look see that same man trying with the chains about his feet in a prison cell. But at last, although his deeds are but a memory, his name is cheered and revered today all over this vast country, and that reverence is due in large measure to the knights of Columbus. And the same knights must plead guilty to being responsible for the day which is gradually becoming one of the greatest days in our country.

Father Bogan's reception was the most emphasis that a year from this November Mark Sullivan, who is a knight, will certainly be elected Mayor of Jersey City. The votes for him are already counted.

Father Miller gave a history of the life of Columbus and showed to the company a photograph of the house in which the explorer was born which is still standing in Genoa, Italy. He concluded by telling the members that they had a great work to do in defending the church, of which they are members and upholding the character of Christopher Columbus.

A. E. Kenney's subject was "Patriotism," to which he devoted about ten minutes. His central thought was that patriotism coupled to faith made a powerful union and that it brought positive results. He declared that the Knights of Columbus ought to be the foremost organization to celebrate the discovery of America by Columbus, not alone as an organization, but as individuals and that the event should be kept alive until the end of time.

Father Bogan's reception as he arose to speak must have warmed his heart. The applause lasted for at least a minute and as usual he started with a joke. "Wouldn't it have been an awful thing," he asked, "if Christopher Columbus had not discovered us? Under these comfortable circumstances, having disposed of a hearty meal the remnants of which will be strewn along the shores of time in the morning, let the melody of a serious thought find its echo in your hearts. A sermon at this time would be eminently out of place, but there are some serious thoughts which wont hurt even now. There are achievements which Columbianism can attain and there are no heights which it cannot scale. This is shown in the determination with which the discoverer of this beautiful land of ours prosecuted his ideals.

"Now the nations of the old world look Columbianism can attain and hearts throb at the spirit of freedom which knocks out the old ideals. Every man may lift his hat in reverence to his fellow and feel the responsive thrill of joy at emancipation from the tide rules. The achievements of the past and the opportunities of the future should stimulate you to load, aim straight and fire into the bullseye of your ambitions. Load your hearts with righteousness, your minds with learning and your souls with integrity and the day of the truest manhood that Catholic America can give you is yours. How can you be indifferent? It is true that some men are incapable of proper expansion and some will bow to the Giddess of Liberty with one hand extended in gesture and pick her pocket with the other, but we cannot be so low.

"I say to you that you should never cast a sovereign vote for a Catholic simply because he is a catholic and likewise do not vote for a non-Catholic because he is such. Party lines should not count. It is the man you must look at. If he is honest and capable he is the man to vote for. You can say 'my vote is an unpurchasable treasure, and if I make a mistake God will judge me, not men.' If your conscience is clear you are the best American that can be produced. Act so that your country can trust you. Mark Hanna and the lamented McKinley have said that the principals of the Republic are best preserved through the moral teachings of the Catholic church. The press of our little city has never been afraid to tell the truth to its readers, but there are sheets which cannot tell it no matter how they try, and they are the most misleading sources of misinformation that we have in the country today.

"You are rallied around not only a flag, but a principle. Upright, fearless and courageous you stand today and exclaim that you have the best interests of your country at heart and the day is coming when you will see the best spheres of Catholic Americanism expanding to the limit of the country's possessions."

The committee having the banquet in charge were J. D. J. Cournin, chairman; H. P. Greenwood, F. J. Harding, F. J. Blatz, J. J. Carty and C. F. Fogarty. Music was furnished by Joseph A. Denny at the piano and a banjoist, while Johnny Campbell sang coon songs with his melodious voice in popular songs in which the company joined. The end of the fun came at precisely midnight.

LOCAL ELKS AT THE PATERSON DEDICATION

Forty members of Plainfield lodge, No. 85, B. P. O. E., journeyed to Paterson Wednesday and took part in the dedication of the new Elks' club house in that city. Most of the Plainfielders made the trip by auto, leaving at noon, while the remainder went by train. All the machines made the trip without mishap.

The exercises included a parade in which 5,000 of the antlered host were in line, a dedication ceremony in the new home at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and a grand ball in the armory which continued until 5 Thursday morning. Vivian Lewis, Republican candidate for governor, is a member of Paterson lodge and was one of the reception committee.

The new home is declared to be the finest structure of its kind in the State. It has every accommodation for members and guests and is most elaborately fitted up. It represents an outlay of about $100,000.

DENTAL SOCIETY DINES AT PEDEFLOU'S HOTEL

The Plainfield Dental Society held its first fall meeting at Pedeflou' Hotel, Wednesday with a full attendance. Dr. C. M. F. Egel, president, presided at the meeting, which preceded the dinner. Those present were Drs. C. R. Thiers, F. W. French, Raymond Stevens, R. W. Emerson, C. L. Moore, G. T. Moore, Grant T. Clawson, O. B. Whitford, Clive Montfort, W. E. Stelle, F. S. Weld, Charles Hillman, Charles Hillman, C. W. Leonard and B. F. Leonard, of this city; Dr. C. M. P. Egel, of Westfield; Dr. T. J. Hogan, of Dunellen; Drs. Voorhees and Naylor, of Somerville.

It was decided the coming year to secure as speakers leading men in the dental profession and to conduct lantern and table clinics. Announcement concerning the meeting for next month will be made within a short time.

FAMED YOUNG 'CELLIST WILL BE HEARD HERE.

An announcement of great interest to the patrons of the McIntyre Chamber Music Concerts is made by Mr. McIntyre today. He has secured the services of Horace Britt, the famed 'cellist, for his 4th and Plainfield will be given an opportunity to hear him at the concerts to be given at the High School Auditorium.

Mr. Britt is a Frenchman and a young man with a most enviable reputation as a solo 'cellist with the Metropolitan Opera Company, and is now with the great Philharmonic Orchestra, of New York.

Mr. McIntyre is congratulating himself upon securing so great an artist as Mr. Britt, and feels that a warm welcome awaits a 'cellist of such excellence from the discriminating musical audiences of his concerts. The first of the series of concerts will be given on Tuesday evening, November 1.

CASE'S "EDWARD T" WINS

Finishes First in Three Straight Heats in 2:15 Trot or Pace at Driving Park.

FOUR EVENTS ON PROGRAM.

Cortelyou's "Ravenwood" First in the 2:20 Trot or Pace—Yorke's "District Attorney" Wins Running Race.

More than one thousand people attended the money race meet at the driving park Wednesday afternoon, zabeth, under the auspices of the Driving Association, and enjoyed the fine program, which comprised two trotting and pacing races, a running race and one race for ponies. The entry list was large for each event including some of the best horses to be found in this part of the State, and all made unusually good time, considering the fact that the weather conditions were not the best for fast time.

The first race, a 2:15 trot or pace, was won in straight heats by A. S. Case's "Edward T.," with Edward McLoughlin's "Orianna" second. A. C. Blairs "Aron B.," a local entry, finished third, much to the disappointment of the Plainfielders.

The second race, a 2:20 trot and pace, was won by H. P. Cortelyou's "Ravenwood," with Dr. Burdick's "Peerless Pete" second. I. Huff's "Bessie Burns," E. B. Allen's "Little Ella A." and A. Schiner's "Dr. Bill" were ruled out in this race, failing to finish within the time limit in the third heat, and they were not allowed to start in the fourth heat.

The running race, three-quarters of a mile distance, was one of the best of the afternoon. This was won by "District Attorney," owned by C. F. Yorke, of Newark the time being 1:18. K. B. Schley's "Genessee" finished second; Hugh Gormley's "Smug" third, and John Booraem's "Mastiff" fourth.

The last race for ponies was won by Harry A. Bourne's "Single O." The distance was three-eighths of a mile, and the time was thirty-five seconds. Harry Rose's "Casablanca" finished second, and "Maid of Erin" was third, while K. B. Schley's "Cheyenne" came in last.

While the races were in progress, the riding members of the Watchung Hunt Club finished their drag hunt at the park, and it was a pretty sight to see them in their bright colored jackets and white cravats in the park and take a jump prepared for them near the grand-stand. Miss Mabel B. Hooley and Miss Gertrude Noe, together with about twenty men, comprised the hunters who were following the hounds. The summary:

MISS BERTHA E. PECK FRED J. BORRUP'S BRIDE.

In the presence of immediate relatives and a few intimate friends Miss Bertha E. Peck, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Peck, was married at 7:30 Wednesday night to Fred J. Borrup, also of this city, at the couple's newly furnished home on Netherwood avenue. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of autumn leaves by the Rev. John W. Musson. The house was tastefully decorated with smilax.

The bride was given away by her brother, Howard W. Peck. Miss Bertha F. Manning was maid of honor and Albert F. Yaeger acted as best man. The wedding march was played by Miss Florence M. Yaeger and Charles Kirchner acted as usher. The bride was attired in a white messaline gown draped with chiffon and wore a tulle veil caught up with lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and bride's roses. The maid of honor was attired in a green silk warped chiffon gown with silver trimming and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The couple received many beautiful gifts consisting chiefly of cut glass, silverware and furniture.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 23, 1910.

Topic—The chance we miss.—Gal. vi. 1-10. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The sixth chapter of Galatians is one of the most practical, for its size, in all the Scripture. It contains certain commandments, each one of which we should take every opportunity to perform, but which, alas, we so often neglect or fail in our efforts because of the blundering methods we use. Let us study these ten verses and then recall how many times we have had chances to perform the injunctions and have missed them. The great deeds of life we are anxious to perform, but the ones that come almost every day, yet mean so much in the average life, we are indifferent to them and neglect many an opportunity to do good and to bring happiness into the lives of others.

Let us look at some of these injunctions and see if this is not so and then decide never again to miss such opportunities.

1. The restoration of those overtaken by a fault. How many commit faults who might be readily restored if we used the apostle's method and considered his basis for such an action! He says restore in a spirit of meekness. Many go daily astray. We may be indifferent to it or may use the wrong method in our attempts to restore them. Instead of meekness we used harshness and condemnation. We blame them for what they have done, and in so doing find that such treatment produces only the opposite effect. Every man denies the right of another to condemn him and to treat him harshly. In this he is correct. God and state alone possess such prerogatives. On the other hand, a difference in tone of voice and language might accomplish great good—a great chance, yet missed, and real harm done.

The reason Paul gives for using meekness instead of harshness is unanswerable. "Considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted," and, being tempted, fall, and, falling, need restoration. Who is invulnerable? Who is perfect? The man who inordinately condemns another on one day for his fault may commit the same one under strong temptation the next day. Will he then want to be lashed and treated with harshness? No, but he will be. God and man both treat men in judgment as they have treated others. Thus he by harsh treatment has forfeited his right to find mercy in the day of his need. "Chickens come home to roost" is an old adage, but seldom fails to come to pass.

2. Burden bearing. "Bear ye one another's burdens." Oh, the burdens of life! How many are carried by the multitudes of mankind! How many chances we have to help others here, and how often we miss them! Some think only of their own burdens and dislike to hear of others' woes, not knowing that helping others causes us to forget our own burdens and that if we fail to accept such opportunities we miss the chance to "fulfill the law of Christ."

3. Communicating unto teachers—religious teachers, especially the ministry, which is ordained only to this work (verse 6). Many people do not believe in paying a minister who does not belong to their particular religious sect. They attend and belong to churches where the minister is paid by other denominations. But they contribute nothing. They take what they can get and pay nothing. They are very willing for others to pay the bills, but for them the gospel is free, preaching is free, coal and light are free. But in thinking and acting so they are indulging in selfishness and blessing. The church sponge must shrink up readily when thinking the subject over sometimes. Moreover, he misses the chance of obtaining a rich divine blessing, for God has promised rich blessings for those who bring the tithes into the storehouse. No man ever loses a penny by liberally supporting the church of God. The loss comes in his failure to do so.

Other injunctions may be considered from the same standpoint: (1) The reaping of what we sow; (2) reward for not fainting and "well doing;" (3) doing good as we have opportunity "to all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

It may well be noted that in missing chances to do good we at the same time miss opportunities to get good—a matter of mutual consideration. The man who, withholds mercy forfeits it from others. This principle holds good in all the practical affairs of life and should inspire us to miss no chance to help another more unfortunate for the day than we.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Washington and Compton Avenue Presbyterian church will hold special meetings during the month of —— each Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. There will be good singing, earnest personal testimonies and a glad, good time. Won't you come?

WILSON ENEMY OF LABOR

Democratic Candidate Strong Opposer of Measures Urged By Industrial Reformers.

WORKMEN CONDEMN NOMINEE.

Trades Union Advocate Recalls What He Said to Princeton Graduating Class on June 13, 1909.

The Trades Union Advocate, the official organ of all labor unions, says in its current issue and following about the candidacy for governor of Dr. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton:

"Wodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate for governor, spoke at the opera house on Monday evening to a large audience, which was well disappointed, because they expected to hear a brilliant orator and to hear him say something. Woodrow Wilson's speech contained nothing to draw him votes, and in fact he lost votes by his appearance before a Trenton audience. His speech showed him to be unacquainted with the practical affairs of life and of State government, and unfit and unqualified to fill the office of governor of the great State of New Jersey, although he is small.

"Its statement to the effect that he did not know what influences brought about his nomination, if true, proves him to be too 'innocent' to guard the interests of the State of New Jersey and its citizens. Everybody in the State who knows anything knows that he was nominated by Wall Street financiers, through 'Jim' Smith and 'Bob' Davis, two 'great reformers.' A great many wage-earners went to the opera house on Monday night expecting to hear Wilson try to explain his utterances against wage-earners in his baccalaureate sermon to the Princeton university graduates on Sunday, June 13, 1909, when he said, according to the True American of June 14:

"'You know what the usual standard of the employe is in our day. It is to give as little as he may for his wages. Labor is standardized by the labor unions and is the only standard to which it is made to conform. No one is suffered to do more than the average workman can do; in some trades and handicrafts no one is suffered to do more than the least skillful of his fellows can do within the hours allowed for a day's labor, and no one may work out of hours at all or volunteer anything beyond the minimum. I need not point out how economically disastrous such a regulation of labor is. It is so unprofitable to the employer that in some trades it will presently not be worth while to attempt anything at all. He had better stop altogether than to operate at an inevitable and invariable loss. The labor of America is rapidly becoming unprofitable under its present regulation by those who have determined to reduce it to a minimum. Our economic supremacy may be lost because the country grows more and more full of unprofitable servants.

"But Mr. Wilson, although so 'innocent,' knew better than to deny his own utterances, as published from furnished copy, in nearly every daily paper in the State of New Jersey and also in New York and Philadelphia papers. And he did not possess nerve enough to even attempt to qualify them.

"Therefore the wage-earner will accept them as his true sentiments, which they evidently are, because they were delivered in a sermon to the graduating class of the university after careful preparation, and were intended to be guiding words to the members of the class, after they left the university and went out into the world as employers of labor, intended to instill in their minds a hatred for and contempt of wage-earners, and especially organized wage-earners.

"And the wage-earners, and especially the organized wage-earners, should and will remember on election day the sentiments of Woodrow Wilson toward them as expressed to the graduating class on June 13, 1909, and will express their sentiments of Woodrow Wilson on election day, 1910, in the New York and Philadelphia papers. And he did not possess nerve enough to even attempt to qualify them.

"Therefore the wage-earner will accept them as his true sentiments, which they evidently are, because they were delivered in a sermon to the graduating class of the university after careful preparation, and were intended to be guiding words to the members of the class, after they left the university and went out into the world as employers of labor, intended to instill in their minds a hatred for and contempt of wage-earners, and especially organized wage-earners.

"And the wage-earners, and especially the organized wage-earners, should and will remember on election day the sentiments of Woodrow Wilson toward them as expressed to the graduating class on June 13, 1909, and will express their sentiments of Woodrow Wilson on election day, 1910, in the New York and Philadelphia papers.

"Union men, be union men this time. Forget party allegiance. Cast your vote against this 'intellectual fop' who has so falsely and wrongfully denounced you and your wage-earning brothers.

"Every union man who is interested in the welfare of the movement should register for the election November 8."

PLAINFIELD TRUST CO. MAKES AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

With the desire of keeping in close contact with the customers of this institution and of being within easy access of anyone having business to transact, the officers of The Plainfield Trust Company have moved their desks outside of the banking room partition where they will be glad to consult with their patrons at any time.

The new arrangement also facilitates the transaction of the Company's constantly increasing business by providing more ample accommodation for the office staff.

VOTERS HEAR MR. LEWIS

Candidate Promises Clean, Honest and Competent Administration.

DR. PRINCE ALSO SPOKE.

Judge Runyon Given a Great Ovation by the Big Crowd at Mass Meeting at Reform Hall.

A crowd that completely filled Reform Hall Saturday night and which included many women heard Vivian M. Lewis discuss State issues and declare himself upon topics which are uppermost in the minds of the voters at this time. Mr. Lewis declared that he favored the selection of Congressmen and Governor at the primaries by direct vote; put himself on record as in favor of rate making power for the Public Utilities Commission and said he would urge upon the Legislature, if elected, the necessity for a more stringent Corrupt Practices act; would make it impossible for a corporation to receive its charter until properly investigated by competent authority and finally declared that he would give a clean, honest and economical administration. Senator John D. Prince, Dr. Paterson, and Judge William N. Runyon also spoke. The former confined himself to telling what Dr. Woodrow Wilson lacked in the way of political wisdom, while the judge confined himself to a defense of Taft and an eulogy of President William H. Taft.

Craig A. Marsh presided and introduced the speakers, Walter Hetfield, Jr., having performed a like office for Mr. Marsh.

Mr. Lewis said a compliment to the women in the audience for their evident interest in the campaign and told them the old story about the "hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." He said, "the mother who directs correctly the morals right living of her sons is as great a power in the community as the best of the men."

Referring to Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who was on the stage, Mr. Lewis said; "He is one of the best representatives this or any other city ever had, and his Civil Service bill was a measure which has been the means of taking many graft offices out of politics. That measure has driven partisanship out of public offices and Mr. Ackerman agrees his State unselfishly in everything he does. In our heterogeneous population it is a good thing to have a man like him at the head of the Senate.

"The concentrated efforts of individuals is what makes our good government. It is the attainment of good, patriotic citizens banded together for unselfish service which accomplishes the great ends of our civic life. We live in a great country, under a great form of government, the three branches of which work in harmonious relationship. Home fell because of internal dissensions. Our army, navy and State departments are the admiration of the world and they have been perfected under Republican administrations.

"I am a Republican. I believe in the Republican party and I tell you that parties are a necessity. Party leaders are a necessity, but bossism should be put down so that it may never rise again. Party organization should survive because of its right principles and what it advocates for the whole people. The Republican party has been the sponsor for all business success. It has dissipated anarchy, built the free schools and churches; and other institutions for the improvement of the people. It is a fallacy to believe that one man can carry the weight of the whole country on his shoulders. Such an achievement is impossible, but I believe that the organization of strong individuals are capable of so administering the country's affairs that they will be eminently satisfactory to the whole country.

"No country on the face of the earth has made such progress as such aggressive strides forward as has ours. Our greatest thinkers, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, McKinley, all have taught us in living how to die. Our country gave to us that progressive intrepid President, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, (tremendous applause) and last, but not least we have today one whom history will say has signed more bills than any other President who ever sat in the executive chair and if they will uphold him and give him a chance to finish as he has begun they will find that they have another hero to put in the Hall of Fame."

The speaker then referred to the country's finances, pointing out that the deficit of the single year (1909) was nearly sufficient to wipe out the entire bonded debt. He declared that from our mints alone we derived an income of over a million and a half of dollars annually, which is more than the entire budget of the Republic of Peru, once the richest of the possessions of Spain. Referring to the building of the Panama canal he said that at its completion the stores of Union county would be the shopping places of the women of Australia.

Continuing Mr. Lewis said: "We are now engaged in a State campaign which has stirred the State from one end to the other. We have the same common purpose—to better our condition and we use the State government with which to accomplish our purpose. And in order to do it we ask that the State government be kept abreast of the times. It is like a great corporation which needs to collect its board of governors and other officers, and it is due to you people that you have a correct accounting of their stewardship. The change from the corruption of fifteen years ago to the wise and progressive administration of the Republicans has made wonderful changes for the better in our commonwealth. The peoples trust had been betrayed, the treasury depleted and corrupt laws were in vogue. Under the Republicans the State has become the fourth State in the Union and is second only to Massachusetts in its manufacturing industries. Within twenty-five years at the present rate of increase the State of New Jersey will have become as densely populated as any of the cities of the Far East. In 1890 the total output of manufactures was in round numbers $250,000,000 and the wages amounted to $82,000,000. While in 1909 the output was $900,000,000 and the wages $662,000,000. These increases are not attributable to the Republican party alone, but to the wise laws which have been enacted and Jersey genius.

"If I am so fortunate as to be elected I propose to present to the Legislature this: That before any corporation shall receive its charter in this State the objects and standing of the corporation shall be fully investigated by competent authority in order to prevent the foisting upon the public of undesirable or fraudulent corporations. Under Republican rule New Jersey has modernized its penal institutions. It has developed giving the man another chance. It has built new and practical reformatories. It has built free public schools and millions have been exacted from corporations for the maintenance of the schools. If this system is continued New Jersey will soon be in the lead in the matter of free education. The Democratic State government never spent a cent for the county roads or State roads. Look at the magnificent roads which you have now from east to west and from north to south No State in the Union can boast of such achievements.

"Our Health, Forest and other commissions have demonstrated their efficiency wherever put to the test. Our potable water supply has been protected and will never be allowed to be taken from the State under Republican rule. The courts of New Jersey still hold their preeminence and Jersey justice is world wide. We have had no malfeasance in office; no embezzlement and no scandal. We are practically a State without a bonded debt and with a comfortable balance in the treasury. I believe in giving the rate making power to the Public Utilities Commission and will recommend such course to the Legislature. I am in favor of direct primaries. They are popular with the people in the State. I think they ought to extend to the nomination of Congressmen and Governor and if a bill covering this is passed by the Legislature I will sign it. I see no harm in the distribution of ballots at the public expense. I believe they should be sent out by the election boards. I favor the most stringent Corrupt Practices Act.

"I believe that as there is so much money spent in paying the running expenses of the State, that the Governor ought to be as familiar with the outgo as any one of you men are in your private business. If elected I will give you a clean, wise and canomical administration and at the end of three years will turn the government of the State over to you unbesmirched. The Republican party has been prudent and wise. Continued growth means continued increase in expenditures. There is no more baleful obsession than the fear of disproval for an honestly conceived act. I ask you to give the party that support and approval without which no party can survive."

Long continued applause followed the end of the speech.

Senator Prince spoke until the arrival of Judge Runyon, a few minutes later and compared Dr. Woodrow Wilson to the mechanic trained in the shop with the practical knowledge and adroitly bringing the simile home in his reference to Dr. Wilson's intellectual ability as against practical political administration. He was applauded.

When Judge Runyon passed up to the table he was given an ovation. He immediately got into his stride and gave a wholesome and effective review of the disputed points of the tariff and called President Taft one of the greatest men of the day. He urged these present to uphold the party and Taft and warned them not to be misled by the specious arguments of those who would detract from the glory of the party which has done so much progress to the western world.

Among those who acted as vice-presidents at the meeting were Walter Hetfield, Jr., Judge William Newcorn, W. Andrews Rits they went to Mr. Lie's studio. A delightful evening was spent with pictures and music and the happy reunion of old friends. Among those present were Frank Thompson, Miss Thompson, Harry White, Miss White, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Laurence, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hoff, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Riley, J. P. Zerega, Mrs. Henry Wells, William Gilbert and Miss Kathleen Ryder.

RUSSEL HARDEN WEDS MISS LUCETTA CLARK

Miss Lucetta Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horatio M. Clark, of Grandview avenue, and J. Russell Harden, of the borough, were married Saturday night at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and was witnessed by a gathering of relatives and friends. The parlor, where the bridal couple stood, was prettily decorated with white cosmos and palms, while the library was in autumnal dress.

Miss Grace Clark, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Charles Terry, of Orange, acted as best man. The wedding march was rendered by Lewis Hummer, piano, and Arthur Mosher, violin.

Miss Clark's gown was of white French chiffon over white silk, trimmed with lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses. Her attendant wore embroidered batiste over white silk and carried pink carnations.

Following a reception and supper, Mr. and Mrs. Harden left for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Toronto and the Thousand Islands. On returning they will reside temporarily at the home of the bride's parents. The groom is employed at the First National Bank, and both he and his bride have been prominent in the work at Grace M. E. church.

MRS. AND MISS FISK IN AUTO COLLISION

The bright moonlight and brilliant headlights of two automobiles did not prevent a collision at 10 o'clock Sunday night in which Mrs. Chas. J. Fisk, wife of the Mayor, and Miss Anna Fisk, their daughter, narrowly escaped injury. The party were on their way home from New Brunswick and had reached the bridge near the Black Horse Inn on the Cranberry turnpike when there was a crash and the two cars came to a standstill in the center of the bridge. None of the occupants were injured.

John H. Backus, a Trenton lawyer, and Emanuel New, of the same place, owner of the car which ran into Mayor Fisk's car, and who women also were considerably shaken up. The damage to New's car was a bent axle, but Mayor Fisk's car was badly smashed. William Coleman the Mayor's chauffeur, was at the wheel of the Fisk car. The approach to the narrow bridge being somewhat hidden was running his car carefully.

The Mayor was not in the car. He had met a Mr. Macauley, of Philadelphia, who wanted to pass through Elizabeth and he had gone to show the road Mayor Fisk volunteered to the way. Mr. Macauley's car followed the Mayor's car about half a mile behind and came up just after the collision. When the Mayor approached the scene Mr. Macauley ran up to him and recognizing Mr. Fisk said: "I have just run into a car." The Mayor replied that that car was his car, whereupon Mr. Backus amended his statement by saying that "the car ran into mine."

Mayor Fisk's car was towed into town Monday and taken to the F. L. C. Martin garage for repairs.

WIRELESS IN OPERATION AT CITY MARKET SATURDAY.

The City Market was a busy place on Saturday from early in the morning until late at night. Besides the many attractions given to the public, there was an exhibition of wireless telegraphy in which messages were sent and received from various parts of the market. This wireless apparatus will be installed upon the roof of the building and bulletins issued from time to time telling the world's news.

President LaRue, of the market company, is an old-time telegraph operator and with an expert from New York he gave the visitors to the market interesting proof of the value of aerograms. The market men and the new grocery store, under the management of Mr. Crowe, had their hands full attending to the ten thousand people who thronged the market, which extends through from North avenue to East Second street.

The management promise to introduce other novelties from time to time to interest the customers.

Surprise for Mr. Lie.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Lie were tendered a home-coming surprise reception by a number of their Plainfield friends on Saturday evening. Having motored to Mr. and Mrs. Rits they went

DEMAND AN ACCOUNTING

Warren Township's School Fund Custodian is in Serious Trouble.

ABSENT FROM MEETINGS.

Board of Education Decides to Bring Suit Against Official Who is Postmaster at Warrenville.

Acting upon the advice of H. C. Krebs, Somerset county superintendent of schools, the Board of Education of Warren township, at a meeting at Warrenville, Saturday night, took steps to secure an accounting from John D. Bornmann, township custodian of school funds. The clerk of the board was instructed to have a suit brought against Mr. Bornmann for the purpose of having a penalty of $10 a day imposed for every day after August 1 last that he failed to present his report. This matter is now in the hands of John F. Berger, of Somerville, counsel for the board.

Mr. Bornmann, it is said, claims that he has paid several notes, one for $800 and another for $400 which do not show on his books, but if he did this, it is said to be without the authority of the board. Mr. Bornmann, it is alleged has repeatedly agreed to attend meetings of the board, but in each instance has failed to put in an appearance. He has been the custodian of school funds, as well as township collector for several years.

Bornmann is also postmaster at Warrenville and keeps a general store. The board, it is said, has been three months trying to get a settlement from Mr. Bornmann. The residents of the township are greatly excited over the affair and are now determined to have a settlement made.

Dr. Shoop to Speak.

The fall meeting of the Dutch Arms, men's association, of Trinity Reformed church, will be held Friday night at 8 o'clock. The Y. M. C. A. orchestra will render selections; Rev. Ora J. Shoop will speak and a genuine Dutch supper will be served.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATED BY BOUND BROOK NINE

The Plainfield Baseball Club was defeated by Bound Brook on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, by a score of 10 to 2, although the local team gathered eleven hits off Ortlieb, while "Jimmy" Montross held the visitors to four singles.

Bound Brook did not get a hit off "Smiling Jimmy" until the seventh inning. The cause of Plainfield's defeat was four errors.

Brit, Martin, Emery, Nelson and Montross led in the stick work, each getting two hits, while Jack Martin, Carlstrom and Schott were credited with a hit apiece. The two teams will meet at Bound Brook Saturday. The score:

MANY DINNER PARTIES AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Two hundred attended the afternoon reception, dinner and evening dance at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday. The music was furnished by VanBaar's Old Guard Band, of New York. Mrs. H. C. Irons was the chairman of the reception committee. She was assisted by Mrs. H. R. Stockton.

Among those who gave dinner parties were Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, Mrs. John Gray Foster, George S. Clay, H. R. Stockton, Mrs. P. H. Stewart, C. Ames Brooks, A. W. Kleinecke, Leighton Calkins, J. Paul Nolting, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr. Mrs. F. W. Yates H. H. Foster, B. H. Lounsbery, Henry A. McGee, Frederick Harrington, Walter M. McGee, Miss Agnes Taylor, R. S. Gernon, J. E. Rowland, H. G. Lapsey and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr.

A JOLT FOR THE "DEEP MAN."

Of all types of masculinity, my sisters, the man who believes in and exhibits his thought and feeling is the most exasperating.

He is always very sensitive—and he tells you so on every possible occasion. He is the man who, when his wife wants to go away in the summer, says: "Oh, very well, go, my dear; it seems quite easy for you to get away, but you know how I am fixed. But then I never expect to be considered of any importance." But he does!

He is always being slighted; and he explains to you carefully that he doesn't mind it in the least; it is just as others decide. But of course he can't help its hurting him, though he says nothing.

In fact, it is his habit to say nothing. "Still waters run deep," he murmured, in excuse of his taciturnity. And often he is very successful in impressing strangers with his philosophical quietude when he simply has nothing to say. "When ignorant, be silent," is a good proverb. It gives you the reputation of being wise.

The "deep" man is always secretive. He loves an atmosphere of mystery; it lends so much more importance to his words and deeds. No matter how simple the move he is contemplating, be it even the using of telephone or the buying of a hat, he surrounds it with the air of ceremony of the deepest secrecy. He is the man who calls up, and when the person he wants is not at home, answers, in response to your request for his name, "Oh, never mind, I'll call again." Or he insists: "Tell him it's a friend," he answers in chilly dignity, and rings off.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF CHARLES S. MEHLENBECK

The funeral services of Charles S. Mehlenbeck, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mehlenbeck, were held at the home of the parents, 645 East Sixth street, at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The home was crowded with young friends of the boy, including his school mates and children from Trinity Reformed Sunday-school, of which he was a member. There were many beautiful floral tributes and these surrounded the little casket.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the service, and he spoke impressively of the short life and character of the boy, of his devotion to his church and Sunday-school, and how he had expressed to him his decision that when he grew up he intended being a minister of the gospel. The minister's words were full of tenderness and sympathy as he referred to the promising life so suddenly cut off, but he added that it was well with the boy, that he had accepted Christ and had gone to be with Him. Everyone present was deeply affected by the pastor's remarks.

The remains were taken to Somerville for interment in the family plot. The bearers, all uncles of the departed, were Alfred Bacon, John Mehlenbeck, Harry Messler and Russell Perrine.

EDWARD T. WINS IN STRAIGHT HEATS

The final matinee meet of the season was held by the Westfield Riding and Driving Club at Fair Acres Park track Saturday afternoon. The program included three of events, a pony show, and an effort by Colon, owned by H. G. Keenan, of Elizabeth, to break the track trotting record of 2.14¼. Colon made two attempts. His best time was 2.23.

The race between Edward T., owned H. Bruce S. Case, of Flemington, and Aron B., owned by A. C. Blair, of this city, in the free-for-all class, was the feature of the afternoon. Edward T. won in three straight heats. Good jockeying in the final heat caused Edward T. to nose under the wire in an exciting finish.

Ravenwood and Little Ella A. collided in final heat of the 2.20 trot and pace. They came together on the last quarter, smashing both sulkies, putting them out of the race.

The officials of the meet were J. Chamberlain, of Flemington; H. W. Evans and Fred Young, of Westfield, as judges; Charles W. Petterly, of Somerville; J. Stout, of Flemington, and Dr. H. H. Buttler, of Westfield, timers, and W. J. Hudson, of Plainfield, starter.

The summaries:

VanDeventer Wins Tennis Match.

Ludlow VanDeventer won the boys' singles in the P. H. S. tennis tournament, Saturday afternoon, defeating John Uhler. The players were evenly matched and it took five sets before a decision was reached. The results were 5-7, 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-3.

IS RELIGION DECLINING?

Rev. A. C. Nickerson Tells of Falling off of Numbers in Religious Churches.

PRAYER MEETING DISPARAGED.

Blackmailing of Merchants for Contributions for Church Fairs —No Place for Fairs.

In his sermon Sunday morning Rev. A. C. Nickerson made some statements relating to the Roman Catholic, Protestant and other religious denominations declaring that in many cases religious belief and manifestation are on the decline. Especially is this so, he said, with the Roman Catholics. He quoted from statistics compiled by bishops of the churches involved in searching for the truth.

He said that the Roman Catholics believed that their church was the only true church and that their religion was the only true religion, although they admitted, he said, that there were other denominations. His statistics showed that there was a loss in communicants in the Roman Catholic church.

Referring to the Protestant religion, Mr. Nickerson said that the churches were not being filled as they ought to be because of a lack of interest in religious things. Prayer meetings with their open prayers to God was something the Unitarians never believed in and that eventually, as the people grow more intelligent, the prayer meeting would cease to be held.

Mr. Nickerson declared that he did not believe in holding church fairs in the same building as served for the worship of God and decried the blackmailing of merchants for contributions to these events, saying it is not fair to them.

BOROUGH MAN ROLLS IN MOLASSES PUDDLE

A comedy of errors that is laughable to everybody but the parties concerned followed the attempt of one of Hersh and Co.'s drivers to deliver a barrel of molasses at Voehl's bakery on Harmony street, Monday morning. The head of the barrel flew out as it was lifted from the wagon and the entire contents spread all over the sidewalk. As the driver stood gazing ruefully at the sorry state of affairs, Fred Stewart, of Park place, came along with his head held high.

Failing to notice the molasses carpet until he stepped into it and his feet suddenly went skyward. He rolled over several times before he finally gained his balance, looking like a human fly-trap.

Stewart wanted the driver to pay for his ruined clothing and when the latter demurred he called on Chief Weiss to arrest him. The chief couldn't see his way clear to do it, and Stewart will fight it out in a damage suit. The cops had to sprinkle sand on the floor when he left police headquarters.

PASTOR TELLS HISTORY OF SOME FAMOUS HYMNS.

At the First Presbyterian church Sunday Rev. Dr. Charles E. Hering devoted his address to the history of several of the old hymns interspersing the singing of them with their history and incidental remarks as to their writers. He said that the singing of psalms was a custom of very ancient practice, and that he said, that music in the services of the ancient church was one of the principal devotions.

Last evening Miss De Cant, the soprano of the quartet, sang "The Ninety and Nine" with great feeling, following the history of its origin and first rendition by Moody and Sankey. The quartet chanted the twenty-third psalm and several other hymns all of which had histories of special interest.

WATCHUNG HUNT RIDERS FOLLOWING THE HOUNDS.

The weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club on Saturday afternoon was one of the best of the season. Plenty of members and invited friends followed the hounds. There were only two spills, Charles Wilder and Brown Roiston going off their mounts. Neither was injured. Three new American hounds were in the pack of twenty, and they were fast. The American hounds make the English ones work much faster than under ordinary conditions.

Among those who followed the hounds:

LIVING COST PROBLEM

A REASONABLE EXPLANATION.

Tariff is Defended in an Able Argument Presented by a Local Republican Stalwart.

A truly meritorious explanation of the increased cost of living is made in the following interview given by Charles S. Smincк, of this city, who has made a careful study of political economy. His argument follows:

"The increased cost of living is a very serious problem. The following facts are presented to show that this question is not properly related when considered in connection with partisan politics.

"Secretary Barton of the American Board of Foreign Missions is reported in the Journal of Commerce of August 23 last, as saying that the question of the increased cost of living is as acute in Africa, Asia Minor, Armenia, Syria, Mesopotamia, India, Ceylon, China and Japan as it is in the United States and that the problem has become a serious one with the board in view of the maintenance of hundreds of missionaries, native preachers, teachers and assistants and pupils in schools.

"The following appeared in "The Sun's" market reports for last week. The most important financial event today was the fall in the price of British Consols to 77¾, this being as low as the quotation for the premier English investment security made in the great financial panic in 1847. The reduction in the rate of interest on the bond from 3 to 2½ per cent. the increase in the burden of taxation in England and the necessity on the part of holders of investment securities of procuring larger interest return in view of the higher cost of living have all militated against the specific security in question. But it is interesting to note that the greatest of the three causes specified, the increased cost of living, or what is saying the same thing the advance in the price of staple commodities is common to all the great civilized nations and has been a factor in the world's investment market as a whole." The foregoing presents sufficient and convincing evidence that problems arising from the rise of prices are world wide.

"So powerful has been the economic force of the world's upward tendency of prices that in markets which ordinarily would not respond to higher values an advance is shown. England, for instance, with its large army of unemployed. Everyone must realize that a large number of unemployed means weak, sagging and unprofitable market conditions. In the face of that fact prices in England are going up as the result of the operation on money of the law of supply and demand; namely, more abundant gold means higher prices until they are checked by the greater demand for money made necessary by the increased prices. Does it not seem clear that the question of the higher cost of living is deeper and broader than the tariff schedules of the United States?

"Concerning the question of prices the strikingly marked production of gold during recent years must be taken into consideration as one of the potent factors in the world advance of prices. For the fourteen years prior to 1896 there was mined about $1,680,000,000; from 1896 through 1909 $4,600,000,000 has been added to the world's supply—a continuous increase during the past fourteen years of nearly 200 per cent.

"Professor Seligman of Columbia University, is authority for the statement in the Journal of Commerce of January 2 that from 1873 to 1896 prices fell about sixty per cent.

"It must be remembered that this decline occurred under a protective tariff. By way of illustration, but not with political intent, the platforms of 1896 and 1900 of one of the leading political parties protested against low prices and advocated a general rise to be accomplished by means of a bimetallic basis. In other words, prices were then too low and now they are too high, which demonstrates that prices are being affected by a world-wide cause. As the general price level has fallen sixty (60) per cent. and again risen forty-two (42) per cent., both exclusive of England under the American system of protection, does it not appear that we must seek elsewhere, than at the tariff schedules, for the cause of the world's rise and fall of prices? Inasmuch as the price advance was world wide in it not manifest that the influence of gold production was operating in both cases mentioned—in the first as a shortage and in the second

NEW MEN'S CLUB FORMED IN NETHERWOOD SECTION

The men's club which was organized at a meeting of the men of the Netherwood Reformed church on October 24, following a dinner given to the men by the pastor, Rev. Royal A. Stout, met last night in the church and completed the organization, adopting a constitution and by-laws and electing officers.

The name adopted for the club is "Dutch Arms Reformed Club, of Netherwood." The object of the club is to promote the social welfare of the young men of the neighborhood and church and to bring them into closer contact with church influences. While the club started with only about twenty charter members there are now nearly thirty on the club roll. The club has started with considerable enthusiasm and promises to become one of the social features of the east end of the city. Meetings will be held on the third Monday of each month and at each meeting there will be some sort of entertainment of the right kind and perhaps a good feed.

The officers elected last night were: President, Henry Hansen; first vice-president, William T. Banks; second vice-president, Amos Andrews; secretary, Claude Gonod; treasurer, J. Voehl, Jr.

The club is nonsectarian and all the men of the community are eligible to membership. Some good times are promised for the coming winter.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN C. E. S. HALLOWE'EN

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, held a Hallowe'en social at the church, last night, which was enjoyable by more than 200 members and friends of the society. It was a Hallowe'en affair in every sense of the word, all sorts of appropriate games being played. The guests were led through the ghost chamber, the tickler chamber, into the room of "fates," the home of Miss Georgia Ricker; the gypsy camp, where Miss Barbara Peacock told fortunes, and the witch tent, where Miss Marion Englehart also told fortunes.

Others enjoyed playing the games of "Pumpkin," in charge of Mrs. C. E. Herring, the "Ring and the Flour," and the "Thimble" game, which was in charge of Miss Winifred Hammond and Mrs. F. C. Lounsbury. The rooms were elaborately decorated for the occasion, through the use of cornstalks, pumpkins and other autumnal products.

Later in the evening refreshments consisting of pumpkins pies, apples, nuts, coffee, etc., were served by the committee in charge which comprised Miss Isabelle Scarborough, chairman; Miss Martha Kline, Miss Barbara Peacock, Miss Marion Englehardt and George A. Ballantyne.

PAUL SYMONS RECEIVES WORD OF SISTER'S DEATH.

Paul Symons, of East Third street, received word by telegram, last night of the death of his only sister, Mrs. J. H. Calihan, of Braddock, Pa., which occurred yesterday afternoon. She was sixty-two years old and leaves seven sons and three daughters. She had been ill for a year with a malignant trouble.

Mr. Symons is now the only surviving member of the immediate family. He is the eldest of eight children all of whom were born in England. Mr. Symons was at Braddock last month and enjoyed a pleasant visit with Mrs. Calihan and her family.

Dinner for Bride-to-Be.

The Misses Elsie and Myra Dunavan, of East Second street, gave a dinner party at their home, last evening in honor of Miss Minnie Hahn, whose marriage to Alfred W. Dunavan, will take place on Monday evening, November 7. Covers were laid for fifteen. The decorations were pink and green and these colors were also carried out in the menu. The guests were all young women, but later the young men friends of the party were invited and the evening was spent playing games and enjoying a musical program. Refreshments were also served.

Druggists Annual Dinner.

The Plainfield Druggist Association will hold its annual dinner at the Old Homestead on Washington avenue, Thursday night, November 10. Arrangements are being made to have two or three good speakers on that occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Allen, of West Front street, are entertaining relatives from Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. William Day, of Liberty street, left today for Waterbury, Conn., to spend two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Culver.

BANQUET OF BAPTISTS

S. E. CHURCH TOASTMASTER.

G. P. Hinman, H. W. Herrman, Miss Serrell, Mrs. Powlison, G. E. Hall and Others Make Addresses.

Under the auspices of the officers and teachers of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, the first teachers' banquet was held at the church last night, the affair being one of the most successful in the history of the school. Forty-one officers and teachers of the home school, together with a few invited guests, were seated at the table, which was arranged to form a letter "T," the speakers of the evening being at the head.

The rooms were attractively decorated chiefly with American flags, while the arrangement of the table decorations comprised the season's flowers. James E. Church, superintendent of the Sunday-school, was the toastmaster, and in introducing the various speakers offered helpful suggestions appropriate to the occasion. After enjoying a fine dinner prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, the speechmaking began. The program was as follows:

"Progressives," E. W. Dunham, of Trenton, treasurer of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association; "Notes by the Way," H. W. Herrman; soprano solo, Mrs. Robert Gildes; "Music in the Bible School," Miss Florence G. Hawkins, of Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school; "A Dominating Force," Grove P. Hinman, of the First Presbyterian Sunday-school; "Wanted a Professional Optimist," Miss May E. Serrell; "Influence of Construction," Arthur M. Harris, superintendent of the Junior department of the First Baptist Sunday-school; soprano solo, Mrs. Robert Gildes; "Why," Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent primary department of the First Baptist Sunday-school; "Salad," George E. Hall, president of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association; question box conducted by Mr. Dunham. The affair was opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church, who was also an interested listener.

The remarks by Mr. Dunham, who is a wide-awake Sunday-school worker, were along the line of what constitutes a progressive Sunday-school. He referred to the out-of-date methods employed in many Sunday-schools, showing how the work is neglected, how the superintendent often arrives at 2:29, when the session is called for 2:30, scarcely giving him time to prepare for the opening, and giving him no chance to greet the teachers and other members of the school and how the school is practically without a head.

Mr. Dunham contrasted these methods with those used by the up-to-date and progressive worker, showing how he is always on time, ready for work, how he plans his program a week ahead and always has the interest of the school at heart. He pointed out the important part the teacher has in making the school a success, calling attention to every department.

Mr. Herrman, who is the teacher of the Men's Conference Bible class of the home school, which has been such a success, gave many valuable suggestions in speaking on the topic, "Notes by the Way," to show how in many little ways the school can be made attractive for people of all ages and conditions.

Miss Florence G. Hawkins, who has had an important part in the music, which is a feature of the work at the Park Avenue Baptist church, gave those present the benefit of her wide experience, showing how music had been a great means of increasing the membership of her school.

Speaking on the subject, "A Dominating Force," Mr. Hinman said that workers must recognize what a force the Sunday-school is in the world today, and then referred to many important things which can be made it a dominating force. The few remarks by Miss May E. Serrell were of an optimistic sort. She said that the Sunday-school of today wants optimists and not pessimists.

In his remarks Mr. Harris showed how there must be cohesive force in Sunday-school work, it being as essential as in the construction of a building. He then described the erection of a building, showing how one material is so often dependent upon another and so it must be in Sunday-school work.

Mrs. Powlison's remarks pertained chiefly to the importance of having the different departments for

JOHN G. LOIZEAUX WEDS

Marries Miss Lillian Reed Cronkite at the Congregational Church.

RECEPTION AFTER CEREMONY.

The Daughter of Mrs. James W. Cronkite Becomes Wife of Son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Loizeaux.

Miss Lillian Reed Cronkite, daughter of Mrs. James W. Cronkite, of Grant avenue, and John Gilmore Loizeaux, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Loizeaux, of Hillside avenue, were married at 7 o'clock last evening in the Congregational church, by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor. The guests to the number of about one hundred, including relatives and intimate friends, witnessed the ceremony.

The bride, who was gowned in white moiteur, trimmed with duchess lace and carrying a shower bouquet of bridal roses, was attended by Miss Gwendolyn Coffin of Brooklyn, as maid-of-honor, and Miss Marguerite Loizeaux and Miss Mabel Loizeaux, sisters of the groom, as bridesmaids. The bride-maids were gowned in white mull over green, and carried bouquets of pale pink chrysanthemums.

The best man was Charles E. Loizeaux, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Dr. Norman H. Prosser and Fred D. Loizeaux, of this city; Harry S. Young, of Brooklyn, and Alfred Smack, of New York city.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Roman L. Cronkite, of this city. Following the ceremony a reception was given to the bride and groom at Mrs. Cronkite's home on Grant avenue from 7.30 until 10 o'clock, during which a wedding supper was served to about seventy-five guests, which included Mr. and Mrs. James C. Cronkite, of Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Keator and Mrs. Oliver Reed, of Philadelphia; Miss Alice Graves, of Brooklyn. Other guests included people from New York, Brooklyn and Newark. During the reception the couple received the congratulations of the guests. The bride received a large collection of beautiful gifts, including several of great value.

Mr. and Mrs. Loizeaux left during the evening on a wedding trip of two weeks' duration. Upon their return they will reside on Madison avenue until spring, when they will remove to their new home on Grant avenue, which is nearing completion. Both the bride and groom attended the Plainfield High School. Mr. Loizeaux is engaged in the wholesale linen business in New York city.

JUNIOR Y. W. C. A.'s OBSERVE HALLOWE'EN.

Members of the Junior classes of the Y. W. C. A. held a Hallowe'en social in the basement of the association building last night. There were sixty present in all and they enjoyed appropriate games. Every one joined in the fun and the girls voted the affair one of the best get held by the classes. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

The affair was arranged by a committee composed of Miss Ethel Tilsworth, Miss Ethel Tripp, Miss Florence Fryer, Miss Skillman and Miss Marguerite Ramsey.

Mr. and Mrs. Pope Surprised.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Pope, of East Fifth street, were given a pleasant Hallowe'en surprise party at their home, Monday evening by a large number of their friends, including many from the First Presbyterian church, where they are active workers. There were about eighty guests that called on them unexpectedly all in costume. The evening was spent playing all kinds of games, after which there was a musical program and refreshments were served.

HOLY CROSS PROSPEROUS

The Women of the Parish Make a Record in Raising Money.

MARCH OF IMPROVEMENT.

The Rector, Rev. Geo. A. Warner, Reviews the Splendid Work at Meeting of Women's Guild.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Guild of the Church of the Holy Cross was held yesterday afternoon in the parish house, the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, presiding. Reports for the year in various departments were called forth comment from the chairman. Attention was called to the steady march of improvements made in the past six years, a renovated rectory at a cost of $1,000 for the work; a parish indebtedness of over $4,000 wiped out; an expenditure of over $3,000 in improvements and repairs for the parish house and church, a new organ at a cost of nearly $5,000; church and parish house painted, a new piano in the assembly room at a cost of nearly $900. These and other matters of interest to the parish were touched upon by the rector who spoke gratefully and feelingly of the share the women had in the effort to make the parish a live and efficient organization in every way.

What the improvements were not of a material sort alone was demonstrated by the report of the missionary work accomplished and the healthy growth in the communicant list of the church, the increased attendance, the larger Sunday school and the work done among the poor. The rector in commenting on this said that the law of spiritual growth in a parish seemed to be the more one did for others the more one had for self, the greater the missionary enthusiasm the healthier the parish growth.

Attention was called to the forthcoming bazar to be held on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings, Nov. 16 and 17. Reports from the committees indicated the thorough interest felt and that well organized effort is being made that this may be a notable and successful sale in every way. The elimination of objectionable features attendant upon church fairs, the use of thoroughly business-like methods and fair prices was touched upon. In preparation for the event Tuesday afternoons have been given over to work in the parish house and the social hour when tea is served later has added not a little to the attractiveness of these meetings.

The annual election of the executive board of the Guild which appoints the various chairmen of the several committees resulted as follows: Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. J. O. Stevens, Mrs. C. E. G. Larson, Mrs. F. W. Creesy, Mrs. Frederick Harrington, Mrs. J. Van Mater, Miss Louise Davis, Mrs. J. W. Coddington, Mrs. Frank Allen, Mrs. Charles Eddy, Mrs. Charles Powell and Mrs. Irene Murray. It was announced that Mrs. G. H. Campbell would be present at the next meeting on election Day afternoon as the guest of the Guild and would, at the request of many who have enjoyed her delightful reading, recite "Uncle Remus" and other stories which she as a Southern women is familiar with.

WILLIAM F. TOWNLEY, JR., DIED THIS MORNING.

William Francis Townley, Jr., son of Captain and Mrs. William T. Townley, of Watchung avenue, died early this morning at his parents' home. He had been ill for the past six months with a tubercular trouble, but had been about as usual more or less of the time. For the last few weeks he had been at home and entertained several friends last night. He became weakened early today and the end came quietly at 5 o'clock.

The young man was in his nineteenth year and had always lived in Plainfield. His acquaintanceship was wide and the word of his death caused keen regret in all parts of the city. He was the only child in the family, a sister, Miss Margaret Townley, having died a year ago last March. The sympathy of their many friends is extended Mr. and Mrs. Townley.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Friday morning and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

H. L. Finch to Entertain.

Henry L. Finch, president of the Watchung, Hunt Club, has issued invitations to the members to attend a jollification dinner to be held in the grill room of the club, Saturday night at 7:30. The invitations are in the name of the house committee, comprising T. R. VanBoskerck, Frank W. Thompson and Albert B. Davies.

BOROUGH DEMOCRATS BIG RALLY TONIGHT

Saengerbund hall will be the scene of the borough Democrats' first big rally tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock. The executive committee has secured a formidable array of speakers to expound the principles of the party and some exceptionally good addresses are promised. The list of orators includes Mayor Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City; Judge Charles Moore, of Englewood; Colonel A. H. Bacon, of New York; Colonel Libby, of Princeton, candidate for Congress, and George Lamont, of Somerville, candidate for Assembly.

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer will preside over the meeting and has announced the following vice-presidents:

Former Mayor Samuel Townsend, Former Mayor William L. Saunders, Dr. P. J. Zeglio, Elston M. French, David T. Kenney, Dr. F. J. Hughes, W. J. Conroy, David Bodine, Jacob Voehl, Dr. Charles R. Theirs, Charles Dresselt, E. P. Gavin, A. E. Kenney, M. Kohler, Dr. D. C. Adams, A. C. Coleman, Herman Schwed, Frank Krewson, R. F. Currin, Charles Dailey, H. Keller, Herman Deike, Peter McDonough, A. A. Cannon, H. P. Vosseler and Charles H. Lyman.

The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will furnish music before the meeting and seats in the balcony will be reserved for women.

WOMEN'S CONDITIONS IN VARIOUS LANDS

"The comparison of the conditions of Women in China, Japan, the Moslem World and India," was the subject of a paper full of interest presented by Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen at the meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Mrs. McCutchen told of the wrongs inflicted on eastern women under the sanction of their religions. She said that Confucianism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism and the Hindu Code all put a low estimate on womanhood and subjected her to many evils with the sanction of their sacred books.

She contrasted these teachings with those of the Bible in which women are beloved, honored, cared for and protected. She told also of the work done by missionaries in the education and elevation of women of eastern lands, changing the home life and bringing untold benefits to the men as well as the women of the country.

A devotional service preceded the paper led by Mrs. Reuben Knox.

ALL SAINTS DAY OBSERVED IN CHURCHES.

All Saints Day was observed yesterday in the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches in this city, and the borough by special services. At St. Mary's, Rev. Father A. Hummer, Arthur Mosher and F. V. Jones. The affair was arranged by Mrs. L. A. Hummer and Mrs. George Westcott.

W. C. T. U. To Meet.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the rooms of the union, 100 Madison avenue. All members are urged to be present.

The Borough Court.

In the borough court, this morning, Aaron Reed was fined $5 on a drunk and disorderly charge. Sentence was suspended on Hiberal Felaiah, a Turk, arrested for peddling without a license.

Dental Association Dinner.

The Plainfield Dental Association will hold its quarterly meeting and dinner at the Old Homestead on Washington avenue, Wednesday night, November 9.

MAYOR FISK RECRUITED FOR 'VOTES FOR WOMEN'

City Executive Makes Speech for Equal Suffrage at Meeting of State Association.

FIGHT OVER CONSTITUTION.

Hot arguments marked the morning session of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association when the question of amending certain sections of the constitution and by-laws came up for consideration. The greatest contest and one which evoked much discussion was the proposal to amend Section 11 of Article VI of the by-laws, which relates to the appointment of chairmen of standing committees by the president. Several of the delegates wanted the powers of appointment vested exclusively in the president without submitting the list for approval to the executive board.

Mrs. W. H. Gardner, Mrs. U. L. Decker and others opposed this amendment, while Mrs. S. Haff, Sr., and others favored the amendment. Much valuable time was lost by the discussion and the motion to adopt the amendment was finally lost, it being nearly 1 o'clock when the deciding vote was taken. It was lost by a rising vote of 16 to 13.

A new section was added to the by-laws which orders the payment by the State association of the expenses of the president to the national convention. Several minor alterations were made in the constitution.

The order of business was temporarily suspended at 12 o'clock to permit Mrs. Martha Wentworth Suffern, secretary of the Woman Suffrage party of New York, to tell of the systematic work being done in New York city, and telling the delegates how to begin and how to finish the arrangements of their campaign for votes on the lines adopted by the two big political parties. Mrs. Suffern said that woman suffrage when accomplished would mean more power for womanhood, which in turn means more power for motherhood. Mrs. Mary B. Kinsley, of Hoboken, presided during the discussion of the proposed amendments to the constitution and by-laws.

Mrs. E. A. Kilborn read the report of the national convention instead of Miss Alice Paul. The report was approved by a vote of the convention.

A committee of three was appointed to take notes of the deliberations of the convention, the substance of which will be forwarded to the national society at Washington. Dr. Clara DeHart Kraus, Mrs. Samuel Huntington and Mrs. Pope were appointed to serve on this committee. An adjournment for lunch was taken at 1 o'clock.

The evening session of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association opened last night with prayer by Rev. George A. Warner, who asked the company to unite in the Lord's prayer, ending with a short invocation and the benediction. Mayor Charles J. Fisk welcomed the delegates in a short address in which he declared he had always been in favor of women having the right to vote, and had always found that the women themselves were the greatest objectors to the scheme. "The men do not take enough interest in the matter," he said, "and consequently some never vote.

"The only way for the people to get out of the hands of professional politicians is by selecting their own leaders. There is no reason why an intelligent woman should not vote. No one should vote unless he or she is able to read and write English." Mayor Fisk favored an amendment to the Constitution covering that point.

Continuing the Mayor said "There are some offices which women can fill better than men, and they should have them and God knows there are men in office who are unfit for the places. I would like to see women on all school boards and on the boards of health. Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander, chairman of the State Board of Children's Guardians, is the most capable executive officer I know."

Mrs. Clara Laddey, who presided, next called upon Champlain L. Riley to address the gathering on the subject of forming a men's league. Mr. Riley responded by saying that as the women cannot now vote unless the men give them that privilege it is strictly up to the men to do it, and there was no better way for men to begin by forming clubs with the aim in view of helping the cause along. As there were enough men

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearson Celebrate Anniversary of Their Marriage.

GIFTS FOR THE COUPLE.

On Eve of Their Removal from City, They Entertain Many Friends at Prescott Place Residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearson, of 223 Prescott place celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home Friday night, entertaining a large number of friends from Firstcliffe, N. Y., Philadelphia and Plainfield. Thomas Douglas in the name of the guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Pearson with a silver fruit stand, berry bowl and shaving set.

Mr. Pearson made an appropriate response, thanking his friends for their kindness. The Plainfield Association Football Club, of which Mr. Pearson is one of the oldest members, was also present and showed its appreciation and regret upon his leaving Plainfield to take an important position in Philadelphia. The organization entertained Mr. Pearson at its clubrooms, where Mr. Douglas, after a few remarks, presented Mr. and Mrs. Pearson with a beautiful tea set, as a token of esteem in which they are held by the members.

Mr. Pearson replied, thanking his fellow-members for the beautiful present, and wished the club every success. The members entertained the visitors for about an hour, after which they returned to the home of Mr. Pearson and enjoyed a fine supper. The evening was then spent in singing and playing, and the happy crowd dispersed about 2 o'clock this morning, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Pearson many happy returns of the day. They also received a number of gifts from relatives and friends.

WOMAN MEETS DEATH AT FARM HOUSE FIRE

Miss Mary Goodsell, a middle-aged woman, who resided with her brother on what was known as the Carlton Hill road, South Bound Brook, was burned to death at her home about 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Goodsell, was also burned severely about the hands and face, while all the hair was burned from her head.

The fatality was due to the upsetting of an oil stove in the farmhouse, where all the goods were stored and where the family was living temporarily while the residence was being extensively repaired. Miss Goodsell was engaged in working about the farmhouse, looking for some things, when she upset the oil stove. Her dress caught fire and in an instant her whole body was in a blaze. Mrs. Goodsell tried to save her sister-in-law and was severely burned.

The Bound Brook fire department was summoned, but arrived too late to render any assistance. It was largely through the efforts of Alexander and Bruce Morecraft, the carpenters employed on the place, that Mrs. Goodsell was saved from the fate of her sister-in-law. Miss Goodsell's body was entirely consumed, there being nothing left but her bones. The family has been living at South Bound Brook about a year.

Jellied Chicken.

For jellied chicken have on hand three pounds of chicken that has been boiled and cut from the bone in strips. Mix a quart of rich chicken stock that has been boiled down and cleared with a teaspoonful each of lemon juice, chopped parsley, a dash of celery salt and a quarter teaspoonful each of salt and paprika. At the last stir in a teaspoonful of granulated gelatine that has been dissolved. When the jelly begins to thicken add the chicken and turn it into a mold. To have the chicken scattered evenly through the jelly stand the dish containing the jelly in a pan of ice and turn in the jelly layer by layer, covering each with chicken as soon as it begins to thicken.

A TOILET NOVELTY.

A small silver novelty that makes a useful gift for a traveler—especially in summer—is a flat, plain silver paper.

The case is double, clasping like a card case, and is made with an inner rim, beneath which the powder book covers are slipped.

Marked with a monogram on one side and date on the other, such a case makes a useful engagement present; unmarked it is suitable for a prize.

AMATEURS IN A COMEDY

One-Act Play "Browne With an E" Seen at Park Club Reception.

The annual reception at the Park Club Friday night marking the resumption of social activities for the season, was the most successful in the history of the club. There was a large attendance of members and friends, the clubhouse being thronged throughout the evening. The club house was artistically decorated with autumn boughs and leaves, willow streamers and potted flowers, while the stage was specially decorated for the one-act play, "Browne with an E," which was the feature of the evening.

The patronesses for the reception comprised Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson, Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke, Mrs. William Bartow, Jr., Mrs. H. C. Krebs Mrs. Wayland E. Benjamin, Mrs. Alson M. Abbott, Mrs. Hugh F. Fox and Mrs. Donald A. McGee.

The one-act farce comedy, "Browne with an E," was given by the dramatic committee of the entertainment committee of the club, under the direction of John P. Myers, the coach, who also staged the play. It was given in an admirable manner and each member of the cast won merited applause. The cast:

"Gus Von Deneweetter, Deberunterhinterberg," H. L. McGee; "Mr. Robert Brown," John Percy Watson; "Mrs. Gushington Nervsby," Miss Elizabeth McGee; "M. Vinfran Parfleur," H. D. Flanders; "Mrs. Robert Browne," Miss Gladys Peck; "Miss Excelsiora O. Peak," Miss Frances L. VanDeventer.

The scene of the play was laid in an Alpine village in Switzerland, where a widow lady is chaperoning a ward from America. The part of the widow was taken by Miss Elizabeth McGee, and that of the ward by Miss VanDeventer. While at a hotel Mrs. Nervsby receives word that her daughter has suddenly been married and accompanied by her husband is on her way to the hotel to "Robert Browne," the man with an "E," and the bridal couple are expected any minute.

Presently the horn of the coach is heard and two persons arrive, a young Englishman, "Robert Brown," accompanied by a German count, the parts being taken by John Percy Watson and H. L. McGee. The former is mistaken by Mrs. Nervsy and her ward for the bridegroom and is at first spoke to him as such. Complications arise. Mr. Brown is dumfounded at the two women and they are reserved and perplexed over his actions. The matter is finally explained and all ends well.

The characters were all spendidly taken and the audience was kept in a continual uproar of laughter by the amusing situations. After the play dancing was enjoyed, music being furnished by Muller's orchestra of Brooklyn.

THE GIRL WITH THE CRUSH HABIT.

This is the season when girls are given to acquiring crushes, therefore a word or two about these infatuations may be helpful.

Oddly enough, the object of the crush is least often a man, particularly with girls still in school. Sometimes it is a teacher or one of the older girls or, perhaps, a girl with the same age but of wider social knowledge.

Whoever the object, the results are the same. Open adoration that shows itself in gifts of flowers and candy, in notes tucked into books, in admiring gaze, often in endless fagging in time that should be given to lessons.

Most girls go through this crush period, but they will be less silly in it if they realize that they are often making of themselves laughing stocks and worse.

These crushes often make a teacher unpopular with her other pupils. They accuse her of partiality, at least favor shown to her admirer, and grow generally resentful and unmanageable.

The most dangerous crush is that of the other sex. It is most often a mistake on the part of the idol, and a girl has need of much common sense if she be not led into silliness of note writing, flower sending and hanging around stage entrances in hope of seeing the charmer.

If girls would only know how such attentions disgust the better class of men on the stage and how the others laugh and boast about their conquests, they would fight hard this special form of the crush habit.

Sometimes the crush is a friend of an older sister or aunt. Then again the girl must be careful not to let herself get pushing forward or silly in her infatuation. If the man thinks of her at all it is as a nice little girl who is going to make a fine woman some day. He will not think that if she shows her crush upon him, but will be bored and disgusted.

It is all right to admire some people more than others; none of us fail to have favorites; the thing is not to let our admiration run away with our judgment. The girl who admires beyond reason, in other words, is subject to crushes, generally pays the penalty of her crushes in disappointed or betrayed affection.

HOPE CHAPEL FAIR WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

The Hope chapel industrial fair came to a close Friday after three nights of successful operation, the proceeds having exceeded greatly the most sanguine expectations of the committee of the chapel who arranged for the event. Donald MacInnes to whose efforts the affair was due, says that upward of $400 dollars will be the net result of the fair, which had remained on the tables, the major portion of which were satisfactorily disposed of.

It was an evening of presentations. First, Mrs. L. R. Howard, wife of the former pastor, received two beautiful pictures by Charles Vincent which were present to her in behalf of the members of the chapel, a rare picture frame of ed the gift in a short speech of appreciation. Mrs. Howard also received a quilt made by the women of the chapel which was presented by Mrs. Donald McInnes.

James Penney, president of the Men's Club, presented to G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the church, a picture frame made of art blacksmith work which is the handiwork of James Cran, master blacksmith in the Pond Machine Tool Works. This picture frame was Mr. Cran's contribution to the fair. Mr. Condict in justly proud of the gift. Benjamin Evans was the recipient of a handsomely bound volume of the Bible. The Runyon class program last night included songs by William Anderson, piano selection by Miss Josephine Snyder; violin solos by Willard Coombs and humorous recitations by Harry Kartscher. Mr. McInnes and his associates were heartily congratulated upon the success of the affair.

ANOTHER BIG BUILDING FOR WEST FRONT ST.

Morris Abrams, the West Front street shoe dealer, took title Thursday to the building he occupies and will prepare plan for a one story addition to the same structure with one of the finest business buildings in the city. The property was secured from the Walter Angland estate through a executor, Robert Gray, and Walter England, of Newark.

The building Mr. Abrams proposes to erect is to be thirty-two feet wide and 120 feet long. It will be three stories in height, the materials being fire-proof in every respect. Mr. Abrams will reserve the first floor for himself and the second is to be arranged for business purposes having regulation show windows. The third floor has been arranged as a lodge and meeting room and will be equipped to suit the needs of any organization making application for it. In this way it can secure a home after its own designs.

The work of construction will go on without interfering with Mr. Abrams' business as the walls will be built around the present store. He will make as much room as possible, however, and for that reason will begin a clearance sale at once. It will also be in the nature of a fifth anniversary sale and will be sure to attract attention.

THE KITE: A FABLE.

The wind blew strong; the kite soared high.
"I'm something great," said he.
"I'm higher than the weather vane,
I'm higher than a tree.
If only they would let me go
I'd float up like a cloud.
My nature scorns the earth below."

The kite was very proud.
It tossed its head, it swung its tail,
It swerved across the blue.
The wind was blowing half a gale,
And growing stronger, too.

Snap! went the string. With sudden veer
The kite began to fall.
"I'm falling! Hold me up! O dear!"
A swallow heard it call,
But driven by the wind it went,
Until it came to pass
That tumbled, dizzy, breathless spent,
It lay upon the grass.

In humbled mood it look around.
"When next I fly," said he,
"If they will only hold me down,
That's good enough for me."

MASQUERADE PARTY GIVEN BY MRS. MAGUE

A masquerade Hallowe'en party was given to William McInnes at the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank Abrams, on 233 East Third street, Friday night. The rooms were tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and pumpkins. The evening was spent playing games and enjoying a musical program. The prize for the most attractive costume was awarded to Miss Helen Thompson and for the different games by Miss Helen Thompson, Harold Miller and Arthur Compton.

Those present were the Misses Marion Thompson, fairy; Edith Mundy, nurse; Maude Edele, fairy; Helen Thompson, goddess of liberty; Florence Waglow, fairy and Edna Mague, Arthur Compton, hobble gowns; Harold Miller, Alice in Wonderland; and James Augenbaur, beggars; Leslie Compton, tramp; David McInnes, clown; Arthur Lemorie, ghost; William McInnes, clown; and from Elizabeth the boat's sister, Mrs. Edward Smith, with her two-months' old son, Emil James, dressed as a little clown which afforded much amusement among the children. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD LOSES HIGHLY VALUED CITIZEN

Since the announcement that Peter J. McDonough, of South Plainfield, with his family intended to move to Plainfield the residents of that village have expressed themselves as having experienced a distinct loss which they believe they cannot replace. Mr. McDonough was practically the first citizen of the village. Prominent in all the activities of the place, always alive to its necessities and progressive to the last word, he is said to have done more to upbuild the village than any other individual.

Mr. McDonough has built a number of houses, opened streets and changed the waste places to habitable neighborhoods. He was always to the fore in matters of public improvements and was liberal in his contributions to the Catholic church. His time and money were always freely given for public improvements.

The vested interests of Mr. McDonough will remain unchanged, but his genial and happy personality as well as those of his family will be missed from the community. But then Plainfield will be so much the gainer.

ALLEGE TROLLEY CO. VIOLATES ORDINANCES

For some time past the police department has been keeping tabs on the main line trolley cars passing through the city at night. Many complaints have been made of the use of search lights on the cars within the proscribed limits and a formidable list of the cars which have infracted the ordinance has been secured.

Several people were plunged into the mud at a crosswalk on Richmond street on Thursday evening owing to the blinding glare cast by one of these headlights. On each car the light was not extinguished until the car had reached the corner of East Third street and Richmond.

P. H. S. SENIORS HOLD HALLOWE'EN MASQUERADE.

The senior class of the Plainfield High School enjoyed a Hallowe'en masquerade party at the High School Friday night at which there were about 75 present. The gymnasium of the school was handsomely decorated for the affair, autumn leaves, boughs, corn stalks and weeping willows predominating in the foliage.

Dancing occupied the earlier part of the evening. Preceding the dance a grand march was executed in the auditorium of the school at which some pretty figures were evolved by the fancy dressed young people. An opportunity was given before unmasking for a vote to be taken for the best costumed couple as well as to the best individual costume. The winners in these contests were presented with blue ribbons. The costumes represented Toreadors, farmers, sailors, military cadets, navy officials, soldiers, dudes and other characters, all of which were interesting as well as funny.

Following the games refreshments were served in the gymnasium.

THE LATEST IN HANDBAGS.

Here are some of the very newest things in the handbag line.

A fitted bag for week-ends is of seal leather, with an overhanging box frame ten inches wide. It is equipped with a leather pocketbook and seven toilet and manicure articles. The lining is of red leather and the frame is of rose or green gold, with burnished metal pieces.

A very exclusive and luxurious little bag is of blue cross-grain saffian leather with a frame of imitation ivory and a lining of blue moire. It has duplicate strap handles and an equipment of change purse, cardcase and combined powder-puff pocket and bevel mirror. There is a novelty unbreakable clasp.

Still smaller, for afternoon use, is a green cross-grain saffian leather bag, 5½x6½ inches. It has a gold-plated frame concealed between two flaps and flanked on each side by pockets. Duplicate strap handles are again used here, and there come with the bag, in pockets beneath the outer flap, a mirror, a gold-lined powder puff pocket and a slate with a gold pencil.

Another bag of dark green morocco, nine inches wide, has a mother-of-pearl frame, held by green bands. The lining is gray calfskin, with a change purse, a powder puff pocket and a mirror. The handle is so made as to fall flat against the bag when folded down.

Re-opened His Hotel.

Charles J. Jensen owner of the Arlington Hotel, has re-opened the house and will hereafter call it the Mountain Inn. He will conduct it as a temperance place, where he can accommodate the public with rooms and board.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 6, 1910.

Topic.—The secret of happiness.—Jer. v. 1-5; Prov. iii. 13. (Consecration meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The topic is very discriminating in the use of the word "secrets," the plural rather than the singular. There is no one secret or recipe for human happiness. The dissolution of pain are far too different for that. What would be happiness to one would be misery to another, and vice versa. Supreme happiness to some men is the accumulation of money. Their joy is in seeing it increase and their delight to count it and watch its growth. But to part with it is the greatest misery to them. Other men, however, find their chief joy in spending money. It means nothing to them unless they can make immediate use of it and get what they call happiness out of it. One generation is a family acquires great wealth, and the second or third squanders it, and the family is unsatisfied, but the latter generally comes to the worse end. But neither the miser nor the spendthrift possesses the right attitude toward money nor gets the greatest possible happiness out of it.

In worldliness many think to find the secret of happiness. The things of the world are real and apparent, and their happiness is to go in here for a good time. There is much happiness in the world if properly used, but if abused worldly happiness turns into bitterness, wormwood and gall. He that strives to find happiness in the sinful pleasures of the world soon discovers his mistake. He goes from the top to the dregs and finds that sin and Satan, vice and debauchery, are not what they were supposed to be. Nor can they go so far and turn back of themselves. Once fully started, they keep on, even wishing to stop, but never going so. The surest way, the only real, safe way, is never to start on the downward path to ruin.

In the intellectual world many think to find the secret of happiness. Solomon was first an epicure, piling up worldly possessions, but finding after all worldly pleasures, he turned to stoicism, the philosophy of mental advancement alone, with an absolute crucifixing of every physical desire. But here he also found variety. Disgusted with epicurianism drove many an intelligent Greek to stoicism. But no extreme is a cure for an opposite extreme. The development of the mind for the mind's sake alone brings dissatisfaction and not happiness. He who feeds upon books and thoughts and despises his body soon learns that happiness is not to be found in that way.

The only real happiness is to be found in religion. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness and of peace." The true Christian finds joy in the proper use of this beautiful world which God has made. He does not abuse it and finds its harmless joys and pleasures "all very good."

The true Christian alone knows the secret of intellectual happiness. Giving thinking and study their proper place, he develops his mind that he may use his mental powers for the better service of God and humanity.

In short above all he finds his happiness. If things go well he rejoices in the Lord; if they go ill he can still, trusting in God, be happy in spite of his afflictions that come upon him, for "happy is the man whom the Lord chasteneth."

The Pledge Beat.

The editor of the Church Advocate, the organ of the churches of God, speaks in a recent editorial of the value of Christian Endeavorers as influences for good, the overflowing up and perpetuation of the work of a revival, and he [illegible] readers that it was under just such circumstances that Dr. Clark organized the first Christian Endeavor society.

[illegible] the editor [illegible] queries [illegible] to read the Bible pray, take part in prayer meetings, etc., which pastors had been urging converts to do long before Dr. Clark was born, but the latter added at least one feature—he asked those young people to sign a simple pledge embodying the above features—and the remarkable success [illegible] of this factor in the society. Is there any difference how much some may mind the pledge feature of the Christian Endeavor society, its results are before us, results which never followed the efforts of any other pastor with his young people, and these results must be accounted for. This is why we believe that the best ends can be attained with our young people in the churches through the medium of such a society."

Studies of Men and Women.

Often a Christian Endeavor society will arouse its members to new interest by dropping an occasional topic from the regular series and inserting one of its own making. Thus the Endeavorers of the First Congregational church, San Diego, Cal., following this year's course of topics dealing with some of the leading philanthropists of the day—Clara Barton, General Booth, Judge Lindsey, Maud Ballington Booth, Jacob Riis and Jane Addams. One meeting a month is devoted to each of these, and in connection with the biographical study the society studies the particular movement with which each is associated.

COURT'S HEAVY BLOW AGAINST WHOLESALERS

Conviction of Edward Coleman, Driver for N. Y. Department Store for Violating Excise Law, Is Set Aside.

A blow which will do irreparable damage to the legalized wholesale liquor dealers in New Jersey was struck Friday when Chief Justice Gummere handed down an opinion setting aside the conviction of Edward Coleman, a driver of a New York department store, indicted for violating the Werts act in selling liquor without a license in Plainfield. To protect the local wholesalers, each of whom pay the city $750 a year for the right to do business here and also pay large taxes, action was taken by the authorities nearly two years ago to put a stop to the practise of New York department stores doing business here without any local license. Hundreds of dollars were spent in collecting evidence and pushing the cases against the accused, and now the higher court has decided that the New York stores are perfectly within their rights in doing business in any part of New Jersey.

The opinion of the Supreme Court written by Chief Justice Gummere in the criminal case, covers at the outset that the act of 1889 is limited in its scope to State regulation and does not concern dealers elsewhere. It does not and cannot restrict interstate traffic. After reviewing the history of the case, the chief justice, in the unanimous opinion, says that at the trial in the county criminal court before Judge Atwater, the counsel for the defendant moved for an acquittal on two grounds—first, that the offense was not within the statute and second that the arrest was an interference with the inter-state commerce law. The motion was denied by Judge Atwater, the chief justice states, probably on the theory that it was a violation of the State law inasmuch as the order was taken in Plainfield, the goods delivered by the New York store and the collection for the same made here. This, it is explained at great length, is lawful according to the Federal law. In effect it makes no difference that the order is given and the payment made in Jersey.

Edward Coleman, a driver for Siegel, Cooper Company, was arrested here together with drivers of other New York department stores, early in 1909, for violation of the Werts act. The city had hired a detective, Edward Rainey, to procure evidence in such cases and the latter early in April of that year, twice gave Coleman orders for whiskey and the latter on delivering the goods was paid in cash by the detective. Criminal and civil prosecutions were withheld. The grand jury indicted Coleman. He was found guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine. An appeal was taken at once, resulting in setting aside the verdict in the county court.

An appeal will undoubtedly be taken to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The case in which the city, Mayor C. J. Fisk and Chief Kiely and Prosecutor Swift were defendants was a different case and in a different court, namely, the United States Circuit Court. That case was won by the defendants on the motion for preliminary injunction, and Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh says that the decision in the criminal case has also knocked the injunction case in the head, and the very points relied upon by the defendants being that if the complainant was protected by the federal constitution, the State courts would so declare, and hence the complaint had no right to injunction.

AS YOU GO THROUGH LIFE.

Don't look for the flaws as you go through life,
And even when you find them
It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind
And look for the virtue behind them.
For the cloudiest night has a diat of light
Somewhere in its shadow hiding;
It is better by far to hunt for a star,
Than the spots on the sun abiding.

The world will never adjust itself
To suit your whims to the letter.
Some things must go wrong your whole life long,
And the sooner you know it the better.
It is folly to fight with the inflnite,
And go under at last in the wrestle;
The wiser man shapes into God's plan
As water shapes into a vessel.

STOKES ENTHUSES CROWD

Former Governor Thrills Republican Voters at Borough Mass Meeting.

WOOD TALKS ON TARIFF.

Fourth District Congressman Declares That High Duty Rates Are on Luxuries Not on Necessities.

The North Plainfield Republican Club conducted its first big rally of the present campaign in Saengerbund hall Thursday. The hall weather held down the attendance at the opening, but it continued to grow until a good-sized crowd was present. The principal speakers were former Governor Edward C. Stokes, Congressman Ira Wood, Assemblyman W. W. Smalley and Mayor N. B. Smalley. All are men thoroughly versed in national, State, county and local affairs, and their remarks were based on personal experiences. Each one was greeted with prolonged applause.

The meeting was called to order by President Alex Mithe, who introduced James Church as chairman. The latter announced the speakers in a taking way, prefacing his remarks with an apt story or reference that always produced a hearty laugh.

Assemblyman Smalley was first called upon and related facts and figures denying Democratic assertions that the Republican legislators have been extravagant and wasteful in the expenditure of State money. He showed where the increases in appropriations had been made and why, emphasizing that $400,000 had been voted for roads the past year while only $20,000 had been spent by the Democrats when they were last in power. Mr. Smalley also said the Democrats spoke of "bossism" and "party control" in legislation affairs, but the biggest piece of bossism he ever saw was the attempt of a Democratic leader to close an Assembly session because his plans for certain measures were being defeated. His action led to a scene of pandemonium until he was forced to retire and another speaker took the chair. In closing he urged the voters to support the Republican ticket from top to bottom and continue the able government of the State as it has been in vogue for seventeen years.

Congressman Ira Wood, who is a candidate for re-election, was the second speaker and dwelt principally upon questions of the tariff. He asserted that the aim of the Republican party has been to uphold American manufacturers and at the same time seek to reduce the cost of living. A perusal of the Payne-Aldrich bill, he said, would show that in many cases the tariff on foodstuffs had been lowered twenty-five per cent. and had been correspondingly raised on luxuries. He reminded the audience of what had happened in 1892 when the Democratic tariff bill was passed. He argued that the people did not want a repetition of the dull times they experienced then and the way to prevent it is the upholding of President Taft and the Republican party.

Congressman Wood was followed by Former Governor Stokes who spoke in a humorous vein at the outset and cracked a joke relative to his predecessor and himself being bachelors. Getting down to facts he dwelt upon the immensity of the American nation, comparing the size and population of various States with the monarchies of Europe. He produced a big laugh by saying that Texas alone could swallow Germany as an ulster and then have no covering below the knees. All England, he said, could be put in the United States without the least danger of slipping into the seas. He also spoke of the magnitude of the American industries and its exportation and importations, a business in themselves that needs the careful and scrutinizing eye of the government to protect and promote.

Referring to the Gubernatorial fight, Mr. Stokes said that as a man Woodrow Wilson is one of the foremost men in the State but he himself would admit that if a man was needed for a certain position one would be selected who understood it, who has a knowledge of its details and had served an apprenticeship.

"Mr. Wilson," the speaker said, "is seeking to be governor, a position of which he knows nothing practical and for which he has had no training. He has gone Princeton College and his successor is to be appointed and he himself will admit that the new president will be a man who knows something about college management and is versed in educational matters.

Mr. Stokes ridiculed the assertion that the Democratic candidate would be dictated to by no one or refuse to listen to the leaders in the event of election. He maintained that "Jim" August is on deck now and will be on deck later with Bob Davis and the rest of the Democratic dictators. As former governor of New Jersey and in a position to know, he denied any extravagances or graft in State government and upheld Governor Fort and his assistants in office.

"The management of State affairs," he said, "is all that could be desired and the Democratic cry of mismanagement is absurd. The whole issue narrows down to the fact that it is a case of the outs against the ins."

Mayor N. B. Smalley spoke after Mr. Stokes had finished and urged all Republican voters to be loyal to the entire ticket as he intends doing. He said he had not intended devoting any of his time to the present campaign, as his private interests demanded his undivided attention, but the indications were such that he had believed it best to speak for the ticket. In conclusion he expressed the hope that North Plainfield would be firm in its support of every man nominated by the party and roll up the usual big majority.

DUNELLEN POPULATION, BY 1910 CENSUS, 1,996

The population of the borough of Dunellen, according to the census of 1910, is announced at 1,996, and Miss Elsie Peters, of that place, made the nearest guess, 1,977. Her brother, Ernest Peters, was second, his estimate being 2,027, thirty-one too many.

Ten years ago the census of 1900 gave Dunellen 1,229 and the big jump to 1,996 is gratifying to its residents. The percentage of increase is 61. In 1905 the population was 1,517, and there has been a steady increase, a large number of new families having removed to Dunellen, even since the census was completed on May 15 last.

RECEPTION GIVEN FOR REV. AND MRS. HERRING

Notwithstanding the inclement weather of Thursday a large number of the members of the First Presbyterian church gathered in the church parlors at the reception tendered to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring. Singularly enough the weather duplicated that of a year ago at a similar function.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with pampas grass, hydrangeas, chrysanthemums and palms under the careful direction of Mrs. Percy Dayton, Mrs. E. W. Poinier and Mrs. W. R. Causebrook. Dr. and Mrs. Herring received the guests assited by Mrs. C. E. Bond who was general chairman of the affair.

Clifford E. Braider, organist of the church, furnished the company with selections from MacDowell's "Woodland Sketches." Refreshments were served and a general social time was enjoyed. The refreshment committee consisted of Mrs. George A. Ballantyne, chairman; Mrs. H. A. Pope, Mrs. A. B. Searing, Sr., Mrs. A. B. Searing, Jr., and Miss Isabelle Scarborough. The waitresses were: Mrs. George Wean, chairman; Miss Leontine Huntsman, Miss Helen Fowler, Misses Barbara and Jennie Peacock, Misses Ruth and Marion Wean, Miss Lois Diman, Miss Ada Woodworth, Miss Hazel Selby and Miss Sue Farland.

Mrs. D. K. Young poured tea and Mrs. C. M. Hummer poured cocoa.

Rose Gets Four Years.

Judge Clarence L. Case, of Somerville, Friday morning sentenced Fred Rose, the alleged highway robber, who was convicted before a jury a week ago, to four years in State prison. A notice of appeal was made by Rose's counsel, Robert Newton Crane, and bail in the sum of $5,000 was fixed by Judge Case. It is confidently believed that Rose will be successful in obtaining bondsmen some time before tomorrow morning and that he will be able to resume work. Every effort is being made to that end.

A HINT TO THE LAUNDRESS.

Cotton or linen laces, embroidered handkerchiefs, children's collars and others dainty articles, are nicely cleaned by the following method:

Make a suds of soft water and white soap. Rub the soap on the spots and put the articles into the suds to soak for an hour or two, then wash with as little rubbing as possible. When they are white and clean, rinse them through two or three lukewarm waters until not a trace of soap remains in the last; then put very little blueing to make them a clear white. Do not wring them, but squeeze them in the hand. Place them in thin boiled starch, and when they are taken from this they are ready to dry.

Potato Chips.

Wash the potatoes clean, pare and slice with a potato slicer very thin, throw into cold water long enough to take out some of the starch, then wipe dry and drop into boiling lard a few pieces at a time. Be sure and keep the lard boiling. As soon as the potatoes are of a clear golden brown skim them out, drain in a colander or sieve and serve hot.

The New Veils.

The heavy mesh veil is no longer worn. In its place are lovely filmy draperies traced in delicate patterns.

THUNDER OF DEMOCRATS

Tuttle, Lippincott, Hamill, Westcott and Others are Heard Here.

CALVIN E. BRODHEAD PRESIDES

Tariff the Principal Issue Discussed at a Well Attended Meeting at Reform Hall.

William E. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield, candidate for Congress from the Fifth district; Job Lippincott, of Jersey City; Judge John W. Westcott, of Camden, J. Jay Edgerton, of the American Press Association, and Congressman James A. Hamill, of Jersey City, were the speakers at the Democratic mass meeting in Reform hall Thursday. Despite the several speakers, a number of people occupied seats on the platform with the speakers, including Samuel Townsend, A. J. Serrell, David T. Kenney, J. O. Stevens and others.

The remarks of the speakers were confined entirely to State and National issues and were of the sort that appealed to the best judgment of the hearers. Mr. Tuttle, the first speaker ,recalled the Republican platform of 1908, when certain promises were made, which have been broken; the tariff, which was supposed to be a downward revision, but in reality had been an upward revision, increasing the cost of living so that the pay envelope now buys less and less.

He said that those in power had neglected to care for the wants and needs of the people; that through the combination of capital the prices of food, clothing and shelter had advanced to enormous proportions, largely due to the high tariff.

In an effort to show how the Republicans had discriminated in the adoption of a tariff law, Mr. Tuttle said that a tax of from fifty to sixty per cent. had been placed on champagne, while it was from eighty to ninety per cent. on clothing. He said that he favored a sharp revision of the tariff downward and believed that the people would endorse that view.

"Wilson is trying to wrest the State from the bosses," said Mr. Tuttle, "and he will succeed. Governor Fort has practically admitted his inability to do this. I believe the only way to do this is for this machine to vote the Democratic ticket this fall. In this district the question of the bosses is a serious one.

"My opponent in this contest is your fellow townsman. I know the estimable family he is held many of his friends are my friends and I have yet to hear aught against him, but I believe that the Republican system of government should not be retained and judging from present indications I believe the Democratic party is coming into its own."

Job Lippincot declared that Wilson will be the next Governor of the State, that everyone is confident of this fact. He then devoted his remarks to explaining the causes that have led up to this great desire for a change, which has brought the people up to the threshhold of a great change. He said that he appealed to the voters on the ground of principle and not party issues. The Republicans had betrayed a public trust during the past seventeen years they have had undisputed control of the State with every opportunity to work out reforms, yet there is a widespread feeling that they have failed to keep faith with the people.

The speaker declared that the tax laws today are more unequal than when Charles C. Black was a candidate for Governor. He briefly discussed the public utilities act, the Republican overlords. He said that the Republicans had failed to declare for a rate-making power, corrupt practice act the publication of campaign funds in the last year's platform. He said that it was important that Wilson should be supported and be given an honest Senate and Assembly.

"We need a fighter," said Mr. Lippincott, "one that will clean out the gang at Trenton. I am not attacking the Republicans, for they are no more Republicans than Democrats. I am not defending the record of the Democratic party. It was rightly turned out of office seventeen years ago, but now the Republicans deserve the same treatment." In conclusion, Mr. Lippincott explained Dr. Wilson's attitude toward organized labor, adding that he is for the square deal.

Judge John W. Westcott, of Camden, was inclined to be a little humorous in his remarks. He said that the fitness of people to govern could be judged by the size of the bills, the size of the grocery bills and the cost of transportation of self and goods, all of which makes up the practical part of the government. He told how the taxes on his property at Camden had increased from $22 to $105, since the Democrats went out of power, adding that when the Democrats were in office it cost $1,800,000 to run the State and today it costs over $6,000,000. He declared that the Republicans had created offices and raised salaries.

"Why," said Judge Westcott, "the sheriff in Camden county which is the wild and woolly county of the State, draws the fine salary of $12,000 a year and he visits his office about three times a year and remains five minutes each time. His assistants do the work, for which they are well paid. In Camden they pay the police about $90 a month, but about a month before election the police get a check for $70, the difference being used for political purposes, but I had better say no more or I will let out some secrets.

"Even our judges put down $200 and $500 for political purposes which they know to be dishonest. Dr. Wilson is going to stop all this. The Republican bosses have said that Wilson is an amateur politician. That is exactly what we all are. What is a professional politician? In defining this question you define Griggs and Lewis. They can not escape. We are going to clean out the professional politician on November 8."

"I am not a partisan," declared John A. Edgerton. "I have never refused to vote for a good Republican rather than a bad Democrat, but this year I hope you will vote for a good Democrat rather than a bad Republican. I am now engaged in writing a progressive page urging the people to vote for the most progressive candidate and the most progressive candidate in New Jersey is Dr. Woodrow Wilson. I believe in him because he is a political economist, which will prove of great advantage to the State. He is not a demagogue. The laboring people can trust him, even though he does speak his mind freely. I believe in Dr. Wilson because he understands the peculiar genius of Americanism. He is a fundamental Democrat. I believe in him because he understands real Democracy and will make it mean more than ever before."

Referring to the high cost of living, Mr. Edgerton said that one cannot take a bath now without paying toll, the Standard Oil Company having bought up all the soap factories. He made a strong appeal in closing to voters to support the entire Democratic ticket.

Although it was now growing late, the crowd remained and listened with intense interest to the masterly talk of Congressman James A. Hamill, of the Tenth district. He said that the prices of meat had doubled in the past decade. A tax of $15 is levied on every steer brought into this country. There is lots of beef abroad and if this high tariff should be reduced the prices would drop automatically. Speaking of granulated sugar which is manufactured in Jersey City and Brooklyn, he declared that this sugar is carried across the Atlantic with the cost of transportation added and sold in London and Liverpool sixty per cent. cheaper than in Jersey City.

A HEALTH CRUSADE.

A health-preaching movement has been undertaken in Great Britain, largely through the efforts of Viscountess Muriel Helmsley. Lecturers provided with moving picture apparatus, are to travel through the British Isles, preaching the "Decalogue of Health," so that those remote from centres of business activity will learn of how to eat and keep a strong and healthful body. The principles taught are tersely put as follows:

Keep the windows open day and night.

Breathe through the nose, keeping the mouth shut.

Drink pure water.

Eat slowly, take well-cooked meats; cultivate regular habits.

Wear loose clothing of seasonable material.

Take regular open-air exercise, in sunshine if possible.

Wash the whole body at least once a week.

Work, but do not worry.

Get house drains certified by sanitary authority.

BARN NARROWLY ESCAPES DESTRUCTION BY FIRE.

The barn belonging to F. H. Firstbrook and located in the rear of his grocery on Liberty street narrowly escaped destruction by fire Thursday night. When an employe entered the place this morning, he found that an incipient blaze was smouldering in several hours, and had burned a hole in one side of the structure twice the size of a barrel-head. A piece of board had been burned loose, but with the same good luck it fell outside instead of inside, and on a lot of loose straw.

It is a mystery as to how the fire started and also puzzling why it did not spread to larger proportions.

LATEST FASHIONS.

Skirts are fitted smoothly over the hips and often simply gored, but more often some plaiting effect is introduced towards the bottom or down the full length of the front and back.

There is no change in the design of waists. They continue to be in the peasant blouse style and seamless. One piece cut girdles are placed high or low, according to the fancy of the wearer. Sleeves are invariably short. Collarless effects still prevail.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE ISSUE.

Brookfield, Long and Story Candidates for Assembly—Charles F. Repp for the Governorship.

The Prohibition party, which has nominated Charles E. Hedges, of Morristown, as a candidate for Congress to succeed Charles N. Fowler have been working in a consistently quiet and apparently effective way to get votes for their candidates on the entire ticket. Mr. Hedges has long been known as an ardent advocate of prohibition and is a staunch supporter of the doctrine as promulgated in the platform adopted at Trenton on May 12, last.

On the ticket with Mr. Hedges are Charles F. Repp of Glassboro, who aspires to the governorship, and the three candidates for the assembly, J. Malcolm Brookfield, of Rahway, Lewis C. Long, of Elizabeth, and Irving W. Story, of Rahway.

The tenets of the party as expressed in the platform declare the licensed liquor traffic to be the great overshadowing curse of the nation, and their purpose to enact laws prohibiting the sale and manufacture of the stuff which they claim to be at the bottom of all the nation's ills.

The platform contains, besides the drastic arraignment of the liquor interests, a bid for the conservation of the nation's resource by eliminating the waste of two and a half billion of dollars consumed in intoxicating beverages each year in this country.

The platform favors an inter-state law which will prevent the liquor being shipped into prohibition States under cover of the inter-state commerce law.

One of the planks in the prohibition platform on which great stress is laid is that which relates to removal power by the governor. The party declares itself in favor of the enactment of laws which will confer power upon the governor to remove officials who refuse to enforce existing laws. The party also favors good roads, and challenges the ability of either the Republican or Democrat parties to perform even the routine duties of the State government without enormous expenditure of the public moneys.

GENTLEMEN FARMERS STUDY AGRICULTURE

To assist in organizing the New Jersey gentlemen farmers into an association to study the economics of agriculture a meeting will be held at the Morris County Golf Club on Monday evening, November 7. Invitations have been sent to farmers throughout the State, and it is expected that a large representation will be on hand. The invitations are signed by Dr. D. Hunter McAlpin and R. H. Thomas. The latter is president of the Morris County Golf Club.

Speaking of the project, Dr. McAlpin said this morning that the association will be formed on the occasion of the Harvest dinner of the New Jersey farmers, at which time there will be exhibited specimens of their products.

"Such an organization," continued Mr. McAlpin, "is in successful operation in New York State and the membership is made up of such men as J. Pierpont Morgan. We hope to have a series of lectures and the best methods of growing crops will be discussed.

"In addition to agriculture, subjects the association will also consider the question of good roads, schools, etc. We consider that this comes under the general head of economics of agriculture."

MISS PEDDLE HEARD IN CLASSICAL NUMBERS

Miss Mary Peddle, the well known contralto soloist, gave a charming concert at the Hartridge School auditorium, Friday, assisted by Miss Carolyn Beebe, pianist, and Edouard Dethier, violinist with Joseph McIntyre as the accompanist for Miss Peddle. The program, a delightful one, was enjoyed by an appreciative audience. Miss Peddle is well-known in England, and this is the first time that she has sung in America. She has an unusual contralto voice of wide range, and she charmed all by her singing.

The selections by Miss Peddle include compositions by Schubert, Brahms, Schumann, Grieg, and a feature of her work was the singing of several ballads which she collected at Somersetshire, England, and which were sung here for the first time.

The violin selections by Mr. Dethier and the piano numbers by Miss Beebe were equally delightful as enjoyed by the audience. An especially interesting number was a sonata by Grieg, which was heartily applauded by the audience. The work of Mr. McIntyre as accompanist added greatly to the enjoyment of the recital.

ATHLETICS IN BUSINESS.

An alliance of athletic and commerce, in which the latter profits through the keenness induced and energy infused by the former, is being consummated in many American business firms and corporations today.

One of the best examples of how athletics has been made to increase the working value of a business establishment is that of a large life insurance company. The office building has been equipped with a complete gymnasium and baths, and a competent athletic instructor has been retained and a schedule has been mapped out for the employees, both male and female. The gymnasium occupies the eleventh floor, and here, during the luncheon hour, directly after business hours and on specified evenings during the week the employees are given physical training. The women are provided with a special instructress on Wednesdays, and have organized basketball teams during the winter months. In Spring and Summer the gymnasium is moved to the roof.

"You will find, too," says the instructor, "that on Thursday, the day following the lack of gymnasium work for men, the employees do not give nearly the impression of alertness that they evidence on the other days." The instructor keeps his eye on the physical condition of the clerks not only during gymnasium hours, but also during his rounds of the departments throughout the day. Thus he is enabled to notice sagging vitality and to suggest to the employees so affected the remedy. The heads of the departments declare that the athletic movement is perfected by the officials has succeeded in doubling the efficiency of the different staffs of workers under their immediate charge.—Harper's Weekly.

Cabbage and Cream.

Remove the outside leaves from a firm cabbage and boil it until tender with an onion, in which a few cloves are stuck. Chop very fine and then mash through a sieve. Put the cabbage into a saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter, pepper and salt to taste and a quarter of a cupful of cream. When thoroughly hot, heap on a hot dish and garnish with triangles of toast.

"THE RUNYON OF RED BANK."

Anecdotes and Songs Bring Hearty Applause and Cheers—Board of Governors and Committees Appointed.

Business and sociability were the combined attractions for the members of the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Thursday in the Parish House, the former being the announcement of committees for the coming year by president Maynard and the latter superfluged by the presence of Rev. Robert MacKellar, of Red Bank, grand chaplain of the Masonic order in New Jersey, who entertained the members in a delightful informal way with songs and anecdotes until he was hailed as the "Judge Runyon," of Red Bank.

Singularly enough, the meeting occurred on the third anniversary of the ordination of Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, rector of the church, who took priestly orders at St. Ignatius' church, New York city, on October 27, 1907, being ordained by Right Rev. Bishop William W. Webb. Mr. Mallery became a deacon on May 25, 1902.

Rev. Mr. MacKellar was introduced to the members of the club by the president, James A. Maynard, who bestowed upon the speaker the title referred to. And it was the unanimous opinion of those present that the title was fully justified. Songs and stories fell from Mr. MacKellar's lips with such spontaneous humor that his audience was moved to encore him repeatedly and when he left for his home a rising vote of thanks was extended to him to say nothing of three cheers and a tiger.

President Maynard announced the following appointments: Board of Governors, James A. Maynard, Chas. C. Graves, John Ludgate, Samuel Forster, James Harris, who comprise the executive club, and Albert Harris, E. Bennett, R. A. Laramore, Joel Pennington and J. Gray. Entertainment committee, Mortimer L. Givens, J. Hallard, A. Jordan, Jas. Harris and Arthur Calleon. Press committee, Jas. Hamilton, Mallery committee, Ernest Dorflinger. House committee, Charles Ludgate, Joel Pennington, J. E. Pine, A. Peck and Charles Kellerway. Membership committee, G. Ludgate, W. Jordan, Samuel Wilson and Jas. Hamilton. Lecture committee, H. Romand, Albert Brooks and Samuel Kriney.

The revised by-laws will be taken up at the November meeting.

Minister Inherits Fortune.

Rev. Albert E. Finn, former pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church who now has a charge at Rochester, Pa., has gone to England for a short trip. Mr. Finn's sudden determination to go abroad was brought about by the notification received three weeks ago that an uncle in the western section of the tight little isle had died and left him an estate of great value. It is to settle up this estate and receive his inheritance that has taken Mr. Finn abroad.

FRESHENING RIBBONS.

Messaline ribbons and those of taffeta can be washed in gasoline and corporeal mixed if but slightly soiled. Velvet can be cleaned in the same way.

Certain ribbons will stand washing in soap and water. Experiment first with a small end. Take thick suds of white soap and rinse through several soapy waters, and a final clear, cool water. Press out most of the moisture between cloths and dry on a crock or press between linen cloths, while still damp.

When it is proved that a ribbon will not wash without stiffening rinse through gasoline or benzine, several times, then wipe dry with a piece of flannel and stretch tight until dry.

Ribbon belting can be stretched tight on a board or the edge of a stationary washstand and scrubbed with a clean nail brush and thick white suds. Keep stretched until dry.

Ribbons with picot edges must be carefully pinned into place through each loop if it is to look fresh when finished. Gauze ribbons rarely stand washing, but with care can be freshened by using a little gum arabic water.

FUR-TRIMMED BOOTS.

The newest fad in footwear this autumn and winter will be fur-trimmed boots, to be worn with fur and fur-trimmed garments. The fur, usually black and of one of the short haired varieties, will be treated as collars, about three inches down from the top, or as welting.

Everything, indeed, is to be furadorned this season, and shoes, it seems, are to be no exception.

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

The suggestion by one or two critics that conservative theatre-goers might find something to catch their highly-mora' eye in "The Little Damozel," at the Nazimova, because of the bohemian atmosphere of the comedy, has aroused Leslie's Weekly to this protest: "This is deliciously funny when we consider that New York audiences have not only survived a vast army of Salomes, but that they have also made prosperous the managers who produced 'The Easiest Way,' 'The Lily,' and other plays too numerous to mention, each of which discussed certain phases of life with a frankness which, in comparison, renders 'The Little Damozel' a Sunday-school story."

A significant feature of the overwhelming success in New York of the new musical production "Madame Sherry," at the New Amsterdam theatre, is the lavish praise the production elicited from the town's theatrical reviewers, excerpts from which follow: Herald—"Welcomed with laughter and applause. It rivals 'The Merry Widow,' and is one of the best musical shows seen in New York in oh! ever so long!" World—"Easily the brightest and most diverting musical production New York has seen in many a day, or is likely to see in as many more. At last a musical show that's novel." American—"A new 'Merry Widow.'" Sun—"Audience applauded every musical number and laughed at everything the comedians plainly labeled as a merry jest." Tribune—"All the restaurants will be playing the score in a week."

Thus far the season at the New York theatres has been marked by three distinct successes. Of these three, one of them, and possibly the greatest, is that of Marie Cahill, generally acclaimed as the funniest woman on the stage, in her new musical comedy, "Judy Forgot." The book and lyrics were written by Avery Hopwood, author of "Seven Days," the greatest comedy success of the last decade, and the music by Silvio Hein, composer of all but one of Miss Cahill's several great hits. The big Broadway Theatre is filled every evening with a laughing throng. Marie Cahill, always refined and even delicate, never loud in either voice, manner or dress, keeps her audiences in a continuous flow of good humor. Her company is very large. She has sixty real beauties in the most talented singing and dancing chorus that has been seen and heard in New York. The critics have all remarked the extreme elegance of the production in all its aspects, tone of entertainment, costumes, scenery and mountings. Matinees Saturday only.

The big New York Hippodrome is attracting its usual capacity houses twice daily with the big triple spectacle, "The International Cup," "The Ballet of Niagara" and "The Earthquake." The Indian ballet with its wonderful Niagara Falls background is one of the big features of the year's fine show. The dazzling costumes of the coryphees against the beautiful water effect with its faithful representation of the mists and moving cascades is a picture well worth seeing. This may also be said of the other splendid scenic festures including the great Yacht Race, the Shipwreck scene, the Earthquake, the Tidal Wave and wonderful aquatic finale. This year's circus is undoubtedly the best ever seen at the Hippodrome and is made up of twelve big feature acts, including performing elephants, bears, lions, equilibrists and equestrians.

TRADE BOARD MEMBERS FOR A CONSOLIDATION

The joint committee from the Board of Trade and the Plainfield Merchants' Association met at the Plainfield Business College Monday afternoon to discuss matters pertaining to the formation of a Chamber of Commerce in Plainfield, thereby uniting all the civic organizations. It was reported by Secretary A. S. Herr, of the Board of Trade sent out with a view to ascertaining the sentiment for or against ored the proposition.

The sentiment seems to be overwhelmingly in favor, and it was decided to hold a joint committee meeting later in the month when by-laws and a constitution will be adopted so that the new organization can start on January 1. The committee appointed yesterday to draft a constitution and by-laws comprises Judge John Ulrich, A. E. Force, William Jeffery, F. A. Dutenhofer and George M. Christian. This committee will report at the next meeting. Among others present were Herman Schwed and Jacob Sachar.

MISS MULFORD A BRIDE

Miss Corinne Moores Mulford, daughter of Armstrong Mulford, of this city, and William Monroe Stretton, of Brooklyn, were married at 8:30 Monday night, at the home of the bride, 522 Bainbridge street, Brooklyn. Rev. Dr. Duncan Genns, rector of St. Thomas' P. E. church, Brooklyn, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large assemblage of guests.

The bride, who was gowned in white satin trimmed with old point duches lace, was attended by Miss Cora Winans, of Linden, as bridesmaid, who wore a gown of yellow satin with crystal trimmings. The ribbon boys were Jesse Gordon Mulford, brother of the bride, and Herbert Leslie Hull, cousin of the bride. The ushers were William Grosback and Elmer Stretton, the latter a brother of the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. There were friends present from New York Brooklyn, Linden, Plainfield and Rahway. After congratulation were offered and supper was served, the couple left on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at 513 Woodland avenue, the property being a gift of Mr. Mulford to his daughter.

*The host and hostess at the wed*ding and reception were Miss C Moores, an uncle and Miss Annie S Moores, an aunt of the bride. The bride was the recipient of a large collection of handsome and costly gifts from relatives and friends.

The bride formerly lived in his city, but since the death of her mother several years ago has been making her home in Brooklyn with relatives. She has many friends here. Mr. Stretton holds a responsible position with Hubbird, the well known New York real estate broker.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY AT WARREN CHAPEL

A pleasant Hallowe'en affair was the supper given at Warren chapel, Monday night, by the women of the Christian Endeavor Society to the young men of the society. There were thirty guests and the supper was given in the upper parolrs of the chapel. The rooms were attractively decorated with pumpkins, cornstalks, fruits, etc., and a feature was the hand-painted place cards. The supper, a fine one, was served by the young women under the direction of a committee of which Miss Adele Kirby was chairman.

One of the surprises of the evening was the presentation of a set of solid silver orange spoons to Miss Nora Schenck, a member of the society who is to be married on November 16 to Charles Windham Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, made the presentation speech, to which Miss Schenck made a happy response. Miss Schenck has been organist for the society for several years and also soprano soloist in the chapel choir.

After the supper friends of the society were invited to join in playing all sorts of Hallowe'en games and everyone had a jolly good time until a late hour. The committee in charge of the affair comprised Miss Adele Kirby, chairman; Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Mrs Gibson Smith, Miss Louise Demarest, Miss Ida Wheeler, Miss Helen Vanhorn, Miss Doris Delafield, Miss Clarri Squires and Mrs. Josie Schenck.

Will Give a Musicale.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church will give a musicale at the home of Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, 53 Washington avenue, Friday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock. Among those who will render solos are Mrs. Theo White Jacobi, violinist; Mrs. I. R. Smalley, pianist, and Miss Bailey, vocalist. A silver offering will be received.

HALLOWE'EN MUMMERS SURPRISED MR. FORCE

One of the most enjoyable Monday nights [illegible] was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Force, of West Front street. It was a surprise affair with Mr. and Mrs. Force as the victims, and was a complete success, so far as keeping him in the dark until the last moment.

Forty friends participated in the fun, all of them being garbed in grotesque costume. There were Topsey, Eliza and, Martha Washingtons, Chinamen, ghosts and many other characters represented. The masquerade first met at the home of J. J. Varley on West Front street and went to the Force home in a body. No one spoke on entering and the victim was in a quandary as to the identity of his callers until they were introduced by the Demorests. The Hallowe'en spirit was maintained throughout and every one joined in dancing for apples and kindred games. Dancing was also enjoyed, the fun keeping up until after midnight. Refreshments of pumpkin pie, doughnuts, cider and many other things were served.

The affair was arranged by Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. Margaret Wilson and Mrs. Force.

Entertained the Little Folks.

A social for the cradle roll and primary department of the Congregational Sunday school and their mothers was held in the parlors of the church last Friday afternoon, which was arranged by an attractive post card invitation. A piano duet by the Misses Martine Weeks and Elizabeth Martin; a vocal solo by Miss Eastman and a delightfully told story by Miss Myra Emmons entertained those present. Refreshments were served at 4, a specially entertained those present. Refreshments were served at 4, a specially

IMPORTANT LEGISLATURE

Senator Ackerman Points out That Law Makers Will Redistrict State.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, made this point among others, at a meeting of the Republicans of Summit in Odd Fellows hall, Summit, Monday that the fact that the legislature to be elected will have charge of redistricting the State, ought to be sufficient to induce all Republicans to go to the polls. He said the Republicans cast 265, on votes for Taft and only 210 on the latter, while the Democrats polled within 13,000 of as many votes in 1909 or in 1908. In Union county, too, he said, the Republican vote fell off about 4,000 votes last year, while the Democrats lost only 582. This year, he urged, Republicans must turn out and support Lewis, the Republican candidate for Governor. The fact that the incoming executive would have about 500 appointments to make was another reason, he said, why Republicans should support their ticket. Officials named two years hence by Dr. Wilson, if elected Governor, would hold over past the election of another governor, and those Republicans who support Wilson now may be doing much more than they contemplate at this time.

Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic county, spoke of Dr. Wilson's indifference to public questions previous to this year, emphasizing the fact that he had not voted for five years. Since the election of a Republican Legislature is assured, he said, the election of Dr. Wilson to the governorship would block all legislation.

Retiring Assemblyman Carlton F. Pierce laid emphasis upon the lacking more for fix rates, as urged by the Commuters' League. To demand for an extra session to legislate against the increase of fares on the railroads was refused, said Mr. Pierce, because Governor Fort realized, as did all good lawyers, that the Interstate Commerce Commission was the only organization that had any authority in the matter.

Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, candidate for the Assembly, insisted that he and his colleagues from Union county in the Legislature had made good and fulfilled their obligations to their constituents. He spoke of the close attention they gave the many bills brought before the Legislature, and of their readiness to attack or favor them according to what they thought would be their effect upon the county.

Then Mr. Thompson urged the election of the Republican candidate for Congress, Judge Runyon. He had nothing to say against Mr. Tuttle, his opponent, except that he was on the wrong side of the political fence.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, spoke vigorously for the whole Republican ticket. "The Democrats are always kicking but they have not shown how the mistakes they complain about can and should be remedied," he said. "The Republicans, on the other hand, while they admit making mistakes, have sense enough to correct them and do better in the future."

Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, told of the hard work the committee is doing for the Republican ticket, which is, he said, as good as was ever named. Especially did he urge the election of his friend and schoolmate, William N. Runyon.

PLAINFIELD'S SOCCERS WALLOPED BY EUREKA

The Plainfield Association Football Club met defeat on Saturday at Kearney, the invincible Eureka A. A. winning the game by a score of 3 to 2. The game was played before a large and enthusiastic crowd at Riverside Oval. During the first half the Eurekas played with the wind, and succeeded in getting a lead of three goals.

During the second half the Plainfielders settled down and played great ball, only letting their opponents get over mid-field about three times. However, they were very unlucky in their shooting, missing several good trys. They managed to get two goals through, however, and time was called with a score of three goals to two. The Eurekas have won five straight games in the league series, giving them ten points.

2D REGIMENT'S FIELD DAY TO TAKE PLACE NOV. 10.

On Thursday, November 10, the Second Regiment will hold a field day in Lambertville. The second battalion of Elizabeth will move from its home town by way of Bound Brook, and Flemington on a special train. The Second Regiment band and field music will accompany the guardsmen.

It is the intention of Colonel Dungan to have the entire regiment assemble in Lambertville at 10 o'clock in the morning. Immediately after arriving there, the regiment will participate in a parade. In the afternoon, the regiment will, in all probability, go through some maneuvers on the outskirts of the town. Colonel Dungan will be in command of the regiment.

OCTOBER WAS WARMER THAN USUAL THIS YEAR

The meteorological observations for October, as compiled by John Neagle, shows that the mean temperature was three degrees above the normal and that the precipitation was 1.08 inches below the normal. The prevailing direction of the wind was northeast. Of the two extremes of the month, namely, the maximum and minimum temperatures, they were both record-breakers for the dates on which they occurred. The first killing frost for Plainfield is anywhere between the 12th and 15th of October. The remainder of the report follows:

Highest temperature, 86 degrees, 5th; lowest, 24 degrees, 31st; mean temperature, 56 degrees; normal, 53 degrees; mean maximum temperature, 68.0 degrees; mean minimum, 44.1; mean daily range, 24.0; greatest daily range, 42; monthly range, 62; total precipitation, 2.57 inches; normal precipitation, 3.65 inches; greatest precipitation in 24 hours, 1.56 inches, date 20th, eleven hours and thirty minutes; number of rainy days, 7; days clear, 11; partly cloudy, 11; cloudy, 9; first killing frost, date 13th; other dates, 29, 30, 31; thunder storm, date 15th; rainbow at 5:10 p. m., 7th.

BABY TOILERS IN THE SOUTH JERSEY FIELDS

Investigations by Edward F. Brown and Lewis W. Hine, of New York, experts of the National Child Labor Committee, relative to child labor conditions in Delaware, have shown such conditions to be deplorable, according to the report. They worked in conjunction with the Social Services Committee of the Episcopal Diocese of Delaware, of which Rev. Hubert W. Wells, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Wilmington, is chairman. Brown and Hine took numerous photographs of scenes in berry fields and canneries as evidence.

According to the report, the investigators found children too young to go to school given regular employment for nine hours a day, and sometimes from "sun-up to sundown."

In the canning factories they found dangerous machinery unprotected and small children working about or near them. Some children as young as four and five years were at work hulling beans or picking berries and reference is made to one case where a child of three years sat in its coach and busily picked berries for nine hours a day.

It is charged that "hundreds of children leave school in Philadelphia, in defiance of the Compulsory Education law, to work in the berry fields of Delaware and New Jersey." The parents are charged with being the exploiters of the children. The work of a family group of five persons would yield from $6 to $12 a day in the berry fields, the report alleges. *Many children under four*teen years of age were found at work in the canneries and in the fields.

MISS LILLIAN NICHOLSON WAS QUIETLY MARRIED

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Lillian Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholson, of South Second street, and W. Morris Hunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hunter, of 836 West Fourth street, which was made today, came as a great surprise to the many friends of the couple. The marriage took place on Saturday at the parsonage of the Presbyterian church in Dover, Delaware, and the fact did not become known until the return of the couple to this city.

Both the bride and groom are well known here. Mr. Hunter has been an attendant at Hope chapel and active in the work there. He now holds a responsible position with the Consolidated Railway, Light and Equipment Company, with offices in the Hanover Bank Building, New York, and the couple will reside in New York city.

MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB MET MONDAY.

The informal meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held Monday in the Hartridge School auditorium was devoted to the discussion of the preceding lectures, "The Relation of Women to Economics" and "The Legal Status of Women."

The discussion which was animated and of unusual interest was preceded by a report from the semi-annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs held last week at Westfield. The delegates were Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch and Mrs. Hugh F. Fox, the latter giving an interesting report of the day's proceedings. Mrs. C. L. Goodrich presided in the absence of Mrs. Hatch. Tea was served at the close of the discussion, Mrs. Mayberry M. Mellor and Mrs. Orlando D. Hammond presiding at the table.

CHARITIES IN PLAINFIELD

Officers were elected and reports of all the various departments of work comprised the business transacted at the thirty-third annual meeting of the Charity Organization Society, held at the rooms, 544 West Front street, Monday. There was a full attendance of members, with Hugh F. Fox, the president, in the chair. William S. Tyler, secretary, read the minutes which was followed with the presentation of reports. Henry L. DeForest, treasurer, reported that last year about $3,900 was expended by the society using up all the available funds. In discussing the budget for the coming year it was decided that about $4,000 would be necessary to carry on the work.

The relief committee, through the treasurer, Miss Lillie Moore, reported the expenditure of about $1,700 in direct relief and Miss Florence Huntington, secretary for relief work, reported concerning the direct help given men and women through the employment bureau.

Miss Mabelle Phillips, agent, read a most interesting report of her work for the year. She said that there was no doubt but that the work had been extended and opened, the number of cases handled, 287, being about double the number last year. Miss Phillips made 4,013 visits nearly three times that of last year, which was 1,424. She also stated that more attention had been given to the care of children, the juvenile court and the placing of children in private homes. During the past year twenty-three children had been placed in private homes, against three the previous year. Miss Phillips stated that in April last she was appointed a special officer by Mayor Fisk. She said that a probation officer is needed here, it being impossible for the two men in Elizabeth to give the necessary attention to Plainfield cases, and the inattention causes a relapse of the cases placed in the care of the officers.

Reference was also made of the Christmas celebration last year, and commended The Daily Press for the excellent plan carried out by this newspaper in helping both parents and children. During the summer 106 children were given free automobile rides through the efforts of Clifford Durfee, after which refreshments were served to them.

Attention was called to the meeting held in Mayor Fisk's office last winter, called by him for the purpose of discussing methods of cooperation and the registration of all cases through a central office, where the beneficiaries might be registered. In this way it is hoped that duplication of charity might be prevented.

It was suggested that it is the duty of the society to provide a clearing house for charity cases and it was proposed that series of conferences be held during the coming year, culminating in three large meetings with out-of-town lecturers on church and social subjects. The report also treated cases of children and tuberculosis, the idea being to promote the interest in these subjects. The work will be undertaken by a committee representing all the charities in town.

As to the future meets, it was suggested that better amusements for the children are needed; also a dental clinic, a ward for babies in the hospital, some method of preventing infant illness in co-operation with the King's Daughters' nurse and the need of a visiting housekeeper. At present there is no place to send wayward girls nor feeble-minded children.

Miss Phillips stated that the work of fighting tuberculosis has been a great problem. During the year over $400 was collected for the purchase of milk and other things, but as long as bad dwellings are allowed to exist it was the opinion that the disease would continue to thrive. Special mention was made of Cottage place and the property at 59 Watchung avenue as being undesirable. Model tenements are a necessity, it was said.

Miss Mabel Pierson reported for the Friendly Visitors' work and W. H. Wherry reported for the sub-committee of trustees on the work of various cases treated.

These trustees were then elected for the coming year:

Dr. William H. Murray, W. H. Wherry, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, Miss Florence Huntington, J. D. Miller, S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Charles Ryder, Mrs. J. K. Myers, Miss Mabel Pierson, W. G. Wright, Henry L. DeForest, W. S. Tyler, Hugh F. Fox, Mrs. Josephine Lapsley, D. W. Taylor. Dr. H. M. Maxson resigned and Miss Huntington was elected in his place. These officers were elected afterward: President, Hugh F. Fox; vice-president, Mrs. J. K. Myers; secretary, William S. Tyler; treasurer, Henry L. DeForest.

WHAT G. O. P. HAS DONE

Republican Speakers Review Achievements of Party in This State.

Reform Hall was not crowded last Monday when Walter Hetfield, Jr., called the Republican mass meeting to order and introduced Judge William Newcorn as the chairman of the meeting, but there was an appreciative audience there and one which could see the points made by the speakers, who were frequently interrupted by applause. Judge Newcorn made a short speech in which he held up the model Republican administration in the State, declaring that not one cent of the public money had been wantonly expended and that during the fifteen years of Republican rule good roads, public improvements, better schools and a big balance in teh treasury, without direct taxation of the people, showed what had been done. He introduced Henry Housten, prosecutor of the pleas of Sussex county, and Randolph Perking, formerly a member and leader of the Assembly. The former gave his opinion of Woodrow Wilson as a gubernatorial timber, while the latter confined himself to a characterization of James R. Nugent, the alleged boss of the Democratic party.

Mr. Housten said that it might seem presumptuous on his part to come from the wilds of Sussex and tell the people of Plainfield why they ought to support the Republican ticket during the coming election, but he felt it his duty to tell some of the things he knew about the Democratic candidate. He said there must be parties, and he wouldn't give two cents for a man who could not give a reason for his faith, whether it was in a religion or politics.

"The Democratic party," he said "had all the chance they needed when they were in power to show what they could do, but they did not do the country any good. It has been under the beneficent rule of the Republican party that this country has become what we finally believe to be the greatest country under the sun. New Jersey has prospered in the same proportion. The Democrats were in power in this State for many years and they were put out because they were incompetent and dishonest. They ran away with everything but the State house, and now they want another chance, and why? Just because there is a balance of $1,760,000 in the treasury.

"Vivian M. Lewis is as fair and square a man as ever lived in this State. Dr. Wilson is asking the Republicans to vote for him because he calls himself a better Democrat than the rest of his party. I am a Princeton alumnus, but that doesn't make it a sufficient reason why I should vote for him. I respect him as a scholar, but I don't like the company he keeps. Jim Nugent is the man who nominated him and who is personally conducting his campaign. He is now the big chief of Democrats—Davis, Smith and Nugent, and Nugent has said of Dr. Wilson, 'He is easily handled, he doesn't sulk,' and what does that mean? Nugent will lose more votes for the party than Wilson can make for it."

Mr. Housten referred to Dr. Wilson's history of the American people in which the Princeton president showed his complete transformation from an attitude of the statesman to that of the sycophant. "Wilson is a Bourbon democrat from scalp to sole," declared Mr. Housten, as he resumed his seat amid applause.

Mr. Perkins gave an hour's description of his personal experience as a member of the legislature in 1906-7, when that body was domiciled in Trenton. He declared that Mr. Nugent left nothing undone which would facilitate his own ambitions of blocking legislation when it suited him to do so. He declared that if Smith and Nugent were clever enough to select Dr. Wilson as the candidate of the Democratic party it was because they knew he could be easily handled, always with an eye single to the big balance in the State treasury.

The vice-presidents on the stage included Henry Crane, Francis J. Bintz, C. W. Runyon, B. F. Coriell and others.

SURPRISED MISS QUENTIN IN SHEETS AND PILLOW CASES.

Some friends of Miss Frederika Quentin gave her a Hallowe'en surprise party at her home on East Sixth street last night. The members of the party wore the unique costumes of sheets and pillow cases, which in the dark encompassed the idea of carrying off a real surprise and contributing much to the fun of the evening.

Games, dancing and singing made the evening one of much pleasure and during an intermission refreshments were served. The feature of the affair was the cutting of a large cake in which prizes were hidden and which were awarded to the wearers of most grotesque arrangement of the white sheets. Those present were Misses Ruth Waldorf, Frederika Quentin, Florence Tanner, Anna Smith, Clara Britton, Dorothy Masterman Grace Hall and Loraine Dunn and Messrs. Philip Schuyler, Donald Smith, Robert Meggy, Maxwell Saunders, Fred Saunders, Keith Saunders and Albert Meyers.

NOMINEES IN FAVOR OF AUTOMOBILISTS

Seventy-nine legislative candidates throughout the State, in addition to Woodrow Wilson, Democratic candidate for Governor have assured the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club of their desire for remedial motor legislation. Queries recently were forwarded by President Clarence H. Bissell.

No reply has been received from Vivian M. Lewis, but the club is informed that he favors its plans.

A reciprocal motor vehicle law that will admit non-resident owners to a limited tour of the State without charge is the chief reform desired by the association. Changes in rating of horsepower, an equitable light bill and amendment of the speed law also are desired.

Replies favoring this legislation have been received by the club from the following named candidates for State office:

COLLECTOR G. F. BROWN NAILS A FAKE REPORT.

Tax Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, is a candidate for reelection this year and it is predicted that he will receive the usual big vote. Mr. Brown has always been a careful, painstaking official and conducted the business of his office in a way that has met the approbation of the borough taxpayers. A card has been circulated in the borough bearing the following:

"Don't be fooled by the report of my being 'down and out.' Health much better; on the job, and have been for over four months. Come in and look me over." On the reverse side of the card is the following: "If my record as collector of taxes has met with your approval, I will appreciate your vote on next Tuesday." The card is signed by Mr. Brown.

Y. M. C. A. Auxiliaries to Meet.

The New Jersey State convention of Y. M. C. A. Auxiliaries will be held at Paterson, Friday, November 11. The morning session opens at 10 o'clock and the afternoon session at 3 o'clock. Interesting papers will be read and reports from the various auxiliaries in the State will be read and discussed. All members of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary, who expect to attend the convention should notify the president by November 1.

LEWIS A CHAMPION OF IMPROVED HIGHWAYS

Those who use the improved New Jersey highways for pleasure or profit have been looking up the record of road legislation made by Vivian M. Lewis, the present representative gubernatorial nominee. They desire to know how Mr. Lwis stood during the years 1899, 1900 and 1901, when he was a representative from Passaic county in the house of assembly. They want to know this, so as to show what would be Mr. Lewis' attitude should the coming election declare him governor of New Jersey.

The official records show that Mr. Lewis in 1899 voted for the senate bill appropriating $15,000 for permanent improvements of public roads. He also voted for similar bills in 1900 and 1901 legislation. He voted for the senate bill designed to keep down fees paid by township committeemen for laying out and contracting public roads, and he voted for the 1899 law which allows townships to elect supervisors of highways. Mr. Lewis cast a similar affirmative vote forbidding the assessing of a building property beyond ten per cent. on which a tax could be levied for road benefits.

The record further shows that Mr. Lewis voted for measures designed to acquire toll roads for free public use and the 1899 record closed with his vote for the purchase of turnpikes connecting public roads, although the governor vetoed this measure.

Mr. Lewis' 1900 record on road legislation shows him voting for a measure to authorize improvements of roads by the joint action of municipal authorities with chosen freeholders, and he voted for chapter 63 of the 1900 laws which provides for a commission to acquire turnpike roads for public use. So that roads would not be torn up by narrow tires of wagons and carts, Mr. Lewis voted for a measure in the 1900 legislature providing for a rebate of taxes to encourage the use of broad tires. He also voted for chapter 98 of the 1900 laws, compelling the owner of land abutting improved highways to remove weeds, brush and briars from in front of their property in the month of September. He also voted for a measure allowing a municipality to improve roads lying on the boundary line between these municipalities, and he voted for the senate bill putting the state commissioner of public roads on a fixed salary instead of on a per diem basis.

When Mr. Lewis became leader of the house, he pushed through chapter 29 of the 1901 laws, which gives the board of freeholders a right to contract with railroads for the abolishment of grade crossings, and he voted for an act for the construction of speedways, but this latter act was vetoed.

Chapter 132 of the 1901 laws which allows the acquiring of more turnpike roads, was also voted for by Mr. Lewis, and he voted for a measure designed to give the people more park roads.

Control of roads was given to chosen freeholders by chapter 147 of the 1901 laws, whereby they could pass speed regulations. This was voted for by Mr. Lewis, and he had to pass chapter 262 of the 1901 laws, which gives authority for improvement of public roads in townships. Chapter 78 of the 1901 laws, also voted for by Mr. Lewis, authorizes bond issues for the improvement of streets and cities.

Because of all these things, which show his interest in building up the improved roads of New Jersey, the friends of Mr. Lewis believe his interest in road improvement would be even greater should he be elected governor of New Jersey in November.

SOMERVILLE'S PEOPLE HAD A BANG UP TIME

Somerville's annual Hallowe'en festival, held Monday, was attended by nearly five hundred persons who made their way to and from Somerville by trolley and train. A feature of the affair was a big parade in which there were hundreds of beautiful floats. Plainfield was represented in the parade by a float entered by the Plainfield Business Men's Association, which attracted much attention.

This float was decorated by representatives of the college and Hugh B. Sweeny, registrar of the college, handled the reins. A local delegation from Plainfield lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. Elks was also in the parade, and Plainfielders along the line of march gave a cordial greeting to the "Best People on Earth."

It is estimated that fully ten thousand people enjoyed the festivities. Somerville was congratulated for providing such a delightful entertainment for the people of nearby towns, particularly the rural districts. The town of Somerville was attractively decorated and the streets were illuminated by thousands of vari-colored lights, which together with the weird costumes of pedestrians presented a beautiful and amusing sight.

NEW JURORS DRAWN; NONE WILL BE EXCUSED

The third panel of petit jurors to serve during the October term of the Union county courts was drawn yesterday by Sheriff Robert J. Kirkland and County Clerk James C. Calvert in the Court of Common Pleas before Judge Atwater, at Elizabeth. Twenty-six of the jurors are from Elizabeth. The panel will begin its duties next Monday.

During the past terms of court many jurors have attempted to be excused from service. The court has decided that the men drawn must serve. Judge Atwater said today that the Union county jurors have an easier time than the jurors in any other county in the State. The jurors chosen are:

Elizabeth—Charles Clever, Thos. McBride, Frank R. Fricke, Frank Hoffacker, James H. Allen, Edward Campbell, Charles M. Horton, Walter H. Baldwin, Paul Friedland, Herman Hubert, Harriman N. Simmons, Philip Boos, Frederick Ritz, William H. Hastings, Joseph A. Sofield, William J. E. Cocker, Simon Mack, John Van Bergen, Joseph Miron, James E. McMahon, Joseph J. Farrell, John W. Bahr, Thomas Merlo, Roswell V. Bonnell, Nathan Flock and Frank Boller.

Plainfield—David C. Smalley, John Abbott, William Schloss, Chas. A. Stover, Joseph F. Sheppard, Luther D. Morris, Harry MacDonald, George H. Goddard, Herman Weber, William W. Dunn.

Rahway—Paul Assman, John Dan Williams, A. Keys, Wm. Ader.

Westfield—Eugene G. Hanford, William Duffy.

Fanwood—Samuel Lee.

Springfield—Frank E. Meisel, John Mushung.

Union—Charles Stearne, William F. Tunison.

Roselle Park—John N. Herrman, Thomas S. Capron.

Roselle—Harry M. Shedd, Walter Ten Eyck.

Kenilworth—Gustav Johnson.

Cranford—Charles L. Plumb, Isaac V. S. Hiller.

Linden—Thomas Carigan.

New Providence—Frank Latten.

REPORT VIVIAN LEWIS AS MAKING GAINS

That a big change in sentiment, favoring Lewis for Governor, had taken place in Essex county within the last two weeks, was the assertion of many ward chairmen at a meeting of the county Republican committee, in Newark Saturday night.

It was also reported that the Republican registration this year was far greater than last year, and that practically every voter was listed.

Reply was made by George H. Austin, who was the Progressive choice for the Congressional nomination in the Eighth district, to recent criticisms of him by Edward W. Townsend, the Democratic Congressional nominee in the Seventh District.

"I have been criticized by Mr. Townsend, who says I am inconsistent in supporting the Republican party," said Mr. Austin. "Now, understand, I don't wish to enter into a discussion with Mr. Townsend, but if he will give me one good reason for supporting the Democratic party I should be pleased. I am a Republican, and fight my battles within the party. Every good law upon the statute books within the last fifty years has been placed there by the Republican party. The Democrats have had their chances, but failed to improve them.

"Gentlemen, I am sure that our candidate for Governor, Mr. Lewis, is going to win. I am not going to say anything against Mr. Wilson personally, but in God's name does he know what's behind him! If perchance elected, he'll know what's before him, I am sure."

Mr. Austin's remarks were warmly received, especially when he said that a big change in feeling had taken place within the last week among the commuters in the Oranges.

Another speaker termed the inroad upon the Republican vote as "philosophic," and said that proper treatment had almost entirely removed the ailment.

The meeting had been called, said Chairman Dalrymple, for the purpose of getting reports on registration. The county chairman, Mr. Dalrymple, declared that after an inspection of the registry lists he was sure a heavy Republican vote would be polled.

Sneak Thieves Rob Blind Man.

Percy W. Cannon, the well known blind man, has been the victim of sneak thieves, boys about twelve years of age, and they have given him no end of trouble that he has been obliged to seek the aid of the police. Most of the articles stolen were from Mr. Cannon's store on East Second street, and include candy, tobacco, etc. He has decided to have padlocks placed on all of his cases for future safety. His losses have been so heavy that he is thinking of closing his store and devoting his time to caning chairs.

FINE MUSIC SUNG AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN

The first musical service of the season at the First Presbyterian church attracted a large audience last night, who were well repaid for their attendance. Under the careful guidance of Clifford E. Braider, organist and choirmaster, and with the assistance of Mrs. Charles E. Herring and the piano, a program of church music was beautifully sung by the quartet choir.

Especially noteworthy was the rendition of "Quis Est Homo," from "Stabat Mater," a duet for soprano and contralto, sung by Miss De Cant and Miss Lord. Another pleasing feature and one which will remain in memory was James Cruikshank's "Abide With Me," for which special permission was obtained from the composer's widow for its first presentation here. It is a remarkably sympathetic arrangement of the beautiful hymn. The incidental solos were well sung and the entire program was a treat. Both Mr. Braider and Mrs. Herring deserve praise for their performances of the instrumental parts.

COMPLAINED ABOUT SHOES; REVEALED SPEAK-EASY

The withholding of a pair of shoes brought to light another speak-easy Sunday. Two were well repaid for Demetrio Giovanni contributed $20 to the city treasury by order of Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

It happened this way: Carmelio Rizzo complained to the police that Demetrio had confiscated a pair of his shoes and refused to give them up. When brought to police headquarters Demelio inadvertently announced that he was keeping the other man's shoes to insure the payment of $1.75 which he claimed Rizzo owed him for beer. How it happened that Demelio was selling beer to his compatriots without the formality of a license appeared to his Honor as queer and after it was found that there was one full keg and another empty one on the premises on East Fourth street, the fine was imposed.

Demelio said that he didn't sell the stuff, but that he kept it there for his friends for whom he had a monopoly. Between beer, $20 in them meat and potatoes, he loved them so. But Mayor Fisk was not to be fooled. Demelio paid the fine.

VAREITY SHOWER FOR MISS SCHENCK AND FIANCEE.

Miss Alice Schenck and her affianced, Charles Winham, who are to be married on Thursday November 10, were given a surprise variety shower on Saturday night at the home of Mrs. J. D. Winston, 64 Grandview avenue, by about twenty-five friends of the young couple. The gifts were both handsome and useful.

The evening was spent in playing games and with vocal and instrumental music. Refreshments were served and a general good time was enjoyed.

MANY FRIENDS AT MRS. J. H. MUNDY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Terissa Mundy, wife of John H. Mundy, who died last Thursday after a long illness, was held at her late home on Jefferson avenue Sunday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. William C. Knox, pastor of the Dunellen Methodist church, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. There were numerous floral tributes, among them a handsome pillow from the family, and a large mosaic wreath of flowers and foliage from McGregor and Co., of Newark, where Fred B. Mundy, a son, is employed.

Burial was made in the Bound Brook cemetery, six nephews acting as pall-bearers. They were Oliver S. Mathews, Fred B. Mathews and William Mathews, of South Bound Brook; LeRoy Mathews, of Roselle; Edgar Mathews, of Newark, and Elijah Mathews, of Plainfield.

Hallowe'en Party.

Among the pleasant Hallowe'en parties held Saturday evening was the one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel R. Douglas, 135 Grove street, in which her daughters, Mabel and Lucy Douglas, took part. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Robert Stewart, of Grove street. The children, dressed in costume met at the home of Mrs. Stewart and then visited the home of each girl invited to the party, finally reaching the home of Mr. Douglas, where all sorts of Hallowe'en games were played and dancing enjoyed. Later refreshments were served. Those in the party were the Misses Rose Andrews, Dorothy Neal, Madeline and Marion Blair, Dorothy Margin, Henrietta Stewart, Charlotte Wadhams, Mabel and Lucy Douglas.

Elected President of Social Union.

George E. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was elected president of the Baptist Social Union, at the annual convention of Baptist churches held at Atlantic City, last week.

CALDWELL DEFEATS DUNELLEN IN A HARD FOUGHT GAME

In a hard fought game played at Caldwell Saturday the Caldwell Field Club defeated the fast Dunellen Athletic Club by a score of 6-0. The game was featured by the playing of Babcock, who repeatedly circled Dunellen's right end for long gains.

Norris made Caldwell's lone tally in the third quarter by breaking through Dunellen's line for twelve yards on the third down. Caldwell has not been scored on this season. The lineup:

Caldwell F. C. Olds, Smith, left end	Dunellen A. C. Monahan
Palmer	Logan
Hopwood, Schwartz, left guard	Hurti
Mathews center	Kratzel
Van Orden	Reinhart
Graham right guard	Benson
Hernig, Miller, right tackle	Nonamaker
Fairchild right end	Lake
Babcock quarterback	Bawlby
R. Mathews right halfback	Margin

Dinner for Bride-to-be.

A dinner was given by Miss Dolly Bolsterle at her home in the borough last week in honor of Miss Nora Schenck, whose marriage to Charles Winham takes place November 10. Covers were laid for eight and the favors were unique

MISSIONARY TO MEXICO DELIVERS LECTURE

Rev. James D. Eaton, a missionary pastor of Trinity Congregational church at Chihuahua, Mexico, gave an interesting account of his work in that country to a large congregation Sunday morning at the Congregational church, and in the evening delivered a lecture, illustrated with stereopticon views, on the same topic. Incidentally the offering at both the services netted some $340 for the Mexican missions. The amount asked for by pastor Goodrich was $300.

The lecture in the evening began with views of paintings by Mexican artists, and ended with a photograph of the new Congregational church at Chihuahua. Among the notable views were those of the big Cathedral in Mexico City, carved historical stones, supposedly done by the Aztec Indians, a residence formerly occupied by the Emporer Maximilian and Empress Carlota, the tomb of Juarez, the man to whom Mexico owes her Republic, pictures of Popocatepetl, the snow covered volcano, the pyramid of Chululu, surrounded by the military academy, where only a couple a months ago President Porfirio Diaz at 74 climbed hand over hand up a rope.

Some of the pictures were not exactly of a religious character, for instance, there were depicted on the screen, a bull ring with a troop of banderilleros, matadors and other performers entertaining the amphitheatre, in pit with a battle in progress, captive Indian women and children and other interesting scenes.

Dr. Eaton told of the progress of the Protestant church in Mexico and exhibited groups of workers at that field. He said that the Protestant church or which he is pastor had cresses lei into the bell tower and in the stained glass windows back of the altar as well as embroidered on the bible mark, so as to show the natives that the cross was not ridiculed. The bell in the new church was at first intended for St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, but it got to Chihuahua and is a fine specimen. The views were highly interesting.

NOTED TENOR ENGAGED FOR CHAMBER CONCERT.

The assisting artist at the first McIntyre Chamber Music Concert, Thursday evening, November 10, will be Albert Quesnel, tenor, formerly with the Boston Grand Opera Company, and of the Opera Comique in Paris. He expects to return to New York at that time after finishing his tour in Canada with Melba and her company.

The violinist, William Grafin King, will also be heard in solo numbers. David Bispham, who scored such a tremendous success yesterday with his recital at Carnegie Hall, will give the third concert of this series on January 12. Mr. Bispham inaugurated yesterday a fashion of recitals giving what may revolutionize the song recitals in this country. He sang every song in English and from the large audience and enthusiasm displayed, it is evidently a successful innovation. No singer is better known or better liked in the United States than Bispham and his popularity and success seems on the increase notwithstanding his long experience before the public.

An Objection.

"What is you objection to the tariff" asked one statesman.

"Well," replied the other, "to be frank, my principal objection is that it was made by men who didn't agree with me in politics."—Washington Evening Star.

RESTAURANTS.

They Really Had Their Origin in the First French Revolution.

The restaurant of the present time had its origin in the first French revolution, toward the close of the eighteenth century. And the reputation of the French for good cookery and the delicacy of taste in eating as well as in providing toothsome dishes and presenting them tastefully are practically from the same time.

That revolution meant ruin to many noble families, and their downfall meant ruin also for their chefs, so some of the latter hit upon the idea of opening houses where dainties prepared by their skilled hands could be obtained. If the experiment succeeded the chefs would be as well off as when in service. The idea was pleasing to the public, the restaurants did a large business, and the proprietors had no reason to regret the revolution from a monetary point of view.

Then it occurred to others that the people might appreciate being educated up to this fine cookery, and many books on the culinary art were published and sold well. One of the most noted of these was "The Gourmon Almanack," which appeared in 1798.

Restaurant really means "restoring" and was applied to these places because you went there to have something to revive or restore your failing strength.

MAKING NEEDLES.

Various Processes Through Which the Steel Wire Must Pass.

Needles are made from steel wire, which is first cut by shears from coils into the length of the needles to be made. After a bath of such bits as have been cut out they are placed in a furnace, then rolled on a smith perfectly straight. Next the needle pointer takes up a dozen or so of the wires and rolls them between his thumb and finger, with their ends on a turning grindstone, first one and then the other being ground. The little steel bobbins are next fed into a machine which flattens and gutters the heads, after which the eyes are punched.

They are now complete needles, but rough and quite brittle. Careful heating and sudden cooling gives them the necessary temper, and nothing remains but to give them their final polish. On a coarse cloth needles are spread to the number of 40,000 or 50,000. Emery dust is strewed over them, oil is sprinkled on and soft soap daubed over the cloth, which, rolled tightly, is thrown into a pot with others, where it rolls about for twelve hours or more.

When taken from this friction bath the needles are only rinsing in clean hot water, when they are ready to be sorted and packed. — Chicago Tribune.

Fulton and the Clermont.

The first trip of Robert Fulton up the Hudson river in the Clermont was thus described in the American Citizen of Aug. 17, 1810:

"Mr. Fulton's ingenious Steam Boat, invented with a View to the Navigation of The Mississippi from New Orleans upwards, Sails today from the North River, near the State Prison, to Albany. The Velocity of The Steam Boat is Calculated at four miles an hour. It is said that it will make a progress of two against The Current of The Mississippi, and if so it will certainly be a very valuable acquisition to the Commerce of the Western States."

According to Edward Hagaman Hall's history, the Clermont made the trip to Albany in thirty-two hours. The state prison referred to stood on the block in New York now bounded by Washington, West Tenth, West and Charles Streets, in old Greenwich village.

Vessels That Failed.

There was a time when it was believed possible to prevent seasickness by means of specially constructed vessels, says the London Chronicle. The Calais-Douvres, a twin ship, was used on the channel service for many years. Great things were expected from this, but she proved a slow boat, and her passengers were by no mans immune from seasickness. Another attempt in this direction was the Castalia, in which the saloon was suspended like a hammock with a view to minimizing the pitching and rolling. This turned out an utter failure. If the rolling was less than in ordinary vessels the pitching was quite as bad and, moreover, the swinging mechanism occasionally stuck. After a very few trips across the channel the Castalia was taken off the service.

Easy Figuring.

Ascum—I suppose you haven't had time to figure out yet how much your cashier took?

Bank President—Oh, yes. We knew in a very short time.

Ascum—Why, I thought he took a great deal.

Bank President—Exactly. We merely had to count what he left.

Why He Resigned.

"So you resigned!"

"Yes. I couldn't stand the way the firm treated me."

"What did they do?"

"Took my name off the pay roll."—Exchange.

TUBERCULOSIS CAMP SITE

Tract Near Scotch Plains Best Suited for Union County Institution.

AN INSPECTION IS MADE.

Another Location at Roselle Being Considered—The Freeholders Appropriate $50,000 for the Camp.

The question of the location for the proposed county tuberculosis camp is still undecided. There was a meeting of the committee from the Board of Freeholders at Elizabeth Wednesday, but owing to the absence of one member, no attempt was taken to vote on the matter. As it stands now, the committee, which comprises four members of the board of Henry Doane, of this city, chairman, Freeholders Krausse and Haviland and Director Cady, Messrs. Doane and Cady favor the purchase of the site on the mountains near Feltville, while the other two members favor a site at Roselle.

These two sites were picked out as available after a tour of inspection by Dr. Carrington, of New York, a specialist on the subject, accompanied by the committee, as well as Dr. H. VanD. Hedges, Dr. Fred J. Hughes and a physician from Elizabeth. It is agreed by a majority of those who have looked into the matter that the location near Scotch Plains is by far the most advantageous. There is a tract of about 135 acres, which may be secured for about $6,000, as against a fifty-acre tract at Roselle, which would cost in the neighborhood of $22,000. The land at Roselle is flat, would have to be connected with the sanitary sewer at a cost of several thousand dollars, and is in what is known as the "mosquito belt."

On the other hand the site near Feltville is on an elevation, high and dry, and permitting fine drainage, and the air is the best. It is a little over a mile from the trolley, but the question of transportation would not be a serious one, nor a costly one. The arguments of those who favor the Roselle property are that it is easy of access and would lessen the cost of transportation and cartage of things to be used in the camp. Besides it is proposed to have a large garden, where produce can be raised.

The Board of Freeholders have appropriated $50,000 for the purpose of purchasing the land and establishing the camp, the sum to be raised through an issue of bonds. This amount will go a long way toward obtaining ground and erecting a building.

There will be another meeting of the committee tomorrow and there should be a fat vote on the question of selecting the site, it is proposed to refer the matter to the entire board, and it is believed that a majority will favor the site near Feltville, which from a sanitary point of view as well as picturesque, could not be improved upon.

SACHETS FOR THE WINTER WARDROBE.

Perfuring clothes and cupboards was carried to perfection by our great grandmothers. Yet they used only the little simple fresh flowers grown and gathered by themselves. These were carefully dried and laid between sheets of the great press of else sewn into dainty sachets and hung among the dresses in the wardrobe or laid away in the great oak chests.

The fragrance still lingers in the old chests and presses, though the hands that strewed the lavender and what not have been laid at rest over a hundred years. Of course, they gathered the flowers themselves. Lavender should be gathered just after the flowers have opened. Or it may be bought. One should half fill the bags, tie up the tops with ribbons and place among the linen, etc.

The following makes a nice filling for sachets: Take equal quantities of lavender flowers, dried rosemary, pounded orris root, dried rose petals (tea or the old-fashioned cabbage roses are the most sweetly scented), a few leaves of scented verbena, if they can be procured, if not, some leaves of the so-called blue geranium. Mix all together into a coarse powder and fill the bags.

This mixture gives a delicate perfume, very refreshing and lasting. Essential oils are strong and soon evaporate, but the flowers retain their scent for months.

For scenting wardrobes the dried flowers and leaves should be strewn between two thicknesses of wadding, lightly quilted and slipped into a drawer to the back of the cupboard and wardrobe with drawing pins or else tied in place with tapes.

Tiny scented sachets may be sewn into skirts of dresses. These, however, should be made of wadding on which is the wearer's favorite sachet powder.

The wadding may then be inclosed in silken bags to match the coloring of the dress.

More elaborate sachets may be procured at a store.

MISS ADA LEIGH BRIDE OF FRANK L. COMPTON

Miss Ada Leigh, daughter of Henry S. Leigh, of Allerton, and cousin of Miss Anna VanFleet, of Duer street, the borough, was married at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon to Frank L. Compton, son of Jacob Compton, of Sunnyside, Hunterdon county, in the Reformed church parsonage, Lebanon, by Rev. W. Lansdale, the pastor of the church.

The bride, who was attended by his cousin, Miss Elizabeth Higgins, as bridesmaid, wore a traveling gown of blue chiffon broadcloth. The best man was William Smith.

After the wedding the couple left on a short trip to Washington, D. C. They will return Saturday and that evening a reception will be held for the bride and groom at Sunnyside. Mr. Compton is building a home at Sunnyside, which he and his bride will occupy upon its completion. The bride received a large number of handsome gifts. Miss Leigh, Van Fleet, of the borough, was among those who witnessed the ceremony yesterday. The bride is well known here, where she has visitd on many occasions.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Senator Smith's Power.

The interest of James Smith, Jr., in the campaign needs little comment. For years he has been the representative of Wall Street in the managment and control of the Democratic party in this State. That he is still the dominating power in that party was demonstrated in his manipulation of the State convention for Wilson in the face of the popular demand for the nomination of one of the young Democrats who had been fighting their party's battles for years. Silzer, Wittpenn and Katzenbach were given no consideration by the Smith forces and the Hague delegates were not even permitted to cast their votes. Richard V. Lindabury, who presided at the Wilson mass meeting in Somerville, boasted of the fact that he was one of the men who negotiated the nomination of Wilson long before the professor had ever thought of by the Democrats of his own State. Mr. Lindabury, as a lawyer, represents large corporation interests in this State. He has appeared as counsel for the beef trust, etc. In this statement at Somerville Mr. Lindabury described the men who induced Dr. Wilson to run as "gentlemen Democrats." Everybody knows that no man could get the Democratic nomination for Governor of New Jersey unless James Smith, Jr., gave his consent to the selection. Thus we have three of the "gentlemen Democrats" whose arguments prevailed upon Dr. Wilson. That Col. Harvey was one, Dr. Wilson admitted himself when he told his artist friends at Lyme, Conn., that Harvey was the man who telephoned to him that the "gentlemen Democrats" were waiting for the professor in a downtown club in New York that Sunday afternoon when the deal was practically consummated. That Harvey and Smith were the leading forces in the convention that nominated Dr. Wilson was made known to the public by the newspapers.—Elizabeth Journal.

BATTIN HIGH DEFEATED

Plainfield High Won First Game Here by Score Ten to Six.

PLAY A CLEAN, OPEN GAME.

Elizabeth Boys Put up a Strong Fight but Were Outplayed by the Local Lads.

The Plainfield High School eleven won its first home game of the season Wednesday by deefating Battin High, of Elizabeth. The score was 10 to 6. Five of the ten points made by the home team in the first quarter. At the beginning of the second quarter Battin resorted to kicking and after some lively scrimmaging Fisher, of Battin made a thirty-five yard run for a touch down from which Ross kicked the goal. No further scoring was done.

Battin started the game by kicking off. Van Zandt caught the ball and rushed it back for ten yards and Clark receiving the spheriod made another gain of three yards as did Bristol. Battin then got the ball and gained about fifteen yards against what appeared to be Plainfield's weakest spot in the line. Successive gains of ten, seven and five yards by Battin put the home teams goal in danger, but here Nash loomed up with a nifty play at right end receiving the ball on the run he made Battin's goal after a thirty-five yard sprint. The goal was missed, but P. H. S. scored five points.

The second quarter was full of lively play, forward passes, line rushing and all the new tricks possible under the new rules were tried and only the blowing of the whistle when the ball was within a yard of Plainfield's goal, prevented Battin from scoring a touchdown.

Battin scored in the third quarter. Fisher, of Battin, after about seven minutes of the liviest work of the day, caught the ball on P. H. S. 25-yard line and rushed across the line for a touchdown from which Wingert kicked the goal, but in the first few minutes of the quarter Van Zandt had made the star play of the game by taking the ball through Battins line thirty-five yards for P. H. S's second touchdown, making the score 10 to 6. The only touchdown and goal made by Battin in this quarter made the score 10 to 6, and although Battin made desperate efforts to get by the local line, the latter had stiffened so much that the Elizabethans could make no impression upon it. Van Zandt, Clark, Coyle and Nash played splendidly for the home team while Wingert, Fisher, Elliott and Ross did star work for Battin. Several hundred people witnessed the contest.

The lineup was as follows:

Plainfield		Elizabeth.

JR. MECHAN'GS' ELECTION

New Egypt Man Chosen Vice Councilor After Lively Fight.

STATE COUNCILOR TALKS.

Everett Gray Receives a Gold Watch —Ten-story Building Being Erected by the Association.

With an attendance of nearly 400 representatives of subordinate lodges the forty-first annual session of the State council, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, took place at Trenton Wednesday in Association Hall, the principal business being the election of officers, presentation of reports by the officers and the consideration of a proposition of increasing the board of managers from five to six members.

The fight for the office of vice-councilor was spirited, the candidate numbering a half dozen. Rev. L. L. Hand, of New Egypt, was elected on the first ballot. His closest competitors were Frank Muta, of Bridgeton, and Rev. Samuel Harker, of Wildwood. Vice-Councilor William S. La Rue was elevated to State councilor. He is a member of Blound Brook Council, and one of the most popular members of the order in this State. Everett L. Benson, of Newark, was elected State conductor. J. A. Brown, of Bloomfield, was chosen State warden. Herbert Sharp, of Vineland, was elected inside sentinel. Frank Morton, of Newark, was elected a member of the auditing committee for four years, and B. A. Fairbanks, of Jersey City, for five years.

The new officers were installed by Past State Councilor J. J. Read, of Seabright. The proposition of amending the constitution to permit the increasing of the board of managers from five to six members was laid over until next year. It was proposed to drop the junior past state councilor and add the conductors and wardens.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. Building Association, which is erecting a ten-story sykscraper in Trenton, received the hearty endorsement of State council. Deputy Commissioner of the State council has the utmost faith in the building project the sum of $3,000 from the surplus fund was subscribed for stock. The action of the State council prompted many members of the order to subscribe for stock in the building association. The contract price for the building is $300,000. Secretary William M. Miers was commended by the council for his efforts in behalf of building project. The terms of Secretary William M. Miers, of Trenton, and Treasurer Rev. Dr. J. Morgan Read, of Pennington, do not expire until next year.

The session was presided over by State Councilor Everett Gray. In his report he reviewed the work of the past year and called attention to the gain in membership, showing that 4,046 new members have been received in the various lodges in the State. During the year he visited 127 councils. He urged that the State council take some action whereby the uniform rank be brought under the control of State council. He also recommended that May 17 be observed hereafter in this State by the members as the birthday of the order, and that the various councils be requested to appropriately observe the day.

Retiring Councilor Gray was presented with a gold watch by Summit Council and a testimonial by Pioneer Council of Jersey City. The latter council also presented the order raised the salary of the president, the Rev. Dr. J. Morgan Read, to $250 a year. Secretary Norris was voted $160 increase, as was also Treasurer Frank L. Morton, of Newark. The council adjourned to meet in Trenton next year.

MISS HERLICK BRIDE OF ANTON LEON BARTON.

Miss M. Elizabeth Herlick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Herlick, of Dunellen, and Anton Leon Barton, of the same borough, were married at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday afternoon a 5 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Knox, pastor of the Dunellen Methodist church, and was witnessed only by relatives of the young couple.

Miss Lottie Barton, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and the best man was William F. Herlick. Miss Herlick wore a traveling suit of blue broadcloth and carried white roses. Her attendant's gown was of satin and she varried white cerrysanthemums.

Following a reception and supper, Mr. and Mrs. Herlick left for Richmond, Va., where they will spend two weeks. On returning they will make their home at Roselle, a suburb of Newark, the groom being in business in New York. Both have many acquaintances in Plainfield.

HERE AND THERE.

Many people have wondered how it was that Warry McLoughlin managed to put the Indian sign on so many of his opposing batsmen, but it is not so hard to guess after one has seen Warry work, not with his powerful left wing, but with his right hand. While not exactly ambidextrous Warry has so cultivated the left hand and arm that his right refuses to fling the ball the way it should.

But that same right arm with its handy digits with a carving knife or a pen is just as useful as its mate. When Warry goes to slinging ink he is just as swift as the next man and as for lighting a match on the only recognized place the left hand isn't in it.

When asked how it happened that he had developed his left arm for use in baseball Warry said he didn't quite know how it happened. "When I was a kid," he said, "it seemed to me more natural to throw with my left and when I got to playing ball with the other boys I found it the habit until it became so natural for me to fling 'em over from the south side that I never even tried to change back."

And that's the reason Warry is effective. Some day he may teach the right arm to work if they left gives out, anyway it is a good asset for a baseball mound artist. He may have to fall back on it some day.

ETERNAL LIFE IS SURE, SAYS REV. M. V. WILLIAMS

The revival services at Monroe Avenue M. E. church Friday night were attended by a large congregation, including the ministers of the three Methodist churches of the city. Announcement was made that the services were to be continued all next week in the Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, and on Sunday afternoon there will be a service for men at this church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Williams. This service will begin at 4 o'clock, in all the Methodist churches the regular morning services will be as usual, but in the evening they will all combine in one big service at Grace M. E.

Rev. M. V. Williams preached last night with his usual earnest message, taking a verse from the 90th Psalm as a text. He said that some men were so oblivious to the real meaning of life that they became obsessed with a single purpose, whether it was horses, dogs, money or any other thing, they became so absorbed in that that that they had no time nor inclination for anything else."

"But the time will come" he said, "when they will have to see serious thought for their souls. They cannot take their automobiles nor their money to heaven with them. In eternity there will be no counting of hoarded money. And I tell you that there is another life beyond this. There are those who scoff at it, men of learning, who say that the future life is chimerical, but there is nothing so real as the belief in future existence which comes to the Christian.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson read the Scripture and Dr. H. K. Carroll offered the opening prayer. Mrs. Gilbert sang for an offertory, "Would You Believe."

ANDERSON'S COMMENTS AT TOWNSHIP MEETING

Under the auspices of the Republican Work Club of Plainfield township, an enthusiastic mass meeting was held Friday night at Texler's Mills, the large room being filled to overflowing with interested voters. Charles C. C. Wheeler presided and made a few preliminary remarks, setting forth the important issues of the campaign, locally and in the county. The speakers of the evening were W. deLaR. Anderson, candidate for town committeeman; Robert Kay, candidate for sheriff; Assemblyman Frederick Pope, Prosecutor Frederick Pope, of Somerville.

Each one of the speakers ur ged the members of the party to stand by the straight ticket and to let nothing swerve them from voting for every candidate named thereon, thereby helping to roll up a big majority on November 8. W. deLaR. Anderson, the only local candidate, said that he was a property owner, possessing about thirty acres, and was therefore interested in taxing matters. Mr. Anderson commented on the large sum of money being used by the township as not being satisfactory, for it does not give a taxpayer a clear idea of how the money is expended.

The speaker said that he believed that the township instead of being run in three sections, should be conducted as a place of the whole, with all the committeemen acting together and all three as a body keeping in touch with conditions all over the township. He said he believed this to be the most economical way of running the township and the only way to facilitate matters. Mr. Anderson spoke in favor of police protection, a reduction of the dog tax and a plan for lessening the burdens of taxpayers.

THE TRAINING OF CHILDREN.

"Now that my children are getting older," said a thoughtful mother, "I find myself reverting more and more to my own childhood, getting from my own experience valuable help in the matter of training my son and daughter. Of course, I don't mean that I have exactly the same problems to meet and do meet them in the same way my parents did, but their wisdom in dealing with me—headstrong child that I was—has helped me over many a rough place. I had a quick, yes, I might almost say, a violent, temper, and my children have inherited it. You know a child with a fiery temper requires more judicious handling than one naturally placid.

"I was prone to get into trouble with my brothers and sisters, and oftentimes our war of words ended in blows, as I found out one time my sister and I had had a very wordy discussion; I lost all control of myself and said and did things which were really disgraceful. My mother talked to us both and sent us off to bed, saying that we were to come home directly from school and spend the remainder of the day in our rooms.

"When I went to my room that afternoon I found a card stuck in my mirror. On it were the words: 'He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.'

"I have never forgotten that proverb nor its lesson to this day, and to me the impression of seeing that slip of paper with its silent message, over and over again, was more lasting than any other rebuke that could have been administered.

"Another lesson taught me, and this also by means of a quotation my mother wrote while, had to do with my quarreling propensities. A favorite form of punishment of my father's was to place the one to be disciplined in a chair just outside the library door, where he, at his desk—for he spent much of his time at home writing—could see the guilty one. I was shown to the culprit's chair. In a few minutes father came from his desk to where I sat and pinned something on the wall before my eyes. This is what I read:

Birds in their little nests agree,
And 'tis a shameful sight
When children of one family
Fall out, and chide, and fight.

"Giving me a pencil and pad, father told me to copy those lines in my best handwriting, not once, or twice, but until he told me to stop.

"At first I rebelled, inwardly, but I knew only too well that that course of action would avail me nothing; I might better do as I was told. I am frank to say that it was a long, long time before I had occasion to sit in that chair again because of a quarrel with anyof my brothers and sisters.

"One more thing I must recall," said the mother, in conclusion. "When we children had any serious misunderstandings and felt that we were intolerable, which we usually ran crying to father or mother, to tell our tale of woe. If it seemed to them we were quite as much to blame as the others, we were told to sit down and write out the whole story. Nine times out of ten we became so absorbed in the telling of the tale on paper that we utterly forgot the original difficulty, and before we knew it the sun had dissipated the clouds which but a short time before had looked so black.

"These are a few of my childhood memories that come to me these days with fresh meaning because I am now able to appreciate as I never could when a child, just what was my parents' reasoning in choosing their rather individual methods of punishment or discipline.

A STORY OF BALZAC AND A VILLAGE TAILOR.

In a village in the heart of Touraine there lives an old man, whose pride it is that he once had the honor of making a pair of trousers for Balzac, says Harper's Weekly. The old tailor delights to tell of his meeting with the distinguished Frenchman.

When the tailor got to the chateau where the author was staying, he found him in the garden at work on a novel. He was so busy that the tailor waited in silence. Many sheets of paper, covered with fine writing, lay around him. He would write a spell, then stare wildly about, and then go at it again as if he knew that a world was waiting for his words.

After standing near and watching the great man a while, the tailor at last felt that he must interrupt Balzac in order to get his measure for the trousers. Balzac was extremely good natured, smiled as the tailor measured him, and spoke but once.

"No feet," said he as the tailor finished his measurements. Then he turned to his work.

The worthy tailor had no idea at all what this meant but for some reason he had not courage enough to interrupt the novelist again to ask. However, he chanced to meet a servant on his way out, and of him inquired what M. Balzac meant by "No feet."

"Oh," responded the servant, "Monsieur Balzac wants his trousers made without any openings at the bottom, so that he can sit and write without having to put on slippers."

WHITE PLAGUE BATTLE

State Anti-Tuberculosis Association's Important Conference.

AT NEWARK, MONDAY NOV. 17.

Governor Fort, Dean West, Vivian Lewis and Other Big Men to Participate in the Program.

An important conference of the New Jersey Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis and the thirty-three local committees on the Prevention of Tuberculosis will be held in the Public Library, Newark, November 17. There will be three sessions, opening at 10:30 in the morning, 2:30 in the afternoon and 8 in the evening. This is the first conference of the kind held in the State, and particular effort has been made to arrange a program that will emphasize the special problems concerning tuberculosis in the State.

At the morning session, at which Vivian Lewis will preside, the subject is "The Discovery and Supervision of Cases in the Home and the Enforcement of the Tuberculosis Law." Under this heading there will be a Symposium, Agencies for Carrying into Effect the Provisions of the Law—the Physician, the Dispensary, the Visiting Nurse, and Relief.

At the afternoon session, at which Governor Fort will preside, the subject is "The Value of County Tuberculosis Hospitals." County Tuberculosis hospitals is just now the leading need in the State, the last Legislature having passed a bill authorizing the erection of such hospitals. For this meeting all Boards of Chosen Freeholders will send delegates.

At the evening session at which Dean Andrew F. West, of the Graduate School of Princeton, will preside, the subject is "Tuberculosis as a School Problem." There will be a paper on "Teaching the Essential Facts to School Children, another on Medical Inspection of School Children with Respect to the Prevention of Tuberculosis, and Open Air Schools for Children Predisposed to Tuberculosis. The value of special classes for the backward child below normal is now recognized as a necessity and a number of the more progressive communities are making provision for such children, notably Montclair, the Oranges, and Newark.

The full program will be announced within a few days, and includes such names as Dr. Lawrence F. Flick, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Florence Kelley, of the Consumers' League, New York city; Leonard P. Ayres, Associate Director of the Department of Child Hygiene of the Russel Sage Foundation, New York city; Frederick L. Hoffman, State Statistician, Newark; Dr. Herbert Maxon King, Loomis Sanatorium, Liberty, N. Y., Miss Nellie M. Casey, Frederick, Md.; General Bird W. Spencer, Mayor of Passaic; Dr. Lewis Pilgrim Watkinson, New York city, and many of the leading physicians and health officers of the State.

While the meeting will be open to the public, special instructions will be sent to all physicians in the State, local boards of health, members of the local Tuberculosis committees and others interested in the general problem of tuberculosis.

GUMMING STAMPS.

Officials of the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington aver that one of the most important operations connected with the manufacture of our postage stamps is the gumming thereof.

A writer in Harper's Weekly states that when the sheets have been printed they are passed under a roller from which they receive a thin coating of gum, and then gradually over coils of steam pipes until they are dried. Much care is exercised to get the layer uniform on every part of the surface.

The gum in the little vats, from which it drops to the roller, is maintained at an eventemperature and thickness. Tests are frequently made of the warmth and humidity of the workroom.

But even with the perfection of mechanical exactness, some allowance must always be made for the season of the year. For summer sale a slightly harder gum is used, because of the trouble occasioned by the sticking together of stamps. In winter precautions against the cracking of the gummed surface through contraction is necessary. A third grade of the material for other seasons is known as "intermediate."

Pride.

"Chicago has a lot of local pride; hasn't it?"

"Well," replied Mr. Lakemish, "it depends on whether you are talking about baseball or the grain business."—Washington Evening Star.

Why Cuss Words Please.

"Have you ever noticed how a bum actor can get laughter and applause by using a cuss word?"

"Oh, yes. What's the reason?"

"I've found out, I think. The audience has been wanting to swear, but is too polite."—Toledo Blade.

AUTO WRECKS A WAGON

Endress Company's Delivery Rig Struck by Wm. P. Foote's Car.

FRED TODD CUT AND BRUISED.

Willie Miller Escaped Injury and Gets Number of Car—Driver Refused to Give Name but Police Are After Him.

The Endress Company, butchers, of West Front street are minus a delivery wagon and Fred Todd, the driver, several bruises and bumps and cuts the result of being run down by an automobile Monday at the corner of West Seventh street and Central avenue. Willie Miller, a boy who accompanied Mr. Todd escaped with a shaking up.

The accident occurred shortly before 9 o'clock and while it may have been purely an accident it looks to the police like gross carelessness on the part of the automobile driver. Mr. Todd was driving down Central avenue on the right side of the road and was about to turn into Central avenue when he was struck from behind by the automobile. The wagon was completely wrecked and Mr. Todd was thrown out striking violently on his side and head. Neither one of the occupants had time to jump. The horse was knocked down but not injured.

Mr. Foote would not give his name to either of the occupants of the wagon, but Miller had the foresight to get the number of the car which made the identification easy. It is the automobile with Mr. Foote were his wife and a child.

The police will take up the case and it is likely that Mr. Foote will have a chance to explain his actions in the police court within a short time.

FISK TELLS THE STORY OF STRAW VOTE CANVASS

That the secret straw vote canvass conducted by the Courier-News was not quite unsmooch as there were private marks on the return postal cards distributed under the direction of that newspaper has been made clear. Mayor Charles J. Fisk met President H. Henry Depew, of the Bi-partisan League of Voters and G. W. V. Moy, the league's mayoralty nominee, at the mayor's request Sunday and told the story. Freeholder Samuel P. T. Wilbur was with the mayor at the meeting but became indignant when the conversation got to the "lie" stage and left. The mayor stated that the Courier-News had conducted the canvass at his request and that he and not the Courier-News or any one else, put up the money. The manager of the newspaper in question he claimed had no knowledge of the private marks which he said were put on by his stenographer, Mr. Burke. These marks were according to a code and the mayor stated that it was to identify the districts and wards and not the particular voter.

When Mr. Moy asked Mr. Frost who was responsible for the private marking, he promised to let him know if he could find out, and later Mr. Fisk asked Mr. Depew to meet him and the story would be told. During the conversation it appears Mr. Fisk said that no comparisons had been made after the cards were returned because he had the lists in his pocket, afterwards stating that they were in a drawer of his desk. Today he explained that he spoke only figuratively when he first said they were in his pocket and what he meant was that they were in his possession. Mr. Frost is exonerated from blame by the Mayor but both Depew and Moy say that some of his statements when Mr. Moy met him were rather peculiar. Neither made an accusation against either the mayor or Mr. Frost they say, but that they had no difficulty in finding out what they wanted.

Today Mayor Fisk sent this letter to Mr. Frost, manager of the Courier-News:

"In reply to your inquiry regarding the postals which were addressed to the voters of Plainfield from lists of names furnished by me, said cards asking them to indicate their first choice for Governor, Congressman and Mayor, in other words a straw vote—Yes, the cards were marked to indicate the ward and election district—I do not know the code. This marking was done without your knowledge as the need furnished me before cards were mailed and cards were mailed or sent to the postoffice from this room. After tabulating the vote from the return cards the cards were thrown in a basket and retained with the object of later having them sorted and listed by districts. But considering your request made last Monday or Tuesday that part of the program was not carried out and the cards were burned. The lists were in my possession until after the cards were destroyed so I am sure there could have been no opportunity for comparisons."

Mayor Fisk says the marking by districts and wards was merely to ascertain how the sentiment was politically in given section of the city.

persons of all ages, inaugurating a thoroughly up-to-date graded school with competent heads for each department.

The last speaker was Mr. Hall, who was very brief and to the point. He said that after the feast comes the salad, and one is privileged to eat it or leave it alone. He said that those present could take their choice regarding his remarks. He concluded with practical suggestions which cannot help being of benefit to those present. The affair closed with a question box, conducted by Mr. Dunham, and many of the workers took this opportunity to get additional help and information on perplexing questions.

The committee which planned the affair and had charge of it comprised Miss May D. Mercer, chairman; Mrs. Harold Serrell, Miss Mabel D. Cronce, Miss Minnie Egel, Mrs. Frank W. Jones, Arthur M. Harris and Miss Helen Armstrong.

place an abundance of gold supply.

"Notwithstanding the high cost of living our country has been so attractive during the past ten years that over 8,200,000 immigrants have reached our shores from foreign lands in the hope of improving their position in the battle of life. Very few of them have entered agricultural pursuits. Nearly all of the immigrants are in the industrial centers. It is this great addition to the competition of those who labor which has acted as a check on the advance in wages to equal rising prices.

"The immigration of the last ten years exceeds the population of the New England States, in 1900, by over 2,600,000 people. A great tribute to the economical system of the United States may be found in the fact that this wholesale transference of population from Europe to America occurred without any serious dislodgement of labor—a condition probably without parallel in the records of history.

"Just prior to the financial trouble of 1907 many parts of the country needed additional labor and the tendency of wages was then upward. The unintelligent and unwise handling of the fiscal and economic policies of the nation would upset industry with the 8,000,000 new arrivals still with us in addition to our own population to be fed and clothed. This is a condition and not a theory. It should prompt thinkers and statesmen to move slowly and wisely. The present is not for passionate words. It is a season for calm thought. Agitators should take no part to delude the millions of toilers in the industrial centers. Words alone will not accomplish results. It is easy to write and talk. It is harder to plan and to build. The responsibility was never greater and it rests with the people and their statesmen to rise to the occasion.

"Labor is beginning to regain the position lost in 1907. Let us help keep and improve that position. We should strive for the greatest good for the greatest number, including all if we can.

"The overthrow of the American system of protection will prove of no benefit to the people. It is more likely to produce chaos and an appalling situation in all industrial centers.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE

present who are members of the present league, Mr. Riley suggested that the seventeen form the club and get any additional members who were present and who desired to join. Slips were passed around among the men in the audience, and several new names were obtained.

The officers of the men's league were elected immediately and these were chosen: President, William L. Saunders; vice-president, M. C. Leonard, of Arlington; secretary, Dr. E. S. Krans; treasurer, E. F. Feickert. Mrs. Laddey thanked Mr. Riley and suggested that Mayor Fisk should be induced to sign as a charter member.

Following a duet by Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Bender, Dr. Earl Barnes, of Philadelphia, delivered a lecture entitled "Ideals of the English Women vs. The Duties of American Women." Dr. Barnes drew a word picture of the differences existing between the average English woman and the American woman to the latter's considerable disadvantage in favor of the former. As a race both sexes, he said, are better losers than we are in America. "Supposing some American had gone to England and had, as Sir Thomas Lipton, lost three consecutive times; what sort of a reception would he have received on his return? Would he have been knighted as was Sir Thomas? Not at all; he would have been relegated to oblivion. The Americans are poor losers.

"The American women are just between the frivolous French woman and the stolid, plodding English woman. A sort of hybrid, with scarcely enough purpose in view to call it such. They must put their shoulders to the wheel and play the game to the finish and perhaps within the next five years the franchise will be granted to women in most of the States.

"The recent suffragist agitation in England has been grossly distorted in the newspapers. The reported wild conduct of the women in storming the houses of Parliament were greatly exaggerated. They were orderly and were right in their demands to be heard, and their brutal treatment by the police and magistrates will forever remain a blot upon the history of Britain. The present rate of progression among women in this country continues, within twenty years we will have a nation of great women and puny men. The women will dominate all things. There are now 1,200,000 organized women in this country."

After the presentation of presidents of the new leagues in the afternoon session, Rev. Antoinette B. Blackwell paid a fine tribute to Mrs. Julia Ward Howe which was followed by the singing of the inimitable Hymn of the Republic," after which the president, Mrs. Laddey, delivered an address.

Mrs. Laddey's Address.

Mrs. Laddey said now was the time for the women of New Jersey to stand together and help along a victory for woman suffrage. There were men in the State, she said, who were ready to assist the women in bringing about such a victory. Mrs. Laddey said in part:

"Why is the struggle so great for the measure which has benefited fifteen governments in the world, where the principle of woman suffrage has been recognized and put into practice either wholly or in part? In four States of our Union the women enjoy the dignity of citizenship and in three more have the right to vote before the people and will be decided in a few days. Washington, South Dakota and Oklahoma are the States in question.

"We have in our own State an advocate for woman suffrage. It is Thomas Jefferson, of Monticlair. To a question as to whether he favors woman suffrage, he wrote: 'I believe in American women having equal suffrage rights with American men.' And these are other men of prominence in the State. This looks very promising and you know that New Jersey has been the first State in the Union which in its original Constitution established and maintained political rights for women. This right was taken away from them in 1807.

"Now that we have men in New Jersey who stand by us, I call on the women of New Jersey to stand together and help us to victory.

"It is a fact that the women's movement has swept with irresistible force throughout the world, and gains are made everywhere. Women of India awakened, agitated the suffrage question. Equal suffrage reigns in Australia. Women's help is needed to solve with men the problem of the human race because both are huban beings.

"The six million working women in this country need the ballot for their protection. Every club woman need it to work effectively for equal moral standard which will give us a virtuous people. They need the ballot for the abolition of child labor, sweatshop, intemperance and demoralizing amusement places. In every State department or institution where women and children are concerned, women should be in office. Women physicians should be in hospitals and insane asylums as well as on the boards and health boards. Women in all spheres of life, society leaders, social workers, declare themselves in favor of suffrage as a necessity for the common welfare.

"Truth in the name of Christ women and children were not considered as of much consequence. His sense of justice brought the woman to the foreground. Women all over the world, you owe much to Christ! Glorify Him by giving the woman equal with the collaborator of man, neither his subordinate nor his superior, but his full equal."

Mrs. Mary Preston Slosson, Ph. D., and her husband, Edwin A. Slosson, Ph. D., literary editor of the Independent of New York, gave their views of the operation of the franchise for women in Wyoming. According to both speakers, it was conducted in a frictionless manner and was the cause of sending men to Congress and filling the local offices with a higher grade of public men. Not one of the aspirants for office in Wyoming could hope even to be considered unless his private life would stand the closest scrutiny and investigation. Both speakers were given a long round of applause.

The president asked for contributions of money for the furthering of the work. She declared that $1,000 was needed and asked those present to subscribe that amount. The total will closely equal the sum asked for.

Alliance to Entertain.

Roselle, Nov. 2.—An entertainment and social will be given this evening in Tuthill's Hall, Chestnut street, under the auspices of Branch No. 6, St. Patrick's Alliance of America. An excellent program, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, will be provided and refreshments served. Speakers will be present from the district alliance and national officers are also expected. Door and other prizes will be offered. It is the first event to be held by the local branch since its organization a short time ago.

MISS CASE'S SUCCESS

An Artistic Triumph for Talented Young Singer in P. H. S. Auditorium.

AUDIENCE OF FIVE HUNDRED.

Karl Klein, Violinist, Shares Honors With Lyric Soprano—Mr. Depew an Admirable Accompanist.

On Saturday evening in the auditorium of the Plainfield High School Miss Anna Case won the approbation and praise of a distinguished audience and at the close of her concert, in which she was admirably assisted by Karl Klein, violinist, and Arthur Depew, pianist, this talented singer received an ovation. The rendition of Miss Case's selections bore out the anticipated pleasure and led many to express a decide for more. Mr. Klein's performance established him permanently as a favorite and Mr. Depew's work at the piano was faultless.

The more pretentious of Miss Case's selections, "Caro Nome," from Rigoletto; "Casta Diva," from Norma, and "Ah, fors e lui," from Verdi's Traviata, showed her wonderful control and power, together with an undisputably sweet voice of remarkable range. She was especially charming in her rendition of the aria "Ah, fors e lui" and received her meed of praise for the splendid singing of a difficult piece.

And then Miss Case shows her versatility by singing with pretty nonchalance and absolute confidence songs requiring imagination, and knowledge of languages. Her stage presence is captivating and one can confidently predict for her a brilliant future. From singing secondary roles in grand opera she is sure to become a rival to the accepted prima donnas of the operatic stage.

As has been said, Mr. Klein is master of his instrument and later will no doubt be found in the front ranks of the virtuosi. The assemblage at the concert numbered probably 500.

The patronesses were:

Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Miss Isabel Arnold, Mrs. J. Whitney Baker, Mrs. Frederic Butler, Mrs. Edward Booth, Mrs. Charles Brooks, Mrs. Howard W. Bloebe, Miss Beebe, Westfield; Mrs. Leighton Calkins, Mrs. George A. Chapman, Miss Corey, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. Henry De Forest, Mrs. John Drayton, Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Graig Foster, Mrs. Eugene Hatch, Mrs. Edward Hooley Mrs. C. E. Herring.

Mrs. Dewitt C. Ivins, Mrs. Henry Irons, Mrs. Arthur E. Janke, Miss Kenyon, Miss Elvira Kenyon, Mrs. Edward Lee, Miss Leonard, Mrs. Charles E. Lewis, Mrs. Robert Lowrie, Mrs. Caroline T. Lincoln, Miss Laura Long, Mrs. Pierre Mali, Mrs. Harry McGee, Mrs. John Doull Miller, Mrs. George Megrew, Mrs. E. Markley, Mrs. Hartley Mellick, Mrs. Max Munger, Mrs. Raymond Munger, Mrs. Thomas J. Mumford.

Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. Frank Martin, Mrs. Logan Murphy, Mrs. Walter Metlee, Mrs. Charles McCutcheon, Mrs. Ralph L. Morrow, Mrs. H. Mandeville, Miss May, Mrs. Stuart Patterson, Mrs. George Ring, Mrs. Charles A. Rice, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Mrs. J. M. TWO SPILLS IN HUNT CLUB'S WEEKLY CHASE

The weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club after the hounds, on Saturday, proved to be one of the best of the season. There was a large field out and the weather was ideal for the exciting sport. There were only two spills, Harry L. Finch and C. Wesley Holland going off. They were not injured and mounted and were able to remount and finish among the leaders.

The hounds were thrown in at Dog Tavern and they then circles around a distance of about seven miles back of Westfield. The check was taken on the Nelson farm, where the scent was again picked up and the run continued on to Pawnee Lodge over stiff country. The finish was on the Coriell farm at Fanwood. There were several riders who finished well in the lead. Among those who followed the hounds were the following:

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H.; Iewin E. Waring, Harry A. Bourne, Paul Dietrich, Fred Hollis, George Ross, James Sweiger, Ruppert Anderson, Harry L. Finch, Miss Gertrude Noe, Mr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Holland Miss Holland, Charles F. Wilder Jr., C. E. S. Bellows and Huntsman Henry Watkins.

PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD

Members of the Local Catholic Churches Observe the Annual Custom.

AT ST. MARY'S CEMETERY.

Sermon of the Day Delivered by Rev. Father Bogan in Presence of One Thousand People.

Members of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches, together with Catholics from surrounding towns, held their annual visitation to St. Mary's cemetery Sunday afternoon, for the purpose of offering prayers for the dead. The ceremony was participated in and witnessed by fully 1,000 people in all Rev. Father H. J. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, preached the customary sermon, while Rev. Father Miller was celebrant of the service. Rev. Father Hogan acted as deacon and Rev. Father Sciolla sub-deacon.

The men of St. Mary's church assembled in a body to the number of 250. They marched through West Seventh street to Watchung avenue and thence to East Fifth street, where they were met by the delegation from St. Joseph's. The march was then continued on East Fifth street to Grant avenue and Berckman street to the cemetery, a large crowd of women and children who had preceded in special trolley cars being in waiting.

The clergymen invested themselves in their robes at the cemetery house, and then proceeded to the priests' mound, where the bodies of Father Kiernon and Father Connolly, former local rectors, are buried. They were led by a cross bearer, two acolytes and forty altar boys. The priests were followed by 250 men all reciting the rosary of the blessed mother of God. The prayer was concluded as the central plot was reached. The official prayers of the Catholic church were read by Father Miller, after which the choirs of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches sang a quartet rendition of the "Benediction." At its conclusion Father Bogan preached the sermon, taking for his text, "It is a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead that they may be loosened from their sin." In the course of his remarks he said that death does not entirely separate us from our departed friends.

"It has ever been a teaching of the Catholic church," he continued, "that through the prayers of the faithful the souls of friends who have left their earthly cares and being repentant for their sins are not condemned to eternal punishment from Hell, but may not be worthy of immediate admission into Heaven. It is for souls thus delivered on the threshold of their eternal home that the prayers of their friends on earth arise in supplication to the throne of eternal justice."

Father Bogan's conclusion was an appeal to the effect that for every thought, word and action done with deliberation we must render a final accounting. It behooves us so to alter our living that this responsibility should be manifest, conscious always that when the day of our summons shall come and that our efforts for preparation shall be supplemented by the frequent prayers for memory of our friends yet on earth.

The service was concluded by the singing of "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name" by the entire gathering. The main body left the cemetery, but many groups lingered over the graves of departed friends until far in the evening.

MISS GRACE A. TEN EYCK WINS CUP AT P. G. C.

The cool bracing weather attracted a large held of golfers to the Park Golf Club Saturday, where the sport was greatly enjoyed throughout the day. There was the weekly competition for the President's, golf club and Oakmont cups; also the final play for the Ladies' Autumn cup, nine holes. This was won by Miss Grace A. TenEyck with a total of 120 points. Previous to Saturday's play she was a half-point behind in the standing for points, but finishing first in the day's play, gave her the necessary points to win the trophy.

These scores were returned in the weekly competition:

H. G. Hulsey, Fred-74; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 100-16-84; W. V. Pyatt, 108, 21-87; R. B. Titsworth, 109, 22-87.

These scores were posted for the Ladies' Autumn cup:

Miss Grace A. TenEyck, 60, 11-49; Miss Bess R. TenEyck, 78, 27-51; Miss Mildred M. Parker, 85, 30-55.

The active play will be continued at the club until Election Day, and the course will be kept open as long as the weather remains at all favorable.

Owing to the revival services being held in Grace M.E. church this week, the monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church will be omitted on Friday.

TRINITY'S JR. C. E. AFFAIR

Twentieth Anniversary Exercises of the Society of Trinity Reformed Church.

PROGRAM WAS LENGTHY.

Rev. John Y. Brock Addressed the Youngest—Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck Sent a Message.

The twentieth anniversary exercises of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church were held at the church, last Sunday and enjoyed a by a large congregation. The figures, "1890-1910," were prominently displayed over the pulpit platform. Arthur L. Titsworth, organist, rendered a prelude, as the members of the society marched from the Sunday school room into the church, led by Mrs. R. V. Kenney, superintendent, and Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl, assistant. They took seats in the front of the church reserved for them.

A feature of the exercises was the singing of an "Anniversary Song," in which special reference was made to Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, who organized the Juniors and Pastor Brock. Marion Woolley presented the secretary's report and Maude McAfee read a very interesting historical sketch of the society.

After the society marched into the church, singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," the boys and girls formed a cross and took part in a responsive reading, led by the president, Miss Jennie Sears. This program was then followed:

Prayer, Helen Thompson; response, society; responsive reading, leader, Elmer French; recitation, "Little Ones Like Me," Carman Trembath; Apostles' Creed, society; recitation, "The Beginning of C. E.," Alfred Willett; chorus, "Send the Light," society; Bible Keepsakes, Carman Trembath, Adolph Dealaman, Harry Dealaman, Edwin Addis, Albert Baker, Donald Willett, Alfred Zepp, Harold Woolley, George McDonald, Cecil McAfee: "What Jesus Is Able to Do," Helen Foster, Ethel Doty, Dorothy Ross, Alva Hansen, Dorothy Reader, Helen Willett, Sylvia Givens, Anna Stuart, Dorothy VanWinkle, Willetta Ord.

Anniversary song:

Do you know the thing that happened
Just twenty years ago?
Why the starting of this Junior band
And you have watched it grow,
To Dr. Schenck we owe our thanks
And on him our love bestow
As we still onward go,

Chorus.

Glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, hallelujah,
As we still onward go.

Mr. Brock is now our pastor
In this year of nineteen-ten
His smiling face we love to see
And welcome him as when
He comes into our meetings
With encouragement and then
We still shall onward go.

Chorus.

Pastor Brock then made a short address in which he congratulated the members of the society upon their achievements during the past twenty years. He said that during the next twenty years some of them might become elders and deacons, and he also hoped that some might become ministers of the gospel. He said that at present two members of the ministry were former members of the society. Mr. Brock then gave a brief explanation of the meaning of hallowe'en, adding that it is a Pagan custom, as was also the toiling of a church bell for funerals, and the Friday is an unlucky day to start anything. He then gave the Juniors a text, which he hoped they would remember: "Behold, I Stand at the Door and Knock." He urged the Juniors to let Christ open the doors of their hearts and to become soldiers of the cross.

Mr. Brock also called attention to the fact that the society this year won the State banner, which was held last year by the society in his brother's church in Newark, and he hoped that it would remain here in the future, in fact he felt sure of it for he knew that the society could beat its best of this year. On the reverse side of the banner are badges of State Junior C. E. Societies.

Then followed the rest of the program:

The secretary's report showed that meetings to the number of forty were held during the past year; that the membership reached eighty with an average attendance of fifty-eight. About fifty-four members received badges for 75 or more percentage of attendance. Eight were present at every meeting and seven united with the church. It was shown that the committees all worked faithfully and with enthusiasm.

The financial records for the fiscal year, which won the State banner, showed that the society gave $113.76 for missions, of which $101 was disbursed for missions as follows: After fulfilling the pledge of $15 for the support of Dr. Paul W. Harrison, the church missionary, the remainder was equally divided among the following objects: Miss Winn's work in Japan, Children's Home, also for the Americus Indians and the Kentucy Mountain Whites. Two entertainments were given during the year which netted over $30 each. The sale of postcards of Rev. Mr. Brock and Dr. Schenck and Dr. Harrison together with the offerings received from the Log Cabin and Indian banks, completed the amount stated.

In connection with this report there was a loving message to the society from Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, offering words of encouragement to the children for their fidelity and faithfulness. This was the first Junior C. E. Society organized in this city and it was done through the efforts of Dr. Schenck.

The historical sketch, presented by Miss McAfee showed that in 1890 the society was organized by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. The first meeting of the society was held in October, 1890. Only three members were enrolled and the society has continued to grow ever since and proved to be a great blessing. The first superintendent was Miss Alice O. Smith and George Reynolds was the first secretary.

The society has borne evidence to the value of religious training in early youth by the abundant service it has given the church. Many of the present Sunday school teachers were led to give their first testimony of love to Christ in the Junior society meetings. Two members of the present Consistory were trained in the society. In the year 1902, 120 members were reported on the roll with an average attendance of 40. For this year the society gave $88 for benevolences.

These persons have served the society as its superintendents: Miss Alice O. Smith, Miss Mary Berg, Mrs. Robert A. Meeker, Mrs. J. M. Tier, Miss Mary Brokaw, Mrs. William Kriney Mrs. William Tunison, Mrs. George Reighton, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Mrs. R. V. Kinney, Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl, Miss Edna Dilts, Miss Mabel Wilson.

Among the visiting superintendents present last night were Mrs. J. M. Tier, Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. William Kriney, Miss Edna Dilts and Mrs. George Reighton. Mrs. C. F. Platt and a delegation of Juniors from the West End Tabernacle; also Mr. and Mrs. Frank Langworthy, of the Seventh-Day Baptist society were present.

THE FUNERAL SERVICE OF CHARLES GOODMAN.

The funeral of Charles Goodman, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Goodman, of West Fifth street, was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. Rev. C. S. Kemble, the pastor, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, who showered the child with beautiful floral tributes. During the services Mrs. Richard Gilbert sang two selections. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Charles H. VanMiddlesworth, John VanMiddlesworth, Lloyd VanMiddlesworth and L. E. Woolley.

The death of the boy was a particular sad one. He had an attack of consilitis, and Bright's disease developed soon afterward. Everything possible was done to stay the progress of the disease, but proved unavailing.

COLORED WOMAN WEDS FOR THE FIFTH TIME.

Mrs. Alice Sutphen, of 195 Westervelt avenue, the borough, and Edward Allen Potts, also of the borough, both colored, were married at the home of the bride on Thursday last by Rev. P. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel. The wedding was a quiet one, there being no attendants, and only a few intimate friends present. The bride is about fifty years of age and the groom about thirty years old.

An interesting and somewhat remarkable feature of the wedding is that this is the fifth time that the bride has been married. She has been a resident of the borough about thirty years. The groom is employed as a teamster, working in the city and borough.

The regular offerings for missions will be received at the First M. E. church on Sunday.

The monthly communion service will be held at the First Baptist church Sunday morning in charge of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss.

Martin A. Korff will be the leader of the regular prayer meeting at Hope chapel tomorrow evening and will also play several solos on the violin.

BIG DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE--WILSON'S PLURALITY 44,521--TUTTLE WINS--MOY MAYOR

MOY IS ELECTED MAYOR

Bi-Partisans and Democrats Sweep the City, Dr. Wilson's Plurality Being 137 While Moy's is 116.

Opposed by the strong Republican organization and the local press, George W. V. Moy, Bi-partisan and Democratic nominee, won a signal victory yesterday.

defeating former P. Sheriff Frank Cordell by the majority. His plurality is 116. Dr. Woodrow Wilson swept the city, the Republican gubernatorial nominee, Vivian M. Lewis being the victim of a crushing defeat here. Wilson's plurality is 137. Governor Fort, Republican, two years ago carried Plainfield by 1,400. The two counties voted almost solidly for the Democrat.

Another shock to the Republicans was the abnormally small plurality given Judge William N. Runyon, for Congress, in this, his own city. He received 1,358 plurality when it was expected that it would be at least 2,000 and probably 3,000.

For city judge, William G. DeMeza, unopposed, received 2,661 votes. Ralph I. Voller, Republican, for Common Council in the First Ward got 962 votes. The Republican councilmanic pluralities in the second, third, and fourth wards, respectively, were: Frank L. Holt, 79; Duncan W. Taylor, 147; John E. Dunn, 66. For Freeholders, Wilbur's majority, 79; Deane's majority, 982.

DEMOCRATS CARRY UNION

Wilson's Majority 3120, and Thompson for Assembly, Only One Who Escapes the Tidal Wave.

Union county was caught in the Democratic storm that swept through the East, particularly in New Jersey, and Dr. Wilson gets the unprecedented Democratic majority of 3,120, the significance of which can be seen by Fort's majority of 843 two years ago when the Republican majority was cut in half.

The greatest surprise—the bitterest—was the crushing defeat of

Calvin E. Brodhead.
Assemblyman-elect.

Judge William N. Runyon, of this city, for Congress. He lost the county by 2,225, whereas he was banked upon by the Republicans to carry his own county by 2,000.

Only one Republican escaped the Republican wreck and he is Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, who received the bare majority of 93. Calvin Brodhead, of this city, and Hugh J. McLoughlin, of Elizabeth, both Democrats, went in safely on the Democratic tidal wave.

The total vote:

For Governor—Lewis 8,015; Wilson 11,135.

For Congress—Runyon, 8,384; Tuttle, 10,609.

For Assembly—Meisel, 10,918; Schwartz, 11,120. Schwartz, 11,120; Thompson 12,555; McLoughlin 11,890; Morris, 11,462.

BORO GOES FOR WILSON

North Plainfield Caught in Democratic Landslide, Many Republican Nominees Meeting With Defeat.

The Democratic sweep that passed over New Jersey played havoc in North Plainfield where the staid Republican majority of previous elections dwindled ruefully and in some cases disappeared entirely. Surprises were numerous.

The largest majority for a candidate was polled by Collector George F. Brown, who defeated his opponent Harry Cook, by 259. Dr. J. H. Cooley was elected to succeed himself as assessor by 85 majority over F. Gano.

The biggest surprise of all was the defeat of Barzilla Waldron, for Freeholder, by George Kirch, the Democratic candidate. The latter pulled one 91 ahead. As was predicted and naturally to be expected, Frank Mobus, the Democratic candidate for Sheriff, received a flattering vote in the borough. His majority over Kay was 450.

Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston, who was a candidate to succeed himself, is one of the Republicans who is congratulating himself today. He defeated John M. Lewis by a scant two votes, the figures being 612 to 611. Wood, for Congress and Dumont for Assembly, also had a small majorities, the former getting on the right side by 22 and the latter 15. Alexander Milne was elected to the borough council by 171 over Mills. Wilson's majority was 196.

26 New Governors.

Governors were elected yesterday in twenty-six States. The present incumbents stood 2 Democrats to 18 Republicans. In the elections yesterday thirteen Democrats were returned and thirteen Republicans.

TUTTLE WINS DISTRICT; HIS PLURALITY 4,393

William E. Tuttle.
Congressman-elect.

Runyon, of this city, being defeated by 4,393.

Union county gave Tuttle 2,225 plurality, Warren added 1,768, Morris gave Tuttle the rest. All three counties were carried by his opponent.

Congressman Fowler's plurality two years ago was over 6,000.

West Virginia.

The joint ballot of the Legislature in West Virginia will show a majority for the Democrats, and thus Nathan Roy Scott, United States Senator, loses his seat.

Woodrow Wilson, Democratic nominee, has overwhelmingly defeated Vivian M. Lewis, Republican candidate, for Governor. His plurality estimated by returns received from all of the twenty-one counties of the State this afternoon is 44,521. The returns show that Wilson received 57,739 pluralities in fifteen counties. In the six other counties Lewis' aggregate plurality is 13,218.

Three years ago J. Franklin Fort, Republican, received pluralities of 19,275, while Katzenbach received 11,262, giving Fort 8,013 plurality in the State.

Wilson got a tremendous plurality of 23,327 in Hudson and 14,265 in Essex. He swept Union, Bergen, Somerset, Burlington, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Morris, Monmouth, Ocean, Sussex and Warren. He even carried Mercer county, and received a plurality of 178 in Cape May. Passaic county rolled up a plurality of 5,000 for its favorite son and Atlantic also gave Lewis 4,000. The Republican nominee in addition carried Camden, Cumberland, Gloucester and Salem counties.

James T. MacMurray.
Vice-president Bi-partisan League.

Roosevelt Routed.

In Col. Roosevelt's home district, Nassau county, L. I., the First, Martin W. Littleton, Democrat beat out Cocks, Republican.

DEMOCRATS' LEGISLATURE

On Joint Ballot They Will Have 17 Majority to Elect Martine as U. S. Senator.

The next Legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot by having seventeen majority over the Republicans. The recent Legislature was Woodrow Wilson.

Governor-elect.

Republican on joint ballot by thirty-one.

The new Senate will have twelve Republicans and nine Democrats, giving the Republicans a majority of three. The Assembly will have forty Democrats and twenty Republicans, the Democrats having a majority of twenty.

As the Democrats will control the Legislature which elects a successor to John Kean for the United States Senate, James E. Martine will go to Washington unless his party's legislators prove to be traitors. The platform pledges the Democrats in the Legislature to abide by the result of the popular will expressed at the primaries. Martine defeated McDermit at the Democratic primaries by approximately 40,000. Many of the Legislators elect are committed to him.

JUDGE WM. N. RUNYON.
Defeated Nominee for Congress.

While, of course, regretting my defeat from a personal standpoint, I am even more sorry because President Taft will not receive the support from the Fifth District which I feel he so richly deserves.

My congratulations go to my opponent, Mr. Tuttle, for his successful fight so cleanly waged and he has my best wishes.

Ohio's Results.

In Ohio the latest returns show that the Legislature will be Democratic on the joint ballot. This means the retirement of United States Senator Dick.

NEXT CONGRESS.

The next Congress will be divided, the Democrats controlling the House and the Republicans the Senate.

Returns furnished this paper by the New York Herald this afternoon show that there will be 216 Democrats and 174 Republicans in the next House.

Some States are still in doubt and therefore the exact proportion in the Senate can not be learned this afternoon but there is apparently a gain of eight Senators for the Democrats. Present indications show that the Republicans will retain control of the Senate.

IN OTHER STATES.

Ohio—Harmon, Democrat, elected Governor by 25,000 plurality.

Massachusetts—Foss, Democrat, elected Governor by 29,000 plurality.

Pennsylvania—Tener, Republican, elected Governor.

Indiana—Result in doubt; Kerens, Democrat, for U. S. Senator, probably elected.

Connecticut—Baldwin, Democrat, elected Governor by 4,500.

WILLIAM E. TUTTLE.
Representative-elect.

The first thing that might be said about the result in this district and in this county is the splendid and upright campaign led by Dr. Wilson. As to my own election, it was brought about by the high cost of living and the revolt of the Fowler wing of the Republican party. I appreciate very deeply the splendid and clean campaign of Judge Runyon. It was a pleasure to have such a manly man as my opponent and I send him my best wishes for the future and thank him for the clean campaign he waged.

TABLEAUX FOR CHARITY

Performance Given by Cheerful Workers Circle, King's Daugthers.

AN EXCELLENT PRODUCTION.

Despite the Bad Weather, 200 Witness the Presentation at High School Auditorium.

About 200 people defied the elements Thursday and attended the presentations of tableaux vivants and musical given by the Cheerful Workers Circle of the King's Daughters in the High School auditorium. They were well repaid for their courage. The exhibition of living pictures was an artistic success from every viewpoint while the songs rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Watters were pleasing and satisfying.

It would be hard to determine whether he audience had a preference for tragedy, but as a matter of fact of the subjects treated which included comedies, historical plays and tragedies from the world Shakesperean writings, the tragedies received the heartiest applause. With the single exception of Portia, posed by Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, who received a triple encore, the tragedies were by far the best received of a splendid array of masterpieces. The credit for the success is due as much to those who took the various characters as to Miss Elizabeth Fisher under whose supervision the entertainment was arranged.

George H. Goddard admirably read the interpolated conversations from the plays which were represented by the characters and Miss Cala Aarct Green was the accompanist.

Arthur M. Collens as Prince Hal, in Henry IV, scored a triple encore. Mr. Collens' posing was absolutely perfect. He did not betray by a single perceptible movement that he was anything but a marble and the applause he received was well deserved. In the historical pictures Mrs. James M. Charles with Stella Butler and Helen Patterson won instantaneous recognition in their representation of Penelope Stout and her children, who, warned in time by an Indian fled from an impending attack of the natives from Middletown to what was then New Amsterdam. The picture was perfect. Taken altogether the entertainment was one to be remembered. Following is the program of the pictures:

Part I—Shakespeare comedies—Isabella, Measure for Measure, Miss Helen Harman; Viola and Olivia, Twelfth Night, Mrs. Arthur M. Collens and Mrs. James M. Charles; Katherine, The Taming of the Shrew, Miss Ellen L. Merrill; Hermione, a Winter's Tale, Mrs. Richard Hiden Hood; Beatrice and Benedick, Much Ado About Nothing, Miss Louise Curtis and Henry T. Eaton; Portia, The Merchant of Venice, Mrs. Sherman B. Joost; Rosalind, Celia and Touchstone, As You Like It, Miss Elsie Harman, Miss Helen Harman and Thomas W. Ashwell; Queen Titania, A Midsummer Night's Drem, Miss Eva Gregg Browne.

Histories—Prince Hal, Henry IV, Arthur M. Collens; Princess Katherine and Alice, Henry V, Mrs. William B. Tyler, Miss Ursula Rowland; Queen Katherine, Henry VIII, Mrs. Cornelius Boardman Tyler.

Part II.—Pictures from the early history of New Jersey: The Lenni-Lenape, Miss Marguerite E. Van Deventer and Miss Ellen L. Merrill; The Dutch, 1630, Mrs. Laurens H. Van Buren and Miss Ursula F. Rowland; Penelope Stout and Her Children, Mrs. James M. Charles, Miss Stella Butler and Miss Helen Patterson; The Swedes, 1638, Mrs. Walter L. Rightler and Mrs. Sherman B. Joost; Berkeley and Carteret, 1665, Thomas W. Ashwell and Henry W. Broker; The Friends, 1674, Mrs. William B. Tyler, Miss G. Isabel Ashwell and Miss Euphemia Bakewell; Lord Stirling and His Family at Basking Ridge, 1770, Miss Louise Curtis, Miss Ursula Rowland and Henry T. Eaton; Molly Pitcher at the Battle of Monmouth, 1778, Miss Frances L. Van Deventer; Joseph Bonaparte and His Family at Bordentown, 1820, Miss Elizabeth Goddard, Miss Elsie Harman and Laurens H. Van Buren.

The songs were: (a), O Mistress Mine, Roger Quilten; (b), Blow, Blow, thou Winter Wind, Roger Quilten; (c), Sigh no More Ladies, R. T. S. Stevens, Wilford Watters; (d), Phyllis hath such Charming Graces, Anthony Young; (e), Where the Bee Sucks, There Suck I, Dr. Thoams A. Arne, Mrs. Wilford Watters; (f), It Was a Lover and His Lass, Watthew, Mr. and Mrs. Watters.

Songs by Mrs. Wilford Watters—(a), Sapphische Ode, Brahms; (b), Vergebliches Standchen, Brahms; (c), Ballad of the Master and the Trees, Chadwick; (d), Allah, Chadwick; (e), Mighty lak a Rose, Ethelbert Nevin. Battle Hymn of the Republic, Mr. Watters.

COUNTY TO BUY TRACT

The Board of Freeholders to Have Land Adjoining Court House Condemned.

TO BEGIN PROCEEDINGS.

Many Minor Matters Disposed of at Regular Meeting of the Body in Elizabeth Yesterday.

The County Board of Freeholders, at the November meeting Thursday passed a resolution directing County Attorney W. O. Codington to take legal steps to condemn the property adjoining the court house on Rahway avenue, Elizabeth. The tract has a frontage of thirty feet and is owned by T. J. Ryan, who declines to sell.

The report of County Collector N. R. Leavitt showed receipts of $1,406,284.13 since January 1, and disbursements of $1,333,333.25, leaving a balance of $72,950.88 to the credit of the board.

A communication was received from the Cranford township committee asking the board to take over for the purpose of maintenance Walnut avenue, to the line of Clark township, Westfield. Cranford improved this road with aid of the board three years ago. At a more recent date it was improved by aid of the Board of Freeholders. This matter was referred.

Permission to lay a twelve-inch water main from a point in Morris avenue, almost opposite Keeler street, easterly on Rahway avenue to the Rahway bridge, was requested by the Short Hills Water Company. The present line of pipe is inadequate. The matter was referred to the county road committee.

The auditor reported the following amounts received during October: Surrogate's office, $852.95; sheriff, $274.47; registrar, $1,948.16; county clerk, $806.79.

Freeholders Krause, Swain and Gruner, the committee appointed to investigate the case of William Shafer, of Rahway, against the Elizabeth General Hospital, submitted a report exonerating the hospital from all blame.

SEALS THE WEAPON OF THE RED CROSS

Red Cross seals will be placed on sale in this city immediately after Thanksgiving. Last year Red Cross stamps were sold, millions being disposed throughout the United States and placed on letters and packages going through the mails. Owing to *the fact that there was some confu*sion in many places, because persons believing that the little pasters could be used instead of Uncle Sam's regular stamps, it was decided this year to have seals placed on the flaps of envelopes. This action was taken by the National Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis of its own volition, and not because of any order from the postal authorities. Numerous complaints, however, prompted the society to adopt the new method.

The seals will be found on sale in Plainfield in practically every place of business.

Nearly all of the proceeds resulting from the sale of the seals in this city will go toward carrying on the work of the society here. The National society will receive twelve and *one-half per cent, and the State so*ciety will receive five and one-half per cent., the remaining eighty-two going to the Plainfield society.

ZELDA SEARS TO APPEAR HERE IN "THE NEST EGG."

Zelda Sears, character comedienne and creator of many of the Clyde Fitch comedy types in his well known plays, will appear at the Plainfield hearse Saturday afternoon and evening, November 12, in a new comedy by Anne Caldwell, called "The Nest Egg." It is said that Clyde Fitch never wrote a play that he did not include Zelda Sears in the cast, showing that he had the keenest appreciation of her mentality and unusual style. Miss Sears will be supported by such well known persons as Frederick Burton, Robert Dempster, Julian Barton, Walter Young, Sydney Greenstreet, Blanche Hall, Evelyn Vardon, Helen Lindroth and Margerie North.

JUNIOR FIVE DEFEATED GRACE CHOIR TEAM.

In a fast, clean game the Y. M. C. A. Junior basketball team defeated the Grace church choir five on the association court Saturday. The score was 12—9. The Y. M. C. A. boys outweighed their opponents and their passing was of a high order.

DANIEL BROWN HELD ON BRIBERY CHARGE

Daniel Brown and Mansfield Robinson to Await Grand Jury's Action.

OTHERS ACCUSED DISMISSED.

Bonds of $100 Demanded in First Case—Butler not Corroborated in Second Complaint.

A partial substantiation of the charges of bribery brought by George W. Moy was given in the city court Saturday when Mayor Charles J. Fisk held Daniel Brown and Mansfield Robinson, both colored, for the action of the January grand jury in bonds of $100 each. Leroy Johnson and Samuel Webley, also colored, who were arraigned on a similar charge, were discharged, the complaint having been dismissed for lack of corroborative evidence. Samuel Schleimer, of Elizabeth, appeared for all four accused men. F. J. Blatz having retired from the defense. Mr. Blatz had been subpoenaed as a witness in the case. Walter Hetfield, Jr., assistant prosecutor appeared for the State.

In the first case tried Arthur Venable, colored, was the complainant and was the first witness called by the prosecution. He said that he resided at 614 West Third street, and had lived in this city for twenty years. He was working at the polls in the second district of the Fourth ward on primary day. He saw both Brown and Robinson on Muhlenberg place. He handed Robinson a ticket and also saw Brown hand Robinson another. After Robinson emerged from the voting booth, Venable declared, he saw Brown hand a bill to the voter, but was unable to tell from where he stood whether it was a one or a two dollar bill. Later Robinson had declared to him that he had received a dollar, but did not say what it was for.

Cross examined by Mr. Schleimer Venable said he could not swear that what he saw Brown hand to Robinson was money or not. When questioned as to when he first told of the case Moy was at the polls Venable said it was about ten days ago in the office of Mr. Moy, and admitted that he didn't intend to make the complaint until after he was questioned by Mr. Moy. On re-direct examination Venable declared that he had made a complaint of suspicious actions of Brown and Robinson on primary day to W. G. DeMeza, Mr. Hartpence and Patrolman Saffron. Venable then was excused.

John Branch, a most excitable witness, managed to throw the court into convulsions of laughter when examined. He swore that he was also working at the polling district where Brown and Robinson were and that he saw "Brother Brown hand a two dollar bill to Brother Robinson" and when he protested Brown said, "you ain't no politician, boy, you don understand this thing." Branch said he answered by saying: "I am man enough to know when I see something wrong, and you ain't doing what's right." When cross examined Branch could not tell a $5 bill handed to him by lawyer Schleimer, folded in the manner he declared the one passed by Brown was folded.

Mr. Moy was the next witness and said he had had occasion to talk with Venable but twice on the case. He had visited Mansfield Robinson who was in Muhlenberg Hosp'tal ill. This was on October 27, and Mr. Moy asked Robinson whether it was a one or a two dollar bill he had received from Brown. Robinson promptly declared it was a one dollar bill but he did not know why he was given to him. Mr. Moy's cross examination was extremely short, and at this point the prosecution rested.

In the defense of his clients Mr. Schleimer called Mansfield Brown who it was alleged had received the money. He denied absolutely that he had received any money at all from Brown, didn't even see him to talk to and flatly contradicted Mr. Moy's testimony as to the conversation at the hospital. Mr. Hetfield's cross examination elicted no further facts excepting the denial of Robinson that he saw or spoke to either Brown, Venable or Branch on that afternoon.

Brown denied giving Robinson money and swore that he did not speak with him after Robinson emerged from the polling place. He contradicted Branch's testimony as to other conversations and made the crowd in the court house scream when he declared that he had "voted Robinson nearly every year." Asked to explain this he said he always handed Robinson a ticket because the latter could not read. He also denied talking to Branch and Venable on that day.

Ex-Judge V. W. Nash, who was also called for the defense said he saw absolutely nothing suspicious during the day. He was there in the interests of his son who was a candidate for the nomination for the city judgeship.

Mr. Schleimer summed up the *case and asked the Mayor to dis*miss the complaint because of lack of evidence, but his honor could not see it that way and held the accused for the grand jury.

In the complaint made by Albert E. Butler against Leroy Johnson and Samuel Webley, being practically uncorroborated, was dismissed by the Mayor after hearing the direct evidence. The court room was filled with many interested spectators including nearly all the lawyers in the city and some of the clergymen.

SEWER IN BOROUGH NOW; ORDINANCE PASSED

After meeting with almost insurmountable setbacks and delays, the North Plainfield sewer ordinance was passed on its third and final reading by the Borough Council, last Friday it was introduced for adoption by Chairman Rogers, of the laws, ordinance and taxation committee, and went through without a dissenting vote. A perceptible sigh of relief was heard round the room while one enthusiastic councilman proposed a vote of thanks for Mr. Rogers.

The ordinance will now be advertised in the usual manner and when this is done the next step in the task of securing a sewage system for North Plainfield will be the preparation and sale of the necessary bond issue. This will probably take all winter, but Mayor Smalley said after the close of the meeting, last night, that not a moment would be wasted in its accomplishment. With the bond issue disposed of, the advertising for bids and award of the contracts will follow so that it is possible the actual work of construction fill commence next spring. The site for disposal bids and septic tanks has not been definitely decided upon as yet, but the local work will go on while this matter is being considered. It is a bare possibility that consemnation proceedings may have to be brought before the land thought to be the most available can be secured.

It was explained, last night, that the slow process in passing the ordinance is due to the exacting conditions demanded by the banking houses in buying bonds. The successful bidders place an expert upon the premises looking to the sale and if there is the slightest flaw in any part of them the bonds will not be taken until it is rectified. The method is much the same as that adopted by individuals in able said it was about ten days ago in the office of Mr. Moy, and admitted that he didn't intend to make the complaint until after he was questioned by Mr. Moy. On re-direct examination Venable declared that he had made a complaint of suspicious actions of Brown and Robinson on primary day to W. G. DeMeza, Mr. Hartpence and Patrolman Saffron. Venable then was excused.

THIS RESTLESS AGE.

It is undoubtedly true that it is not entirely due to the fact that this is so restless an age that nervous strain grows more and more. A few years ago we were not always taking of our nerves and seeking "rest cures," and when one comes to think of it there seems a great deal in the theory recently put forward that it is because we are nowadays having our eyes continually dazzled, so to say, by moving objects, staring colors, flaring "neons," and so on, that we are losing to time, we find ourselves literally worn out.

We acknowledge that this is an age when it is fatal to hide any kind of light under a bushel. Everything must be done to attract attention. Color is good for us, lack of it is depressing, but it needs to be used with discretion, and that is not always displayed in these times.

If we walk through certain parts of a city at night we shall see how to take heed of the means used to call attention to this or that and everything, we shall find that our eyes have no chance of rest at all save when they can look upon trees, or parks and there, upon those little oases found in most large cities. At night they are given hardly less opportunity for rest, for in busy centres we find thousands of dazzling lights dancing and every possible means of using gas and electricity to attract attention. Of course, we grow tired. Noise grows more and more, undoubtedly but it is not wholly noise that upsets our nervous system. Our visual nerves get absolutely no rest, but constant use. But to rush from one excitement to another, as so many holiday-makers do, is a mistake. We do not go straight from the very hottest room to the "cold plunge" when we are taking a Turkish bath, nor should we impose the same sudden change on our nerves.

To give our eyes as well as our ears a salutary change from the ceaseless roar and never-ceasing lights we should "slow down gradually," reaching only the absolute peace and monotony of places where "there is nothing to do but eat and sleep and be lazy" by degrees. Our nerves, be they auditory or visual, do not bear sudden plunges, and it is as bad to take them from too much work as to give them too much to do.

CHARMING MUSICAL AT MRS. N A. MILLER'S HOME

A delightful afternoon musical was given Friday at the home of Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, 53 Washington avenue, for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church. In spite of the storm, the affair was well attended and the society realized a considerable sum of money.

The music was furnished entirely by local talent. Mrs. Theo White Jacobi played several charming vio*lin solos and was well received, Miss* Bertha van Nuis Willis, soprano, sang her selections in excellent voice while her number "Love's Coronation," with a violin obligato by Mrs. Jacobi, was heartily enjoyed. Lewis Harold Jacobi, Jr., baritone, sang "The Armorer Song" from Robin Hood. Mrs. Ida Randolph-Smalley accompanied all of the soloists and rendered a piano solo.

The house was tastefully decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. After the musical program light refreshments were served and an informal social hour enjoyed.

The musical numbers were as follows: Violin solo by Mrs. Theo. White Jacobi; (a) "Evening Star", from Tannehäuser; (b) "Humoresque," by Devorak; Baritone solo by Lewis H. Jacobi; "Armorer Song" from Robin Hood; piano solo by Mrs. Ida Smalley Randolph, "Dinorah," by Hoffman; violin solos by Mrs. Jacobi; (a) "Ave Maria," Bach-Gounod; (b) "Canvonetta," by d'Andorsio; soprano solos by Miss Bertha Van Nuis Willis; (a) "It's in Thy Dreams," by Buck, and (b) "Songs My Mother Taught Me,' by Dvorak; violin solo by Mrs. Jacobi, "Romance," by Tschaikowsky; soprano solo by Miss Willis with violin obligato by Mrs. Jacobi, "Love's Coronation," by Aylward.

ROUTINE MATTERS IN THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Outside of passing the sewer ordinance on its third reading, practically nothing in the routine business was transacted at Friday's meeting of the Borough Council. Recorder Dolliver reported that there had been twenty-one arrests during October and that $25.50 in fines had been collected. The collector's report snowed a balance on hand of $23,949.60. Chairman Waldron, of the street committee, reported that the Regent street macadam had practically been completed and that all the streets in the borough were being put in shape for the winter.

KINGS' DAUGTHERS HOLD MONTHLY MEETING

The executive board of the City Union of King's Daughters held the regular monthly meeting in the rooms of the Charity Organization Society, Thursday. The report showed that 366 children had been at the Day Nursery last month and that there was a daily average of 40 and below the age of two years. The report of Miss Olive De Lamb, the union nurse, stated that she had made 159 visits.

According to the treasurer's report there is a balance on hand of only $232.62, while the monthly expenditures average $250. Unless promised donations are forthcoming the union will be handicapped in its work. The erroneous impression prevails that a large sum of money is on hand through the bequest of Mrs. Edgerton, but this has not yet been secured and will not for perhaps a year to come.

The annual summer meeting of the City Union will be held on Thursday afternoon, December 1, in a church to be designated later. A prominent speaker from out of town will be secured and the public is to be specially invited to attend.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION TO ATTEND STATE CONGRESS.

An informal meeting of the Mothers' Association of this city was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. D. Corbusier, 612 Park avenue. A large number of the members attended despite the inclemency of the weather.

The New Jersey State Congress of Mothers' Associations, which is to be held in Orange next week, was discussed at length by the members of the local organization. An invitation will be extended to the Congress by the Plainfield association to convene in this city next year. It is expected that the congress will accept the invitation.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 13, 1910.

Topic.—The war against the saloon. Enlist!—Hab. ii. 1-20. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Dooley, D. D.

The war against the saloon! Thus it is declared that the fight against the saloon is not one battle or one campaign, but a war. Nor is it a sham war, but a real one, and all who enlist should in sincerity do so not for seven*ty-five days or for three years,* but until the end of the war.

Our great drawback in this tremendous struggle against the saloon and its evils is that too many enlist for a skirmish or for one battle or campaign instead of to the end. The efforts made are spasmodic. The volunteers drop out, and if a victory or partial victory is won the enemy is soon intrenched in its former strongholds. Enlist, but enlist for life, or you will never be a real force in the settlement of the mighty issues of this war.

And what are the issues of this war? Why should we do battle against the saloon and all forms of the liquor traffic? In no other way does it is a legalized business under certain restrictions. Why, then, should we attack what the government protects as a legalized traffic? Really no answer is needed to this question. It is too familiar to all. The awful destruction and devastation of the saloon, known to all men, are sufficient reasons for taking up arms (figuratively) against the sea of troubles caused by this common enemy of mankind and ending them. We will follow so that it is possible the actual work of construction fill commence next spring. The site for disposal bids and septic tanks has not been definitely decided upon as yet, but the local work will go on while this matter is being considered. It is a bare possibility that consemnation proceedings may have to be brought before the land thought to be the most available can be secured.

It was explained, last night, that the slow process in passing the ordinance is due to the exacting conditions demanded by the banking houses in buying bonds. The successful bidders place an expert upon the premises looking to the sale and if there is the slightest flaw in any part of them the bonds will not be taken until it is rectified. The method is much the same as that adopted by individuals in purchasing land before purchasing a piece of property. The ordinance as passed calls for sewers in practically every street in the borough with possible stations located at necessary points. Both iron and vitrified pipe will be used in the construction work.

THIS RESTLESS AGE.

It is undoubtedly true that it is not entirely due to the fact that this is so restless an age that nervous strain grows more and more. A few years ago we were not always taking of our nerves and seeking "rest cures," and when one comes to think of it there seems a great deal in the theory recently put forward that it is because we are nowadays having our eyes continually dazzled, so to say, by moving objects, staring colors, flaring "neons," and so on, that we are losing to time, we find ourselves literally worn out.

BOOKS ON MUNICIPAL SUBJECTS IN LIBRARY

Apropos of the keen interest taken in municipal problems in this city, the Public Library has just taken out a membership in the National Municipal League, which entitles it to receive current pamphlets literature on problems of the government of cities, reform movements, etc., etc., as well as the valuable volume of proceedings of the annual meeting of the league to be held at Buffalo, Nov. 14-17, 1910.

It is said of the National Municipal League that it is the oldest, most disinterested and most effective body in the country devoted to the betterment of municipal administ*rations. Its work has accomplished* practical results by the inclusion of its recommendations in the charters of a large number of our cities, and its aim is to constantly improve municipal administration by careful study and sound suggestion. Its members are, in the main, men who give their time and attention to the League's affairs because of their deep concern for its objects and purposes.

The following pahphlet literature is now at hand, which, with other material to come, may be freely consulted at the Library or taken from the building when proper request has been made at the delivery Desk:

BOROUGHITES RETURN AFTER PLEASANT TRIP.

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, together with Mrs. Swackhamer and daughter, Miss Constance, of the borough, returned home Wednesday after a delightful vacation trip of a month most of which was spent in New England. They proceeded from New York to Albany by the day boat and from there journeyed to Pennington, Vt. After viewing the famous Revolutionary battle ground, they visited the State capitol at Montpelier, meeting the governor and witnessing a legislative session.

From Montpelier they journeyed to Boston by way of Billows Falls and spent several days at the Hub and its suburbs, Cambridge, Lexington, Concord and other places. They also paid a short visit to Deerfield, Mass., the scene of the great Indian massacre. The party then *returned to New York and contin*ued on to Whitehouse, Mr. Swackhamer's former home, where they remained ten days. While there Mr. Swackhamer addressed a grange in several political meetings and consent to return tonight to assist in a big rally. Peter Stillwell, of Bayonne, will be one of the other speakers.

The entire trip was one of continuous novelty and pleasure, and Mr. Swackhamer speaks glowingly of the scenes and treatment by the people with whom he came in contact.

GRADUATES OF SEMINARY TO FORM AN ASSOCIATION.

Former graudates of the Seminary met yesterday for the purpose of taking steps to form an alumni association, and a committee of which Mrs. Leighton Calkins is the chairman was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws for presentation at the next meeting. In the meantime a list of all the former graduates will be secured and they will be notified of the date of the next meeting.

The Seminary is one of the oldest institutions of learning in the city. The first graduate left there in 1876 and Miss E. E. Kenyon has conducted the Seminary for forty years. The local graduates are much interested in the formation of an association and it will be arranged to hold annual reunions.

A Hawaiian Greeting.

Here is one of the most interesting *Christian Endeavor greetings ever re*ceived by Dr. Francis E. Clark. It was presented to him when he was in Hawaii last January:

To the King's Dr. Francis E. Clark, D. D., President in Chief of the Christian Endeavor Association of the World:

Greeting: We, the Christian Endeavorers society of Honokowai, district of Lahaina, island and county of Maui, territory of Hawaii, hereby extend and greet you with a most hearty welcome and bestow unto you our friendly blessings for this pilgrimage voyage whereby we now meet and greet each other, and that you may discover for yourself how the manifold works of Christian promotion have been done here, promoting and uplifting the glory of Christ's kingdom among Christian Endeavorers.

We, therefore, pray and would everlastingly pray unto His Holy Trinity to prolong your days unto long years, that you may be able to accomplish the great works that have been required of you to shoulder.

A Tip on Oats.

According to the Saturday Evening Post, a man who had a country place on Long Island came to New York one morning to do a little speculating. He was a great believer in tips.

On the ferryboat it came to him that he had had somehow a tip on oats. He couldn't remember just what it was, but somebody had told him to buy oats. So when he reached his broker's office he looked into oats a bit and bought some. Oats were active. He pyramided skillfully and by the close of the market was $7,000 ahead.

Of course such luck as that had to be celebrated, and it was. As the celebration went on the oats buyer told the story several times and each time took on importance in the recital as an oats buyer until he finally became the oats king. He chested his railroad station somewhat late and found the stableman waiting for him with a trap.

"By the way," said the stableman, "did you remember to order that five bushels of oats I asked you to buy this morning?"

Not Safe.

The negro on occasions displays a fine discrimination in the choice of words.

"Who's the best whitewasher in town?" inquired the new resident.

"Ale Hall am a bo'nd a'tist with a whitewash brush, sah," answered the colored patriarch eloquently.

"Well, tell him to come and whitewash my chicken house tomorrow."

Uncle Jacob shook his head dubiously.

"Ah don't believe, sah, Ah'd engage Ale Hall to whitewash a chicken house, sah."

"Why, didn't you say he was a good whitewasher?"

"Yas, sah, a powe'ful good whitewasher, sah, but mighty queer about a chicken house, sah, mighty queer!"—Human Life.

Her Revenge.

A little girl had been so very naughty that her mother found it necessary to shut her up in a dark closet—in that family the direst punishment for the worst offense. For fifteen minutes the door had been locked without a sound coming from behind it—not a whimper, not a sniffle. At last the stern but anxious parent unlocked the closet door and peered into the darkness. She could see nothing.

"What are you doing in there?" she cried.

And then a little voice piped from the blackness:

"I thpit on your new dress, and I thpit on your new hat, and I'm waiting for more thpit to come to thpit on your new parasol!"—Philadelphia Times.

He Made Good.

Lord Lansdowne once had a remarkable prophecy made concerning him while he was an Oxford graduate. Jowett, his tutor at Balliol, greatly admired him and always said that he would do great things.

"There goes a man," remarked Jowett, "who is as certain to be foreign secretary in due time in whichever party he chooses as tomorrow's sun is to rise."

Of course at that time Lord Lansdowne had not the least idea of filling such a distinguished post, and yet in 1880, after a brilliant political career, he found himself at the head of the foreign office.—London M. A. P.

Her Lost Chance.

Mrs. B.—I wonder why Miss Single-ton refused the curate when he proposed to her?

Mrs. D.—All a mistake, my dear! a sad mistake; you know she has grown a little deaf, and she did not suspect he was at all "gone" on her. She actually thought he was asking her to subscribe to the new organ fund, so she told him she was sorry, but she had promised all her money in another direction.

Mrs. B.—Then what happened?

Mrs. D.—The curate felt himself insulted and departed in dudgeon, and she's lost the only chance she ever had.—London Telegraph.

Sense of Humor Declining.

"Do you think Americans have a great sense of humor?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "I'm afraid it isn't what it used to be. The folks out home are becoming so interested in economic issues that they don't seem to care whether I tell them any funny stories or not."—Washington Star.

Wrong Trail.

First Professor of Chemistry—What are you working at now? Second Professor—I'm trying to ascertain the cause of baldness. First Professor—Oh, stop it! You're wasting your time. What you ought to be doing is trying to ascertain the cause of hair growth.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Ready Demonstration.

"Do you think you can make my daughter happy?" asked Miss Thirsty smith's father gravely.

"Why, I have already, haven't I?" replied Spooner. "I've asked her to marry me."—Smart Set.

His Last Leg.

A mendicant was begging a man on the cars the other day and said: "Dear sir, I have lost my leg," to which the man replied, as he hurried away, "My dear friend, I am very sorry, but I have not seen anything of it."

APACHES OF PARIS

Night Prowlers Whose Trade Is Murder and Robbery.

THE TERROR OF THE POLICE.

These Desperadoes Rarely Use a Gun, but Work With the Knife, the Bludgeon or by "Tolling"—They Have a Short and Bloody Career.

There are very few nights in the year when Paris policemen on their rounds do not stumble upon a body lying in a gory pool. Sometimes the handle of a long, slender knife protrudes between the shoulder blades; sometimes an ugly gash bleeds from ear to ear; not seldom blood oozes from mouth, nose and ears, as though the dead had not sustained any apparent wound, or three little starlike bruises may dot the temple, or a bluish line an inch wide may mar the back of the neck, just above the collar line. "Les Apaches," the "cops" whisper to each other (for Parisian police officers always go two by two), and they call for an ambulance, much relieved not to have witnessed the incident.

The steel blade, the blackjack, the brass knuckles, will serve the purpose of the Apache according to his victim's size and presumable strength. For a prey of small stature, however, the Apache reserves what in his slang he calls "tolling." A sharp blow dazes the victim and throws him down; the Apache's knees bore themselves into the chest, while his hands seize the ears, lift the head and slam it a couple of times on the pavement until a duller thud tells of a fractured skull.

Until an Apache is an adept at "sticking" his man in very much the same way in which a Spanish torero dispatches a bull, with a single thrust between the shoulders, or at cracking a skull bone at one slam, he is held in little esteem and never allowed to tackle "big jobs" in a dangerous neighborhood, for Paris is a well policed city. The night hawk must strike like lightning, empty the dead man's pockets in a wink and slink away into the dark. Therefore Apaches very seldom carry guns; the knife is silent. Tolling, too, is safe—so many people are known to have slipped and fractured their skulls! Unless the victim is especially well dressed there is not much of an inquiry.

When it is all over the gang, which scatters like a flock of frightened sparrows, meets again at some wineshop where no one is welcome who is not "in the business."

Apaches never try to conceal their social status. Their very clothes are a sort of warning to the public. They even affect a peculiar walk, the body bent from the loins, shoulders hunched and hands plunging deep into the trousers pockets. But who would dare to molest them?

The Apache is a marked man. He joins a gang at three or four and twenty, and by thirty or thirty-five he has gone. The mows of a jail hold him for the balance of his earthly existence. He knows that. He expects it. Therefore while his freedom lasts there is no desperate chance he will not take to get at the gold that alone could save him.

Apaches are not born; they are made—made by the peculiar laws of France. Every citizen of the republic, without distinction of rank or class, must serve under his country's flag for two years. Only the physically unfit escape that servitude. At the end of his term in the ranks every Frenchman seeking employment must present as means of identification his certificate of honorable discharge.

Then it is that tragedy looms up for some many minutes. Woe to the one whose certificate mentions the "African battalions."

The African battalions, garrisoned at the edge of the Sahara desert, are made up of all the bad boys who had the misfortune of being arrested before they reached the age of twenty-one. Trivial are their offenses may have been, whether they were due or not to the indispersed exuberance of youth or to some absurd enlightenment, they are sent to the desert outposts, kept on convict fare, sleeping mostly in trenches which they dig, watched over by sentries that shoot to kill.

Under the broiling sun that lays them down fast with fever and cholera they build roads, crept over the next day by the sand. They are the "first front" whenever Arabs or Moroccans threaten to shake off the French yoke. When they fall by the wayside they are tied to a horse's tail. When they protest spurs cause the horse to rear.

And when the creepy water of sand wells, hailed from these parts by the nomads and the hoofs of vicious horses have spared them they return to their native city with hatred in their hearts, with the loathsome memories left by association with the depraved and the morally diseased.

They return to their native city to find doors and hearts locked to them. Their military book, which they must produce, proclaims them jailbirds. Who wants to employ an ex-convict? During their two years in the African Inferno they have atoned for their errors of the calendar for a nineteenth year. For the second time they have settled their account with society. And now society refuses them a chance to show that they have (for some of them have shed the old hide, to prove that a new heart is beating in their breasts.

N Y AMUSEMENTS.

The Messrs. Shubert announce that special matinee performances will be given at all the Shubert playhouses in New York city on the afternoon of Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 8. Reservation for seats may be made now. The theatres at which these special matinees will be offered are the Lyric, Herald Square, Daly's, Broadway, Casino, Maxine Elliott's, Nazimovo's Thirty-ninth street, Comedy, Hackett, Circle, and West End. These Election Day matinees will not interfere with the regular mid-week matinees. During the evening performances on Election Day at the Shubert theatres returns will be read from the stage.

"Baby Mine" at Daly's theatre remains the one big successful laugh producer that has been seen in New York in years. The play unique in origin and mission fulfills the part it sets out to as an instrument of comfort and cheer. Through the fabled birth of children whose arrival brings joy to the husband who is led to believe that he is also the father, numerous perplexities arise. The despatch with which the stork comes adds to the confusion and finally the wife despite her cleverness and the ingenious aid of her confederates is revealed to her deluded husband who learns the truth. But the ruse succeeds in its purpose, that of reuniting husband and wife. It shows that even spurious babies can be the tie that binds on some occasions. Miss Mayo, the author of the farce *gives credit for the idea to a para*graph that appeared in a newspaper early in January in which the head of the maternity hospital in Chicago was quoted as saying "that over three thousand husbands of Chicago were fondling babies not their own." The cast includes Marguerite Clark, Walter Jones, Ernest Glendenning and Ivy Troutman. The usual matinees are given on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Herald—"Welcomed with laughter and applause, it rivals 'The Merry Widow,' and is one of the best musical shows seen in New York in that ever so long."

World—"Easily the brightest and most diverting musical production New York has seen in many a day, or is likely to see in as many more. At last a musical show that's a novel."

Telegram—"The funniest musical play that has come to town for a long time."

Journal—"Nobody can get enough of it."

Globe — "Twenty-two numbers make up a feature list of a dazzling, dashing nature."

Eve'g World—"A younger sister of 'The Merry Widow.' Likely to stay the season out in New York. Huge audience fairly yelled its approval."

BLEW THE $100.

"Incredible as it may seem," remarked Marie Dressler in telling the story, "I knew an actor this last summer who had a $100 bill left out of his last season's earnings, and after a long vacation, too—

"Stop now," exclaimed a Hamlet in the party, "before you're challenged. It's simply impossible."

"But it's true," continued Miss Dressler, "and the pathetic finish is that this man didn't believe in banks. He bought a drink and laid the century note on the bar. The refreshment dealer who knew him, nearly fainted. The barkeep had to send all over the neighborhood to get the change. The actor put all of the roll except the silver under the sweatband of his straw hat for safekeeping. Then he went out on Broadway. His hat was blown off and the money was scattered to the four winds. He recovered the hat and $4, and the actor reserves at 'Touch-for-Breakfast Club' got away with the remainder. It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, eh?"

"I withdraw my previous remarks," exclaimed Hamlet. "I got a $20 bill of that reserve myself, and it was a life-saver."

Pla'n English.

By the extraordinary contortions of her neck he concluded she was trying to get a glimpse of the back of her new blouse; by the tense line and scintillating flash about her lips he concluded that her mouth was full of pins.

"Umph—goo!—suf-wif — she—she—ff—spog?" she asked.

"Quite so, my dear," he agreed. "It looks very nice."

"Ouf—wuf—oo—g—ph—rf ugs—sight?" was her next remark.

"Perhaps it would look better if you did that," he nodded, "but it fits very nicely as it is."

She gasped and emptied the pins into her hand.

"I've asked you twice to raise the blinds, so that I can get more light, James!" she exclaimed. "Can't you understand plain English?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

REV DR. C. E. HERRING ON GOOD CITIZENSHIP

At the First Presbyterian church Sunday, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring spoke on "Citizenship." He selected for his text the words of St. Paul, "Our Citizenship is in Heaven." He spoke of the different elements that make a good citizen.

"A good citizen," Dr. Herring said, "is the man who makes an intelligent study of the conditions and needs of the time and votes for the men and measures that are in accord with his conscientious and religious convictions. He is a man who studies carefully the records of the men for whom he votes and relies not on their promises but on their past deeds in public office. A man is not a good citizen who votes a straight ticket because his grandfather voted it. He should vote as he considers the need of the times, and no man should be deprived of the inalienable right to think for himself and vote accordingly.

"A good citizen should seek the elevation of humanity and strike at everything that makes for their degeneration. Every religious and moral man should be interested in good citizenship, for if we permit the moral atmosphere about to become tainted, without continual protest, it will react upon us and lower our ideals of right living."

DRESS AND HEIGHT.

There is a woman whom I see in the cars daily who has never learned that dress and appearances are at all correlated. She is a short, stout little body, and by the time she has completed her toilet she looks like a walking balloon. Her coats are always puffed as to the sleeve and padded as to shoulder; her shirtwaist blouse; she wears wide bows at the neck and on her hat; her shoes have broad, round points, and her light gloves make her hands look larger. In short, she has no straight lines; her hats should be high; with erect plumes or ribbons; her gloves should be dark; her shoes pointed, her clothing in general tight fitting.

And if only women abnormal in either direction as to height or weight would observe the same principle.

GRAYING HAIR.

Despite the enthusiasts who rave over young faces and white hair, no woman really welcomes gray hair; she may become reconciled to it to the point of not favoring dyes, but that is all.

Therefore take every precaution to keep the hair from turning. Poor general health will do it; so will excessive worry or too much brain work without proper exercise and relaxation.

Nothing will cause the hair to become gray so quickly as admitting scalp to become robbed of nutrition. For this reason too much shampooing or the use of drying mixtures of the hair is bad.

Tonics that contain plenty of oil are invaluable to keep the natural lustre of the hair, and should be used regularly by those whose family has a tendency to turn gray early.

INCREASE IN RATE HITS PYTHIAN LODGES

There is general dissatisfaction among the older members of the Knights of Pythias lodges because of the great increase in assessments which has been ordered. The feeling is growing stronger every day and there may be a falling off in membership, although there are some who have been in the organization so long and paid in so much money that they could not afford to quit now. The rates on a $2,000 policy have increased from about $3 a month to $11, and the big jump has caused protests all over the country.

This new order was issued by the Supreme Lodge in Milwaukee in the summer, after the board of control recommended an increase in assessments to all members in what is known as "class four." In 1893 there were thousands of men throughout the country who by joining this class were given a guarantee that the $2,000 policy would be issued for between $2.50 and $4.30 per month, according to the age, and that no assessments outside of the monthly payments would be exacted.

On October 1 extra assessments were laid and notwithstanding the protest, have been paid by some members. It is believed that the trouble was caused by taking about $2,000,000 from the "class four" fund to help along a new class known as "class five." This was so severe a strain on "class four" that it had to be rehabilitated in some way.

It is understood that an effort will be made to see how much the guarantee of 1893 really means. There are several hundred Pythians in this city.

THE NEWEST FABRICS.

Foulards lead the line of silks. They are excellent as foundations for the lace and chiffon veiling in tunics and overblouses.

Satin crepes and liberty silks and light-weight satins are the coming materials for evening wear. They are used for foundations under chiffon or silk net, or are themselves made up in black and white and pastel shades.

Persian silks and gauzes and plaid taffetas are most popular for separate blouses for dress wear with fine broadcloth or dark silk suits.

Worsteds, silk-and-wool materials and fine broadcloths are coming in for early fall wear. Plain rough weaves are also in favor, with much brocade in scroll effects for trimming and combination with other materials.

Panne cloths are largely taking the place of light-weight broadcloths and silk warp poplins and crepes are also to be seen for tailor-made suitings.

Worsted and silk-and-worsted voiles are in high favor, as well as the new French toile cloth and hopsacking.

Jacquard, the latest in dress materials, is seen principally in black though it probably will appear in colors later on.

Velvet and velveteens will be among the most fashionable fall fabrics for suits and chaills will be stylish for house dresses.

French flannels and plain, plaid and changeable taffetas are also models. Corduroy and crepe de chine is one odd combination that is really attractive, strange as it sounds.

Scene from Klaw & Erlanger's prod uction, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," Republic Theatre, New York.

CZAR OF HIS SHIP

The Captain of an Ocean Liner Is a Real Autocrat.

HIS WORD IS ABSOLUTE LAW.

He May, if He Deems It Necessary, Put a Passenger in Irons or Clap Him In a Cell, and in Cases of Emergency Is Empowered to Take Life.

Imagine a mayor or a judge of a circuit court or a county sheriff or a town marshal of a village of 3,500 population stepping out into the street and on general and self imposed authority picking up a citizen, ordering him to a cell and clapping irons on him for safe keeping!

Wouldn't the bird of American liberty set up a screech? Wouldn't the old and badly cracked Liberty bell resonate in discord?

After one of the great transatlantic passenger steamships leaves the three mile limit of New York the passenger is in foreign territory on the high seas. English, French, German—whatever the flag at the masthead—the ship is a section of its fatherland, floating in the high seas, where only maritime laws regarding its transit in times of peace may hold check upon the caprices of the ship's commander, on or off the bridge.

No czar has more power within his territory than has the captain of the great Atlantic liner on the high seas. He is on an island of his country's ownership, floating and carrying a population of 800 employees and looking after the welfare and safety of perhaps 3,000 passengers. He is practically the administrative, executive and judicial single individual, such as existed even in the most ancient day civilization. Aside from his authority over mankind, he may have $7,000,000 of vessel under him, to say nothing of the international mails and millions in gold in transshipment.

"There's the captain," is a whispered bit of comment made a million times a year in the beginning of the passages of great ocean steamships. And generally the captain looks the part.

It is not so much his uniform either. Ordinarily the captain is not young. There is gray in his hair, mustache or beard. That young man in his twenties, no matter what his schooling for beginning the work, isn't called a "master" under the captain's bridge. He must have his maximum of training for six or seven numbers below before he is called to the foot of the ladder.

On the British passenger vessels most of the officers in navigating an ocean vessel of the first class will have had a lieutenant's commission from the navy. It is from the royal navy reserves that the lowest officer's vacancy is filled. Filling it, he has his chance to rise to the position of captain.

As to the captain's authority: One midnight, when in a fog the White Star Baltic struck the German oil steamship Standard, the Baltic needed its captain, and he was there. His first impression was to rush to the bow of the vessel and began the work of patching up the hole in the Baltic's steel sheathing.

Suppose that in a stampede of the Baltic's crew its employees had rushed up to fill the boats and left with the captain's power to have shot down the leader—to have brought about war to the knife, revolver and rifle in the interests of his vessel and its passengers. And suppose passenger or passengers become panic stricken and against orders menaced the welfare of the majority on the ship death would have been dealt with the same rigid discipline which requires of the captain that he be the autocrat at his post.

There are no forms of writs or warrants necessary. There is no court at which the passenger or the seaman may give bond. In that instant of sudden great emergency which arises the captain's word is more than written law; it is the unwritten common law of the high seas, in the spirit of which the vigilance committee of the wild west of the United States rose, lawlessly lawful.

Today the captain of the great liner may step into the palatial cabin and command order. He may go into the smoking cabin and stop the game of cards at which the sharper is playing for his stakes. In case of refusal that ancient land right of "no deprivation of liberty without due process of law" becomes a farce. The cell room or even the iron manacles of the captain's authority may be turned upon the individual who has paid $500 or $1,000 for his suit of rooms and his passage. On the high seas the captain's ship becomes an autocratic democracy. The individual in the first cabin and at the captain's side must share with the Immigrant far below those equities that are granted to each in his place.

"Don't buck the captain," said an official in the offices of a great steamship line. "He is all there is of authority. He is the responsible entity of his ship. He is dressed for it; but, more than that, he is trained to it. He is empowered to take life if he must, and on land this is the most serious of all things in the statute books."

"Commander of the fleet" is one of the offices toward which the old sea captain looks, not enviously, not with disdain. It is a naval number in the passenger service which marks the age of retirement. There is honor in the title. It does not descend to his children. He gives half his life to the gaining of it, and it means that his activities and powers are at an end.—Chicago Tribune.

Through the Pantry Window

By Claudine Sisson

On a certain chill October afternoon, which was brightened only by a flare of crimson leaves on all the maples and the ever-present tangles of aster and golden rod along the bushy banks, Elsie turned her horse in at a rickety picket gate and dismounted before the porch of a tiny, shabby, neglected house.

Tears came to Elsie's eyes, as she thought of the dead woman who had animated it with her kindly presence. She felt that she would like to go in and look about and try in imagination to refurnish the abandoned rooms and to people them with the gentle figures that had once frequented them.

The thin old horse, a freckled gray from the livery stable in town, was pulling at the reins in an effort to get his nose to the grass. Elsie sought for some place to make him secure and remembered the little barn. If the door was not nailed up she could put him in there.

The door was not nailed up. It slid open easily and she led the horse in and tied him to the stall which had held only cobwebs and hay and dust for a long time. A little had remained in one corner. She carried it to the horse, who received it as eagerly as if it had been the freshest of fodder. Then she went to the house.

It was locked securely. She went about trying the shutters. At last she found one partly off the hinges—blown off by a high wind, no doubt. She swung it clear and put her hand to the window underneath. To her surprise, it raised as she pushed upon it. She seemed to hear a familiar voice saying in her ear:

"The ketch on that pantry window needs fixing bad, but I can't seem to get to it. What difference does it make? There ain't no burglar coming in here for the little trash I've got. If one did come in he'd be glad enough to get out again, after I'd given it to him good and lively with that old rusty iron tongs I keep handy for the purpose."

Aunt Hope's dear voice! Aunt Hope's own remembered words! And this was the pantry window. Elsie looked in. The tiny place was neat. The cupboard doors shut; an old iron spider hung against the wall. It looked perfectly natural and right, quite as if Aunt Hope had just stepped out. Clarissa Mains, the heiress, had left some things as they should be.

The window sill was only knee high from the ground, and Elsie climbed over it easily. She let down the window behind her. The floor gave back an empty sound beneath her feet as she walked across it to the kitchen. The kitchen, too, was quite unchanged. There stood the old-fashioned stove from which she had eaten so many of aunt Hope's good dinners. In the dining room the chairs and the table still stood in their places upon the painted floor. But the dishes were gone from the shelves where aunt Hope had kept them. Clarissa Mains had appreciated the fact that such old blue ware was valuable.

After the dining room came the parlor, the room that in aunt Hope's lifetime Elsie had always loved best. It was a good sized room in the front of the house. She lifted a window and turned the slats of the closed shutters. The yellow afternoon light came in across the bare floor. Innumerable motes danced in its rays. Upon the walls a few old pictures still hung, and the wall paper showed fresh spaces upon its faded surface where'd others had been.

Elsie sat down upon one of the appealing chairs and clasped her hands over her riding gauntlets about her knee. There was a chill of freshness and stale air in the room, but she did not feel it. She was thinking of the last time she had been in this room. There had been flowers in the room and many people. In the midst lay aunt Hope, always hitherto so gracious and genial, so quick to respond to the love of her friends and neighbors. Her hands were crossed upon a fact, on the night Mary left the house he had carried her satchel for three miles on the way to the village.

When his story had been finished—and there were many other details—both father and mother looked at Zeb. Never before had they seen a paleness through his sunburn—his eyes look so steely, his jaw so hard set. They didn't ask what he was going to do; they could read it in his face. The *"New York Uncle Tom's Cabin com*pany" was to reorganize that night at a village 25 miles away for rehearsal previous to taking the road. The boy Jimmie had it all down pat. If he had only been a year or two older, so he had been told, he would have been taken along to play the part of George Harris.

Zeb Hastings went upstairs and changed to his Sunday suit. When he came down he went to the barn and harnessed the old mare to the democrat wagon. He had the barnyard gate open to drive out when Mrs. White came out and asked between her sobs:

"Zeb, what you goin' to do?"

"Goin' to tip over Uncle Tom's cabin."

He drove to the village where Mary must have taken the train, put up the horse at the livery barn and then went to the depot to wait for his train. Men who knew him for a good fellow shook hands or slapped him on the back, and, after looking at him in his Sunday suit asked if he was going to be married. To every such inquirer he replied that he was. He wasn't mentioning names, but he expected to bring a wife back with him.

At two o'clock in the afternoon Zeb Hastings was landed at the depot in Schofield. He made a few inquiries, got a bite to eat and then made his way to Turner's hall. A citizen named Turner had the enterprise to turn the second story of his hardware store into a place where outraged taxpayers and other audiences might meet. Theatricals had been given there and there were bills on the walls and boards announcing that the Uncle Tom company would take its chances at an early date.

A professional had been called for two o'clock and as Zeb made his way into the hall it was just beginning. He paused for a moment to locate two of the actors—Mary White and the summer boarder. Then he advanced and lifted himself to the stage. The boarder stared and turned pale and trembled. The summer boarder didn't recognize the farmer's hired man, and he advanced and demanded why the intrusion.

"I have come to act!" replied Zeb, and he proceeded to do so.

It was great acting. It never will be beaten. It brought down the manager and the house—the manager first. Zeb didn't have many speeches, but the last he made was great. When that manager by the hair and shook him silly. Then he mopped the stage with him. Then he booted him about. The women of the cast crowded together and shrieked and screamed. They were real shrieks and screams—warranted three-ply. The gentlemen in the cast woke up after a bit and pitched into Zeb in a body. There was no make-believe in that pitch, but they were as straws in a 40-mile gale when Uncle Tom, and down went Legree. The Lawyer Marks was tossed aside like a chip and George Harris received two black eyes in one two measure.

It took Zeb Hastings just nine minutes to tip over Uncle Tom's cabin and Uncle Tom and everybody connected with it and bring about a financial wreck. When he had finished he beckoned to Mary White. She came over and took his arm, and they left the hall together in front of o'clock that night when they drove up to the farmhouse. The family rushed forward with extended arms to cry:

"Oh, Mary, how could you—how could—"

"Cut it out!" interrupted Zeb. "Mary and me was married before we left Schofield, and there's been acting 'nuff for one day!"

How Elvins Got to Congress.

When Pollitte Evans made his run for congress he adopted a unique and novel method of getting his name before the people. He sent out thousands of letters, on the back of which was a colored map of his district and a picture of himself. The body of the letter went like this: "Success in politics is largely a matter of industry. I am working hard to win. I want you to spend a penny for me. Then you'll be a stockholder in my boom for congress. A penny isn't much to you, but it may mean a vote for me, and one vote may elect me." Inclosed in the letter was a squvenir postcard, on which he wanted the recipient to put a one cent stamp and send to a friend couched in terms like "Jim, I wish you would vote for this young fellow," or "Bill, I want you to give this chap a lift for my sake." His method of canvass bore fruit, and Pollitte was elected by 297 votes to represent the Thirteenth district of Missouri in the Sixty-first congress.—Washington Herald.

Inference Easily Drawn.

"I guess that that near-sighted fellow that calls on sister is getting worse," said a small boy, aged twelve, possibly called Jimmie.

"That is enough from you," said the indignant sister.

"What makes you think he is getting worse?" inquired the father of the son, possibly called Jimmie.

"Because I heard sister ask him last night if he thought she was the blarney stone," replied the boy, possibly called Jimmie.

URGE DR. WILSON TO KEEP CHAIR

The trustees of Princeton University, at an adjourned meeting to take action on the departure of its president, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, from Princeton University, conferred on him the degree of doctor of laws, adopted resolutions praising his administration of the university's affairs, and urged him to continue his McCormic professorship in jurisprudence and politics if he could. This latter action was taken after Dr. Wilson had presented his resignation as McCormick professor.

By formal resolution it was decided that his salary as president of the university be continued until the end of the first term of the present academic year; that he be invited to continue to occupy the premises at Prospect, and that he be requested, in so far as he may find it possible to do so, as may involve upon him, to continue the present professorship of jurisprudence and politics, which he has made of such service to the student body."

The only action bearing on the selection of a successor was the appointment of a committee, headed by John W. Davis, to consider the matter and report to the board. The other members of the committee are Rev. Dr. Melancthon W. Jacobus, M. Taylor Pyne, Cyrus H. McCormick, Rev. Dr. John Dixon, Henry W. Green and Cleveland H. Dodge.

A sani ary committee was appointed by the board. This is believed to be with reference to recent cases of infantile paralysis among the undergraduates. There have been any new cases for so long, however, that little alarm is felt.

The resolutions adopted with respect to Dr. Wilson's withdrawal from the presidency paid a high tribute to his personal qualities, his scholarship and his executive ability. Special reference was made to his reorganization of the curriculum, the establishment of the preceptorial system and the development of graduate work. The resolutions, in conclusion, said:

Knowing that he has accepted nomination for the chief office of this State in obedience to his convictions tha, a high conception of citizenship left him no other course, the board desires to express to him its assurance of a sincere interest in the career which he has chosen and a confidence that, whatever the future may bring to him, it will disclose him to others, as his colleagues here have known him—the man profound of thought, clear of vision, gifted of speech that makes truth plain to all who hear him, and controlled by ideals that must inspire all to whom he makes them known.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB RIDERS CHASE HOUNDS

The Watchung Hunt Club held one of its best hunts of the season Saturday afternoon, despite the recent storm which left the going very heavy. There was a large field out and the chase was exciting from start to finish. The popularity of the weekly hunts is increasing rapidly, many New Yorkers enjoying the sport.

The members met at Truell Hall, Saturday, and the hounds were thrown in near the old railroad crossing. The chase then led over trappy country through Scotch Plains, to the old Brass Kettle Inn, where Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., entertained the party at breakfast. Returning the chase led over the Westfield hills, circling back of Nethermood, a distance of about five miles. Several barbed wires were negotiated, but not a mishap occurred. The field was up all the way. The following members took part in the chase:

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., Charles F. Wildey, Jr., Hart S. Farlee, Mr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hooley, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Miss Mabel B. Hooley, Brown Rolston, Harry A. Bourne, Henry L. Finch, Paul Dietrich, James Sweiger, Lewis E. Waring, Hugh Gormley, C. E. S. Bellows and Henry Watkins, the huntsman.

GOOD MUSIC AT GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

Among the selections played by Organist S. Frederick Smith, at Grace Episcopal church Sunday afternoon to a large audience was Handel's Largo, a difficult composition which Mr. Smith handled with extreme good taste and effectiveness.

Mr. Tallamy sang with much expression and beauty of tone the recitative and aria "Comfort Ye, Every Valley," from the Messiah. The entire program of the thirty-third recital was from Handel's compositions and met with approval.

Temple Baptist Fair.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Temple Baptist church, a bazaar and sale will be held on Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12, both afternoon and evening. The fair will be held in one of the stores opposite Woodhull and Martin's on East Front street. The proceeds are to be devoted to the general church work.

SUBSCRIPTION DANCE GIVEN AT TRUELL HALL

Under the auspices of several guests at Truell Hall, a subscription dance was given there on Saturday evening. The affair was attended by 150 people of the city and borough. George P. Atwood, Jack Vandeventer, Edward Kelly and Philip Larned, who arranged the dance, were so pleased that a series will be held during the winter.

The decorations were unusually attractive, the large ball room being transformed into a forest scene, through the use of cedar trees, autumnal foliage and chrysanthemums. The dining-room decorations were also attractive and roses were used in decorating the twenty odd tables at which refreshments were served.

Miss Anna Garrigues, Miss Nancy Vandeventer, Miss Marian Hall, Miss Florence Stewart, Miss Beresford Letcher Miss Margaret Letcher, and Miss Julia MacKenzie planned and executed the decorative scheme so effectively carried out.

The patronesses were Mrs. Horace B. Kelly, Mrs. Robert Truell Johnson, Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., Mrs. R. J. Letcher, Mrs. Jacob Vandeventer, Mrs. Elmer E. Bigoney and Mrs. Edmund L. Mackenzie. Music for dancing was furnished by Fred Vanepps' orchestra.

PLAINFIELD F. C. WINS AT SOCCER.

In a fast clean game full of exciting plays, the Plainfield Soccer team vanquished the Nairn A. A. eleven, of Kearney, Saturday afternoon on the local field by the close score of 3-2. It was one of the hardest fought soccer games that has ever been played in this city and not until the referee's whistle called the end of the second half, was the result of the game a certainty.

The lineup:

Plainfield.		Nairn.

CELEBRATE TWENTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bennett, of 1224 West Sixth street, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their wedding Saturday night, entertaining guests from Newark, East Orange, West Orange, Yonkers, N. Y., and this city. The home was elaborately decorated for the occasion.

During the evening there was an informal program of music, including solos by Miss Nancy Bennett, accompanied on the piano by Miss Jane Bennett. Dancing was also enjoyed. Mrs. J. Borden and Mrs. W. B. Grannatt gave several recitations.

The couple received a large collection of handsome presents, including furniture, cut-glass, silver and china. Later in the evening refreshments were served.

The couple received a large col- Paul's M. E. church, Newark, on November 5, 1890, by Rev. Hanabel Goodwin, who was then pastor of the church. They have been residents of this city for several years.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF WILLIAM REINMAN HELD

The funeral services of William Reinmann were held at the home of his sister, Mrs. Mary Shoemaker, in Bethel, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and they were attended by delegations from Queen City Lodge, No. 226, Independent Order Odd Fellows' Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters and the order of Stationery Engineers, of which Mr. Reinmann was a member.

Rev. Dr. Peter Gibb, pastor of the Baptist church, at Mt. Bethel, officiated and delivered an impressive eulogy. During the service two hymns were sung, "Lead Kindly Light," and "Abide With Me." There was a large number of beautiful floral tributes from the various societies and friends. The burial was at Mt. Bethel. The pall-bearers were James Patterson, Thomas Fitzgerald and Henry Hansen, of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., and T. C. Smith, R. W. Wilson and John A. Nichols, of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. Pamelia's Decision

By Bernice C. Bicknell

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Pamela Hitchcock rearranged the pillow on her mother's chair and seating herself by the window looked out upon the fast fading day, which was changing into twilight. Presently she saw the tall, ungainly figure of Abner Brown coming down the lane. This was no unusual sight, for Abner came every Saturday evening and had been coming for a number of years; but this was Thursday. The unexpectedness of this visit and the fact that in every movement of Abner's awkward figure there was an undefinable something, an animation to his gait that she had not noticed before, convinced her that something awful had happened.

She arose and ran to throw open the door.

"Abner," she gasped, "what's the matter? Is somebody hurt?"

"No," he replied, and Pamela noted that an angry flush rushed to his face and his breath came in short, hard pants.

"I just heard about that fellow that has been coming to see you. I told the boys it wasn't so. Is it?"

Pamela stood in doubt a moment. Then with slow dignity she drew herself to her full height and answered stiffly:

"Abner Brown, I am surprised. It is none of your business who comes to see me. We are not engaged."

"None of my business," he blurted. "I'll make it my business. I think a man that has been coming steady to see you for years has some right to your confidence."

"I have no confidence to give," she persisted.

"Pamela!" he gasped in wide-eyed surprise.

"Bring Abner in," called a voice from the sitting-room.

"Since Mrs. Hitchcock wants me to stay, I believe I will."

"I want you to stay, too, Abner."

"You do, eh?" he asked sarcastically and stalked into the house.

Pamela noticed her mother's face brighten when Abner entered.

"Good evening, Abner, my boy. Let me see, this is Thursday. Rather early in the week for you?" Mrs. Hitchcock adjusted her spectacles to look at him quizzically.

"That's My Business," She Retorted.

"I had to go over to Ed Lamb's, and it being so close I thought it would be a shame to pass by. Crops are looking fine."

Pamela smiled to herself at his feeble attempt to shift the subject.

"It is a pretty sight to watch the rows and rows of ripening corn when a mite of wind is stirring, but I don't suppose I'll see it much longer, for—"

"Why? You aren't going away, Mrs. Hitchcock?" Brown asked in alarm.

"Pamela's been—" the old voice quavered and stopped short at a warning glance from her daughter.

"Of course, mother, after corn husking there will be nothing but bare fields, but you are used to that," Pamela remarked.

"But there won't be even bare fields for—" she continued.

"Certainly not," interrupted Pamela. "How is Ed Lamb's folks? I have been so busy that I haven't had time to go there lately."

"Fair to middling. Ed is talking of selling his farm," Abner answered, absently gazing out of the window to where the old mill creek wound in and out of the little valley below.

"So are we," Mrs. Hitchcock said without looking at her daughter. "Pamela didn't want me to say nary a word about it until we had decided. Though I believe she has about made up her mind. But, law me, I don't believe in being so close mouthed to anybody like you, Abner, that I held in my arms when you were a baby. What do you think about it?"

"I think it would be downright foolish to sell the farm that you have lived on so long. Then there are so many associations about it that must always be a deal of comfort. The city is no place for a woman like you, Mrs. Hitchcock, that has been used to the broad out of doors."

"I know it. Do you hear that, Pamela?" Mrs. Hitchcock queried, a flush coming into her withered cheeks.

"Yes," Pamela murmured.

"Doesn't it change you a mite?" Her old voice trembled.

"No," Pamela answered. "I'm tired of this humdrum life of ours, mother; each day as colorless as the others. I want to see something besides Miller's elevator, a few sprawling houses in the village, the town pump and Tom Craig's general store. Isn't that so, mother? We own 160 acres of some of the choicest prairie land in Illinois and you and I have never even been to Springfield!"

"I didn't know you cared about going to such places. Do you mind what the preacher said last month, about folks being contented with their lot? I reckon that some people from the stuffy city would be glad to change places with you," Mrs. Hitchcock said.

"If the preacher believes in being contented why wasn't he satisfied with the suit the Ladies' Aid society bought him instead of finding fault with the cut of it?" Pamela returned.

"I never felt called upon to criticize the minister and I don't think you ought to," Mrs. Hitchcock looked at her daughter reprovingly.

"I'll sell my 80, mother, so don't worry," Pamela declared, with an air of assurance that nearly provoked Abner into a spasm.

"Pamela Hitchcock, you don't know what you are doing! What would you invest your money in—mining stock?" he protested.

"That's my business!" she retorted.

A sharp rap on the parlor door brought Pamela to her feet with a start.

"It's Mr. Morris coming for my decision."

"What decision, Pamela—about your marriage?" Abner burst out frantically, his heavy masculine mind failing to see any significance between the mysterious caller and Pamela's declaring herself her land. "No, say it is not, Pamela?"

She started to the door. Abner sprang to his feet and caught hold of her arm.

"One minute, before you go to the door," he cried, his voice choking with emotion. "I want to know if you have gone back on me?"

"No, Abner, you never gave me the chance."

"I've wanted to, goodness knows, all these years, but every time I tried to speak—my tongue would get twisted and the nice phrases I had thought out beforehand would disappear like magic and I would feel as awkward as a whale on Pike's peak., I've waited hoping that something would loosen my tongue. It has come—"

"In the guise of a real estate agent who wants me to trade my 80 acres for city property," Pamela put in slyly, and glanced at her mother whose anxious face reflected her feelings.

"What a dunce I have been!" Abner stared his astonishment. "Pamela, I love you. Don't sell the land. Marry me and I'll take you to Springfield or any place you want to go," he pleaded.

Another knock at the door threw Abner into a state of greater excitement.

"Answer me. Do you love me?"

"Yes," she murmured.

His lips were close to hers and with Mrs. Hitchcock nodding approval, he kissed her.

Pamela finally went to the door and opened it, but Mr. Morris had grown impatient and departed.

In the fast gathering darkness she saw a figure at the far end of the lane. But she did not call him back.

WORK THAT MUST BE DONE

Impossible to Regulate the Hours of Labor That the Farmer Must Put In.

The city man who goes to farming will find that there are times, intermittent, it is true, but often sufficiently prolonged, when he will have to work as he never did before. It is of no use for him to say that eight hours a day is long enough for a man to work. It may be long enough for his physical wellbeing, but he must plow and sow and weed at the right time, and he must make hay while the sun shines. He is working in collaboration with nature, and the pace that she sets is made without regard to the rights of the laboring man or the eight-hour law. On our own farm, for instance, my sons and I have often been tired for weeks together; not the pleasant fatigue that wears off in a night of refreshing sleep, but the deep-seated weariness of overwrought muscles and too long hours that is present even when one rises in the morning, and is thrown off only after a few hours of labor when one has "warmed up" to his work.

This is a part of the price that must be paid for freedom and the privilege of working for one's self and not for another.—David Buffum in the Atlantic.

Work of Ingenious Ants.

The spinning art is found in India, in Ceylon, in the islands of Malacca and Sumatra. This ant weaves its nest between two leaves of a tree, preferably the mango. It begins to build, or to weave, by drawing two leaves together. To do this it runs a line of its working material—material which is simply the spider's thread—the length of the leaf and around it. While at work it clings to the leaf with its nails and, at the same time, draws on the leaf nearest to it with its mandibles. Sometimes the two leaves suitable for nest building are too far apart. Then the builder calls in its fellow-ants and they help it to form a chain. Each ant clings to the waist of its neighbor by its mandibles. Thus enchained, they work to build the nest of their comrade.—Harper's Weekly.

Hospitality In a Nutshell

By Belle Manistee

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Huddled down among some tall, angular poplars in a valley between the high hills was a little white house with a lean-to at the rear and a big porch in front. Here had lived, for 42 years, a childless old couple. They thought that their little home which they had named "The Nutshell," the most beautiful place in the world, and their only lament was that so few persons "dropped in," or even passed by. Neighbors were remote, and their road was deserving of the appellation. It was not even a cross-road—hardly a lane—and the grass grew high between two faintly defined wagon ruts. Where it ended and turned into a crossrod, there was such a labyrinth of underbrush, brush and foliage from low-hanging, interlaced tree tops that the opening was completely hidden from view.

One afternoon as they sat on the porch—stoop, Phineas called it—his wife, Hannah, stopped rocking suddenly and listened.

"Some one's coming," she exclaimed, excitedly.

As she spoke a beautiful young woman on a shining black horse came into view.

"It's a picture," said Phineas, taking the pipe from his mouth.

The young lady looked admiringly at the little place and bestowed a friendly glance upon the old couple.

"I can't let her go by," gasped Hannah, as she started down the path.

The rider reined in her horse.

"Wouldn't you like to stop a bit and have a drink of cold milk?",

Hannah spoke enticingly and appealingly. The answering smile was radiant.

"Indeed, I would," she replied, dismounting, "and may I have one of those rosy-cheeked apples I saw in the orchard?"

"You may have a bushel," emphatically asserted Phineas, as he stood up and held out his hand. "Set right down, while I tie your hoss."

She proved to be what Hannah called "folksy." She cheerfully told them name, where she lived and everything that Hannah yearned to know.

"Was you goin' far?" she finally asked.

"I wasn't going anywhere in particular. I don't know how I came to spy this road; it was all about in. I don't see how people find it."

"They don't," said Hannah, wistfully. "No one comes by but the grocery man once a week, the essence man every four weeks and once in a while the tin man. We like company, Phinny and I, and we like to have a game, too. We taught the tin man and the essence man to play casino and pedro, so they always stop; but the grocery man don't get the time. Once I stopped a stranger and called him in. We played with a dummy."

"I call that a bold up," laughed the girl.

"So it was," allowed Phineas, coming up the steps. "Miss—"

"Irene," she answered.

"That was my mother's name," he said, musingly.

"Can't you stay to supper?" pleaded Hannah. "We have it real early because we have dinner early."

"Thank you," replied the girl. "I should love to stay."

"You can telephone your folks," suggested Phineas. "We have a telephone."

"It won't be necessary. I often go for long rides."

So Phineas led the horse to the barn to feed, while Irene helped to set the table with blue-sprigged china and fresh, small bowled spoons. Hannah made air-light biscuits. There was a square of golden honey with cream to match its hue. A silver cake basket was heaped with thick slices of gold and silver cake and strawberry preserves, pickles and fragrant tea completed the menu.

"I never ate such a delicious meal!" cried Irene, ecstatically.

"Pshaw, just a bite!" scoffed Phineas.

But while they were making merry throughout the supper hour, clouds had been gathering, and a quick patter of raindrops took them all to the window. A storm was coming on in earnest, and in a few moments there was a terrific roar of thunder and the rain came down in torrents.

"It's in for an all night's storm," predicted Phineas.

"You will have to stay all night," said Hannah, gleefully.

"Yes; ten miles in this rain and the unknown roads would be too venture-some even for me," replied Irene, going to the telephone and informing her mother of her safekeeping.

Presently the telephone rang again. The message was for Irene.

"That wasn't your folks," chuckled Phineas, as she hung up the receiver.

"How did you guess?"

"Your tone was so different."

"Wasn't it your beau?" asked Hannah, fondly.

"Yes-no—almost my beau," laughed Irene. "He asked me to wait here tomorrow, until he rode over and we could ride home together."

"Then we can have a game!" said Hannah, hopefully.

"Yes, I do shall stay for several games."

In the morning the sun was shining brightly, and after breakfast, while Phineas fed the cattle, Hannah churned so that "Irene's beau" might have fresh butter-milk for dinner. Interlaced tree tops that the opening was completely hidden from view.

MAN'S WILL POWER.

Bismarck's Comment on Schopenhauer and His Theory.

In an entertaining account of a dinner party at Prince Bismarck's Berlin residence which is given in the recollections of the Livonian journalist Eckhardt the following, which was a part of the table talk, shows the host in a new light: The conversation had turned on Bismarck's early days at Frankfort, and Eckhardt asked whether at the table d'hote of the Hotel d'Angleterre his host had ever met Schopenhauer. "No," said Bismarck; "he had no use for me nor I for him. Moreover, I have never had time or desire to occupy myself with philosophy. While I was a student Schopenhauer was still unknown. I know absolutely nothing about his system."

Another guest, an admirer of Schopenhauer, then joined enthusiastically in the conversation and explained that the philosopher's great merit consisted in the discovery that all that will power was the indestructible essence of the mind of man and that intelligence was only of secondary importance. "That may very well be true," said Prince Bismarck, "at least as far as I am concerned, for I have often noticed that my will had already come to a decision while my mind had not yet finished thinking about the same subject."

VENETIAN WOMEN.

The Whims of Fashion Hold No Terrors For Them.

The women of Venice are absolutely free from the rule which Dame Fashion exercises over their sisters elsewhere. They care nothing for modes. With them the length of the skirt remains always the same, neither short nor long, and the ladies wear plainly made dark dresses, black stockings and the heelless slippers of the east. Hats are unknown.

The universal outdoor wrap for all ages and all sizes is the black shawl, with a deep silken fringe. It is folded with a short crease in the eave and a long one below, and sometimes it envelopes the figure from head to foot. It is never fastened at the throat, and when it slips off it is gathered up with one outstretched arm, which makes the spectator think of a big bird stretching its wing.

In their attire the women of Venice are independent, only wearing local clothing, but with feminine inconsistency they are thoroughly up to date in the matter of hairdressing, the style of their coiffure changing from time to time, according to the vogue of the moment in London and Paris.

Identified.

William M. Chase, the artist, was a picturesque figure, dressing in clothes that had a certain originality, though they conformed more or less to the prevailing fashions. On one occasion Chase on his way home stepped into a little wine shop and ordered a jug of claret of a special brand sent to his house. The lad who brought it came to the front door an hour afterward, when the artist had already arrived. "Some wine," he said curtly. The maid, knowing there was yet plenty in the cellar and believing the lad had made a mistake, said she was sure it was for the next house and did the boy remember the name of the man who ordered it. The boy didn't. "Then," said the servant, "you've come to the wrong place; we never ordered wine!" At this moment the boy spied Chase's famous hat on the hall table. "Say," he asked, "does that hat live here?" "Yes," said the amused maid. "Then," said the boy triumphantly, "here's where the wine belongs!"—Argonaut.

Not For Fashion's Sake.

The criminal law of England was formerly marked by indiscriminating severity. Theft of an article valued above 10 shillings was punished with death. In writing about "Sweet Hampstead and Its Associations" Mrs. White records a pleasant thing of Lord Mansfield, who, as a rule, leaned to the side of mercy. It was Lord Mansfield who directed a jury to find a stolen trinket less in value than 10 shillings in order that the thief might escape capital punishment. To this the jeweler who prosecuted demurred, asserting that the fashion of the thing had cost him twice that money.

"Gentlemen," replied the judge, with grave solemnity, "we ourselves stand in need of mercy. Let us not hang a man for the fashion's sake!"

MacMahon's Epigram.

When Marshal MacMahon in the Crimean campaign took the Malakoff by storm and wrote his celebrated dispatch, "J'y reste" ("Here I am; here I stay"), these words made him famous all over the world. Yet his friends said that the worthy soldier had written them in the most matter of fact manner, with no thought of immortal success. The most surprised person over the success of this epigram was MacMahon himself.

PLAINFIELD HIGH BOYS DEFEAT BOUND BROOK

Plainfield High School defeated the Bound Brook High School eleven on Saturday at Bound Brook in a hotly contested game by a score of 11 to 0. Bristol, Weber and Clark were responsible for the winning plays, although Bound Brook did not score they put up a stubborn defense. Plainfield High scored a touchdown in the second quarter, Bristol caught a forward pass from Bound Brook and ran back 35 yards for a touchdown, but Clark failed to kick the goal.

The fourth period saw the Plainfielders score increased by six points. Weber, at left end, chased one of Clark's punts and grabbing the ball dove across the goal for a touchdown from which Clark kicked a goal.

Good line work by Carty, Terry, Karr and Van Zandt and long runs by Weber, and Bristol and Clark's punting were the features. Following was the lineup:

Plainfield.		Bound Brook.
Moy	left guard	Mason
Carty	centre	Otte
Vighte	right guard	Teston
Karr	right tackle	Johnson

SUFFRAGISTS TO KNOW WORKING GIRLS' NEEDS

State Association at Convention Appoints Committee for Investigation.

PEACE BY ARBITRATION.

And Equal Punishment for Men and Women—Mrs. Dennett's Instructive Talk.

With the resounding stroke of the gavel of the president, Mrs. Clara Laddey at twenty minutes after 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the twentieth annual convention of the New Jersey State Woman Suffrage Association came to a close. Much business of practical nature was transacted during the session including the naming of the State corresponding secretary for the ensuing year. To Mrs. L. B. Brindler, Bradley Beach, Asbury Park, fell this honor amid the plaudits of the one hundred delegates. President Laddey dismissed the gathering with thanks for everything which had been accomplished.

Owing to lengthy discussions at the morning session relating to changes in the by-laws the schedule of the convention was somewhat upset and speeches and reports which were carded for the morning went over to the afternoon session. The report of the national convention was read by Mrs. E. A. Kilborn and was approved by the delegates. The reports of the tellers showed that the officers named by the nominating committee were all duly elected.

Mrs. Mary W. Dennett spoke in the afternoon on "Future Suffrage Organization," and said that present methods if carried out to the letter would lead to certain victory for organized suffrage within a short time. The department of enrollment is urged to follow up the work they were doing so faithfully. Reference was made to the effective work done by the Woman Suffrage party in New York city. Philadelphia, Rochester, N. Y., Boston, and in the Western States. Mrs. Dennett said that the work was being pursued with vigor and many recruits for the cause were being gained from among the working women. Men also are enlisting themselves on the committees and are doing a great work in the distribution of literature bearing on the subject of suffrage.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, founder of the local league and daughter of the late Julia Ward Howe, spoke briefly on the work being accomplished in this State and said she would continue to carry out the policies adopted by her mother. Mrs. Harry Compton spoke along similar lines.

Mrs. Mary E. Dreier, president of the Women's Trade Union League, of New York, told of the struggles of the working girls and women in the factories of the country and how organization in unions had helped them to attain a certain amount of respect from their employers and better hours, higher wages and safety from insult. She urged the Suffrage association to help the young women to help themselves and suggested that a committee of the association be appointed to investigate the needs of the working girls of New Jersey. A resolution to that effect was immediately passed unanimously by the convention.

Mrs. Dreier's speech was one of the most important of the session taking as it did the subject of the future membership in the suffrage ranks of those who today seem to be most in need of just the thing the suffragists are working for. She said that in places where the girls and women are organized fewer insults are offered because their would be tormentors are aware of the results of taking complaints of that nature to the Merchants' Associations of the different cities.

The following resolutions were read just before the closing minutes of the meeting:

Resolved, That this association give its hearty support and co-operation to all movements now existing which in any way favor peace by arbitration.

Resolved, That this association does hereby express its thanks to the press of the State for the way in which it has reported the sessions of the convention; especially would it express its appreciation of the full and efficient reports of The Plainfield Daily Press and The Plainfield Courier News.

Resolved, That the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association does hereby extend its thanks to its president, Mrs. Clara Laddey, for her conscientious and faithful work in the cause on which she has set her heart and hand, and to each officer of the association, whose efficient work makes possible the whole. The association desires to express its gratitude to the retiring officers, especially to the retiring corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. L. Kilborn, for the thoroughly satisfactory manner in which she has performed the duties of her office.

Resolved, That the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association desires to express its thanks to the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield for its cordial invitation to meet with them and for the hospitable and complete way in which it has entertained the convention. (The association feels this is all too inadequate a way in which to show its appreciation).

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Thomas S. Henry, the suffrage cause in this State has lost an efficient leader. As president of our state association and as an active worker along all lines tending towards the legal and moral betterment of women, Mrs. Henry has endeared herself not only to her co-workers but to all who have come under her influence and social graces. The N. J. W. S. A. desires to show in this way its appreciation of Mrs. Henry's life and work.

Resolved, That this association advocates the same moral standard for men as for women; that it demand the same legal and social penalties for men and women who transgress the law of social purity, that when houses of ill-fame are raided that the men found there suffer equal penalties with the women.

Whereas, There are institutions where there are women and children it is the mind of this association that women be put on the board of managers, and in all such institutions that the women and children be in charge of women physicians.

Whereas, There has recently been called from our midst a great soul, Julia Ward Howe, whom all do honor and revere, and

Whereas, During her multitudinous activities tending toward the improvement and happiness of mankind, that of her work of or Woman Suffrage stands well to the front, be it

Resolved, That the N. J. W. S. A., while realizing in very truth that our "soul goes marching on," yet feels the loss of her bodily presence keenly and would extend to her family its sincere sympathy in what to them is such a personal loss.

Resolved, That the last meeting of this association two illustrious sisters have passed from our midst, namely, Dr. Elizabeth and Dr. Emily Blackwell,

Whereas, Their work for women along all lines, especially in the way of hospitals and dispensaries for their care, their untiring devotion to all humanitarian needs and their long service in the cause of suffrage for women, endears them to all lovers of truth and justice, be it

Resolved, That the N. J. W. S. A. record its admiration for those two noble women and in this feeble way endeavor to honor their memory.

Changes in the constitution and by-laws of the association were made as follows: Article III., relating to membership; section 4, relating to life members; section 5, relating to associate members; section 6, relating to rights and privileges of associate members; section 7, apportionment of delegates to conventions; article IV., paragraph 2, which formerly permitted honorary members in the list of officers; paragraph 2, removing from the executive board six directors of the association; article VI. providing that no by-laws or better legislation in relation to amendments to the constitution.

Several important changes were made in the by-laws notably in section 33 of Article I, which now provides that resolutions may be offered on the floor at any convention and the nominee receiving the largest number of votes shall be declared elected. Hitherto the nominations of candidates has been through a nominating committee and the selections were invariably placed in office notwithstanding that some of those so named may not have been entirely to the liking of other members. Section 4 of Article III. declares that the treasurer shall pay out money of the association only by direction of the executive board. Section IX of article III. is only slightly changed in wording. Section 1 of article VI makes the total of standing committees twelve instead of nine, eliminating the organization, membership, legislative, financial and lecture committees and making the following substitutions: Press, presidential suffrage, industrial problems affecting women and children, legislation, civil rights, church work, peace and arbitration, and endorsement by organizations.

An argument lasting more than an hour and a half was indulged in and resulted in retaining as it was originally inserted section 2 of article VI. A new section was added to article VI, providing for the payment of the expenses of the president while attending conventions.

No date or place was selected for the next annual convention.

But This Was Long Ago.

Caesar had sent the message, "Veni vidi, vici."

"I could have sent seven more words without an additional expense," he said, "but I can't think of seven words beginning with 'v' and ending with 't' that will quite fill the bill.

Later he reflected that he could have used a picture postcard and saved at least 44 cents.—Chicago Tribune.

PLUMBERS' DELINQUENT LIST

Some Fail to Comply With Ordinance, Says Board of Health.

BONDSMEN HELD RESPONSIBLE.

Births Outnumber Deaths Nearly 2 to 1—Milk Supply Improved —Vegetables and Fruits Protected.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health Wednesday attention of the board was called to the fact that in some cases plumbers have failed to comply with the requirements in the filing of plans, paying fees and obtaining permits before starting any plumbing work. It was resolved by the board that in such cases the bondsmen of such plumbers were to be notified that they would be held responsible for failure of plumbers to meet the requirments of the plumbing ordinance.

During the month notice was served on all dealers in fruits and vegetables, etc., that the requirements of the State law would be strictly enforced after November 1. The board was gratified by the co-operation of dealers and more so that opposition was found in so few cases.

Communicable diseases were reported during the month as follows: Diphtheria, 2; scarlet fever, 11; tuberculosis, 8; deaths, 3; measles, 71; typhoid fever, 4; scarlet fever, 2; anterior poliomyelitis (infant paralysis), 2. There were no deaths recorded in the last four diseases. At present there are the lowest number quarantine and five cases of typhoid fever under treatment by physicians.

Milk inspections to the number of 141; inspection of sewer and plumbing 78, and general inspections 1159 were made during October. The last named item includes inspections of back yards, complaints of nuisances, bakeries, dumps, restaurants, etc.

Thirty samples of milk were analyzed with satisfactory results—fats were greater and bacteria lower than for the preceding month.

The vital statistics show marriages 17; births 46; deaths 27; still births 2. A permit was granted to Joseph Santa, of 232 West Second street, to conduct a barber shop at that address.

STEVENSON PRESIDENT OF LOCAL YALE CLUB

Officers were elected and a smoker enjoyed at the annual meeting of the Yale Club of Plainfield, held at the Watchung Hunt Club Wednesday night. There was a discussion regarding the annual dinner, but no date was fixed for the affair. It will be taken up a little later by the executive committee.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, E. A. Stevenson; vice-president, Harry E. Butler; secretary-treasurer, Lewis A. Williams, Jr.; executive committee, Henry L. DeForest, William B. Tyler and Arthur Lovell.

These committees were elected: A. M. Collens, J. A. Foulks, E. G. Booth and H. C. Beidleman.

Following the business session the Yale men had a smoker, during which there was a swapping of some good stories, and light refreshments were served.

HOME-MADE CHEESE.

To four quarts of sweet milk at blood heat add one-fourth of a junket tablet dissolved. Keep at blood heat over hot water until the curd forms; turn into a cheese-cloth bag and let drip until nearly dry. Add a level teaspoonful salt; mix thoroughly and put into the bag, which has been rinsed in warm water, and place in the press (mine is a two-quart tin pail with the bottom removed), cover with a piece of board fitted to the pail and place weights (old flat irons) on the top; press for two days; remove from press, rub with butter and lay in a cool, dry place; may be eaten fresh if liked.

The whey, sweetened, flavored with nutmeg and chilled, makes a refreshing drink.

Celery Salad with the Knobs.

When preparing celery for the table do not dispense with the hard root part called the knob. This part of the plant furnishes an admirable salad by themselves. It is well to combine the stalks with the hard part. Peel the root again (it will come from the grocer's peeled, very likely) and cut into tiny strips. Cut the celery the same way and crisp and chill both in cold water. Mix with a plain French dressing or mayonnaise.

The Safest Answer.

A mother of four daughters, one of whom had recently married, enquired an eligible young man in the drawing room. "And which of my girls do you most admire, might I ask?" "The married one," was the prompt reply.—London Daily News.

MR. PARKER'S REPORT

Y. M. C. A. Secretary Tells of International Convention in Toronto, Canada.

NEARLY 1,500 DELEGATES.

Was the Largest Convention in History of the Association—5,000 Men Attend Services on Sunday.

Herbert L. Parker secretary of the local Young Men's Christian Association, who returned from the recent international convention on Tuesday, has handed in the following report of the proceedings:

The largest convention in the history of the Young Men's Christian Association, and one which will be remembered by all who took part in it, as having revealed more clearly than ever before the power and possibilities of the movement, came to a close Monday night at Toronto. Five hundred and eighteen associations were represented at the convention by 1,495 delegates. This number exceeded by over one hundred the number in the delegates attending the last convention at Washington, D. C., and is indicative of the remarkable progress made by the association of North America during the past year.

One of the most interesting reports presented in this connection was that of Vice-Chairman Darling, of the International Committee, showing that the Association of North America had more than doubled the amount of their material resources during the past ten years, had increased the number of their physical department, educational and social work by 282 per cent. and had more than quadrupled the volume of their religious work activities.

One of the great addresses of the opening session on Friday, October 28, was given by Dr. John A. MacDonald, editor of the Toronto Globe. Dr. MacDonald spoke on "The Timeliness of the Association to Meet the Needs of Canada." He said: "A great field of opportunity is opened on the north end of the continent for service which will enable the nation in the making to do its duty in the world. The Y. M. C. A. can serve the needs of Canada, first by dealing with the incoming raw material of citizenship." Here he paid a glowing tribute to the association for its statesmanlike policy in placing association secretaries at European ports of embarkation to meet the emigrant as he is leaving and direct him to such a place as is best suited to his needs and abilities, and also furnishes him with cards of introduction to the association secretaries in Canada and the United States.

The climax of the convention was undoubtedly reached with the men's meeting in Massey Hall on Sunday afternoon. Three thousand men were addressed by Fred S. Smith, while two thousand more who were unabled to gain admission were addressed by Judge Spencer of St. Louis. This was one of the most remarkable gatherings of men ever held on American continent. The impassioned appeal of the association evangelist Fred S. Smith to non-Christians to seek the one thing needful to complete their lives was responded to by over three hundred of these men.

At a later session on Sunday the needs of foreign lands in the matter of men and buildings to extend the influence of the association were presented by men who pioneered the movement in the non-Christian countries. Dr. John R. Mott outlined the program before the foreign department and said that the Y. M. C. A. had already been established in sixteen different non-Christian countries. So firmly he believed was the movement established that it would prosper and spread in those countries even if by any chance it should die out in America and Anglo Saxon Europe. Some time ago experts and missionaries had been sent to these foreign fields to inquire into the opportunities for spreading the movement, and they had recommended that fifty-new foreign secretaries and forty-nine buildings be added to the foreign secretaries and three years. The sum of $1,515,000 was required. Already fifteen secretaries and their salaries and nearly two-thirds of the amount required has been secured.

E. C. Carter, former national secretary of India, said the present was a very opportune time to increase the influence of the association in India. E. T. Colton, who has just returned from a visit to the association in South America, said that ten states of South America are still without an association. Growing intemperance and loose methods in personal and commercial life in those states need the elevating influence of the association. F. S. Brockman, national secretary from China, related interesting incidents of the conversion to Christianity of great statesmen, educators and urged the need of buildings in the capital cities of the Chinese empire.

Following this presentation a delegate from Montreal expressed his willingness to furnish the association building for one of the capital cities of China, and the salaries of two foreign secretaries were guaranteed by Mr. Joy, of Keokuk, Iowa, and Mr. Letts, of Los Angeles, Cal.

The closing session of the convention was featured by four great addresses on the topic: "Safeguarding the 17,000,000 boys of the Continent." Dr. Graham Taylor, of Chicago, spoke on "Juvenile Delinquency." His address was based upon data accummulated in the scientific investigations just completed in Chicago and Pittsburg. Touching on the work of the Chicago Vice Commission, of which he is a member, he said that the social vice is a boys' problem and a man's problem more than a woman's problem. There are one hundred fold more fallen boys in our cities than fallen women. By a close study of the problem of juvenile delinquency he was impressed by the necessity of knowing the conditions that promote delinquency because conditions are a part of the personality and will of the boy.

President E. R. Wood of the International Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening summed up the convention for The Press with the following comment:

"First—Wonderful unity. Men of many Christian churches, of many nations, of different races, white, black, yellow, red, of different classes, socially, educationally, etc., all men of strong convictions and feelings and yet not a jar of discord!

"Second—Practical character of all the work of the Association movement, adapted to meet all needs and opportunities.

"Third—The Association has become a great world-power. It is evident that in the non-Christian nations it has already laid stronger hold on the most influential classes than it has done even in Christian lands.

"The opportunities before the movement abroad are indeed remarkable. The plan of expansion, which takes the whole world into view, decides how many men and how many buildings are needed in all the world within a given period and then makes one united appeal, is businesslike and statesmanlike."

USED A COLUMN OF "PI."

John Walter, of the London Times, once found a unique way out of a difficulty brought about by a strike of compositors and pressmen, says an exchange. At the critical moment, it appears, the "copy" fell short by half a column. There was none at hand ready to utilize, and time pressed. It was really an inspired hint entirely to Walter.

He laid hold of a column of "pi" and prepared it in the most expeditious way, so that it might pass muster for an article in a foreign tongue. He ran it in with a few lines of introduction, stating that this foreshadowed the views of a paper in some Hindustanee dialect, translation of which would follow in due course. No "translation," it is superfluous to say, ever appeared.

Many years later, long after Walter had forgotten this incident, he was visiting in Cheshire, where he was introduced to a most learned pundit and Oriental scholar. "Ah," said this gentleman, "I have long and ardently wished to solve a problem that has puzzled me for years." And he drew from his pocket a tattered clipping of Walter's "pi," indicating to the embarrassed proprietor of The Times that the alleged Hindustanee article had baffled his most strenuous and assiduous efforts for years, although he had tried every known dialect of the language. There was nothing for Walter to do but flee.

TEA GIVEN FOR CHARITY

THE SALE WAS A FEATURE.

Mrs. Otis E. Hovey and the Other Officers Act as Reception Committee—To Meet Pledges of Charity Circle.

Under the auspices of the Charity Circle of The King's Daughters, a delightful tea and sale was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. B. Coombe, of Madison avenue, the purpose being to raise funds with which to meet the pledge of the circle in support of the work carried on here by the King's Daughters. The affair was a marked success, about $150 being realized.

There was a sale of useful and fancy articles, candy, cakes and fancy baskets, and in addition tea was served. The officers of the circle follow: President, Mrs. Otis E. Hovey; vice-presidents, Mrs. Orson G. Dale, Mrs. G. Harry Squires; secretary, Mrs. Morris Benton; treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Blake. These offices together with Mrs. Coombe received the guests.

The tea room was in charge of Mrs. Harry V. Borden, assisted by Mrs. Harry Johnson, Miss Weber, Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mrs. E. A. Lyon, Miss Anthony, Mrs. Julius E. Erickson. Mrs. Morris A. Zook was chairman of the candy table and her assistants were Miss Bertha Whitney, Mrs. N. A. Randolph, Miss Tompkins, Mrs. William C. Hubbard, Miss Van Boskerck, Miss Harriet Hallaway and Mrs. G. M. R. Morse.

Mrs. Alfred Slauson was chairman of the apron committee and her assistants were Mrs. W. A. Garrigues, Mrs. Asa P. Randolph, Mrs. D. N. VanVliet, Mrs. W. R. Mackey, Mrs. W. G. Wright, Mrs. D. G Atwood and Miss Sadie Hayes and Mrs E. L. Finch. Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna was chairman of the committee having charge of the fancy baskets and her assistants were Mrs. A. Conner, Mrs. Frederick Yates, Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Mrs. W. A. Pinto and Mrs. W. M. Sillman. Mrs. W. C Kinney received the silver offering at the door.

Aside from the sale, the social features proved delightful and were enjoyed by the large number of people present throughout the afternoon.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

The motto of the public libraries movement, world-wide: "The best literature, for the largest number at the least cost' is also the ever mindful aim of our Public Library Board of Directors. Their endeavor to make the collected material at the Plainfield Public Library serve the largest number of patrons and at the same time raise the general educational standard of the community.

To meet these ends the Public Library has a well-rounded collection of 32,000 volumes in the general fields of literature; 8,617 volumes in the Babcock Scientific Library, which comprises not only Scientific books but sets of journals, transactions, and of scientific societies such as the American Society of Engineers, Institution of Mechanical Engineers, etc., etc., as well as 294 volumes in the Mason W. Tyler department of Americana.

To increase, still more, the usefulness of the library a circulating department of music scores was begun in July, 1908, to which additions have been made continually until at the present time there are 1,648 volumes; 350 more which are in sheet form the valued gift of Lewis J. Geary.

Here may be found the best from the masters of music: Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Schubert, Haydn, etc., etc., not only in piano, two hands and piano four hands or two pianos, four hands and eight hands arrangements, but the pocket editions of the orchestral scores for the student of music to carry to the concert; many volumes of the most celebrated operas for church, medium, or low voice; vocal scores of the most valued of the operas, and also opera librettos as well as sacred cantatas, oratorios, etc.

A complete catalog of this department has just been issued, copies of which have been distributed gratis. The music volumes circulate as books: Namely, for two weeks' time with a renewal of two weeks and are for the free use of anyone living within the city limits and those paying subscriptions. Copies of the new printed catalog are on the delivery desk for the library patrons, and for those who up to this time have never availed themselves of the privileges of the Public Library.

Tommy—Pa what is an equinox?

Pa—Why, er—it is—ahem! For goodness sake, Tommy, don't you know anything about mythology at all? An equinox was a fabled animal, half horse, half cow. Its name is derived from the words "equine" and "ox." It does seem as if these public schools don't teach children anything nowadays.—Ideas.

SURPRISED THE PASTOR

IS SOON TO BE MARRIED.

Emotion Prevented Speech but Advanced Bride Equal to the Occasion—The Committees.

No more absolute surprise was ever perpetrated with success than that which was given to Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, Wednesday. Coincident with Mr. Stout's growing consternation was the appearance of Miss Ella Petersen, of Vineland, whom he is soon to wed in marriage in the near future. The pastor was unaware of the presence in this city of his affianced and when the couple met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Rush the mystery deepened. However, later events cleared the atmosphere and a right royal time was enjoyed.

After a short interval of conversation at the Rush home Mr. Stout and Miss Peterson were taken over to the church on Leland avenue where still another surprise awaited them. Great piles of packages stacked up for their inspection denoted another phaze of the situation and more explanations followed. There also Mr. Stout found another unexplained presence, Mr. and Mrs. Cousin of New Brunswick, were there. Mrs. Cousin is a sister of Mr. Stout. After the greetings were over and the pastor had shaken hands with every one of the seventy-five people representing all the different societies of the church, the task of opening the packages was delegated to Mr. Stout.

He found everything necessary for setting up a first-class kitchen. The affair was announced officially as a kitchen shower and it proved itself a good one.

With the work of unwrapping completed and viewing with mingled pride and affection the tokens of love the gifts of his members, Mr. Stout's emotion was plainly perceptible and when called upon for a speech he was quite unable to respond with his usual vigor. But Miss Petersen did nobly by coming to the rescue with a pretty acknowledgment of the thoughtfulness of the members and thanks for all those who had a part in the preparation of the surprise.

The balance of the evening was spent socially with a program provided by a committee consisting of the Misses Iona Wood, Maude and Florence Dibrow. The committees were served under the supervision of the following committee: Miss Iona Wood, Miss Ruth Walbiz, Misses Maude and Florence Dibrow, Miss Helen Carson, Mrs. Philip Wood and Mrs. George Mirkel. The church was prettily decorated with autumn boughs.

DO YOU HAPPEN TO KNOW SOMEONE WHO IS ILL?

"Perhaps you can do your friend no greater service than to go in and cut the stems of her flowers," says Mary Bronson Hartt in Woman's Home Companion for November. "Go to provide her with a companionable little comb for all her power to reach it, or to rest for a magazine, a pencil, a kerchief, unattainable though lying in full sight on the bureau not five feet away—this is to taste the abomination of humiliation. She can ring for the nurse, of course but to a naturally independent soul this is does not soothe the smart.

"To some extent you can help her to help herself. Fasten a long ribbon to that blanket so that she can draw it up at will. Sew one end fast to the corner of the blanket and pin the other end to the counterpane with the same safety pin that keeps her electric bell always under the patient's hand.

"Or you might make her a little chintz pocket like a minature shoe bag, to be fastened with innocuous thumb-tacks against her bedside table. In it she can keep candy or writing materials or any little matters she likes to have handy where the nurse will not bang them off out of reach every time she wants the top of the table for a tray."

NEED FOR CIVIC VIRTUE

A SCHOLARLY EXPOSITION.

The Man Who Believes He is Stronger Than the State is a Menace to the Country.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton disregarded the conditions of the weather Thursday and drove from his home on the mountains to address a rather slim audience at the First Baptist church on the topic, "Widening Horizons in American Life." Those who failed to hear him missed one of the soundest and most comprehensive lectures on American civic life that has ever been delivered in this city. Dr. Eaton was warmly welcomed by the two hundred people present and applauded for his splendid exposition of the crying needs of the country, namely, simplicity in home, industry, frugality and spirituality. He said in part:

"Life is like a journey which begins at the bottom of a mountain with the gray dawn. As the sun climbs the sky we travel upward through childhood and youth to mature manhood. This is high noon for all men. We have reached the top of the mountain and look on upon the widened view.

"Then begins the descent and soon we are gazing with wistful, wondering eyes toward the beckoning glories of the skies. After that the dark. This looking from height to height, from horizon to horizon is the central experience of human nature, as true of nations and races as of man.

"The empires of the past follow with saddening steps to look upon and over and down. They attain their boundary horizon and delight of glory by a balance of inner thickness and outer savior of environment. They fall because they seem to have attained their utmost possibility like flowers which bloom but once and die.

"Such has been th story of American advance. There are those who hold that we have reached the top, that indeed already we have begun the downward way to find our place at last like all the mighty peoples of the past in the slanderous abyssen and ruin.

"A superficial power lends some countenance to this condition. These conditions make our modern life, according to Adolph Reuken, take up its interest in this present world. Our people feel such interest in every aspect that spread of extravagance as a life of luxury and glory gives them, and the wealth and poverty the shallow and trivial life of the masses are reflected in Church and school and press. The ominous shadow of wealth spreads dishonor and the feeble force of moral obligation and racial and social fidelity amidst whose frothy eddies all has been revered seems thick and swallowed out of sight. These and a thousand other facts give food for sober reflection.

"For two reasons I do not subscribe to the sheer conclusion drawn from these conditions in our national life.

"First. This is God's world and he is able to bring his purposes to bear.

"Second. The whole trend of things is toward democracy. Political and economic power keeps slipping down upon the masses; race overflows race and the day will come when mankind will steal resting upon its universal conscience the weight of ultimate authority.

"The political developments of America have two uniformed conditions. A good fellowship made sound and to be exploited for the benefit of the people. People raise their institutions above the England. James Baettie Crozier finds this to have been the chief contrast between the old and the new world. There inequality was the natural order, here equality is the natural order. Our political institutions have grown out of these fundamental sources and economic conditions. We have passed beyond the embryonic political period of our national development but there still remains large problems of social economics. For a hundred years our political ideas of local republican principals had to be tested and organized through law and institution. Federal and State relations were submitted to the days of economic and social progress. As recently as 1896 it was sought the suffrage of the people on an issue which was proposed without regard to any other nation on earth. We have passed simplicity and passed out of that period. We find ourselves now upon a continent which is a world power. This is the new horizon which beckons the nations forward to reach the glorious political achievement. This must consist of the centralization of federal power. Readjustment among the other institutions, law, banking, interstate commerce, are the issue that go to make up a unified nation.

"In the economic development of the nation we have risen from horizon to horizon with increasing swiftness and a force which is individualistic. Then comes the flood of scientific knowledge applied to commerce and industry. The people have with toughened fibre and fortitude addressed themselves to the task of exploiting the fabulous natural wealth of the country. The evolution of the trust is an attempted escape from individual competition. The labor union was as inevitable as was the trust. In this economic age, we can do nothing in a small way. We must go forward to even greater complexity. We can not run back to the simple days of the past. We have to face at once two great questions.

"First. What relation does our government have to the industry of country? How far can our political strength be used for economic purposes?

"Second. What have we to do with the creation of swollen fortunes which have been produced and are being produced under the present system? We can not confiscate the money. When a man begins to realize that he is stronger than the State he becomes a menace and must be abolished as such. On the other hand when he has so much money that he can not discharge properly the moral obligations which inhere with that money he is too rich. These immense fortunes are bad for the men who own them, for their children who inherit them, for the multitude who look on them with envy, and distrust. We shall have to handle these problems justly and simply or we shall travel into anarchy.

"The moral and spiritual development of the nation brings us to the very centre of our problem. The people must be strong enough morally and wise enough mentally to wield that power looking to the right and justice in the interest of liberty and progress. The new religion must be universal and spiritual in its ideas, elastic and progressive in its method, and authoritative in its moral method.

"The chief requisite of this hour is for every man to learn what is right and to do the right; let the laborer do an honest day's work because it is right; let the preacher and teacher and newspapers and authors tell the truth; let parents teach their children that the moral obligation is the only purpose of life; let us begin a new age of simplicity, honor, industry, frugality and spiritual wealth, and each one be as people in the strength and power of God. Then shall we have for our flying skyline of national permanence and glory ablaze with promise and hope."

KILLS HIS DAUGHTERS THEN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Despondent over what he believed to be an incurable illness, Edward French, 60, of 1104 Bancroft avenue, Elizabeth, shot and killed his two daughters, Doris, aged 9, and Reba, 11 years old, and then shot himself at 10 Saturday morning. He is dying at his home.

French was superintendent of the central division of the electrical department of the Public Service Electric Company, and had been ill for a long time. This morning, his wife says, her husband appeared more downhearted than ever, and she was afraid to leave him alone for any length of time for fear of his doing something rash to himself. She did not dream that he contemplated harm the children and when she had to go out to the store he had apparently recovered his spirits.

When she returned she missed her husband and finally found him lying unconscious beside the two dead bodies of her daughters in the attic of the house. It is presumed that Mr. French enticed his little girls into the attic on some pretext and then shot them. Both were killed instantly, according to Coroner Westcott, who was summoned. The shot in French's head is fatal. French took a long vacation and went to Connecticut in an attempt to recover his health, but was not greatly benefited. Henry French, the fourteen-year-old son, would have probably met the fate of his sisters had he been at home. He was playing with some friends a short distance from his home when the tragedy occurred.

BABY CAMP BUILDING THREATENED BY FIRE

One of the smaller buildings attached to the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on Johnston's drive was set on fire by someone Wednesday night. It was discovered by Mrs. L. M. French, whose cottage is nearby and with her guest, Mrs. Wharton, of Belvidere avenue, and several carpenters summoned from the vicinity the flames were kept from spreading. The rainfall which came up helped them in the efforts.

A report of the fire was made at yesterday's meeting of the City Union and the organiastion expressed its thanks to the volunteers who saved the property. There were no brush fires on the mountains at the time and the blaze was undoubtedly the work of some contemptible person.

COOK BUYS MONOPLANE

Scotch Plains Aviator Purchases a Flying Machine for $6,000.

FROM CLAUDE GRAHAM-WHITE.

His Air Car Will be Delivered in May and He Will Have to Pay 45 Per Cent. Duty on it.

Percy A. Cook, of Scotch Plains, an enthusiastic aviator, was among those who attended the aviation meet at Belmont Park, the past week and while there met Claude Graham-White, the English birdman, who is a fellow countryman of Mr. Cook. The latter planned on an order with the former for a Bleriot monoplane to be equipped with a sixty horsepower Gnom engine. It will be a passenger-carrying monoplane and will cost about $6,000, plus the duty. Delivery is guaranteed in May, 1911.

In preparation for its arrival, a part of Mr. Cook's estate is being laid out as an aviation field with hangars for several machines. Mr. Cook is a charter member of the Aero Club of New Jersey, and he plans to hold an amateur aviation meet during 1911 at Scotch Plains.

Mr. Cook is of the firm of William Cook & Sons, Orpington breeders. In January, 1910, while experimenting with gliders at his home, the machine fell thirty feet and he sustained a broken leg. Still his interest in aviation increased and at the International Aviation meet at Belmont Park, he was a constant visitor and in this way he gained considerable knowledge about aeroplanes.

Mr. Cook left today for Augusta, Ga., where he has sixty-five entries of buff, white and black orpingtons in the Augusta Poultry Show. At the Appalachian Exposition, he has captured four silver cups. Mr. Cook will also witness the Grand Prix run off at the Motor Speedway, Savannah, Ga., November 10.

MUSICAL FEATURES AT ELKS' MEMORIAL

Plainfield lodge of Elks is making preparations for what will probably be the most elaborate memorial service it has yet conducted. It will be held in the Plainfield theatre Sunday night, December 5, the custom being an annual one in Elkdom everywhere.

The committee in charge of arrangements has secured former Senator Charles O. Towne, of New York, to deliver the memorial address. He is a member of the Duluth, Minn., lodge and is a speaker of national prominence. A special feature is to be made of the musical part of the program this year and to that end a chorus of twenty men's voices has been selected by William MacClymont. The first rehearsal was held last night and was very satisfactory. A stringed orchestra will furnish instrumental numbers. The service is to be open to the public, the usual cards of invitation being omitted.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND YOUNG MAN'S FUNERAL

The funeral of William F. Townley, Jr., whose death occurred early Wednesday morning, was held in St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock Friday. Requiem high mass was said by Rev. Father Bogan in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Rev. Father Hogan was deacon and Rev. Father Sciolla subdeacon.

Included in a large number of handsome floral tributes were set pieces from Plainfield lodge of Elks and the city fire department, of which the young man's father is a member.

Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following young friends acting as pallbearers: Stephen Staats, Roy McDonough, Clifford Cole, Edward O'Loughlin, Harold Gloak and Herbert Reynolds.

Postponed Lecture.

The inclement weather of Saturday a week ago caused so many mothers from attending the meeting for mothers of boys in Y. M. C. A. hall, that Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews conducted an open parliament in place of the lectures as announced. The lecture which was to have been given yesterday on "Obstinacy and its Relation to Self Control," will be given on Friday afternoon, November 11, at 3:30. Mr. Mathiews has planned to combine the two lectures on "The Educational Value of Play" into one so that the number of lectures will not be increased by the postponement of the one of yesterday.

IMPALED BY AN ARROW.

Pinned Through the Neck to a Tree. Yet He Survived.

It was in the summer of 1859 that George Wainwright and Ben Spencer, each in charge of a train of freight wagons, were headed for the Missouri river to bring supplies back to Colorado points. The Indians were very troublesome in those days, and these two outfits always camped together for protection. One night they had arranged the camp, with the wagons forming a circle, and everybody but the guards was to be inside. Wainwright preferred to sleep in a clump of cottonwoods about a quarter of a mile off, and there he fixed himself with his negro servant as a bodyguard. Neither the camp nor Wainwright was disturbed during the night, but early the next morning while Wainwright was sitting on the ground with his back to a tree drinking his tin of coffee an arrow from an unseen foe entered his neck at the right of the jugular vein and was driven with such force as to impale the victim to the tree. The negro, believing his master was killed, ran to Spencer's camp and gave the alarm.

Spencer and some of his men rushed over to Wainwright. Instead of being dead Wainwright was not even seriously injured. Spencer cut the arrow off close to the point of entrance and then gently drew Wainwright's head forward until he was released. The victim suffered but little inconvenience from the wound, and by the time the trip was completed it was entirely healed.—Los Angeles Times.

THE WAY OF THE SWISS.

Foreigners Regarded as Egyptians and Treated Accordingly.

A foreign resident in Switzerland was fined 10 francs because his little girl had plucked three buttercups growing on a piece of land on which she and some half dozen Swiss children had for years been accustomed to play. The land had recently changed hands, and its new owner had put up a notice forbidding the plucking of flowers. A passing gendarme had found the children flagrante delicto and had forthwith instituted proceedings against the little foreigner, while letting the little natives go scot free. The child's father appealed against the sentence and by dint of hard fighting, which entailed, of course, expense, forced the latter corps to reduce the fine from 10 francs to 5—1, e., 1 franc for each buttercup.

When I tried to learn the whys and wherefores of this case I was told by a Swiss that one-half of every fine levied goes to the gendarme who reported the offense, the other half to the land, and also that Swiss gendarmes cannot fairly be expected to be quite so alert in taking proceedings against their own country people as against foreigners.

Further, I was told by an American that in Switzerland all foreigners rank as Egyptians and that the one Scriptural injunction that is faithfully obeyed there is that which ordains that Egyptians shall be spoiled.—From "The Latter Day Swiss" in Cornhill Magazine.

A Famous Opal.

The most famous opal in history was that which was worn in a ring by the Roman senator Nonius in the day of the triumvirate. Its size equaled that of a medium sized hazelnut, yet its beauty and brilliancy rendered it a marvel among the dilettanti of Rome, especially when it was known that the goldsmiths and money changers had set its value at $1,000,000. Mark Antony made overtures to Nonius for its purchase, intending, it is thought, to present it to Cleopatra, but the senator refused to part with it and for fear that it would be taken from him by sheer force sought safety in flight. Here history loses all trace of this famous gem, there being no record of its transference from Nonius to any of his family.

At a Wedding Breakfast.

After a marriage recently the bridal party partook of a sumptuous breakfast, toward the end of which a young brother of the bride got up and said solemnly, raising his glass:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have to propose a toast, which, however, must be drunk standing. Please take your glasses and rise up."

The guests, although somewhat bewildered, did so.

"Now," said the young scapegrace, "if you will remain standing for a few minutes I'll find out who has been sitting on my new hat."—London Tit-Bits.

Russia.

Russia did not break into European history until compartively recent times. Ruric, a Varengian chief, seems to have been the first to establish a government, about 862. Ruric's descendants ruled amid many ups and downs till 1508, at which time the real history of the country may be said to begin. With the solitary exception of the United States of America, the progress of Russia under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequaled for rapidity in the history of the world.

THE WHITE NILE.

Mr. Roosevelt's Description of Night on the Great African River.

We had come down through the second of the great Nyanza lakes. As we sailed northward its waters stretched behind us beyond the ken of vision, to where they were fed by streams from the Mountains of the Moon. On our left hand rose the grass lands of Toro, the other side of which the Kongo forest lies like a shroud over the land. On our right we passed the mouth of the Victorian Nile, alive with monstrous crocodiles and its banks barren of human life because of the swarms of the fly whose bite brings the torment which ends in death. As night fell we entered the White Nile and steamed and drifted down the mighty stream. Its current swirled in long curves between endless ranks of plumed papyrus. We ran on through the night. The river horses roared from the reed beds and snorted and plunged beside the boat, and crocodiles slipped sullenly into the river as we glided by. Toward morning a mist arose and through it the crescent of the dying moon shone red and lurid. Then the sun flamed aloft, and soon the African landscape vast, lonely, mysterious, stretched on every side in a shimmering glare of heat and light, and ahead of us the great, strange river went twisting and turning into the distance.—Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's.

A DUKE'S LOVES.

The Force of the Attacks Were Measured by His Appetite.

In the late eighteenth century a Dr. Moore was tutor to the young Duke of Hamilton of those days, whom he accompanied on the usual continental tour. The duke was then eighteen and was susceptible to feminine charms. He had just fallen a victim to the black eyes of a married lady when Dr. Moore made this report to the youthful lover's mother:

"This is the third passion the duke has had since we crossed the sea. They generally affect his appetite, and I can make a pretty good guess at the height of his love by the victuals he refuses to eat. When he is in love he puts him immediately from legumes and all kinds of jardinage. If it arises a degree higher he turns up his nose at fricassees and ragouts. Another degree and he will rather go to bed supperless than eat the mutton and veal or poulets of any sort. This is the utmost length his passion has ever come hitherto, for when he was at the court with Mlle. Marchenville, though she put him entirely from greens, ragouts and veal, yet she made no impression on his roast beef or mutton appetite. He fed plentifully upon those in spite of her charms. I intend to make a thermometer for the duke's passion with four degrees—(1) greens, (2) fricassees and ragouts, (3) roast veal and fowls, (4) plain roast mutton or beef—and if ever the mercury mounts as high as the last I shall think the case alarming."—Argonaut.

Pawning Bank Bills.

"Pawnbrokers don't think much of ten dollar bills as pledges," said the city salesman. "I saw a man pawn one the other day for $8.50. When asked why he didn't spend his $10 instead of soaking it for a little more than half the amount he explained that he wanted to keep that particular bill. Twice before he had tried to keep a certain bill by giving it as security to a friend who had so many bills that he wouldn't need to spend that particular one, but both times the friend got his money mixed and the keepsake was lost after all. This time he depended upon the pawnbroker to hold him over. To pawn money struck me as a very curious proceeding, but the broker assured me that it is frequently done by people who attach a sentimental value to a particular bill or coin."—New York Sun.

His Choice.

"Yes," said the specialist, as he stood at the bedside of the miser millionaire, "I can cure you."

"But will it cost?" came feebly from the lips of the sick man.

The specialist made a swift mental calculation. "Ninety-five dollars," was his answer.

"Can't you shade your figure a little?" wailed the other. "The undertaker's bid is much less."—Lippincott's.

AN INFORMAL SUNDAY SUPPER.

Informal suppers on Sunday evenings is the entertainment provided by one country hostess for her friends, and so successful have these affairs become that never is she without several visitors, and, as the meal is of a kind that can be served at any hour, guests have no feeling of being too late.

The hostess has but one servant and allows her to go out every Sunday. It is easier to do without any service than to have that which is bad, the employer sensibly maintains, and declares that it would be demoralizing to work at other times, did she allow too much latitude to the maid in the dining room on Sundays. So, after the formal midday dinner is over and the dishes washed, the maid lays the supper table and then departs.

Supper is either cold or there is but one hot dish, this being made in the chafing dish and chosen with a view to not spending by standing in the hot water sachet. Curried eggs, creamed chicken or salmon, or something similar, is usually prepared, and, incidentally, should any be left over, it is excellent for lunch next day.

Besides this hot food, there is always a vegetable salad and mayonnaise, selecting either cucumber or tomato. There is bread and butter and iced tea or coffee. The dessert is either berries, other fruit, or a kind that will keep in many hours without looking left over.

All these are on the table at once. There is no table cloth, but a centre-piece, a dish of flowers and candles. Plates are not placed at regular intervals, but left to a girl at either end of the table. Knives are also together, and so are forks, two sets being at either side of the table to save unnecessary reaching. The jug of iced tea and glasses are also at a side table, and the dessert may be kept there also.

The usual time for going into the dining-room is 7 o'clock, but as the supper cannot be harmed by standing, and there is no maid to be delayed, the hostess goes when she feels like it, and from then on to 8:30 friends drop in. Each person helps himself as at any buffet supper, and there is never an evening when all is not gaiety and fun. Entertaining is no task on the hostess; and she sees her friends far more often than she would under other circumstances. Since automobiling has become more general, her home is more or less of a meeting place for persons who live miles apart, and Sunday night suppers have become an institution in the household.

HOW TO TRAVEL CHEERFULLY.

On the train during a four hour's journey to a mountain resort, the attention of adult passengers was drawn to a lovely group of four children for whom the long ride seemed to have none of its usual tedium.

The first half hour's keen interest in the fleeting scenery began to flag, some little diversion had been planned to keep the children occupied and cheerful, so that fretting and romping such as would commonly develop under the enforced confinement was thought of.

The simplest amusements only were provided, yet they served the purpose as well if not better than elaborate toys.

First from the suit case that accompanied the travelers on the car, mother produced a box of cut up pictures to be patched together.

These were nothing more than magazine illustrations mounted on thin cardboard and afterwards clipped in small cubes, wedges and bars jig-saw style.

With them were brought out as many squares of pasteboard the size of a magazine page as there were little ones in the party. These were for building up the pictures on one's knees, no tables offering in the car.

When this amusement had been pretty well threshed out, sheets of cut-out toys, with scissors, were produced from the same resourceful satchel.

These embraced soldiers and military outfits for the boys, dolls and doll domiciles, with furniture, for the wee maidens, with a large paper envelope into which to slip the clipped away scraps.

When the paper dolls had been costumed and duly played with, colored beads with needles and thread for stringing them, were introduced upon the scene

Contests were invented to help the fun along. For instance, a race to see who could in five minutes form a colored necklace. Then the same competition, but alternating the beads in prescribed color combination, as red, white and blue, which added to the difficulty of selecting and stringing them.

Lastly, stringing in partnership, a needle at each end of the thread, and two children working together to form a necklace.

With such frolics the weary journey was passed without a sign of crossness or fretting.

Many of our grown-ups, have vivid recollections of that seemingly endless summer journey by rail. There is little excuse for making it equally fretful to our own little people.

RETURNED FROM FRISCO

Arrived at Golden Gate on October 15th.—Returned by Rail—Their Experiences on the Trip.

Looking little the worse for their long grind but evidently happy at being back among familiar scenes, Sherman Haberle, of Chatham street and George B. Adams, of Netherwood ave., returned home Saturday from San Francisco, which they reached after a transcontinental bicycle ride of 8 300 miles. They left Plainfield last May and after numerous delays, hardships and wonderful experiences, reached the Golden Gate city on October 15. They remained but a short time and then started home by train, taking the Northern Pacific route to Chicago. They reached South Plainfield over the Lehigh Valley shortly before noon.

The young men were seen by a Daily Press reporter soon after getting home. In speaking of their long ride, Adams said:

"It was a great trip and one that we will never regret, but for all that we are glad to be to Jersey again. We rode and worked our way across the continent, and taken altogether it was the hardest proposition I ever tackled. Most of the journey from Chicago westward had to be made over railroad tracks, and bumping along ties made for a pleasant sensation. The worst bit of road we struck was from Keokuk to Wayland, Mo., fifteen miles through mud. It was right after a heavy rain storm and the mud hung to our machines like glue. We made better time through the middle west but in Utah and Nevada most of our riding was done between railroad tracks, as the roads in this part of the country are too sandy for bikes. We had pretty good luck with our machines, having no accidents and only several dozens of punctures and wearing out seven pairs of tires. We were in the saddle actually only sixty-two days, the rest of the time being spent in working along the routes. Eighty-three hundred miles in this time is a record-breaker."

The riders brought both wheels back with them, and will keep them as cherished souvenirs of the trip.

OCTOBER LOSS BY THE U. S. TREASURY

The government finances took a downward twist during the last three days of October, which deceived experts who had been predicting a surplus for the month.

Exclusive of the Panama Canal charges the receipts for the month were $15,266,441 and the expenditures were $58,560,323, which left a deficit in ordinary operations of $3,293,883. Add to that sum the month's cost of the work on the canal and $5,295,003 stands on the wrong side of the ledger.

The close of September has shown a surplus of nearly more than $1,400,000. It was the first time in the present fiscal year that the government took in more than it paid out. While the operations of the month bring the total Treasury deficit for the fiscal year to more than $21,000,000 the situation is not considered unusual.

Panama Canal expenditures in October were nearly $3,000,000, which brings the sum spent this year to more than $13,000,000, against $11,000,000 for the same time last year. The deficit at this time last year was more than $27,000,000, and in the difference Treasury officials see reflected the economy policy of all the government's departments. The civil expenditures for October were $2,000,000 greater than in September, and interest payments on the public debt took other $3,000,000. It can be seen that the deficit for the month is easily accounted for by expenditures out of the ordinary.

Barring all unusual expenditures, such as for the Panama Canal and payments on the public debt, the month's operations show a deficit of $13,000,000 as against $23,000,000 a year ago. In the face of growing receipts, which now total more than $225,000,000 for this year, Treasury officials are satisfied with the showing of the month, and expect a gradual improvement from now on.

Secretary MacVeagh appears to be perfectly satisfied with the ability of the Treasury to maintain itself until the coming session of Congress, and is not known to have changed his position on the question of issuing Panama bonds, before the circulation tax is equalized.

SOMERSET DEFEATS THE COMMISSION IDEA.

The proposition to substitute the commission plan for freeholders in Somerset county met with defeat at the polls yesterday. While the exact vote has not been made known, practically every district was opposed to the idea. The probable majority against the commission was 500. In North Plainfield the vote was 215 in favor of reducing the freeholders and 369 against, a majority of 154.

Mrs. Keller's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Charles Keller was held at her late home on East Fifth street, yesterday morning. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. Herring in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The floral tribute included a set piece from Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of which Mr. Keller is a member. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being the following members of Perseverance lodge; Thomas Qument, Donald McInnes, Clarence Rithouse, and John Grisley.

CONGRESS OF MOTHERS TO MEET AT ORANGE.

The State Congress of Mothers will convene in Orange on Friday and Saturday of this week and all the Parent-Teacher associations of the State are invited to be represented by delgates. The association of this city will send nine delegates including the president of the Franklin-Stillman Association, Mrs. Stephen Voorhees. The convention will be held in the rooms of the Women's Club of Orange and all women interested in the subjects to be discussed or in child life will be welcome.

On Saturday afternoon the convention will be addressed by the honorary president of the Mothers' Congress, Mrs. Edwin C. Grice, whose topic will be "Some Reminiscences." An informal reception will follow. On Friday evening Mrs. Fred Schoff and Dr. R. N. Wilson will deliver addresses on timely topics and on Saturday Dr. Scott Nearing will tell about "Child Play."

BRIDE AND GROOM IN EXCITING AUTO CHASE

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Dunavan, of East Second street, who were married Monday night, experienced a lively time in getting away from a number of guests who were anxious to give the couple a good send-off. The bride and groom engaged a large touring car to take them to Elizabeth, where they planned to take a train to New York.

Some of the guests got wind of the plan and they also engaged an automobile and gave chase. The car in which Mr. and Mrs. Dunavan were travelling, had several minor accidents which caused stops on the road. This gave the occupants of the following car an excellent chance to overtake them. The chase ended at Roselle, where the leading car had tire trouble, and it was found necessary to press the other machine into service to take the bride and groom to Elizabeth. This was done and the crowd saw the couple safely on the train, instructing the passengers to give them a good time. Mr. and Mrs. Dunavan were showered with rice all the way to Elizabeth, and after boarding the train at the latter place.

IROQUOIS MANAGEMENT TO CHANGE NEXT YEAR

J. A. Staats, owner of the Hotel Iroquois property, leased the premises today for a term of six years, beginning next spring, to Peter Floresch, of Perth Amboy. The lease of the present occupant, Jerome W. Leary, expires March 1, 1911, and previous to that time, if possible, Mr. Staats will have work commenced that will entirely change the appearance of the property and make the hotel one of the largest and finest in the State. The present front on Second street will be extended to the sidewalk line and a three-story addition will be built on the vacant ground between the building and the Central stables. It will be thirty-five feet wide, making a total frontage of seventy feet, and will contain thirty additional rooms. The front of the combined building will be of pressed brick with terra cotta trimmings.

In speaking of the improvement, Mr. Staats said the hotel would be conducted strictly on the European plan and that suites of rooms would be a feature. There are to be two dining rooms, one public and one private, and all the conveniences of an up-to-date hostelry. Mr. Floresch, the lessee, conducted the Mansion House at Perth Amboy for twelve years.

With the election of Wood in the Fourth district, which new seems assured, the Democrats have succeeded in electing seven of their ten candidates for Congress. Loudenschlager won out by a small majority in the First district while Gardner won easily in the second. Wood barely squeezed in in the fourth. The other successful candidates are: Third district, Scully; Fifth district, Tuttle; Sixth district, Hughes; Seventh district, Townsend; Eighth district, McCoy; Ninth district, Kinkead and Tenth district, Hamill.

For the first time in twenty-five years, a straight Republican nominee will not be Mayor of Plainfield.

LEROY J. ELLIS.
President Democratic Club.

Telegram to Dr. Wilson—Congratulations on splendid victory. You have won in behalf of the entire people.
You have carried this Republican city by 137. This means you have changed a Republican majority of 1,500 out of a total of 5,000 votes into a minority.

MISS ADA IRENE DENNIS MARRIES ELMER HUMMER

Miss Ada Irene Dennis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Berton Dennis, of East Seventh street, was married to Elmer Hummer, son of Mrs. John Hummer, of Grandview avenue, last night at 7 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, by the Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church. The bride was attended by Mrs. Cornelius Sheats, a sister of the groom, as matron of honor, and Miss Emma Hazel Ryno, a cousin of the bride, as bridesmaid. The best man was Cornelius Sheats, a brother-in-law of the groom. The ushers were Roscoe Van Doren and Henry Kielblock.

The bride's gown was of white desoie silk trimmed with lace and she carried a shower of bride roses. The bridesmaids wore a gown of light blue miessaline silk, trimmed with white lace and carried white chrysanthemums. The matron of honor wore white voile, hand embroidered and she carried pink chrysanthemums. The bridal party entered the parlor during the rendering of the wedding march from Lohengrin, by Mrs. George McVoy, the ushers taking the lead, followed by the matron of honor, bridesmaid and the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her in marriage. The service was that of the Reformed Church, with a ring. The service was performed under an arch from which a large bell of flowers was suspended. The parlor was decorated with green and white. The dining room was green and yellow. A large collection of presents was received.

Following the ceremonies a reception was held after which the couple left for a wedding trip. Relatives were present from Easton, Newark, Connecticut, Jersey City, Bloomsbury, Anson, Texas, and this city.

R. HENRY DEPEW.
President Bi-partisan League.

This is the culmination of a fight we have been making for the last four years. We have succeeded in creating defections from the machine itself from time to time. Its methods have been so objectionable and particularly so as to certain things that have been done in the present campaign that the people have refused to stand for it. Its methods and domination, any longer with the result that Mr. Moy is elected by 116 majority.

CALVIN E. BRODHEAD.
Assemblyman-elect.

I am deeply grateful to my fellow citizens for the vote polled by the Democratic Assembly ticket in Plainfield. It attributes this to the strong Wilson sentiment in part, but in a very large measure to the efforts put forth by the Bi-partisan League. Great credit is also due to the splendid efforts put forth by the two Democratic clubs in the city, but particularly to the fine efforts of L. J. Ellis, president of the Plainfield Democratic Club.

As far as I am personally concerned I shall endeavor to merit the confidence reposed in me and represent the district to the best of my ability. As I have stated many times during the campaign, I shall certainly vote for Mr. Martine for the Senatorship on the ground that he is the regularly nominated candidate of our party.

The W. C. T. U. will hold its monthly meeting in its rooms tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

PLAINFIELD'S MOOSE WIN BOWLING CONTEST

SMITH ALREADY BEATEN

That's the Way the Leaders at Trenton Size up Senatorial Situation.

HUGHES BOOSTS MARTINE.

The Congressman Like Senator Osborne Firm for "Farmer-orator"—Senator Fielder gets in the Fight.

Politicians and legislators who gathered in the State House yesterday seeking a line as to how the Democratic administration of State affairs is to begin, left the Capitol at Trenton mainly of the opinion that former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., is already beaten in his ambition to get back to the upper chamber of Congress. Although conceding that Mr. Smith would fall in his aspirations, there was a feeling among some of those who had tried to get into accurate touch with the situation that James E. Martine would not be able to realize on the popular expression in the direct primary where he received 42,458 votes as a candidate for United States Senator.

Congressman William Hughes, who has just been re-elected to the House of Representatives from the Sixth New Jersey District, was one of those in the State House who was confident of Mr. Martine being elected Senator.

"The vote at the primaries settled this question," said Congressman Hughes. "It doesn't matter particularly how many votes Mr. Martine got or how many votes somebody else got, or what might have happened if the Democrats had been cocksure of having the Legislature by a big majority on joint ballot, the fact is that Mr. Martine was high man in the primaries and there is no going back of the returns. Democratic members of the Legislature are in honor bound, under all circumstances, to vote for him to succeed John Kean."

Senator Osborne reiterated with emphasis his ante-primary and anti-convention stand that he would be bound by the direct primary vote. He again declared that he would not enter any caucus to settle behind closed doors the question of the Senatorship.

Senator Fielder, of Hudson, was very much upset on his arrival at the State House yesterday to be told that the certified returns on file in the Secretary of State's office from the Hudson county clerk show that Mr. Martine received 22,030 votes in the primaries in Hudson county, in contradiction to Mr. Fielder's statement that Martine received only 6,165 votes in Hudson. Mr. Fielder's mistake in quoting the primary results put a sharp crimp in the statement which he issued today, in which he attempted to argue that Mr. Martine's vote in the direct primaries was not a representative one. Senators Fielder and Osborne and Senator-elect Johnson, of Bergen, had a long talk together about the Senatorship and other legislative affairs Mr. Johnson has not willing yesterday to declare himself for publication, but it is understood that he at the present time opposed to the election of Smith and, in the final test, will vote for Mr. Martine. The two Bergen Assemblymen-elect, Messrs. Hinman and Alyea, are also classed as Smith and favorable to Mr. Martine. Dan Fellowes Platt, Democratic State Committeeman from Bergen, who came down to Trenton with the Bergen legislators, declared in the most positive terms that Mr. Martine would be elected Senator, and said that the Legislature could get in honor pursue any other course.

Senator Silzer, of Middlesex, who was one of the Senate committee that drafted the present primary law and if affects the Senatorial question, was guarded in his talk about what his attitude would be.

Only a few Democratic Assemblymen were about the State House and not of them was willing to commit himself on the Senatorial question.

"Ladies' Day" at Hunt Club.

Today will be "ladies' day" at the Watchung Hunt Club, and this afternoon the women members will enjoy a chase after the hounds, meeting at the clubhouse at 3:30 o'clock. The riding members are invited. The will be a gallop across field. Miss Abel Hooley will be the mistress of the hounds for the day. Tea will be served at the club directly after the run.

Students' opportunity to visit Ancient Carthage and Modern Tunis at First Baptist church tomorrow evening. Special admission 15 cents, regular admission 50 cents. ***

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, will discuss the Sunday school of Warren chapel, Sunday afternoon, it occupying "Decision Day."

ASSEMBLYMAN M'LAUGHLIN COMES OUT FOR MARTINE

Hugh McLaughlin, of Elizabeth, one of the Democratic Assemblymen-elect from Union county, has sent the following letter to James E. Martine:

"My Dear Mr. Martine: The Democratic party at the Primary Election by an overwhelming vote expressed in a formal manner a preference for you as United States Senator, and in accordance with my pledges made prior to the election to abide by the result, I take great pleasure in stating that I shall vote for you for the office of United States Senator, and trust that in the interest of our party to carry out the peoples' wishes that you may be the next United States Senator from the State of New Jersey."

"ANCIENT CARTHAGE AND MODERN TUNIS" HIS TOPIC

"Ancient Carthage and Modern Tunis," will be the subject of an illustrated lecture to be given at the First Baptist church, tomorrow night, under the auspices of the Temple Baptist church, it being the third entertainment in the course for the benefit of the building fund of the church. The views to be shown by L. V. F. Randolph, who will give the lecture, were taken by himself on his last trip abroad, and this will be the first time they have been displayed, being especially made for this occasion.

The lecture should be of great interest to students of history and that such may have an opportunity to enjoy it a special price has been made for pupils in the local schools. The gallery will be reserved for them. Mr. Randolph has traveled extensively and there is perhaps no one better informed on the subject upon which he will speak tomorrow night.

MRS. A. M. VIRGIL TO GIVE COMPLIMENTAY PIANO RECITAL

Invitations are out for a complimentary piano recital to be given Saturday afternoon at the Plainfield High School at 2:30 o'clock, by Mrs. A. M. Virgil, of the "Virgil Piano Conservatory," New York. The program will be presented by four young girls, three of them not yet in their teens.

These little girls recently gave a successful demonstration of modern ways of technical and musical study in Mendelssohn Hall, New York, in addition to playing a difficult program of compositions, they executed feats of technical skill such as playing scales at the rate of 1152 notes a minute. The concert is under the auspices of Miss I. A. Palmer, of 325 Franklin place, who will gladly give tickets to anyone interested.

Fire in Greenhouse.

An overheated boiler in the greenhouse on Andrew McCardell's property at Front street and Giraud avenue, set fire to the woodwork at 4:15 yesterday afternoon. An alarm was telephoned to fire headquarterar and the department responded quickly, but Mrs. McCardell had the blaze under control with pails of water before the men arrived. Two extinguishers put an end to the blaze.

Body Coming East.

The body of James Francis Daly, who died in North Yakima, Wash., last Saturday night was shipped from that place at 1:57 yesterday morning. If the scheduled connections are made it will reach this city at 3:30 Saturday afternoon. The funeral arrangements will not be made until then

"At Home" at Warren chapel.

The "at home" to be given by Rev. and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, tomorrow night, will be at Warren chapel, and not at their home as previously announced. All the members and friends of the chapel are cordially invited to be present.

CONGREGATIONALISTS DINE

PROGRAM FOR THE SEASON.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, D. E. Tilsworth, S. S. Swackhamer and Fred H. Andrews the Speakers.

About sixty men, young, middle-aged and old, gathered about the tables in the lecture room of the Congregational church last evening to enjoy the first banquet ever held by the Men's club of that church. The occasion was marked by some fine speaking and singing, and a feeling of good fellowship was disseminated about the gathering by the cordial greetings extended to the members and guests by the officers of the organization. Besides the president, Thomas West, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, D. E. Tilsworth, S. S. Swackhamer and Fred H. Andrews spoke on assigned topics and a male quartet composed of Elmer Cutting, John Todd, Harry Blimm and W. G. Smith sang and were encored.

In his opening remarks President West welcomed the guests and said that the men's organizations of the church were one of the most potent and influential factors in the church today. Their opportunities for service looking toward the upbuilding of civic righteousness and for doing real missionary work among men was only limited by their desire to serve the Master.

Mr. West outlined the work for the coming months and gave out this list of events: November 30 a lecture by W. C. Gray, topic, "The West;" December 13, address on Alaska by John M. Whiton; January 10, lecture on social work, having to do with the man who is "down and out." On February 14 there will be a musical and the women will be invited; March 14 there will be a lecture on finance and banking. April and May meetings will be devoted to social times and at the May meeting the women will again be invited to be present. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, the first speaker, said that he was gratified with the activities of the different organizations of the church, and that the spirit of "get together" was manifesting itself more and more. As this working together means much to the church, he urged the men to keep up the spirit and work for the Kingdom of God.

Mr. Tilsworth had for his topic, "Good Investments" but he mentioned only one—kindness. He said that kindness is an investment paid the biggest dividends and gave the richest returns. He said that as one grows older and more mellow, the kindly feeling grows, and the more kindness shown the greater the feeling of satisfaction. He urged the men to take as a motto, "Let no day pass without some kindness done." His sentiments were applauded.

F. H. Andrews spoke briefly on "Opportunity," and S. S. Swackhamer told the members the value of time, illustrating his remarks with anecdotes. The dinner was above criticism and was furnished by Mrs. Henry Johnson, of the Park club.

HALF YEAR MEETING OF FRIENDS HERE TOMORROW.

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield Half Year Meeting of Friends will be held at the meeting house on Watchung avenue, tomorrow and Friday, beginning at 10:30 tomorrow morning. A meeting of the philanthropic committee will be held at 2 o'clock to be addressed by Arthur M. Dewees, superintendent of public charities at Paterson.

There will be a social gathering at 8 o'clock in the evening under the care of the Young Friends' Association, with an address by Edith M. Winder, of Swarthmore College. There will be a meeting for worship Friday morning.

State Canvassers Named.

Governor Fort yesterday afternoon appointed the following Senators as members of the Board of Canvassers to officially declare all election returns on the Governorship: Senators Price, of Sussex; Bradley, of Camden; Gebhardt, of Hunterdon; Osborne, of Essex; Ackerman of Union, and Brown, of Monmouth. The vote will be canvassed Dec. 2 p. m., November 29.

Revival Meetings Well Attended.

The revival meetings which are being held in the First M. E. church this week, are being well attended and the interest is increasing. Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph will preach at the service this evening, while tomorrow night, Rev. C. M. Anderson will preach tomorrow night. On Friday night, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, will conduct the service.

ACCIDENTAL GUNSHOT CAUSES TWO WOUNDS

John English, aged 17 years, of 219 Westervelt avenue, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday, suffering from a gunshot wound, the result of an accident in connection with a proposed hunting trip for rabbits. English was carrying a gun and in some way the firearm was accidentally discharged. A 32 calibre bullet left the gun with such force that it passed through the young man's right hand and into his left leg.

At the hospital, an X-ray examination was made for the purpose of locating the bullet, but the result was not entirely satisfactory and another attempt will be made to do so today. The injuries to the hand and leg were properly treated and to prevent tetanus anti-toxin was administered. The physicians in charge do not apprehend any serious results.

GEORGE L. BABCOCK MAY HEAD NEW ORGANIZATION

A joint committee meeting of members from the Board of Trade and Merchants' Association was held last night for the purpose of arranging the preliminaries for the uniting of the two organizations into a charmber of commerce. It was made known that the Plainfield Protective Association would not join in the movement as its work is on dissimilar lines. The prepared constitution and by-laws for the combined body was read over and approved and will be presented at the joint session next Monday night.

While the matter has not been decided definitely, it is probable that George L. Babcock may be president of the new organization. It is understood that he has been approached and is willing to accept the honor in the event of his being the unanimous choice. He is connected with the Spicer Manufacturing Company, one of the city's largest tax payers, and a competent man in every way to fill the position.

OLD FIRE CHIEF RIDES IN UP-TO-DATE APPARATUS

Dr. William H. Voorhees, of East Orange, a former prominent Plainfielder, and chief of the old volunteer fire department, was a visitor in this city today and incidentally had a chance to see how the department of today answers alarms. He had dropped in to see Chief Doane and was at headquarters when a telephone call came in for a slight blaze in the Mardell's greenhouses at Front street and Giraud avenue. "Hop into my machine," said Chief Doane, "and I'll show you how we have advanced since you ran with the old apparatus."

The chief's machine is only built for two, but Dr. Voorhees managed to squeeze in and was whisked to the scene of the blaze so fast it almost stole his breath away.

"It certainly is great," was his comment, just the same the old department was a hummer, even if we didn't have fast horses, buzz wagons and brick pavements to glide over."

Chief Doane had to admit Dr. Voorhees was correct as he was assistant when the latter was the head of the department and learned some of his best fire-fighting tricks from him. Dr. Voorhees was in the drug business on West Front street for many years and erected the building now occupied by L. W. Randolph and E. M. Laing. He put the tile floor in the Randolph store, the first of the kind in Plainfield. He disposed of his business years ago and is now living a retired life in East Orange.

Miss A. I. Bonwell Surprised.

Miss A. I. Bonwell, of Madison avenue, was given a surprise party at her home last night, the affair being arranged by several friends. Miss Bonwell will leave for Washington in a few days. Games and dancing were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

Borough Couple Arrested.

William Emmons and Mrs. Maggie Bell Jackson were arrested in the borough last night for disorderly conduct. They were locked up at police headquarters pending a hearing before Recorder Dolliver this evening.

The B Flat Club to Meet.

The B Flat Club recently organized for the purpose of musical advancement, will hold its first meeting in Miss May Vincent Whitney's studio in the Babcock building, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

REV. MR. BOWERS ACCEPTS

Call Extended to Become Rector of St. Stephen's Church, Netherwood

VESTRY UNANIMOUS IN CHOICE.

Will Succeed Rev. Morgan Ashley—New Rector a Graduate of General Theological Seminary.

Rev. Elory G. Bowers, who, for the past year and a half, has been curate of Grace church, was extended a call to become rector of St. Stephen's church, at a meeting of the vestry last night, and has accepted the same. The announcement of the proposed call was exclusively announced in The Daily Press of yesterday. The vestry met at the home of F. W. Carlisle, junior warden, on Belvidere avenue, all but two of the members being present, who sent proxies. The vestry was unanimous in the decision to call Mr. Bowers to the church as successor to Rev. Morgan Ashley.

Rev. Mr. Bowers came to Plainfield about a year and a half ago to fill the position of curate at Grace church. His work has been marked by success as assistant to Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rector, and during his residence here he has made many friends. He is a graduate of the General Theological Seminary and since his ordination has always filled the position of curate. He expects to enter upon his duties as rector of St. Stephen's church about the middle of December.

St. Stephen's church has a promising future, the outlook being bright. Under the direction of Rev. Morgan Ashley, who resigned October 1 to become curate of All Angels church, New York, the parish grew rapidly and great interest was evidenced. It is believed that under the rectorship of Mr. Bowers the church will continue to prosper.

Mr. Bowers was at one time curate of Christ church, Elizabeth, and later at Trinity church, Newport, R. I. He came to Plainfield from the latter place. Last June he was given the degree of bachelor of divinity at the General Theological Seminary.

THANKSGIVING DINNERS FOR THE CITY POOR.

The Charity Organization Society will, as usual endeavor to make Thanksgiving Day a real day of thanksgiving in the homes of the poor. To this end all are requested to send provisions of any kind to the rooms at 544 West Front street or telephone No. 103 and packages will be called for.

In order to prevent duplication and insure the supplies going as far as possible, those giving private dinners are requested to send the names of families who receive them to the Charity Organization office. Such names will be kept on a separate and confidential list. Those desiring to send a dinner directly to some family will be given names and addresses confidentially at the office.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY GIVE A TEA IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, one of the chain of teas was held in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. C. M. Anderson, wife of the pastor, and Mrs. L. M. French were the hostesses for the affair.

There were about forty women present and all had an enjoyable time. Many of the women brought their sewing and fancy work, making it a profitable affair in connection with the social features. A silver offering was received, the money to be used for making repairs in Vincent chapel.

Funeral of Squier Hetfield.

The funeral of Squier Hetfield, whose death occurred early Monday morning, was held this afternoon at the home of his niece, Mrs. A. H. Manning, of Madison avenue. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss. Burial was made in Evergreen Cemetery.

Autumn Missionary Meeting.

The autumn meeting of the Missionary Convention of New Brunswick was held in Christ church, Spottswood, yesterday. Bishop Scarborough presided. There were reports from the various committees; also a report of the general conference held in Cincinnati recently.

Charged With Non-support.

Frank Conger, of Pearl street, was arraigned before Justice Snape this morning, charged by his wife with non-support. He offered no reasonable excuse for his neglect and the court put him under bonds to furnish the plaintiff $7 a week.

WILL CELEBRATE THEIR 65TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., will observe the sixty-fifth anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, and in the afternoon a reception will be held at the home of their son, David C. Smalley, on East Front street, when their many friends will be given an opportunity to extend their congratulations. Mr. Smalley is ninetythree years old, while Mrs. Smalley is eighty-four. Despite their advanced years, they are enjoying fairly good health.

Mr. and Mrs. Smalley have been residents of North Plainfield the greater part of their lives, having been born in this vicinity. Both have always evidenced a lively interest in affairs of the day. They are looking forward to the coming celebration with considerable interest.

OBSEQUIES OF REV. DR. JOSEPH P. TAYLOR

The funeral services of Rev. Dr. Joseph Pemberton Taylor were held at Grace church yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and were largely attended by relatives and friends, including a number who were formerly associated with Dr. Taylor in his church work. The full vested choir was present and took part in the service.

Rev. Dr. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, was in charge of the services, assisted by Rev. Dr. W. C. Neilson, who read the lesson; Rev. Dr. J. Dudley Ferguson, who read the creed and prayers, and Rev. John Edgecombe, of Cranford, who also offered prayer. During the services the choir sang, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," "Lead, Kindly Ligh" and "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand," and in addition chanted the 90th Psalm.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. Among the other clergymen present were Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, of Brooklyn, who was formerly curate of Grace church and an intimate friend of Dr. Taylor. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

ANNUAL MISSIONARY TEA OF HOME SOCIETY.

The annual meeting and tea of the Home Missionary Society of the Congregational church was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. John M. Whiton, 821 Central avenue, and about forty women attended. The annual collection for missionary purposes amounted to something over $40.

Mrs. Charles F. Chase, of Montclair, former president of the Home Missionary Association, was the principal speaker and entertained the company with an interesting account of the recent conventions she has attended, particularly that at Boston in October. Mrs. Chase said that many things of an inspirational character had been developed in the missionary service during the past months and most among these were the neighborhood meetings which have been adopted in many places.

A regular program of devotional exercises was participated in by all the women present. Mrs. Theodore Mantz sang two solos, accompanied by Miss Myra Emmons. Miss Parsons, a guest of Mrs. Whiton, played the hymns in the devotional service.

Tea was pured by Mrs. Thomas Hylan and Mrs. Charles A. Rice and the Misses Marjory Phillips, Kathleen Phillips, Miss Delaman and Miss Parsons assisted in serving.

Threw a Lamp at Them.

Christian Bock a watchman employed by Walter Hetfield to watch the Aspinwall home on West Seventh street, reported to the police early this morning that two men had come to the house and demanded admittance. They arrived in an automobile and pounded on the door. When Bock went to the window to see who was creating the row. Notwithstanding Bock's orders to get away from the premises, the two men persisted in attempting to gain an entrance. Bock became angry and threw a lamp at the head of one of the noisy makers which put them to rout. Mr. Hetfield is in charge of the premises pending the settlement of the estate of Mr. Aspinwall, for whom he has acted as counsel, but he has no idea as to the identity of the intruders.

Will Chase the Hounds.

The Watchung Hunt Club will meet the hounds Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Melrose Manor, and will ride a distance of about ten miles through the adjacent country.

CRAIG A. MARSH AT REST

Funeral of Corporation Counsel Attended by 400 Friends and Relatives.

BEAUTIFUL FLORAL TRIBUTES.

Prominent Men Honorary Pallbearers—Services Conducted by Rev. Drs. J. S. Zelie and Charles A. Eaton.

Upward of 400 people attended the funeral services of the late Craig Marsh, corporation counsel of this city, yesterday afternoon. The rooms of the residence at 308 West Eighth street were filled to their utmost capacity when Rev. Dr. J. E. Zelie, minister of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church began the service.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, with Mayor-elect George W. V. Moy at his side, headed by a platoon of police in command of Chief P. S. Kiely, led the members of the Common Council, fellow lawyers and other friends of Mr. Marsh into the house at 2:45 o'clock. Among those noticed from out of town were Judges Atwater, Lindaberry and Van Syckle, warden Charles Dodd and many others.

The body in its casket laid in the east wing of the house nearly buried in a hundred or more floral offerings from friends and members of organizations of which Mr. Marsh was a member. The service was a simple one, that of the Presbyterian church and no address was made. Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton offered the prayer following the singing of "Crossing the Bar," by a quartet composed of Miss Etta Rayhert, Miss Grace Carroll, Bertram F. Tallamy and William Homes.

Rev. Dr. Eaton's prayer was as follows:

"Our Father, teach us to know that Thou are God. Men die, but Thou art alive for evermore; the same yesterday, today and forever. Before the mountains were brought forth or ever Thou hadst formed the heavens and the world, from everlasting Thou art God.

"O God we come to Thee today with sorrowing hearts. Suddenly the blow has fallen on one who lived in the midst of us in his splendid manhood Thou hast called him to be with Thee. The trumpet's silvery sound is still. We stand silent. We know not what to say to Thee or to each other. Thou hast made our lives desolate under the shock of this great grief; but we know that Thou dost love men, and we come to Thee, and we always must come, with our weary, saddened hearts, we breathe into Thy listening ear our wants, our needs, our loneliness. We tell Thee of the heartache and the pain and we know that Thou who art Love will comfort us. Give us strength to go forward until Thou shalt call us to Thee.

"We thank Thee for this man with his long and noble life in this community; for his great flaming enthusiasm; for his intellectual options; for the courage, the loyalty, the integrity with which he faced and did his day's work; for the example he has left to all of us of fidelity in positions of trust and industry in service.

"The world is poorer now that he is gone, but richer for his having lived in it."

Dr. Eaton concluded his prayer with a touching and beautiful petition for the family of Mr. Marsh, for the community in which he lived and which he served so well and for the members of his noble profession who knew and honored him.

The display of flowers was one of the most gorgeous seen in many a day. All the organizations with which Mr. Marsh had been affiliated were represented with handsome pieces and, besides these upward of fifty sprays, crosses, pillows and bunches of loose cut buds were seen. The Mayor and Common Council sent a magnificent wreath of white roses; the Plainfield fire department sent a huge spray of white and pink chrysanthemums; Anchor Lodge, No. 149, a pillar of green surmounted by an anchor of white roses; Un-

C.A. MARSH DEAD

Corporation Counsel and Former President of the State Bar Association Passes Away Suddenly.

COMMUNITY'S SEVERE LOSS.

Blood Vessel in His Lungs Bursts from Coughing and Noted Lawyer's Death Ensues—City Counsel 28 Years.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh died suddenly Saturday at 5 o'clock. Half an hour previously he was seized with a fit of coughing which was so intense as to cause a blood vessel in his lungs to burst. His wife hurried to his side and he was in her arms when he passed away. Dr. Norman H. Probasco was summoned but Mr. Marsh was dead before the physician arrived.

Mr. Marsh was one of the most distinguished members of the New Jersey bar and was so wedded to his practice of the legal profession that on more than one occasion he refused the honors of the bench.

Craig Adams Marsh was born in Plainfield, December 8, 1856, and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Warren Marsh. He was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1873 and that year he entered Union College in the sophomore class, graduating from that institution in the class of 1876. He then spent a year in the study of law in the office of Amzi Dodd and J. Hervey Ackerman, in Newark. At the end of that time he entered the Columbia Law School, from which he was graduated in the class of 1878.

Mr. Marsh was admitted to the New Jersey Bar in 1879 as an attorney, and three years later was admitted to practice as a counsellor. He spent a year or so in California, returning to Plainfield, where he at once entered upon a successful practice of law, which constantly increased year after year. While a student at Union College he met Miss Mary Moore, of Albany, N. Y., and before he began the practice of law he was married.

By appointment of the Chancellor he was made a master in chancery and a special master in chancery, and by the Supreme Court a Supreme Court Commissioner. He was first appointed corporation counsel of Plainfield in May, 1882 by L. V. F. Randolph, who was then mayor serving in all twenty-eight years. He was considered one of the highest authorities on corporation law, and in the opinion of the oldest practioners in Plainfield he saved the city thousands of dollars through his legal advice.

Among some of the most notable cases handled by Mr. Marsh was that of Taylor vs. the Plainfield Fire Department, resulting in the charter of the department being declared unconstitutional. The department was taken out of the hands of the volunteer force and turned over to the city. Another case was that of J. B. Jennings vs. Bishop Scarborough resulting in the reinstatement of the pastor after being dismissed by the then board and standing committee of the State.

Mr. Marsh was also the winning counsel in the celebrated suit, Karl Polack vs. Hudson, a pioneer case in the United States, establishing the liability of owners of barbed wire fences for injuries to animals, and was in the successful defense of Daniel S. Beatty, the organ manufacturer, charged with using the United States mails with intent to defraud; also the famous Freehill homicide case; the Long Branch Asphalt Pavement cases and Moore vs. Sheridan, resulting in the breaking of the will of William Moore.

Another notable suit was the Job Male will case, which was bitterly contested. Mr. Marsh drew the will but before he could secure Mr. Male's acknowledgment to his signature, he died. Through the clever work of Mr. Marsh the will was compromised and as a result the city was given the public library. There are countless other cases tried by Mr. Marsh in the various courts of the United States in which he was successful.

Mr. Marsh was president of the New Jersey State Bar Association and the Union County Bar Association; also serving as a trustee and member of the executive committee of all three organizations.

One of the oldest lawyers in the city in speaking of Mr. Marsh, today, said, that he considered him to be one of the finest jury lawyers in the State and that he was without a peer as an authority on corporation law. He said that he always exercised the greatest care in the preparation of all cases, and was unusually successful.

Mr. Marsh was a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., and so far as known this was his only fraternal lodge affiliation. It was Mr. Marsh's custom to spend the greater part of every summer abroad and he always anticipated these trips with a great deal of pleasure.

Mr. Marsh is survived by a wife, a sister, Miss Ada Marsh, a brother, Warren H. Marsh, who was associated with him in his law offices here, a brother, Randolph Marsh, of this city and an aunt, Miss Josie M. Adams, of San Francisco.

Y. M. C. A. BALL TEAM ENJOYS ANNUAL BANQUET

Eleven members and guests of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team enjoyed the annual banquet of the nine in the parlors of the association Friday evening. George C. M. Smith, manager of the team, presided and short speeches were made by Secretary Herbert L. Parker, Physical Director Whitaker, John Fritts, captain of the team, and Mr. Smith. The banquet was served by Mrs. Henry Johnson.

Mr. Parker, spoke encouragingly of baseball as a pastime as well as a character builder. He said the team had reflected credit on the association and hoped that next year they would have even a better one. Captain Fritts took the occasion to thank the members individually for their help during the season just passed. Mr. Smith extended his thanks to the newspapers for their interest and help and Mr. Whitaker spoke hopefully for the coming year.

Those present were: Captain Fritts, Jack Peacock, Platt Adams, Benjamin Adams, Frank Hand, William Coyle, Herbert Marsh Herbert L. Parker, G. C. M. Smith and Thomas G. Whitaker.

WARNOCK'S SOBRIQUET IS "HARD LUCK BILL"

W. W. Warnock, the West Front street baker and confectioner, is a firm believer in the much-used expression that "it never rains but it pours." After the fire department had been summoned to his place of business for the fifth two hours, Friday afternoon, there were many inclined to agree with him.

Mr. Warnock had the misfortune two months ago to fracture his ankle and tear the ligaments by a painful fall. He is now just recovering from this accident, but is still detained from business. Friday morning one of his delivery horses, valued at $175, dropped dead. He refused an offer of $150 for the animal two weeks ago. Mr. Warnock was at his home on Craig place yesterday afternoon when news was brought to him that a bad chimney fire at his bakery had caused $100 damage. He was ready for most anything after that, and when the fire gong blew the same box number two hours later he casually called up on the phone to ask if it might be his place again. He was answered in the affirmative, and he had gotten used to things by that time and merely murmured, "Is that so? Well, if anything else happens let me know." The second alarm was for nothing in particular, however, Mr. Hard Luck Bill not being out any more to the day's damage list.

The first call to Mr. Warnock's place was at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. The chimney leading from his ovens caught fire and blazed up badly. The firemen emptied a tank of chemicals down the opening from the top of the building and part of the liquid and all quantities of soot came out of the bottom, spreading around the bakeshop. Barrels of flour and sugar were spoiled and the nights batch of sponge for bread rendered useless. When the bakers started a new fire in the ovens at 5 o'clock the smoke poured out of an opening in the chimney the firemen had made on the third floor of the building. A passerby thought the place was ablaze and turned in the alarm.

MISS HEATH LOST HER MOTHER AND HUSBAND

Mrs. Emily E. Hoff (nee Randolph), widow of the late Lewis H. Hoff, who died at Overbrook Hospital for the Insane, October 25 last, was the mother of Mrs. Carrie A. H. Heath, who with her husband on October 24 at Newark.

J. Charles Heath, who was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heath and husband of Mrs. Carrie A. H. Heath, died while on duty at the office of the New Jersey Freie Zeitung, Newark, October 24 last.

Surgical Convention.

Dr. H. C. Corbussier, of Park avenue, has returned from a four days' visit to Richmond, Va., where he attended the annual meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons. Dr. Corbussier was commissioned by Governor Fort as a special representative of the New Jersey National Guard, Medical Department, and read a paper before the convention on a surgical subject.

CAUSES OF OBSTINACY

Defined by Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews' and Remedies Suggested.

PATIENCE AND LOVE VITAL.

Vigilance in Controlling Environment, Proper Discipline and Painful Experiences Needed.

Another large audience of mothers attended Friday afternoon to the fourth lecture of the course of lectures to mothers of boys now being given in Y. M. C. A. hall by Rev. F. K. Mathiews. Mr. Mathiews' topic was "Obstinacy and its Relation to Self-Reliance." The audience of the intense interest manifested in the subject by those present, a large number of mothers remained for an open discussion lasting for over an hour.

Mr. Mathiews began by defining the different kinds of obstinacy shown by boys. There are five well defined types, as follows: Atavistic or hereditary, the pervert or habitually obstinate boy, the temperamentally obstinate boy, the stubborn boy and the kind of obstinacy that grows with the first assertion by the boy of his own will.

He then considered the causes of these varying types of obstinacy. The cause of the first type is heredity, of the second a bad environment, of the third a nervous temperament, of the fourth carelessness or lastly asking too much of the child; of the last, bad methods of discipline. Speaking of the causes of the stubborn type, Mr. Mathiews said that stubbornness is often due to the physical, mental and moral deficiencies of the growing boy. It is easy to ask too much of him, to push him too far. Duties must not be made too big for him. Of the child whose obstinacy proceeds from delight in the assertion of its own will, he said that mothers must remember in dealing with such a child that the child's will must assert itself if he is to become a resolute man. It should therefore be sought to direct the will and not to break it.

What will cure boys of obstinacy? The sovereign remedy is much love on the part of the parent until there enters into the mother's love the quality of divine love itself. Another great factor is patience. Impatience will only provoke obstinacy. Again, more knowledge is needed to give depth to love and strength to patience. It is important to have a technical knowledge of the child. Such child study is of advantage, for instance, in dealing with the problem of selfishness—mothers should know as they face this particular problem that the desirable quality of acquisitiveness in the boy which in recent years material civilization, has its roots in the selfishness of the child.

Another effective cure for obstinacy consists in making commands attractive, goodness charming. Illustrating the application of this principle, Mr. Mathiews said that the boy who might not respond quickly to the command "Go out and rake up the leaves," would be likely to carry out quickly the command, "Go out and burn up the leaves." The simple secret of one word for another will often bring obedience. So, in teaching such a virtue as generosity, make the command so attractive that the boy will have joy in his generosity, instead of such an effort that he must give, find a way of appealing to his interests and through them to his generosity.

Vigilance in controlling environment is another cure. Instead of spending much time in thinking of a particular fault, parents should provide an environment that will overcome it. This method should be substituted for immediate interference. Finally, mothers must understand the psychology of obedience. An illustration from Dr. Brumbagh's book, "The Making of a Man," makes plain the elements in the process of obedience. A school boy hears a missionary from Cuba in an appeal for help in carrying on his work. He sees the needs of that island. The boy reacts to the appeal in this way: "I never knew of this great need before; now that I know it, I feel that I ought to do something to relieve it; I will give so much to this work." In the process of obedience knowledge, conscience and will operate in just that way. But not always does knowledge so quickly arouse conscience and conscience so quickly prompt the will to action. Time is required even in adults to pass from knowledge through conscience to will and action. A desire for immediate obedience may often develop obstinacy.

Finally, mothers must be willing to let the boy learn through the discipline of pain. They must have the courage to let the child act for himself when they know that the outcome will be distressing. Christ's method in dealing with Peter must be the method of the mother. He knew that Peter would be broken on the wheel of pain if He let him have his own way, but He also knew that Peter would never forget that he had denied his Lord, and would emerge from the experience a new Peter. Like Jesus, mothers must love their children so well that they will let them learn for themselves through painful experiences and thus come to character.

The next lecture will be given next Friday afternoon at 3:30. The topic will be "The Educational Value of Pride and Its Moral Benefits."

McINTYRE TRIO HEARD

Two Artists New to Plainfield, Given a Cordial Reception.

LARGE AUDIENCE PLEASED.

Schubert's Trio, opus 99, Beautifully Rendered—Albert Quesnel, Tenor, Won Encores for Brilliant Singing.

The McIntyre trio scored a success at its initial chamber music concert Thursday night in the High School auditorium. This is the beginning of Mr. McIntyre's sixth season and judging by last night's liberal program the entire series is assured of large audiences.

In past seasons Mr. McIntyre has given Plainfield audiences thoroughly enjoyable ensemble music, but it is doubtful if any program of the past equaled that of last night for variety and beauty. In William Grafton King he has a violinist of premier rank and one who will be heard in Plainfield in future work. At last night's performance by Mr. King showed him to be a master of his art. He played with passionate devotion and supreme ability. His phrasing is that of an artist with a keen perception of the subtleties and his avoidance of the non-essentials remarkably keen.

Of Horace Britt, the 'cellist, nothing but praise can be said. While this consummate artist was not heard in any but incidental solos in Schubert's Trio, opus 99, his playing showed talent, technique and style and a sensitive sympathy of soul which inutitively identifies itself with the moods of the composer to its interpretation. Plainfielders will be keen to hear more of Mr. Britt's eloquent and pleasing work.

The singer last night, Albert Quesnel, a French tenor, showed versatility and power, especially as being observable in the aria from La Gioconda, the first vocal solo on the program. Mr. Quesnel sang with ease the high B flat and responded with an encore "I Hear You Calling," a dainty 6-8 time, delightful composition which brought tremendous applause. His other three numbers, works of Strauss, Worden and Beach were happily rendered and again the big audience would not be satisfied without an encore song.

As to Mr. McIntyre's work at the piano there was nothing left to be desired. Always the master of the instrument, he performed without a flaw the difficult accompaniments of the evening and in the Trio he earned loud applause for his magnificent work. The nimble play of the pianists fingers was most notable in the third movement of Schubert's masterpiece. From the andante to the scherzo, a change of moods, Mr. McIntyre showed himself at his best, creating a feeling of confidence and pleasure which will remain indelibly impressed upon the memory. The next concert will present as soloist Madame Hissem De Moss, soprano, December 15. The program follows:

Schubert—Trio opus 99 in B flat major, for piano, violin and 'cello; Allegro Moderato, Andante un poco mosso, Scherzo (Allegro non troppo) (Allegro Vivace); tenor solo, Pinchielli—Aria from "La Gioconda;" violin solo; Wieniawski—(a), Legende, opus 17; (8), Capriccio-Valse opus 7; songs—(a), Strauss—Serenade; (b), Worden—"Till I Wake; (c), Beach—Ah! but a Day.

WOMEN'S MISSION BAND DISCUSS IMMIGRATION.

An interesting report of the recent missionary conference held in Newark was given by Miss Winifred Rapalje, at the meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon. The topic "Immigration," which has been chosen for the winter's program, proved interesting to the young women present and gives promise of being instructive.

There was also a discussion of the entertainment to be given at the church on December 9, it being reported that all the details are progressing favorably. Mrs. Leonard S. Smith, as president of the band, conducted the business session; Miss Mabel Wilson led the devotional exercises and Miss Cora Ryno had charge of the program.

DEATH OF REV. DR. TAYLOR

Retired Clergyman Succumbs in His Ninty-Third Year.

WAS 54 YEARS IN MINISTRY.

Honored by Trinity College With Degree of Doctor of Divinity —Founder of a School— Funeral Tuesday.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Pemberton Taylor, one of the oldest retired Episcopal clergymen in the State, died Saturday at 5 o'clock a. m. at his home, 698 West Seventh street, from infirmities incidental to old age. The funeral services were held in Grace Episcopal church on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector, officiating.

Rev. Dr. Taylor was born at Glastonbury, Conn., January 11, 1818. He graduated from Trinity College, Hartford, in 1842 and was ordained at St. John's P. E. church, Stamford, Conn., in 1847 and became assistant to the rector of that church. From Stamford Dr. Taylor went to Christ church, Reading, Ridge, where he remained until called to Trinity church, Pittsburg, Pa.

Following this charge Dr. Taylor assumed the rectorship of Christ church, New Brighton, Pa., and from there to the Kenwood school for boys of which he was headmaster for twenty years.

On a special call Dr. Taylor went to St. Paul's New Brunswick, where during his incumbency he built a successful mission. From New Brunswick he became rector of St. John's, Camden, and while there was instrumental in building St. Winifred's church at Cramer Hill, which has since become a large parish. He became rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest in this city in 1885, and after seven years' service there went to Christ church, Middletown, where he preached for nine years.

Rev. Dr. Taylor received an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Trinity College, Hartford, in 1888 and had ceased active church work since 1901.

MRS. STRADER BRIDE OF JOHN A. SCHNEIDER

A quiet wedding took place at the parsonage of the First Baptist church Elizabeth, Thursday when Mrs. Abby K. Strader became the bride of John A. Schneider. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. E. F. Tomlinson, pastor of the church, and was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Woolley, of the Bristol apartments.

After the ceremony the wedding party motored to Newark, where a supper was served at Achstetter's. The party returned to Plainfield last night and Mr. and Mrs. Schneider repaired to the Bristol.

The bride is superintendent of the Plainfield branch of the Morey La-Rue Laundry Co., and will continue in that capacity where she has been for the past twelve years until the end of this month, when the couple will go to Valois, N. Y., for a wedding trip of several weeks. Mr. Schneider is chauffeur for E. A. Middlekauf and has lived in Plainfield for nine years. Miss Madeline Strader, who is a pupil in the High School will continue to reside with her mother at the Bristol. The wedding was a surprise to the friends of the couple.

FREE PUBLIC LECTURES AT HIGH SCHOOL

At a meeting last Monday evening the Board of Education decided to make a tentative beginning of work for the instruction of the adult public, such as is carried on by Newark, Jersey City and New York and other cities by means of public lectures and entertainments.

The first one will be given by Nat M. Brigham, in the Washington School auditorium, on the evening of December 8, the subject being, "The Grand Canyon of Arizona," illustrated with 125 beautifully colored stereopticon views. Mr. Brigham is a Harvard man who went West and became U. S. marshal for the Territory of Utah. His experience there led him onto the lecture platform, to which he has devoted his time for some years. The lecture will be free to the general public.

Democratic Meeting Tonight.

All Democrats of Plainfield and North Plainfield are invited to attend a meeting in the club rooms at North and Park avenues tonight to make arrangements for the parade Monday night. All strangers are invited.

Dr. Herring Owns an Auto.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, is the first of the local clergy to possess an automobile, and he finds it a great convenience in attending to the many duties of his pastoral work.

ADDRESSED DRUGGISTS

Prof. Kraemer and Drs. Schlichter, Quinn and Corbusier Made Speeches.

BEFORE UNION CO. SOCIETY.

President J. G. Smith Acted as Toastmaster at Banquet Held at "The Homestead."

The Union County Retail Druggists' Association met at the Y. M.C. A. hall Thursday afternoon and after transacting routine business, including the reception of various reports from committees and the delegates to the National Druggists' Association, adjourned to "The Homestead" on Washington avenue where by appointment of the association the medical members of the joint committee of the Union County Medical Association and the Union County Retail Druggists' Association present, had much to offer of benefit to both associations.

The members of the medical committee were Dr. Charles Schlichter and Dr. S. T. Quinn, of Elizabeth; and Dr. H. D. Corbusier, of this city, representing the Plainfield Clinical Society, who was present to represent the other member who was unable to attend.

The association derived much benefit by the conference held in open meeting as to the duties of both associations at the banquet held at "The Homestead," which was prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson. The association was also greatly honored by the presence of Prof. Henry Kraemer, Ph. M., Ph. D., instructor in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy; also author of books on botany and Pharmacognosy, who undoubtedly is without a peer in his profession in the United States.

Although a most modest and retiring man, he is a fund of knowledge and has a capacity of imparting the same which made his remarks a veritable mental feast for the knights of the mortar and pestle, as well as those of the medical profession that were present. There was also present David Strauss, of the New Jersey Board of Pharmacy, who gave an interesting talk on "Pharmaceutical and Pure Food Legislation." Dr. S. T. Quinn and Dr. Schlichter also addressed the gathering giving some plain talk on questions of vital interest and importance.

J. G. Smith, of Rahway, president of the county association, was the toastmaster last evening, and was assisted by T. S. Armstrong in extending a welcome to the members. William Reichardt, secretary of the association, acted in his capacity.

WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

The Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in its rooms at Reform Hall, Friday, when a special program of music, readings and recitations together with addresses by the members and visiting officers and veterans, combined to make an evening of pleasure for all. There was a large delegation of members from the West Orange Corps of New Brunswick, and Department President Mrs. Clara Brown and Mrs. Decker, chief of staff, both of Jersey City, were also present.

Mrs. Henry Frazee, president of the local corps, was in charge of the exercises, and Mrs. Hattie Gibbons was chairman of the entertainment committee, the corps acting as a committee of the whole. The program comprised readings by Mrs. Hattie Gibbons, recitations by Miss Try Masters, vocal selections by Mrs. John Mauley, Miss Evelyn Manley; piano selections by Miss Clara Barton Smith and Mrs. S. R. Struthers.

There were also addresses by Mrs. Henry Frazee, Mrs. Clara Brown, Mrs. Decker, Captain William C. Smith, Mrs. Struthers and there were also instrumental selections by Mrs. I. C. Cubberly and Albert Naylor. Captain Smith in his remarks gave an informal historical sketch of the corps recalling the time it was organized and the purpose, which it had carried out faithfully. Among the charter members present last night were Mrs. Charles Westphal and Mrs. W. C. Smith.

Following the program, refreshments were served under the direction of a committee comprising Mrs. Hattie Gibbons, Mrs. Kitchell and Mrs. Albert Naylor. Mrs. Annie Smith received the silver offering at the door

"Ladies' Day" at Hunt Club.

Saturday, November 19, will be "ladies' day" at the Watchung Hunt Club. The hounds will meet (weather permitting) at the clubhouse at 3:30 o'clock. All riding members are invited. An invitation is extended to all persons who are fond of riding, as the run will only be a gallop, across field. Miss Mabel B. Hooley will be acting master for the afternoon. Tea will be served at the clubhouse after the run.

WARREN'S FIRST WEDDING

REV. McKELVEY OFFICIATES.

Miss Adele Hope Kirby Maid-of-Honor and Augustus Windham Best Man—Couple to Reside Here.

Miss Nora Brown Schenck, daughter of Mrs. Lilloss Ferrier Schenck, of 40 Manning avenue, and Charles Frederick Windham, also of the borough, were married in Warren chapel at 7:30 Thursday night, in the presence of about 250 relatives and friends. It was the first wedding held in the chapel.

Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, performed the ceremony. The bride's only attendant was Miss Adele Hope Kirby, her Sunday school teacher, who was the maid of honor. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John Schenck, of the borough. The bride's gown was of white satin messaline, hand embroidered, and trimmed with lace. She wore a tulle veil, caught up with lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor's gown was of Nile green silk mull, embroidered with white batiste. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and wore a bride's gift, a crown forget-me-not pin set with pearls.

The best man was Augustus Windham, of New York, a brother of the groom, and the ushers were W. H. Cox, secretary of the Railroad Y. M. C. A., at Camden; Clarence R. Lane, Alexander Galloway and William LaTourette, of this city.

Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey presided at the organ and from 7 to 7:30 she rendered a program of classical selections, including Swedish wedding music by Sodermann; also "Polish Serenade," Kaser; "Gavotte," Thomas, and selection from "A Day in Venice," Nevins. As the bridal party entered the chapel, the Wedding March from Lohengrin was played and at the conclusion of the ceremony, the Mendelssohn Wedding March was rendered.

The chapel was elaborately decorated for the wedding, there being profusion of white chrysanthemums, and palms, all banked up about the pulpit platform and choir rails, and extending up to the ceiling of the auditorium. The whole decorative scheme of green and white and was carried out in an attractive way by Alfred Everitt.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother on Manning avenue, where a large number of people gathered to congratulate the couple. The decorations consisted of white chrysanthemums and palms in the parlors and yellow chrysanthemums in the dining room. During the evening an elaborate supper was served.

The bride received a large collection of gifts, comprising cut-glass, furniture, china, solid silver and including a solid silver service from the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel. Both Mr. and Mrs. Windham have been active workers in Warren chapel, especially the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society. The bride was soprano soloist at the chapel for several years, while Mr. Windham has been president of the Endeavor Society and interested in other departments of religious work.

Mr. Windham holds a Government position, and is located in Newark. The bride was employed for several years by the Woodhull & Martin Company and both have a large acquaintance. The couple left last night on a wedding trip and upon their return will reside with the bride's mother for awhile. Among the guests at the wedding and reception were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Sproull, the former being State president of the Christian Endeavor Society.

FIRE IN BOROUGH HOME CAUSES $100 DAMAGE.

The borough fire department was called out at 6:15 last evening for a small blaze at the home of William Hanton, Jackson and Watervelt avenues. It was in a clothes press on the second floor and was confined to the one room.

The flames were extinguished by chemicals before gaining any great headway. The press and its contents were destroyed. The damage is placed at $100.

Dinners for Poor Families.

Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Little Missionary Day Nursery, New York, and the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, is planning to provide Thanksgiving Day dinners for the poor mothers, and she makes an appeal to friends of the work to help her in carrying out her purpose. Last year six thousand families were served with dinners.

Applying an Old Adage.

"Why do you always wait on your children first instead of keeping the company?" asked the inquisitive guest.

"Well," replied the father, who was also a baseball fan, "you know youth must be served."

LYING COST THE CAUSE

Miss Richards in Discussing Politics Accounts for the Landslide.

DWELLS ON THE TARIFF.

Spirit of Federalism for Which Roosevelt is Responsible—

Checking the Greedy Trusts.

The first lecture in the series of nine talks on current history, by Miss Janet E. Richards, of Washington, D. C., was given Thursday afternoon in the Hartridge auditorium before a large and keenly interested audience. Miss Richards, who is already well known to Plainfield through her series of delightful talks last winter, was introduced by Mrs. Percy Stewart, who on behalf of the audience welcomed her back to Plainfield.

In reviewing the very recent political campaign in America, Miss Richards explained to her listeners that in order to understand the present situation a backward glance must be taken, so that the source of the various issues be clearly understood, and by weaving the facts together a fabric similar to that of the historians be gained and the whole matter regarded from the historical viewpoint.

As an instance in point, the present democratic landslide is only fully understandable when past circumstances are reviewed.

Up to the candidacy of Bryan in 1896 party solidarity had been sharply defined, but from that date on both Republicans and Democrats began to do more of their own thinking and a direct necessity by party issues. The birth of the great industrial corporations occurred at this time, called into being by ruinous competition, they in turn became the mothers of our modern trusts and from henceforward a struggle has been waged between the people and these robber barons of industry who though but one half of one per cent. of the population seek to control the whole country. From this epoch also dates the growth of Federal Law caused primarily by the confusion of interstate laws. The necessity of providing a law covering interstate transportation, a national and therefore a uniform basis, gave rise to the Interstate Commerce Law. The federalizing of business has been the tendency of the past ten years, and now President Taft recommends that the trusts obtain their charters from the federal instead of from the State government, thus extending the federal power and placing a valuable weapon in the hands of the people for their struggle against capital. The tendency today is to divorce business from politics, and in politics the will of the people may be made known by reassuming the power handed over in times past to be political parties.

As a means of obtaining this free expression of the people's will the direct nominations are specially valuable. The direct nomination as today practiced too often resulting in the professional caucus, and made up state headed by one or two good men to draw the vote, and the secret action of the corrupt Democratic and Republican parties for the return of some unscrupulous candidate whose election brings gain to both corrupt machines.

The party caucus in its association and environment often so distasteful to our best citizens is not now responsible for their failure to take an active political part, but our country being still in a formative period and vast with marvelous resources our best men are occupied in developing the country and have left politics to the machine.

As an illustration of the check which rapacious trusts are receiving Miss Richards cited the case of the fair Woods in California, a forest of marvellous almost prehistoric white pines, which coveted by the railroad trust were saved by Mr. Kent, a public spirited private citizen who bought and presented them first to the State and failing to save them by this means as the railroads controlled the State he made this gift over to the Federal government in Washington as a National Park.

Complicated as was the nature of the late campaign owing to the splits in the old political parties into Progressives or Insurgents, Regulars or Standpatters and the fusion of the parties on some special point, several of the fundamental issues stand out.

The growth of Federalism under Mr. Roosevelt has bred in some the fear of centralization, with loss of state rights, and that he claims leadership is another charge laid solely at wrong at his door; but possibly accountable for his success in the west and failure in the east, he predicts, however, that this is only the commencement of the fight, and that the real reason for the Democratic landslide is to found in the increased cost of living occasioned by the raised tariff.

Three viewpoints of the tariff were presented. First, the tariff was necessary revenue raiser for the government. Second, it was a means of maintaining the present high wages for the laborer as represented by it justly applied the difference between the cost of production in America and in other countries. Thirdly came the relation of the tariff to the consumer. The increased cost of living is popularly attributed to the Payne-Aldrich tariff by which out of 5,000 scheduled articles, 600 chiefly unsought for objects such as lemon juice in bottles, lifeboats, etc., were lowered and all the other schedules raised quite in opposition to President Taft's desire that the tariff should be revised to meet the difference in the cost of production in America as compared with the cheaper laborer abroad. A great evil of the increased tariff on such staples as wool, cotton and women's wearing apparel, is the resultant poorer quality and adulteration of clothing fabrics produced to meet the purses of the poor. When the fact is realized that eight millions of inhabitants of this country average an annual income of $600 for the support of four people, the problem of increased cost of living becomes serious and vital. The people are thinking against corrupt party doings and we are in a transition period it remains to be seen how the Democrats will solve their problem.

At the close of the lecture Miss Richards was most heartily applauded. The next talk will be on Dec. 9, on "Child Labor and its Remedy," on Thanksgiving Day this postponed talk will be given at the end of the course.

IRISHMAN IN JUNGLE THEME OF MINISTER

Under the auspices of the Temple Baptist church and for the benefit of its building fund, the Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, gave his lecture, "An Irishman in the Jungles of Africa," at the First Baptist church Thursday. There was a large and appreciative audience present to hear this interesting and instructive description of Mr. Maguire, covering the important points of a period of seven years in Africa as a missionary. The lecture was exactly the same as given in the Park Avenue Baptist church October 13, which was fully reported in The Daily Press.

Mr. Maguire in connection with his talk last night, exhibited the many curios which he collected in Africa, using them frequently throughout his talk to explain the manners and customs of the natives of Africa. The speaker held the close attention of his hearers for more than two hours. After the lecture many remained to examine the curios.

This was the second entertainment in the course of four arranged for the benefit of the Temple Baptist church, the first one being given by Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton. The third will be a lecture by L. V. F. Randolph on Thursday night, November 17, on "Ancient Carthage and Modern Tunis." The fourth entertainment will be a musical under the direction of Howard M. Case to be given Tuesday evening, November 29.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION ON DEATH OF MR. MARSH

Mayor Fisk, Saturday morning on hearing the sad message of Plainfield's loss of one of its most eminent citizens, issued the following proclamation:

To the Citizens of Plainfield:

Craig Adams Marsh, for more than 25 years corporation counsel for the city of Plainfield, died at his home this morning.

As mayor of this city, I feel it but fitting to bear public testimony to the memory of one who through long years of service discharged his every duty with absolute fidelity.

He ranked as one of the leaders of the New Jersey Bar, eminent in his profession, and thoroughly wedded to his work, no call upon him ever went unheeded.

The interests of this city, many and diversified, he safeguarded as he did the interests of his own children and today, fair among all the cities of the State, owes to him now, and for long years to come will owe more to Mr. Marsh than can well be expressed.

Summoned without warning to lay aside his busy labors, he leaves behind him a record without parallel in the history of our city for ability and faithfulness in guiding us in right ways.

Well has he earned the rest which is now his. We have lost an able adviser, a faithful servant and a good friend. Peace to his memory.

Given under my hand at the City of Plainfield, this 12th day of November, A. D. 1910.

(Signed) CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 20, 1910.

Topic—How does God want to be thanked? Ps. cl. 6. (Thanksgiving meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In selecting a portion of the Scripture upon the subject of thanksgiving we naturally turn to the Psalms. Here David and the other Hebrew song writers pour out their soul experiences. Moreover, David especially enumerates the blessings he has received from God and is constantly thanking and praising Him for them.

In this respect as in many others we should emulate the example of the great psalmist.

The One Hundredth Psalm is one of the most familiar of the Psalms, and its five verses are one continuous call to praise and thanksgiving.

In this respect it should be an inspiration and a communion to us in life. God is worthy of constant praise and thanksgiving. "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord. * * * to remember His loving kindness in the morning and His faithfulness every night."

God wants all to praise Him. The psalmist writes under inspiration and thus speaks for God when he calls upon "all the land" to praise Him and be joyful before Him. "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands." This can only be done by the inhabitants of the lands who are here included in the word "lands." The lands, the material earth, cannot praise God, but the people and all lands suggests all peoples, nations, kindreds and tongues. In these we are included and should do our part in obeying this call to praise and thanksgiving to God.

God wants us to praise Him in service. "Serve the Lord with gladness." Thanksgiving of heart and tongue is an essential form of praise, but the true test of real gratitude is a life of service for God. We must do what He wants us to do and be what He wants us to be. Thanksgiving must come in thanksgiving or it is plainly evident that it lacks sincerity and genuineness.

God wants us to thank Him in the public congregation. "Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise; be thankful unto Him and bless His name." Privately as well as privately we should praise God. This should be the regular practice of our life. The Lord's day should always mean public worship in His house.

God wants us to thank Him cheerfully. This idea is as a chain throughout this psalm. We are called upon "to make a joyful noise," "to serve the Lord with gladness" and to "come before His presence with singing." How the changes are rung on cheerfulness — "joyful," "gladness," "singing." The basest form of ingratitude is a begrudging and sullen thanksgiving. True thanksgiving must be cheerfully and joyously expressed or it will fall upon deaf ears and produce no joyous responsive notes in the heart of the one for whom it is intended.

God wants us to thank Him for what He is and does. He is worthy of all our praise, for He the Lord is God. He is good. "His mercy is everlasting, and His truth endureth to all generations."

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xii, 1-4; Hiz xiii, 1-9; xiviii, 1, 2; xcv, 1-11; cxvi, 12-19; cxxii, 1-9; Matt. x, 7, 8; Rom. xiv, 6-8, 17; Phil. iv, 4; Jas. v, 13; Heb. xiii, 12-17; Luke 8, 8-14.

A Rise In Mission Gifts.

For some years the Dunmore, Mass., Presbyterian Christian Endeavorers gave $25 a year for missions. The money was raised with difficulty by assessing each member $1 a year. Two years ago a friend promised to subscribe $25 to the missionary fund if the society would raise $100 during the twelve months. The missionary committee got together and arranged to take pledges to be paid monthly. The society, including all the male members, is pledging from 5 to 50 cents a month. Under a portrait of Dr. Jessup of Syria, for whose support the society was working, a pledge chart was hung. Opposite the names of the "pledgers" twelve divisions were marked off, and each month the treasurer placed a cross on the amount of the pledge opposite the names of those that paid. At the end of the year the society had $125, and the gifts for home work were largely increased. The plan was tried the second year. This time $200 has been collected—$175 more than two years ago. During the past twelve months, writes Mr. John G. Moffat, the society also raised $197 for home work. This is only the money side of the question. Rich spiritual blessing has come to the workers, and one young woman has decided to devote her life to missionary work.

A London President's Plans.

Rev. F. B. Meyer had not been back in London after his trip to America four days when he met the executives of the Christian Endeavor council and planned with them for his work next fall as president of the London Christian Endeavor union. The leaders hold fifteen great conferences for young people on Saturday afternoons and evenings, and experts will speak on such subjects as "Living In and Living Out." "Employment and the Lack of It," and "Courtship." Two of these conferences will be held each month. These meetings will be thoroughly organized, and an attempt will be made to reach thousands of young people usually outside the influence of Christian Endeavor. Dr. Meyer believes that Christian Endeavor can touch the lives of young men at a new point, and he will try to demonstrate the truth of this.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Will It Be Smith?

Nothing can prevent the election of a Democrat to succeed John Kean in the United States Senate. It is not unreasonable that we should wonder who the man will be.

James E. Martine, taking advantage of the primary law, tested his popularity with the people and made a creditable showing. He will, undoubtedly, get a compliment ary vote. That is about all that Mr. Martine has ever received at the hands of his party in spite of the fact that he has been an almost constant candidate for public office.

Frank S. Katzenbach, of this city, has been mentioned in connection with the honor, but, considering the fact that his county contributed little to the success of the Democratic party last Tuesday, we are led to the conclusion that he is not seriously in the running.

The State Gazette has believed that, in the event of the election of enough members of the legislature to give the Democrats a majority on joint ballot, James Smith, Jr., would be a winning candidate for United States Senator. It still has that belief, and sincerely represents the existence of such a possibility.

When James Smith, Jr., was a member of the United States Senate sixteen years ago he was an enemy of the industries of New Jersey. He lent his influence to the forwarding of policies that were inimical to the interests of the business men and the workingmen of New Jersey.

There is no reason to believe that he has changed his attitude towards the policy of protection.

The opportunity that James Smith Jr. has worked and fought for ever since the Republicans came into power in the State of New Jersey has been handed to him by independent Republicans, and he will not be slow to take advantage of it. —Trenton State Gazette.

LAW COMPELS GIRL TO BREAK SOLEMN PROMISE.

Unable to keep the promise given her mother on her deathbed, that she would continue to keep house for her eighteen-year-old brother, because Truant Officer Sperry and Robert Flemming, of the S. P. C. A., decided that she should go to school, fourteen-year-old Margaret Kern left her home, 179 Dales avenue, Jersey City, and went to live with her aunt, Mrs. Kemery, of 87 West Side avenue.

A few hours before she died the mother called the two children to her bedside and made the girl promise that she would keep house for her brother, who worked in a Jersey City shop for $11 a week. The boy was made to promise that he would live with his sister. The boy and sister took apartments at 179 Dale avenue a few weeks later.

Robert Flemming, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, was called on the case, and after hearing the girl's story decided that she was too young to have the responsibility of housekeeping. He ordered her to go and live with her aunt and continue to go to school.

BOROUGH'S DEMOCRATS CELEBRATED VICTORY

The jubilancy of the borough Democrats over Tuesday's election found vent, Thursday, in a parade and jollification. Several hundred participated in it and during the procession end of it, red fire and cheers were plentiful. Spectators along the route joining in the demonstration.

The celebrants first met at North Plainfield Democratic headquarters, on Somerset street. They were marshaled into line by David Bodine and accompanied by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, marched through the principal streets of the city and borough. The procession was headed by Samuel Dodge, dressed as Uncle Sam, and fifteen tried and true Jeffersonians followed on horseback. Next came a gaudy decorated automobile carrying the successful Democratic candidates, Frank Mobus and George Kirch, also Walter Linbarger, the borough leader. About fifty of the men and file brought up the rear. The main body carried numerous transparencies bearing the phrases, "Whose Looney Now," "O you 423 majority," referring to Frank Mobus, and "The Little Schoolmaster," meaning Woodrow Wilson.

On completing the march, the celebrants returned to headquarters, where cigars were passed and a general handshaking bee declared in order. An address was made by S. S. Swackhamer, in which he congratulated the Democrats on their signal victories and foreteasted still further success for the party in years to come.

ANNUAL BALL OF POLICE LAWMAKERS' PERSONNEL CALLED TO HER REWARD

SAENGERBUND HALL FILLED.

Most Successful Affair Ever Held by the Guardians of the Peace—

Saffron in General Charge.

Probably the largest crowd that has ever been noted in Saengerbund Hall was in attendance Thursday, when the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association gave its second annual ball. From 8:30 in the evening until 2 o'clock this morning the dancing floor, balcony, and lower dining room were almost one mass of people. It was one of those typically jolly gatherings, however, and everyone declared they had the time of their lives.

Anderson's orchestra from Newark furnished excellent music for the dancing and practically the entire committee was kept busy managing the floor. The program numbers were dedicated to local officials, some of the titles being exceptionally appropriate. "If you don't want your money you needn't come around," was a two-step in honor of City Treasurer Arnold and another one "Good-bye Willie, how we hate to see you go," was labelled for City Judge Runyon.

Between dances the gathering was entertained by professional vaudeville talent. Frank Poland, the well known character vocalist, rendered half a dozen popular songs and John Gorman sang, danced and talked his way into the hearts of the crowd. This part of the program was greatly appreciated.

Included in the attendance was a large number of invited guests. Among them were city and borough officials, police chiefs from surrounding towns and friends of the two departments. They were taken in hand as soon as they arrived by President Charles Flynn, of the association, and Chairman Charles Keller, of the reception committee, and shown every attention. Each one was provided with a badge and huge boutonniere which gave them access to every part of the hall. The guests were loud in their praises of the treatment accorded them.

Taken altogether the ball was far more successful than its associators had anticipated and each and every member as well as the organization as a whole extends its thanks to all who assisted in it. The proceeds will be added to the P. B. A. fund.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of the following: Andrew Saffron, general chairman; Charles Keller, chairman reception committee; W. G. Messler, D. J. Mac Donald, G. C. Traynor, George K. Dobson, Charles A. Flynn, Dennis F. O'Kee'e, Lemuel Pope, Cornelius McCarthy, Nicholas Mayre, Arthur McGinley, Thomas Flatley, Frank Sweeney, Tobias W. Nolan, James A. Saunders, J. C. Rosecrans, W. Stanwitz, J. J. Darcy, C. A. Marchant and F. J. Cressman.

LITERARY

Never at any time since the early days of the party has the Republican cause in the State of New York been so free from the taint of improper pecuniary support as this year. The Democrats have no money for the kind of Republicanism that Mr. Stimson and Mr. Roosevelt believe in. It remains to be seen what the voters will think of a situation of this kind. All the interests and individuals whose connection with the Republican party has inju.ed it are now working against Stimson.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for November.

"The Lady of the Spur," David Potter's brilliant new novel, has met with so many encomiums that it is safe to say that "An Accidental Honeymoon," a complete novelette by this author, in the November Lippincott's, will find a host of eager readers. Mr. Potter's latest story is of modern times, and the scenes are laid in Maryland. His plot is refreshingly novel and delightfully handled. The heroine is one of the "fetchingest" little persons in the realm of fiction.

Anyone who likes excitement will be more than ordinarily interested in the news that The Ridgway Company, the well-known publishers of Everybody's Magazine, have issued a new publication which will be entirely devoted to "the most interesting and thrilling adventure stories to be found anywhere." It's called Adventure, and the first number has just made its appearance. If the contents of this issue can be considered a fair sample of what is to follow, it is safe to assume that the publishers have found what they are looking for—and then some.

C. E. SOCIETY ACTIVE IN NETHERWOOD REFORMED.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Netherwood Reformed church gave an entertainment in the church last evening at which John Gangloff, of Dunellen, was the bright and particular star. He gave some some of his clever impersonations and recited several humorous selections which were heartily applauded.

The entertainment was given for the benefit of the C. E. treasury and the returns were very satisfactory. The Endeavorers are going to give a play in the near future and it is said that they are doing fine work in their preparation for the event.

"Drive me to the courts of justice," cried Lord Coleridge to a cabby.

"Courts of justice? Where be they?"

"What! You a London cabman, don't know where the law courts are?"

"Oh, the law courts; but you said 'courts of justice.'"—From "Thirty Years in the Divorce Court."

A Dressmaking Hint.

In stitching the work drops over the machine and often is dragged into the wheel. A plain cretonne curtain, tucked just under the shelf or table of the machine, helps wonderfully with this trouble. Tacks must not be left out to catch on the work.

Mrs. Alexander Willet Dies After Six Weeks Illness

Aged 76 Years.

FALL HASTENED HER END.

Three Sons and Also Three Sisters Survive Her—The Funeral Services Monday Afternoon.

Mrs. Maria O. Willett, widow of Alexander Willett, aged seventy-six years, died at her home, 28 Craig place, at 3 Saturday morning, following an illness which began six weeks ago, when she fell and fractured her hip. Prior to that time she enjoyed excellent health and was in full possession of her faculties. She sustained a severe shock by the fall from which she seemed unable to recover and during the past few days she failed rapidly.

Mrs. Willett was born at Pluckemin, her maiden name being Maria O. Kline. The family lived a short time in Jersey City, and then removed to North Plainfield, where Mrs. Willett resided for about forty years. She was a devout Christian woman, devoted to her home and her family, and a faithful member and attendant of Trinity Reformed church. She was beloved by all who knew her, and there are many who mourn her loss.

There are surviving three sons, Alfred K. Willett A. H. Willett, who are engaged in the shoe business in this city, succeeding their father, who was a pioneer merchant, and Frank H. Willett, also three sisters, Mrs. T. S. Armstrong and Mrs. Albertus Swaim, of the borough, and Mrs. Elizabeth Startup, of Middletown, N. Y. There are also four grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Willett.

The funeral service will be held at the late residence, 28 Craig place, Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. The burial will be in the family plot at Bound Brook.

$50,000 BEQUEATHED DREW SEMINARY

More than $100,000 is bequeathed to religious and charitable work in the will of Samuel W. Bowne, of the firm of Scott & Bowne, which was filed for probate in New York, yesterday. Mr. Bowne was president of the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society. He died on October 29 last.

The bequests follow: Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., $50,000; Kindergarten Association of New York, $5,000; Drew Ladies' Seminary, Carmel, N. Y., $5,000; Five Points Mission, $6,000; St. Christopher's Home, Dobbs Ferry, $6,000; Old People's Home of the Methodist Episcopal church, $6,000; New York Deaconesses' Home, $12,000, and $18,000 to the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society.

Dickinson College, Syracuse University and Wesleyan University are to receive bequests of $6,000 each. More than one hundred and twenty shares of stock of the Scott & Bowne Company are distributed by the will among these institutions: Jerry McAuley Mission, Pennington Seminary and Hadley Hall Mission.

Mrs. Nettie Bowne, the testator's widow, retains the love of the will receives $20,000 outright and the income from a trust fund of $50,000.

THE REVIVED CAMAIL.

The camail is a kind of capuchin, the lining of which is shown a little in front, and then more and more until at the back the resemblance to a hood is close.

Black velvet, of a beautiful and very deep shade of blue with a lining of grey-blue satin, the camail is fastened on one side by means of tarnished silver loops and buttons, and there is an edging of bear where the velvet is cut to shape.

Worn with a dress made of blue velvet it is beautiful. One is mind, with a high waist-belt, has the blouse corsage and sleeves repeat the paler grey-blue satin used for the capuchin lining, and all are covered with dark blue soutache. On the crown of the blue satin hat bearskin is draped and a big muff of the same pelt is carried.

Lamb Broth.

When making a broth, use a quart of water to every pound of meat and bone. Cut the meat and crack the bone. Soup should boil slowly always. When all is thoroughly done strain through a sieve or serge bag. Reheat before serving with cubes of toasted bread or some well-cooked rice.

A Touching Affair.

Griggs—I see that by using a stethoscope and a sensative telephone relay, with persons suffering with heart troubles, physicians can keep in better touch with their patients.

Diggs—I wonder if the doctors will touch them harder or oftener. —Yonkers Statesman.

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Nightmare" at the Herald Square Theatre, under the management of Lew Fields, continues to be a source of endless merriment for thousands of playgoers every week. Tillie, the household drudge in a small town, who dreamed of wonderful riches in New York, is quite the funniest character we have seen of late. Miss Dressler, She is on the stage almost without interruption during the entire performance, and the audience is in a continual uproar of laughter. The production calls for many different scenes, and every episode of the nightmare is staged most lavishly. People who go to see Miss Dressler in "Tillie's Nightmare" get the habit and keep on going, just to have the same long laugh all over again. Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The story of "The Girl in the Taxi" is so laughable and complicated that it defies adequate description in words. It must be seen to be appreciated properly. That it is being relished is evidenced by the overflowing audiences which are flocking to the Astor Theatre for an early glimpse of this latest sensation from abroad. Mignon is the name of "the girl in the taxi" and it is around her escapades with young Bertie Stewart, a boy of twenty who has never before kept late appointments with ladies and who is forced to pawn his father's clothes to scrape together enough money to pay for Mignon's first supper, that the chief interest of the piece revolves. Bertie has a father, John Stewart, a wealthy banker, and a nephew from Philadelphia, Percy Peters, who likewise finds much enjoyment in sneaking away to keep secret appointments. It is the unexpected meeting of these three characters in a well-known Broadway cafe under rather unconventional circumstances that makes a climax which bursts like a bomb and causes the audience almost to roll out of its seat with merriment. As one New York critic wrote, "The Astor Theatre was fairly rocked to its foundations with peals of laughter that swept the auditorium like discharges from a gatling gun."

The role of Gabnor Arany exacted by Leo Ditrichstein in "The Concert" now playing at the Belasco Theatre in New York, is one of the most difficult in all the repertoire of drama, ancient or modern. Gabnor Arany is a piano virtuoso, and only a piano virtuoso could possibly play the part because of the very difficult music which it is necessary she shall execute in full view of the audience. Mr. Ditrichstein, a Hungarian by birth, was a pianist of great promise before he became an actor. At five years of age he was known all over Austro-Hungary as a child virtuoso, and among his dearest treasures today are the programs of a concert tour he made there before he was seven years old.

William Gillette's newest play, "Electricity," in which Miss Marie Doro has the principal part, had its first performance in New York at the Lyceum Theatre Monday night, October 31. There is humanity, whimsical fancy and a considerable range of humor in Mr. Gillette's newest work as playwright. In its serious moments the author drives home not a little homely American philosophy, and insinuates rather than expounds the motive behind the play. The cast for "Electricity" includes Oliver D. Byron, Miss Marie Doro, Shelley Hall, Edwin Nicander, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Francis D. McGinn and others. Following is the complete cast: Duncan K. Twimbly, Oliver D. Byron; Samuel Twimbly, Edwin Nicander; James Hollenden, Shelley Hull; Emeline Twimbly, Marie Doro; Ruth Draycott, Ann Murdock; A. Boker, Harry Barfoot; Ninette, L. De Bellefraie, Thomas Brockway, Francis D. McGinn; Mary Brockway, Mrs. Thos. Whiffen; Bill Brockway, Henry Hall; Joe Matchson, Allan Fawcett; Jennie Parks, Myrtle Tannehill.

LAUNDERING CURTAINS.

Soak lace curtains over night in a tube of lukewarm water to which is added two tablespoons of ammonia and one-quarter cake of laundry soap shaved fine. Drain off the water, but do not lift out the curtains, as the water will make them heavy and liable to tear. Four in another slightly warm water prepared in the same way. Move the lace about and squeeze it, then drain and put in a third suds. Drain and lift carefully into a rinsing water and then into a blueing water. Pass through a wringer, lay over a line to dry, then fasten to curtain frames to dry.

To launder muslin curtains wash them carefully, starch and iron on the wrong side to make them look like new cloth.

JAMES BRENNAN'S HOME BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

The home of James Brennan at 1055 Rose street, was badly damaged by fire that started about 6.20 last evening. It originated in the front room, presumably from hot coals falling through an open grate, and had gained considerable headway before discovered. No one was in the house at the time and the flames were first noticed by Mr. Brennan from the barn. He notified B. A. Munford, who telephoned an alarm and later box 76 was pulled by Charles Munford.

The blaze had spread all about the room when the firemen arrived and they kept it confined to that one. Lines of hose were laid but not used as the chemical engine held the flames in check and extinguished them after a short fight.

The firemen saved a lot of furniture including a piano.

The damage is placed at $250 on the building and $100 on furniture. Brennan had no insurance.

UNION CO. FOR MARTINE SAYS ROBT. H. M'ADAMS

Democratic City Chairman Robert H. McAdams, of Elizabeth, said today in advocacy of James E. Martine's candidacy for the United States Senate:

"Mr. Martine represents at the present time the embodiment of the Democratic political principle of the popular endorsement of U. S. Senator by the vote of the people. He has gone before the people and has sought their endorsement and received it and is therefore entitled without opposition to have his election as U. S. Senator ratified by the chosen representatives of the people on joint ballot. In addition Mr. Martine's standing as a Democrat, loyal and unselfish work performed by him in the last twenty-five to forty years, merits the most favorable consideration of the Democracy of New Jersey.

"I have no doubt that when the proper time arrives Mr. Martine will be selected as U. S. Senator in recognition of his long and faithful service, and the principle involved in the selection of U. S. Senators. There can be no question as to loyalty of Union county to Mr. Martine and if it should become necessary Union county will make itself the champion of Mr. Martine and the principles he represents."

Overdid It.

"Why all this gloom at Plunkville?"

"There wasn't enough business for the merchants we had."

"Well?"

"We padded our census returns and four new merchants have moved in."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

To the Legislature.

Gentlemen of the Legislature, let us understand each other.

For the first time in years, a majority of you are Democrats. Do not mis ake what that means.

New Jersey is not at heart Democratic. It is at heart Progressive.

You, gentlemen of the Democratic party, were so fortunate as to discover within your ranks the man whom New Jersey had sought in vain for six years—a leader of the whole people, a man of constructive thought, temperate, seeing the wrongs of the past, and with his heart sincerely set on a program of righteousness in the future.

The people trust him. They have given up hope of the Republican party. Its "regulars" they distrust. And they are afraid of the balance of the Progressives. You are in on trial.

You are pledged to principles. You owe gratitude to no one but to Will on and the independence of New Jersey. He and it elected you.

Every act of yours will be keenly watched by the Independents that elected you. Your moves will be judged by the evident principle that dictated them. If these Independents see that the same motives guide you as have guided Republican Legislatures in the past they will return to their old allegiance and go on with their fight to make the Republican party the party of progress.

One of your first crucial tests will be the United States Senatorship. On this a majority of you have dallied with the people—but they gave you a chance for the sake of your leader.

If you are going to choose on a basis of gratitude for your election, choose a Republican standpatter—for their actions elected you.

If you are going to choose on the basis of expediency, choose a Democratic progressive—for that is what you are supposed to be.

If you are going to choose because you believe in the principle of popular government, choose Martine. The popular vote at the primary elected him, and the only reason that the vote then was not bigger was because you were not sincere. You were attempting partisan tricks. But the people booed that Tuesday that your leader and your return to responsibility would bring a return to good faith and that you would abide by the result of your own works.

And if you are going to choose to meet a reverse, and slide——Newark News.

DE VOE PREDICTING BAD SNOW IN JERSEY.

Record-breaking cold and unprecedented snowfall is looked for by A. J. De Voe, the Hackensack "meteorologist," during the latter half of the present month. The snowing under of a few political aspirants during the first half of the month was a mere circumstance to what Mr. De Voe looks for in the way of real weather phenomena.

"I am looking for the coldest weather and the heaviest snowstorms the last half of this month ever reported in New Jersey, especially from the twentieth to the twenty-fifth." This is the prediction, though the balmy sunshine today gives little indication of unprecedented cold.

Expectancy is the attitude of Mr. DeVoe, and he will be really disappointed if the real cold and heavy snowfall does not come as soon to be looked back upon with ... eries in the history of Yilgarn, ... Australia. The rush to the ... continues unabated, and Bullfinch ... in the heart of the belt, is described ... by experts as the greatest gold find ... which is forecasted the ... Sands in France.

LAST SAD RITES FOR MRS. M. O. WILLETT

The funeral services of Mrs. Maria O. Willett, widow of Alexander Willett, was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the late home on Craig place, and were largely attended by relatives, friends and neighbors. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. Willett was an active and faithful member for many years, officiated.

In referring to Mrs. Willett in his remarks, Mr. Broek spoke impressively of her home and church life, of the Christian example she was to her neighbors and friends. He said that she was resigned to go from her earthly home to her Heavenly home, if it was not possible for her to recover. She had no fear of the future and she displayed even to greater degree that beautiful Christian character that had marked her life.

Pastor Broek also spoke words of comfort to her three sons and four grandsons surviving and it was his hope, expressed in earnest, fervent prayer that they might follow in the footsteps of the one who had gone before. During his remarks, Mr. Broek recited a poem, "Remembered by What We Have Done," which found a responsive chord in the hearts of those present.

There was a beautiful display of floral tributes from relatives and friends; also from the Consistory and societies of Trinity Reformed church, including the Ladies' Christian Work Society, the Home department and Class No. 2, of the Sunday-school and from the Plainfield Bowling Club, of which Frank Willett, a son of Mrs. Willett, is a member.

The burial was in the family plot at Bound Brook and the pall-bearers were Thomas S. Armstrong and Albertus Swalm, brothers-in-law, and Walter Startup, of Middletown, N. Y., and A. McCullough, of North Branch, nephews of Mrs. Willett.

Rev. Dr. Wallace to Lecture.

Rev. Dr. William H. Wallace, pastor of the Baptist Temple, of Brooklyn, will lecture in the Park Avenue Baptist church on Thursday evening, December 8. His topic will be "The Sunshine Man." Dr. Wallace is famous as a lecturer and is pastor of one of the largest congregations in the City of Churches. The membership is about 3,300. Pastor Maguire spent the day with Dr. Wallace in Brooklyn yesterday and managed to secure him for the date mentioned. The lecture will be well worth hearing.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE CAUSE GAINS

Publicity Given Votes for Women Agitation Considered by Local League.

DR. MARIAN VINTON TALKS.

Miss Mary Philbrook Also Addresses the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

At the meeting of the Equal Suffrage League, of Plainfield and North Plainfield, Monday afternoon two speakers were heard, reports of the convention were read and resolutions of thanks were voted to the local newspapers for their reports of the recent convention and the New York Herald for its story on William L. Saunders' views on Equal Suffrage. Exception was taken to the recent article published in a Philadelphia Journal as being inimical to the interests of the suffrage movement and an invitation from the Plainfield Democratic club was accepted for a speaker from the suffrage league to address the club.

The reports of the recent convention showed that twenty-two new members were added to the league in this city.

A letter was read by the secretary from the National American Women's Suffrage Association refuting the charges brought against the movement by an article in the Ladies Home Journal and requesting that some action be taken by the Plainfield league to correct the misstatements alleged to have been made in an article in that publication. It was said that these statements were only answerable by someone with broad knowledge and ample time for research, but statements as to the increase of divorce in the States where women have the vote are answered by the fact that divorce is on the increase all over the United States and as in these States the population has doubled in recent years so have the number of divorces, but without increase in ratio.

To the charge that under Women Suffrage bills for the betterment of conditions for women and children have been pigeon-holed it is a fact that of several bills introduced into the State legislature for this purpose four were introduced into the legislature of Colorado by its women members and of the four, three were placed on the statute books as laws. This woman member has more bills on the statute books to her credit than any other individual member. The testimony of the Journal's article is said to be the most entirely anonymous and by its reactionary utterances on the subject of Woman Suffrage has called out hearty rebuttal from even those newspapers whose policy is unfriendly to the movement.

Dr. Marian Vinton, of Orange, addressed the meeting on the subject of "Suffrage and Health." The speaker viewed the question of individual and social immorality from the standpoint of its relation to public health and the picture she drew was black. Through it all, however, she urged the hopeful note of specific and individual education of boys and girls as being the best means of mitigating the evil. The case of the Minneapolis schools are cited in which good results are obtained by teaching biology from the lowest grades up.

Miss Mary Philbrook, the next speaker, who fifteen years ago was the first woman lawyer to be admitted to practice in New Jersey, spoke on the "White Slave" question. Miss Philbrook was appointed by the United States Immigration Commission to investigate this subject and has traveled all over the United States making a thorough study of conditions in the traffic. Her report was a terrible indictment of every large city in the country and the fact that such conditions are connived at by the police only goes to prove the impossibility of stamping out the evil by legal means.

Dr. E. R. Graff, of Somerville, chairman of the Public Health Education League has expressed her willingness to answer any questions or to send literature to those interested in the betterment of social conditions along these lines.

PLAINFIELDERS VISIT NEWARK DUTCH ARMS.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church; Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter and Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams went to Newark mobile, to attend the "ladies' night" Monday night in Mr. Cutter's automobile held at the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, of which Mr. Broek's brother, Rev. Albertus Broek, is the pastor. The affair was held under the auspices of the Dutch Arms, men's association, of the church.

The program was furnished by the New York Musical Club, after which refreshments were served and all were given an opportunity to inspect the new recreation room at the church which is equipped with pool and billiard tables, bowling alleys, etc. The room will be open every night in the week. The affair last night was largely attended by men and women and aws a great success.

S. P. C. A. CONVENTION

Report of Doings at Washington Given by Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen.

CHINESE DETEST CRUELTY.

Nearly Every Country of the World Now Has Organized Humane Society—New Member Elected.

There was a good attendance at the monthly meeting of the S. P. C. A. Monday afternoon in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. and another member was added to the roll. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, minister of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, who was at one time president of the society at Schnectady, N. Y., was the new member.

Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, the special agent of the local society, and who was the only delegate from New Jersey at the recent international convention of the Humane Society at Washington, gave a detailed report of that meeting. Those present found much of interest in Mrs. Van Hoesen's report, in fact, it was pronounced to have been the most thorough paper ever read to the society, giving as it did the views of delegates from all parts of the world on the question of kindness to animals.

Mrs. Van Hoesen quoted the Chinese delegate, who in his speech declared that notwithstanding differences in color, creed and language and the fact that the Chinese were called heathens, the people were all alike in so far as their feelings were concerned. They all love animals and they all detest the cruel man. This sentiment was echoed throughout the convention.

The prevention of cruelty to dumb beasts has taken hold in every country on the globe with the possible exception of countries on the extreme outer edge of the universe. Even in Turkey, where kindness to anything is hardly looked for, has a society which is doing extremely good work. It has been suggested that the report given by Mrs. Van Hoesen be printed in pamphlet form for free distribution and perhaps this will be done.

Rev. Dr. Neil Nelson presided at yesterday's meeting in the absence of Dr. Ard, the president. The regular routin of business preceded Mrs. Van Hoesen's report.

BOYS' BIBLE CLASS TEACHERS ORGANIZE

The Association of Men Teachers of Boys' Bible classes of Plainfield was permanently organized at the Y. M. C. A. Monday, under the direction of several well-known Sunday-school workers in the manner of the movement. The meeting was held in the boys' secretary office, there being about eighteen teachers present. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of the Baptist church, Scotch Plains, presided.

The committee of which Mr. Bigeman is the chairman, presented a constitution and bylaws, which were adopted. It was decided to meet the second Monday of each month, and all men teachers of boys' Bible classes are urged to join the association.

A nominating committee comprising Joseph W. Gavett, Edgar F. Sheppard and C. W. Bigeman placed in nomination the following officers: President, J. V. McClymont; vice-president, Frederick S. Thompson; secretary, C. W. Bingeman; treasurer, J. S. Powlison. The executive committee will comprise the officers and two additional members to be appointed from the association and they will be elected at the next meeting, the second Monday in December.

The association last night discussed the question, "What proof have we that the Sunday-schools are not reaching the boys of Plainfield." Mr. Bingeman reported the result of some statistical work started by himself, in the Grammar and Sunday-schools of the city, and it indicated that the Sunday-schools are doing effective work, although half of the Sunday-schools did not respond to his invitation to quote figures on the subject.

The discussion last night showed clearly that there is a field here for the association. At the next meeting there will be a discussion of the question, "How to reach the boys of Plainfield for the Sunday-school." In the meantime efforts will be made to increase the membership of the association with view to making it a strong agency for good in Sunday-school work.

Will Hold Class Initiation.

The subordinate councils of the Royal Arcanum in the counties of Union and Middlesex, will hold a class initiation in the Presbyterian church parish house, Westfield, November 28. The meeting will be addressed by Clovis H. Bowen, supreme regent of the Royal Arcanum. Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, of this city, will attend in a body, taking the 7:30 o'clock trolley from Watchung avenue and Fourth street, that evening.

NORTH PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP WILL BUY TEXIER'S MILL

North Plainfield Township Association Votes to Acquire Property.

CAN BE BOUGHT FOR $6,000.

Building Will Be Used for Organization Needs and for Civic Purposes—Owner makes Easy Terms.

At the regular meeting of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Association Monday night the Board of Governors were given authority to purchase the Texier mill property located directly in the center of Watchung. The proposition has been under way for some time and the transfer will be made as speedily as possible. Beside the large and commodious mill, which the association will use as a permanent home, the property includes three parcels of ground. The price agreed upon is $6,000. Of this amount $300 is to be paid down and the balance to remain on a ten-year mortgage at five per cent. The $300 is also to be counted as the first year's interest.

President W. de Ia R. Anderson was in the chair during the meeting and presented the property purchase under the head of officer's reports. He declared that it would eventually prove a money making proposition in retaining such a central location as well as proving a power for good in the community by furnishing a home and meeting place for the young men. In enumerating the possibilities of the building he said, firstly, the lower floor could be used as a general auditorium and a part prepared for the fire department and apparatus. Two cells would be constructed for township use and an office would be arranged for township purposes.

The Township Committee would be asked to vest the property in a formal charge. The upper floor, Mr. Anderson said, could be cut up into bachelors' quarters as the demand for some place in the valley where a man can go in summer is great. He also explained that the purchase of the property carried with it valuable water rights, not so much for the power as for the Company, which sets forth in case it does not maintain the pond and dam, the whole property would be forfeited to the mill owner.

Mr. Anderson said the board of managers of the association had already passed favorbly upon the idea of purchasing the property, and he concluded by asking for a ratification. This was given later. Dr. Moldenke outlined a financial plan which was approved.

In new business it was voted to ask the Township committee to include in its next annual report a pamphlet containing duplicates of all the taxpayers in the township and the amount of taxes they pay. The meeting closed with a social session in charge of the entertainment committee.

The honorary pallbearers were: Edwin S. Hooley, William M. Stillman, O. T. Waring, Mayor Charles J. Sisk, Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, F. H. Andrews, Theodore Curt's, William L. Saunders, George P. Mellick, Percy H. Stewart, Hon. Alexander Gilbert, L. V. F. Randolph.

State and county representatives were present as follows: Supreme Court Justices Bennett Van Syckel and Allen B. Endicott; Circuit Judge Benjamin A. Vail, City Judge Edward S. Atwater, former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, R. V. Lindaberry, Sherred Depue, Frank P. McDermott, Hon. Alvah A. Clark, James L. Griggs, borough attorney of Somerville; and Frank Bergen.

Those who sent regrets and words of sympathy were Supreme Court Justice James A. Bergen, vice-chancellor Henry C. Pitney, ex-Attorney general Robert McCarter, ex-Chancellor William J. Magie, A. V. D. Honeyman, Charles A. Reed and Amzi Dodd, with whom Mr. Marsh studied law.

The interment was in Hillside.

Sitting on the sofa, his right arm stole about her form. "This" he said, "is what I call making glad waste places."

"Oh, no," she replied. "A waste place is one that has never been cultivated."

Proper Training of Boys and Girls the Theme of Speakers.

ISSUES OF MOST IMPORTANCE.

The Girl Entitled to as Much as the Boy If She Is to Become Useful—Other Topics.

Proper training for girls to enable them to preside over homes; the teaching of boys that the duty is to found a home, and systematic efforts to lower the death rate among infants and children were given as issues of more importance than child labor, the overorganization of capital, the tariff and railroad rates, at the sessions of the tenth annual convention of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers, held in the Woman's Club of Orange Friday and Saturday. At reading the convention which closed Saturday afternoon, were prominent philanthropic and civic workers from all parts of the State, who assembled in East Orange to consider the moral development of children.

Mrs. Thomas B. Holmes, of Trenton, president of the New Jersey Congress, presided, and the guests of honor were Mrs. Edwin C. Grice, the honorary president, and Mrs. Frederick N. Judson, president of the national congress. Both the afternoon and evening sessions Friday were devoted to a discussion of problems confronting the mothers of New Jersey.

Devotional services conducted by Rev. Charles E. Hutchison, rector of Christ church, East Orange, marked the opening of the meeting Friday afternoon. An adress of welcome was then made by Mrs. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Woman's Club of Orange, the response by Mrs. Holmes, who congratulated the women of the Oranges on their magnificent clubhouse, interesting reminiscences were given in a short address by Mrs. Grice. She referred to the increasing interest throughout the State in the Home and School League movement. In the discussion that followed this address, Mrs. William Downs, of Orange, was called upon to give a brief report of the remarkable success of the home and school associations in this city.

Charles E. Evans, principal of the East Orange High School, who was the principal speaker at the opening session, devoted most of his address to a plea for a more complete training for girls. He urged that the High School should be made the chief social centre of the young people in a community, as well as a building for educational purposes. Such a school, he declared, should be open every day from 8:30 in the morning to 9:30 in the evening, and should have privileges for the parents in the evening, as well as for the young people.

Discussing the lack of opportunities for girls, Mr. Evans said:

"We find a great many appeals on behalf of the American boy, and I would like to make a brief appeal on behalf of the American girl. There is enough being done along these lines for her, but not enough along others. It seems to be admitted on every hand that the preparation given the boy should be along the lines that he is expected to pursue in manhood. He is fitted for the station in life which, under natural and normal conditions, he is expected to fill. I am willing to leave it with you that the same ought to be done with the girl.

The opening exercises at the evening session included a prayer by Rev. Dr. William M. Lawrence, pastor of the North Orange Baptist church and soprano solos by Miss Gertrude Jones. The work of the national congress was then reviewed by Mrs. Schoff, who also told of the work that was being done in Philadelphia to reduce the death rate among infants. Largely through the ignorance of mothers, she declared, the infant mortality has proved a greater menace to the country than either war or disease.

Mrs. Schoff also urged that all educated fathers and mothers should realize that on them was placed the responsibility of the future. She pointed out that such problems as dislonesty in the administration of public affairs would be eliminated if more attention was given to the importance of home training during childhood.

Dr. Robert N. Wilson of Philadelphia, read a long paper on "The Twentieth Century Victoria Circle." He took a stand for woman suffrage, but declared that it would be a disgrace to the mothers of this country if the right to vote would give them the impression that they were no longer responsible for presiding at the fireside. Discussing children's training, he declared that the tomboy age in girls should never be discouraged, and he maintained that boys cannot be taught too young that their greatest responsibility in life is to found a home.

Work done by National Congress of Mothers:

Organization of parents in connection with hundreds of schools, to study the needs of the children, and how to meet them.

The co-operation of home and school, effected by the organization of parents' associations in schools.

Opening of the school houses as social centres for the people, and with interesting, instructive and wholesome entertainment for all.

Organization of city branches, State and National Congress of Mothers; organization of state branches, National Congress of Mothers.

Establishment of organization of mothers and teachers and work for welfare of childhood in foreign countries.

The calling together of the First International Congress in America on the welfare of the child, in March, 1908.

Securing co-operation of Department of State in extending invitations to every nation.

The arrangement of conferences with Government departments for the education of parents in the physical and moral, as well as mental training of children, and the systematic greeting of immigrants on their arrival, with literature in their own language, giving American ideas and customs, and a welcome.

The education of parents as to the physical and economic injury of some forms of child labor.

The removal of children from prisons and criminal courts through active work in securing juvenile court and probation laws in co-operation with every court where children are heard.

The prevention of juvenile crime through opening of play grounds and school yards, extension of the introduction of manual training and domestic science in education, study of physical conditions of children, study of community conditions affecting children; co-operation with schools and courts in care of children.

The publication of the Child-Welfare Magazine, which is an essential factor in the development of the great work the Congress has in hand.

The publication of book lists for mothers and book lists for children, prepared by the literature committee, which are in constant demand and perform an important service.

The publication of study outlines for mothers and parents, prepared by the education committee.

Publication of other leaflets on child training.

Furthering the establishment in every State of a school to teach deaf infants to speak, that they may not be further handicapped by losing the opportunity to acquire speech at the natural age.

Saving the babies' lives by systematic instruction of mothers, in co-operation with boards of health.

HERE AND THERE.

If any one in Budapest wants to hear the opera or a sermon or court proceedings, or other occurrences, he need not leave his residence, as everything is brought to him by means of a special telephone service, according to Julius Tener of Budapest and New York, who is at the New Willard in Washington, D. C.

"There has been in operation in Budapest for the last ten years," said Mr. Tenner, "what is called a 'pleasure telephone' system, known as Telefon Hirmondo. The invention has been held a close secret in Hungary, so far as its vital features are concerned, which has prevented its introduction heretofore into other countries.

"In effect, this system is a news, music and talking service by telephone, one of the secrets of the invention being a device by which from one central office over a single wire an indefinite number of subscribers, up to hundreds of thousands, can be served, and all get the service with uniform clearness and distinctness.

"In Budapest more than 80,000 receivers are connected with one wire, and the service, even 200 miles from that city, gives the utmost satisfaction. The cost of the service is ridiculously low—just a little more than $7 a year, which gives two receivers. Every sleeping room in the Budapest hotels is supplied with the service. Places of amusement, churches and lecture halls are connected by wires with the central, and their contributions are switched to the subscriber's wire at will.

"In many ways," continued Mr. Tenner, who investigated the system, "the routine of the central office of this service resembles that of a great newspaper. Stalwart reporters hand in their 'copy' to the editor, who sees that the telling parts have passed over to the 'stentors' or 'speakers,' who possess clear, strong voices. To prevent indistinctness, a single speaker is on duty only an hour at a time. The general news features are only a small part of the service rendered. The correct time is given in the morning and at noon. The state of the markets is announced at intervals. Sporting events are reported. Band concerts and lectures are reproduced with absolute fidelity. A song sung in Budapest has been heard with remarkable clearness in Berlin, more than five hundred miles distant."

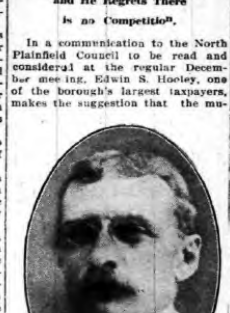
CHARGED WIRES MENACE

Mr. Hooley Suggests That Borough Have Them Placed Underground.

PUBLIC CONDUIT SYSTEM.

He Says the P. S. C. Electric Lighting Rates Are Exorbitant and He Regrets There Is no Competition.

In a communication to the North Plainfield Council to be read and considered at the regular December meeting, Edwin S. Hooley, one of the borough's largest taxpayers, makes the suggestion that the municipality construct and control an underground system for electric light and other wires. Mr. Hooley says that he considers the present rates of the P. S. C. for electric lighting exorbitant and regrets that there is no competition. The high voltage carried by the overhead wires he states is a menace and now that the borough is about to dig up its streets for the sewage disposal system pipes, he believes it is opportune for the borough fathers to investigate and act on a proposition to have the overhead wires placed underground.



Edwin S. Hooley.

Mr. Hooley's communication to the Council follows:

"The Honorable Mayor and Council of the Borough of No. Plainfield.

"Gentlemen:—

"Within a short time our borough streets will be ripped up from end to end, and I am strongly convinced that this opportunity should be availed of to provide another much needed improvement. I refer to a system of underground conduits for electric light wires.

"Probably it would not be financially possible for any corporation to install its wires underground unless under a long time contract of generous terms. On the other hand, the borough would certainly not be justified in granting the right to erect a second pole line through our streets. We are thus entirely debarred from the possibility of competition in the supply of electric current, and apart from the "reasonableness" of the present rates charged us.

"I think no one will dispute that the borough should, if in any way possible, use the benefit of competition. My own opinion is that the present charges for electric light are exorbitant in the extreme, and this view is borne out by the fact that several local institutions and individuals have erected their own private plants, and by so doing have effected a considerable saving. If this can be done in isolated small plants, the cost of current with large central station must be infinitesimal, coupled with the rates exacted from us.

"There is another factor of great importance. The constant increase in voltage is adding to an ever present danger. A break in the wires strung over our heads may any time mean sudden death. The wires run indiscriminately through the trees, frayed from insulation; I am informed, may result in a discharge of current through the trees themselves, particularly in wet weather.

"I take this occasion of urging your honorable body to consider the advisability of obtaining through the Commission, now in charge of the sewerage question, some reliable data as to the cost of an underground conduit system, and as to the possibility of saving to our borough by owning such and leasing the same under competitive bidding.

"I believe the first cost of the conduits would soon be reimbursed to the borough and thereafter the ownership of such an improvement would permanently solve the problem of securing reasonable rates.

"Let our borough be free from the questionable mercy of the Public Service Corporation.

"We should endeavor to rid our streets of the frightful disfigurement of ungainly posts planted in front of our residences.

"Surely it would be wise to take steps to stop a constant menace to the lives of our inhabitants.

"Obtaining a report in this matter would certainly not be costly, and if your honorable body hesitate on this score, I should be glad to foot the bills.

"Respectfully submitted,

"EDWIN S. HOOLEY."

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Voice of the Voters.

There is some disagreement on the part of the Democratic newspapers of the State as to who ought to be chosen as successor to United States Senator John Kean. The most influential of the party papers are demanding that the will of the rank and file of the Democratic voters, as expressed at the primaries, be followed by the members of the Legislature. The Hudson Observer, the Passaic Herald, the Paterson Guardian, the Asbury Park Press and the Elizabeth Times declare most emphatically that the next Senator must be James E. Martine. Any other result, as one of them puts it, "would be a distinct betrayal of the vote of this party, as expressed at the September primaries."

Only one Democratic organ, the Long Branch Record, has declared unequivocally for the election of James Smith, Jr., and that paper insists that his choice "should be unanimous." In this stand, The Record is in complete harmony with the organ of David Baird, the Camden Courier. Says The Courier:

"The Courier would have preferred a Republican to fill the Senatorship, but, as that is impossible, it cheerfully agrees with its Democratic contemporaries that James Smith, Jr., is entitled to the honor. Mr. Smith has had experience as a national legislator, is largely identified with the manufacturing and financial interests of New Jersey, and is in every respect well qualified to prove a capable and useful representative of the State in Congress."

Considering the source, such praise and such a position were to be expected. The representatives of the Board of Guardians and the Same Old Gang were agreed during the campaign that the preferential vote on the Senatorship ought to be ignored and that the next Senator should be chosen in "the old-fashioned way." It is not strange, therefore, that these same men and those who speak for them should be found standing together after election.

But note one thing—the essence of standpatism. Baird has learned nothing. Mr. Smith "is largely identified with the manufacturing and commercial interests." Can there be a more beautiful confession of the harmony between Democratic and Republican standpatism, of the non-partisan nature of financial feudalism?

There are still other Democratic newspapers that do not insist upon the choice of Mr. Smith, but that are against Mr. Martine on the alleged ground that he does not measure up to the Senatorial standard. One of them, the Hackettstown Gazette, hopes to see the struggle for the honor participated in by Robert Foote, Frank S. Katzenbach and Mr. Smith. Still another has started a boom for Congressman Eugene Kinkead.

Neither the Democratic newspapers nor the Republican organs, however, should prove the deciding factor in the Senatorial struggle.

Sane political leaders have correctly interpreted the meaning of the recent primaries and elections.

The foundation of the progressive movement which brought about the Democratic victory is the revolt against industrial and financial feudalism. It will not do for the Democratic party in New Jersey to send to the United States Senate a man whose sympathies are supposed to be against such reformation but wishes the "interests" to retain their control of government and all business.

If they understand the progressive movement they must send a man who is for equal opportunity and honesty, one who is in sympathy with the plain, everyday working citizen, a protection of the small business man from being crushed unfairly out of existence.—Newark News.

UPROAR AGAIN IN NICARAGUA.

Troops were called out to suppress a political demonstration at Lena, Sunday, and, meeting with resistance, swept the streets with grape and canister. Many persons were killed or wounded. The excitement is intense.

The government recently prohibited political demonstrations. In the face of this prohibition the Leon Liberals gathered in the streets and attempted to hold a meeting. The police interfered, but were unable to disperse the crowd, which attacked the officers. Troops were then summoned, and, reaching the scene, drove the rioters to cover by a furious charge.

THE GOOD MAN SURVIVES Y. M. C. A. ANNIVERSARY

"You Can't Keep Him Down," Says Rev. G. R. Maguire.

Forty-Third Year of Local Association Theme in Churches.

CHRISTIANITY IS NOBILITY.

Persecution Creates Men and Makes Them Strong—Lessons From the Life of Joseph.

AN INCREASED MEMBERSHIP.

Value of Buildings in North America $67,000,000—Membership 496,000—Nearly Doubled in Past Ten Years.

The element's conspired to keep down the attendance at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday night but those who attended learned way a good man cannot be kept down. Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire took the story of Joseph from Genesis, 27:38, and 45:26, as a conveyance for his lesson and declared that the rule applies as much today as it did in the time of Joseph.

"Preside," he said, "you cannot keep a good man down. Maybe there are some men who feel unequal to certain tasks, but when put to the test they rise above their fellows just because they are good men and the stuff is in them. You can lie as much as you like about a good man, but it won't hurt him a bit. God will vindicate him eventually.

"The world is compelled to respect Christian character and this character does not rest on the man of his ability. The sneers of his fellows fall to take from him that knowledge of righteousness which through all vicissitudes of life remains a bulwark of defence. There are, let me tell you, more hypocrites outside the Church than in it. You be loyal to your convictions and God will be loyal to you.

There have always been what I term 'Gobetweenites.' They are those who haven't the courage to come out and stand for Christianity and are neither Christians or anything else. Don't be a Democrat one day and something else the next. Be a man! If you see a thing you know to be wrong say so and say it loudly and anything right, stand up for it. Remember God treats like people right as all true Christians realize.

"Youa man, don't cheat; don't lie; don't steal; don't overcharge! Be honest if you would succeed in business. Remember that the all-seeing eye of God is always upon you and nothing can be hidden from Him. Persecution, as Joseph's case, begets elevation and produces heroes and heroines. Many fail of success because they are not of sufficient importance to be abused. Persecution gave us civil liberty and religious freedom. I would God we could cheer more and criticize less. You men, praise your wives and brag about your children instead of scolding them and 'donting' them to death.

"We gather from our subject just this—'be a man.'—If you want to come on top look to the power from on high."

New Scarfs.

A pretty example of the fashionable scarf seen recently was of gray moire on one side and of moire satin on the other, the end finished with little round bows of gray and mauve satin ending in a silk-covered wooden bead. Another half mourning scarf comes another lovely scarf of white moon de soie, with large chenille dots in black. This is very stunning with a black and white costume.

Only Natural.

The telephone girl had married well and was stopping at a hotel with her husband. Rising at 10 a. m. she rang the bell for the servant.

"Why didn't you wake me up, as I instructed you?" she asked.

"I did, ma'am," answered the slavey, "but when I said 'Seven-thirty,' you replied, 'Line busy. Will call you pp.' "—Lippincott's.

The annual report of the Young Men's Christian Association was commemorated in several of the churches in the city, speakers being provided at the Park Avenue Baptist, First M. E., Congregational and Trinity Reformed. At the last named church H. W. Hermann, vice-president of the local association, spoke interestingly of the work and showed how necessary increased facilities are needed for the prosecution of the work here. What is especially needed is an entire new building to keep pace with the growth of the work.

The remarkable progress made during the last decade is shown by the following figures: In 1900 there were 1,429 associations in North America, in 1910: there are 2,017, the membership in which has increased from 255,000 to 496,000. Association buildings in 1900 were 359, and now there are 696, and the value of the buildings rose from $24,000,000 to $67,000,000 in 1910.

In 1900 there were 1,399 regularly employed officers, which in 1910 have increased to 2,927. The average daily attendance in 1900 was 95,000 men and boys, while this present year has jumped to 193,000 daily. The foreign secretaries have increased from 18 in 1900 to 90 this year.

The increase in ten years in the volume of physical, educational and social work activities has been 282 per cent., while the increase in volume of religious work is 450 per cent.

The various speakers laid emphasis on the fact that the association is lending a strong hand to the Church in reaching the industrial class, the immigrant and the neglected boy, which is safeguards from juvenile delinquency. It has adopted a world-wide plan in immigrant work whereby the immigrant is followed from the port of embarkation to his destination by secretaries especially trained for that purpose. The association is safeguarded from exploitation and in addition the association is promoting classes in English and citizenship which are of incalculable benefit to him as well as to the country at large.

The speakers all declared that the association is a good business proposition. T. Eaton Craig, of Toronto, says: "Every boy who comes to maturity has cost the State, that is you and me, one thousand dollars. Some boys go wrong. When he goes wrong we not only lose our thousand dollars but we have to spend another to protect ourselves against him. The Y. M. C. A. is an organization of manly men, whose object is to keep our boys morally, mentally and physically right. The Y. M. C. A. is an investment that pays cumulative dividends, not only in cash but in character. Can you suggest a better investment?"

Many other useful hints regarding the active work the association is doing were given by the speakers. One said: "Now it is cheaper to build a fence at the top of a precipice to prevent boys from falling than to provide ambulances at its base to take care of the wounded, so the preventive and formative work of the association costs far less than the maintenance of our penal institutions and hospitals."

"There are two principles which underlie the work: First, the influence of personal association in the development of character, and second, the physical basis of character." The speaker said that the great service the association gymnasiums are rendering the nation is in producing men of strong vitality without which strong convictions are impossible.

Next Sunday evening Mr. Hermann will speak at the First Presbyterian church and Arthur Rugh, national secretary of China, will address the congregation of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

MISS MARY ANDERSON WEDS CHARLES NELSON.

A quiet church wedding in attractive and pleasing surroundings took place in the Swedish Memorial church at 9 o'clock last evening when Miss Mary Anna Anderson became the bride of Charles Nelson. Both bride and groom are residents of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. N. K. Nyrog, of Brooklyn.

The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Christian Linback, of Fanwood, and the decorations were in white and green. About seventy invited guests were present. Following the ceremony a reception was held. The bride received many handsome presents. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will reside in Fanwood on their return from a wedding trip.

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, assisted by a large staff of specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unsparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature has been over-seen centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. HUNT CLUB RIDERS ENJOY EXCITING CHASE

The cool, bracing weather of Saturday attracted a number of riding members of the Watchung Hunt Club, for the weekly chase. They met at Roselle Station, and the hounds were thrown in at the old Meeker Inn. The scent led over the hills to Springfield, circling back to Westfield, a distance of about ten miles, where the first check was held. The scent was again found near the old Brat Kelly's Inn, and the run continued through Scotch Plains to Netherwood.

The going was exceedingly stiff, the fences being mostly four railers. One part of the run led through the Rahway river and the riders were compelled to lift their legs as the water came up to the saddle flaps. Howard Beebe, riding a new hunter, twice came a cropper, but remounted and finished.

Those who finished were Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., C. Wesley Holland, Howard Beebe, Charles W. Fisk, Herr Goeltz, Dr. Frederick Wilking Jr., Hart S. Farlee, Miss Gertrude Noe, Paul Dietrich, C. E. S. Bellows, Lous Ba'jer and Henry Watkins, huntsman.

COURT PLAINFIELD HAS A BUSY SESSION.

At the meeting of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, last night, one candidate was initiated, five applicants elected to membership and three applications were received. Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger W. F. Bingham spoke to the members about the great benefits of the order and the large increase of membership and funds, the reserve fund being now over $16,000,000.

A lobe collation and smoker followed the meeting, during which the pinochle championship was won by Edward J. McCann and Thomas Roddy won the booby prize.

Use of a Bicycle Pump.

If you have a discarded bicycle pump turn it to household uses as a cleaner. It will save you a lot of time in getting the dust from the clogged parts of a sewing machine, washing machine or sweeper. Blow out the worst of the dust with the pump, then finish with wiping with a soft cloth and give a good oiling. The pump saves time for the typewriter by going over her machine each day. Be careful in using it to blow across the dusty parts, not back into the delicate mechanism.

When You Buy Tools & Hardware

It is a good plan to buy the best. Some of the finest mechanics in this town bought their first tools here. And they are among our regular customers today. Isn't it reasonable, then, if those whose daily work demands the best tools, buy them here, for you to do the same?

We have the largest and most up-to-date Hardware Store in town and we sell the best hardware and tools that human skill can make or money can buy. And we guarantee every claim we make for them. To prove this quality, here are three items taken at random from our stock of tools.

Disston Saws
American Axes
Buck Bros. Chisels

You know these tools: they are used all over the country.

Our prices, too, are as reasonable as you could wish.

FURS! FURS!

There is no reason why your wants in the fur line should not be filled in the Plainfield Fur Store, 178 East Front street, the place which many customers from Plainfield and vicinity found so reliable last season. The test of time has proven our trustworthiness. Had we made our patrons the victims of sharp practices last year, we would not return now and ask your trade. But we used the trade right; the people know it and they know we will give them the same good treatment this season. All furs are guaranteed best quality, modeled in latest Parisian styles. You are invited to inspect our popular creations. Our prices are the lowest because we are manufacturing furriers.

THE MANTILLA.

A Spanish Woman Answers the Question, "Why Do You Wear It?"

The writer once asked of a well known lady of the Spanish aristocracy who was seated in the box of the president of a corrida in Madrid, "Why do you wear a mantilla?" and the fair duchess replied: "Because we all wear a mantilla at a bullfight or at any truly Spanish function. It is the proper thing to do, and we do it."

A little later as I strolled among a group of aficionados I ventured to ask a woman of the people over whose head and shoulders was also thrown a mantilla why all Spanish women, to whatever class they belonged, wore this national headgear, if it may be called thus.

This woman was sitting in the open air, and I was thinking that a large straw hat would have protected her better from the burning rays of the sun and been quite as picturesque. She replied in that droning, warm tone so typical of the Spanish: "Well, I happened to have often thought of this, and I think the reason why we all wear the mantilla is because we Spanish women are most careful about our hair. We think the chief charms of a woman are her eyes and her hair. And, as you may see, we all have splendid, thick, lustrous hair, and we are supposed to have, many of us, fascinating eyes. Now, why should we hide our elaborately arranged hair under a hat and conceal our eyes in the shade cast by the brim of a hat?"

No doubt this woman was right. Parisian elegance to the Spanish women of the upper classes may have its attractions, but they, as their less fortunate compatriots, all agree that beautiful hair and expressive eyes are more important. * * * And both of these may be cultivated.—London Mail.

THE FIRST WINDMILLS.

Could Work Only When the Wind Blew From a Certain Point.

Windmills are said to have been introduced into England by the Knights of St. John, who observed them in use among the Saracens in the Crusades, but how long they had been in existence before this it is not possible to ascertain. A water mill was built in Bohemia in the year 718, for an old chronicler mentions it, going on to say that "before that time all the mills in Bohemia were windmills set upon the summit of hills."

For hundreds of years windmills were among the most important adjuncts of industry, yet they hardly changed from the rude and primitive design of earliest days. They were fixed in one position, and so could only be worked when the wind blew from a certain quarter, while the four sails boasted no stats or checking apparatus of any kind, which must have been most inconvenient at times.

The first idea of arranging a mill so that it could be worked "whene'er the wind did blow" was that of tethering an ordinary mill in the middle of a pond by means of ropes. When the wind shifted the ropes were loosed and the mill dragged around until the sails were caught by the wind, and it was then again tethered as before.

Later on a great pole, which was worked on the principle of a turntable, was affixed to the mill. Not until 1500 did Holland, the land of windmills, introduce a movable dome carrying the sail axle. The dome ran on rollers and was shifted around by means of the pole mentioned above. These ancient mills were often of massive build, being made of brick or stone, and later entirely of wood.—London Globe.

The Helmet That Fell.

Roquelaure, the deformed jester of Louis XIV., contrived to get out of many a scrape by his ready wit. One day he went to the king to ask his pardon for having struck off the helmet of one of his sentinels who had failed to give him the military salute. Louis, who knew his man, wondered that Roquelaure should crave his pardon for so venial an offense and said to him, "This is a serious matter, Roquelaure, but I will pardon you this time."

It afterward turned out that the soldier's head was in the helmet and fell with it to the ground.—Argonaut.

The Astonishing Part.

Lord Townshend at the battle of Dettengen was standing quite near a drummer boy whose brains were dashed out by a cannon ball. His lordship gazed on the horrible spectacle for some moments in silence.

At last an old officer spoke up and said: "Why is your lordship surprised? Such things must happen in war."

"I know it," was the reply, "but what astonishes me is that a boy with so much brains should be here at all."

A Bright Outlook.

"Do you—er—did you think, Miss Dobleigh, that you will be—er—engaged next Thursday evening?" asked Tompy very bashfully.

"Well, really, Mr. Tompy," replied Ethel, "I don't know, but if you can get up spunk enough between now and then to do your share I think there's a fair prospect that I shall be."

And Tompy did.—Harper's Weekly.

Where It Hurts.

"Say, I have an awful pain. I wonder if it is appendicitis? Can you tell me on what side one gets it?"

"Why, on the inside, of course."—Columbia Jester.

Bad Selection.

"Goodness me, but that woman's makeup is loud."

"It is that. She should have used boiseless powder."—Baltimore American.

WILSON WORLD RENOWNED

Governor-Elect Distinguished as Historian, Teacher, Orator and Lawyer.

A SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Honorary Degrees Conferred on the Scholar by Many Seats of Learning in Recognition of His Work.

Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson, Ph. D., Litt. D., LL. D., is a Southerner by birth, having been born in Staunton Va., on December 28, 1856. He was the son of the late Joseph R. and Jessie (Woodrow) Wilson, of the Wilson and the Woodrow families so well known in the South.

After finishing his early education in the public and preparatory schools he entered Princeton University in 1875, graduating from that institution in June, 1879. The same year, immediately after graduating from Princeton, he entered the University of Virginia and studied law, graduating in 1880. He took a post-graduate course in the Johns Hopkins University from 1883 to 1885, this university a year later conferring upon him the title of doctor of philosophy. The following year, at the graduating exercises, Wake Forest College of North Carolina conferred upon young Wilson the degree of doctor of laws. This same degree was again conferred on him by Tulane University in 1898.

On June 24, 1885 Mr. Wilson was married to Miss Ellen Louise Axson, a well known Southern belle and a descendant of the wealthy Axson family of Savannah, Ga. Mrs. Wilson is the constant companion of the Governor-elect. Three daughters have blessed their union.

Several years prior to his marriage Mr. Wilson practiced law at Atlanta, Ga., but finding life seemed to extend to him more inviting opportunities as a future life call-

Shortly after his marriage in 1885 Bryn Mawr College offered him a seat in its institution as professor of history and political economy, which he accepted. He remained with Bryn Mawr College until 1888, when he accepted a similar professorship with Wesleyan University.

Wilson remained but a short time as a professor in Wesleyan University, when he was called to Princeton University in 1890 and made professor of jurisprudence and politics, one of the most important seats in that university and which he filled to such a marked degree that the faculty, in June, 1902, elected him to the presidency.

As an author Dr. Wilson has an international reputation. In 1885 he issued his first article entitled "Cabinet Government," a study in American politics.

In 1889 he finished and published his work on "The State—Elements of Historical and Practical Politics." This is one of his "masterpieces and is a work of international repute, which is referred to by all students of civil government throughout the civilized world.

Wilson again caused the publication of another work in 1893, entitled "Division and Reunion—1829 to 1889," which was closely followed by two more of his works the same year, styled "An Old Master and Other Political Essays" and "Mere Literature and Other Essays."

In 1896 he caused another publication to be issued entitled "George Washington," a valuable treatise on the Father of Our Country and first President.

Another and important work he wrote and completed is entitled "The State; a Short History of the People of the United States." This was published in 1901. This work is now a textbook in a great many educational institutions all over the country.

It was while he was engaged in his practice as a lawyer he earned his fame as a speaker in Maryland and the cities in its immediate vicinity.

Between times devoted to the duties imposed upon him as professor, his leisure moments as an author and contributing articles to magazines he toured all sections of the United States as a lecturer and public speaker. As a lecturer he is considered one of the most, if not the most, able men of his kind, not only in this country, but abroad. His command of the English language, so truly perfect in its selection, a gift which is shared in even the greatest and most famous speakers of the world, is an inherent feature of Dr. Wilson's qualifications.

His delivery is so fluent and accompanied with such graceful gestures that he immediately captivates his audiences and holds it at all times. His thoroughness in defining and treating a subject is so complete and clear and every detail dealt with an exactness that is marvelous, that he leaves no grounds or loopholes for after inquiries.

As a public speaker he is equal to the ability he displays as a lecturer. He has demonstrated in his recent public speaking during the campaign which has just closed that he is one of the greatest public speakers this country has produced.

President of Princeton University attributes the first year of his charge of that university as his. His constant aim was the welfare of not a few of his students, but of all of them. He studied the conditions and even the students themselves.

In his duties as president he also put his entire energy into the rehabilitation of the university, and by his thorough business and educational methods he has placed forward Princeton University as one of the foremost seats of learning in the world. He has placed this university on the same plane as Oxford and Cambridge in England.

When inaugurated several new ideas and systems in the make-up of the university. Among the most notable is the tutorial system, which replaces large classes in small groups under personal attention of a preceptor. Under his supervision and special care this system has worked itself out to a satisfactory degree to the benefit of the students. It is regarded by the best American educators that the tutorial system has exceptional advantages over the old fashioned method. Such a system, it is conceded, not only increases the proficiency of students, but brings to the institution fame as a positive seat of learning.

During Dr. Wilson's incumbency as president of Princeton many additions and improvements have been made to the university property. Notable and prominent among these are "79 Hall," Dial Hall, Palmer Laboratory and others, and last, but not least, Carnegie Lake, the artificial expanse of water given by Andrew Carnegie.

The Governor-elect physically is a tall man, large-boned, of a most approachable and kindly disposition, and who does not allow even the most timid person to become confused. He is extremely modest and humble in his manner. He is plain-spoken and simple in his wants and attainments.

His home life is ideal. He is a thorough home man, where he occupies his time in companionship with his wife and daughters and his library.

Wilson was nominated by the Democratic convention which was held at Trenton last September on first ballot and then by acclamation. His speech of acceptance was a notable one and he was at the start of his campaign heralded as the new leader of Democracy in this State.

Since his nomination and during the entire campaign he set the example by not holding up his opponents to ridicule. On the contrary he explained his cause as against the party represented by the man and not the man as an individual. His sincerity and straightforward doctrines of belief, which he expounded publicly and by letters to those who questioned them privately, won for him the splendid majorities recorded by the votes cast yesterday by the people of the State.

HOUSE DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY IS FIFTY-SIX

Revised returns from Congressional districts over the country now make the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives at least 56. That this is a rock-bottom mark is shown by other estimates which place the majority for the Democratic majority as high as 62. The Congressmen when they take their seats in March next will probably stand 223 Democrats, 167 Republicans and one Socialist.

The indications are that the Republicans will have a majority of 12 in the United States Senate against a present majority of 25.

The Democratic gains in the House are as follows: Connecticut 1, Illinois 3, Indiana 1, Iowa 1, Kentucky 1, Maine 2, Maryland 2, Massachusetts 1, Michigan 2, Missouri 3, Montana 1, New Jersey 4, New York 10, North Carolina 3, Ohio 5, Oklahoma 1, Pennsylvania 5 and West Virginia 3.

CHARLES FLYNN NOW PRESIDENT OF P. B. A.

The local Patrolmen's Benevolent Association met Wednesday and elected the following officers for the ensuing term. President, Charles Flynn; vice-president, Andrew Safron; corresponding secretary, R. J. Birmingham; financial secretary, Daniel McDonald; treasurer, Dennis O'Keefe; trustees, Tobias Nolan and Charles Keller; sergeant-at-arms, Thomas Fahey.

The association is composed of members from both the city and borough police forces. The retiring officers were given a hearty vote of thanks for their work during the term just ended.

BEST IRON STAND.

The best stand for irons to one housekeeping mind is a new fire brick. Being a non-conductor of heat it answers all the purposes of the ordinary stand in protecting the table, etc., and is more satisfactory in other ways.

An iron placed upon the ordinary support is cooled by the air currents passing over its surfaces, while the brick keeps the heat in the implement itself. It is equally convenient, and has the effect of keeping the polishing surface clean also.

MARTINE'S STATEMENT

HAS FAITH IN HIS PARTY.

Refuses to Participate in Any Unseemly Scramble for the Office —Will not "Button-hole" Legislators.

James E. Martine, who received the votes of 48,453 Democrats in the direct primaries as a candidate for United States Senator, Friday gave out a statement relative to the Senatorship. It reads:

"The next session of the New Jersey Legislature will elect me United States Senator to succeed John Kean. In making this declaration I am not unmindful of opinions to the contrary. But as I have an abiding faith in the honor, intelligence and integrity of the Democratic Legislature, I feel that there is cause for neither apprehension nor misgivings on my part as to the result.

"I entertain no thought but that my candidacy for the important office to which I aspire, which has already been submitted to the people and received their approval, will be heartily acquiesced in by the Democratic members of the Legislature. This conclusion, in my opinion, is justified by political truth, logic and expediency. Were the result to be otherwise the Democratic party would be plunged into a sea of political imbecility, chicanery and double dealing. I know that civic virtue is in the ascendency by reason of Democratic success at the polls last Tuesday.

"As I view the situation, my candidacy personifies a great principle, a great truth in popular government. At this time I believe that important forces of public opinion will be expressed in my favor. These influences will be manifested in my behalf on the basis that acquiescence in the result of the direct primary is working progressively and harmoniously toward the goal of popular election of United States Senators, to which the New Jersey Democrats are unequivocally committed by their most recent political quotations that may be raised at this time.

"I believe that I have a proper appreciation of the responsibilities of the great office to which I aspire, and in approval of which more than forty-eight thousand Democrats have cast their ballots. Declaring their belief in my fitness for the office and in appreciation of my labors for the party, the Democratic members of the Legislature three years ago unanimously and voluntarily voted to elect me to the United States Senate.

"Woodrow Wilson, in a post election sentiment, declared that the present time is a challenge to every man of earnest spirit, and no man should allow a narrow and selfish ambition to rule him.' May I not say that Mr. Wilson's declaration expresses at once a conviction and a hope that crowds itself in upon my own mind?

"I do not consider it consistent with the spirit of the direct primary law, and absolutely contrary to the proprieties of the occasion for me to participate in an unseemly scramble to secure my election as Senator. The people have indorsed me and my party has declared itself in favor of the principle predicating fitness through which the indorsement was recorded. I reason that this is sufficient. There will be no attempt on my part to buttonhole members of the Legislature in an effort to persuade them to that which I believe will be done in accordance with fidelity to political principles and good government."

E. C. Stokes, who received the highest vote for Republican candidates for United States Senator in the direct primaries, yesterday afternoon sent a letter to James E. Martine congratulating him on the prospect of his being elected United States Senator by virtue of being the high man on the Democratic ticket in the primary count.

RIFLE BULLET PASSED THROUGH HER SKIRTS

Mrs. Ralph Bullman, of Woodland avenue, had a narrow escape from being accidentally shot by her brother-in-law, Louis Bullman, Wednesday morning. The latter is but fifteen years old and was handling a flobert rifle in the kitchen of their home. Mrs. Bullman warned him several times about the danger of the weapon, but the young man laughed at her fears. He was pulling the trigger with the safety clutch on but the rifle was suddenly discharged. The bullet passed through Mrs. Bullman's skirts and buried itself in the floor behind her.

The escape from being perhaps fatally injured was so narrow Mrs. Bullman was almost overcome. The rifle was put where it will never fire another bullet.

LEWIS WIRES CONGRATULATION

Defeated Candidate Extends Best Wishes for a Successful Administration—Wilson's Plans Unannounced.

"I feel very deeply the great honor the people of New Jersey have conferred upon me," said Governor-elect Wilson Wednesday.

"I feel quite as deeply the responsibility it imposes upon me and upon my colleagues on the Democratic ticket. I shall, of course, put every power I possess into the service of the people as Governor of the State. It will be my pleasure and privilege to serve them, not as the head of my party, but as the servant of all classes and of all interests, in an effort to promote the common welfare.

"I regard the result of the election as a splendid vindication of the conviction of the Democrats of this State that the people of it ready to turn away from personal attacks and party manoeuvres and base their political choices upon great questions of public policy and just administration."

Dr. Wilson received yesterday a telegram of congratulation from the defeated Republican candidate, V. M. Lewis. It reads:

"Accept my heartiest congratulations. May you administration be a most successful and happy one."

Dr. Wilson also received congratulations to his "four fellow Governors, Foss, Harmon, Dix and Baldwin."

Dr. Wilson has not made public his plans for the immediate future. He, however, intends to take a good rest first.

Vivian M. Lewis said yesterady:

"I attribute my defeat in New Jersey to the tidal wave which has swept the Eastern States and to the wisdom of the Democratic party in selecting a candidate of the calibre of Dr. Wilson. I expected that efficient administration of the affairs of the State by the Republican party would have insured the support of the party at the polls. I have endeavored to make this record in my speeches in the various parts of the State, and have frankly told the people my stand on the various important questions of the day.

"While somewhat personally disappointed at the outcome, I nevertheless accept the same by the decision of the voters and shall labor to make the incoming administration a successful one.

"I shall continue my activities in the Republican ranks and do what is within my power to return that party again to the control of State affairs."

At the most glorious hour of his career last night, Wilson, at Princeton, faced thousands of his fellow townspeople and the college students, as he left the White house residence on the college campus.

Standing in the window of his library, with Mrs. Wilson and the Misses Wilson nearby, the new champion of the people's cause made a ten-minute speech of the same character that has swept the State like wildfire during the past six weeks.

It was evident that the Governor-elect was deeply stirred, and he made a struggle to control his emotions. The great moments of his career have been interwoven with Princeton University. Here he came as an under-graduate and passed four years, and it was a great moment when he was called back to be a professor in his alma mater. It was a memorable day when he was elected president to succeed Dr. Franklin L. Patton.

After the famous locomotive cheers had ceased and the bands had exhausted themselves, Governor-elect Wilson, in brief, said:

"I thank you very sincerely for your greetings. It is very kind for you to honor me in this manner. I will not attempt to make any lengthy address, for I have about made all the speeches I can in the campaign just finished.

"I can give you some impressions as to my feelings at this moment. Judging from my physical feelings, I know I am at the end of something which has been a strenuous campaign. Judging from the sobering feeling of responsibility, which has been mine all day, and of which I am conscious at this present moment, I realize that both myself and the Democratic party are only at the beginning and are facing great problems which the people will expect us to solve. The real task lies ahead.

"The people of this State have given these handsome majorities because they believed in the sincerity of the candidate and the Democratic platform. Now, in order to believe in ourselves as Democrats, we must do something. Doing is always much harder than talking."

Referring to the Democratic Assembly, the Governor-elect declared that he had considered the recommendations, had sent the Assemblymen to Trenton in order to make possible reform legislation.

"It is now up to myself and party to make good by rendering a service to the State."

Referring to the sweeping Democratic victory, he continued:

"This is not an ordinary season in politics. There is a new impulse in politics. The people are anxious to find new men through whom they can give expression to their desires and I am merely hoped they will not be disappointed in the men selected in this and other States."

Turning to the thousand Princeton students, he declared:

"It is absolutely essential for men who profess to follow learning to master civic and political matters and lend yourselves to the service of the commonwealth and nation. The true servants of the people must be thoroughly consecrated to their cause.

"The present time is a challenge to every man of earnest spirit and no man should allow a narrow and selfish ambition to rule him. The people have finally been pried awake and now those who lead must seek to keep them awake."

Great applause greeted his statement that the country needs leaders and its only safe advantage lies in finding consecrated and unselfish men who are willing to serve their fellows at whatever cost to themselves.

MANY ATTEND DINNER AT HEAVENLY REST

What was declared to have been the most successful affair of its kind ever held in the parish was the dinner given by the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest last Wednesday by the Guild of the church. Upward of 125 people attended the dinner and it was a splendid financial and social success.

The dinner was arranged by the guild with Mrs. Charles Borden as chairman. The tables, five in number, were handsomely decorated with flowers and candelabra and the menu was of the finest. A table containing fancy articles was also liberally patronized during the evening and the total net result was satisfying to the women who arranged the affair.

The table specially set aside for visitors from Holy Cross church was filled more than once. Rev. George A. Warner and Mrs. Warner, being among the guests to partake of the good things provided.

Those who waited on the tables and served so acceptably were: Mrs. Frank H. Babcock and Mrs. J. Hutchcroft, Mrs. J. O. Stevens of Holy Cross parish, assisted Mrs. Borden in preparing and arranging the dinner.

MISS AMY WILSON WEDS AT HOME OF HER SISTER

Miss Amy Wilson, daughter of the late Nathaniel Wilson, of East Millstone, and Augustus Vliet, of Middlebush, were married Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Thomas E. Currin, Jr., of Martin avenue. Rev. Henry Lockwood, pastor of the Reformed church, of East Millstone, who was accompanied by his wife, performed the ceremony in the presence of just the immediate relatives. The couple left the city during the afternoon on a wedding trip.

Among the many gifts received by the bride were two pieces of linen known to be 111 years old. They have been handed down from one relative to another. One piece given to Mrs. Vliet by her great aunt, Mrs. Hattie Davidson, of Trenton.

BABCOCK TREASURER OF PLAYGROUND COMMISSION

At the meeting of the Playground Commission held on Thursday evening, George L. Babcock, who succeeded Joseph W. Gavett as a member of the commission, was elected treasurer. President George P. Melick appointed Harry W. Marshall and Mrs. Marion Fowler as committee to confer with the city engineer relative to the laying out of Parker Field, which forms a part of Parker Field next year. The field has been nearly finished under the supervision of Howard Craig and will be ready for use next summer.

It was the sense of the commission that two more playgrounds should be opened and equipped next year which will make a total of four recreation places exclusive of Parker Field. Action toward accomplishing this end will be taken. Misses Harriet E. Moe and Mary L. Childs have been re-engaged to supervise the Franklin and Bryant grounds next year.

The location for the two new playgrounds have not as yet been determined, but they will be centrally located.

PARISIAN GAYETY HERE

Cafe Chantant Entertains Prominent Plainfielders at Park Club.

Dreamy Dances, Legerdemain, Singing and Other Amusements Attract Large and Liberal Crowd.

Gay Parisian life was faithfully depicted Friday at the Cafe Chantant given by the City Union of the King's Daughters at the Park club. The auditorium of the club house was artistically and effectively decorated. More than sixty tables besides the fourteen boxes were continually filled and the ubiquitous girl was in evidence. She sold flowers, candy, cigars and other things and was liberally patronized.

Besides the delicious things to eat there was a fine program to entertain the large company. Professor Krieger, of New York, mystified and amused with clever tricks; Miss Florence Wilday gave a Kilarney dance gracefully, and Mr. Jacobi sang splendidly, accompanied by Mrs. Jacobi with violin and Miss Ida May Randolph at the piano. A snow dance executed by a sextet evoked round after round of hearty applause. The pretty dress and setting of the dance were pleasing to the eye and the illusion was made nearly perfect by showers of white confetti. These were the dancers: Misses Helen Ray Hooley, Nancy Vandeventer, Marian Hall, and Herbert Rogers, William Flanders, and Jack Vandeventer.

The surprise of the evening was the Chef Dance beautifully executed by Messrs. Alston M. Abbot, John P. Myers, Herbert Rogers, William Flanders and Harry McGee. John P. Myers was the soloist in this dance and he captured the audience with his singing and effective foot work. The sudden appearance of Miss Elizabeth McGee and Mrs. Alston M. Abbot from beneath the folded linen in front of the stage added the needed touch to complete a graceful finish to the dance.

Dancing on the floor began shortly before midnight, to which many remained. Boxes were occupied by Edwin S. Hooley, Walter McGee, Henry McGee, Alexander Milne, George T. Rogers and George E. Hall.

The net result of the affair was about $500, which will be devoted to the Baby Camp, Day Nursery and City nurse. One prominent Borough citizen contributed $100.

Mrs. DeWitt Hubbell, general chairman of the reception committee, was assisted by Henry Crofut White, DeWitt C. Hubbell and Everett Murray. Other committees were: Cafe Chantant, Miss Ruth Suffern, chairman; Mrs. Edmund Rushmore, Mrs. George Worth, Miss Marguerite Long and Miss May Shreve. Those who assisted Mrs. Henry Butler with cigars and cigarettes were Miss Anna Harrigues, Mrs. Kirk, Miss Ethel Mott, Miss Gladys Peck, Miss Bernice Sharrotts, Miss Helen Davis, Miss Mollie Perkins and Miss Kate Barlow. Refreshments, Mrs. D. J. Randall, chairman; Mrs. Clifford McGee, Mrs. H. F. Turrell, Mrs. T. E. Dubois, Mrs. Annie Murphy, Mrs. Henry Crofut White was in charge of the following waitresses: Gertrude Holmes, May Faber, Mary Barber, Ethel Cotton, Marjorie Campbell, Bessie Flanders, Mabel Hough, Marguerite Vandeventer, Edith Griscom, Eunice Watson, May Murray, Ruth Van Vleet, Helen Phillips, Mildred Berry, Adelaide Ball, Laura Long, Kathryn Ball, Marguerite Long, May Shreve, Mrs. F. E. Dubois, Mrs. Alexander Milne, Mrs. Frank Hayes Ball, Mrs. Gifford Cooley, Mrs. H. Harris, Mrs. Louis Williams, Mrs. William Barlow Jr., Mrs. W. J. Roome and Mrs Everett Murray.

A MEDICINE HINT.

The other day my doctor ordered me some medicine in cachet form, and as no directions for taking were given on the box I took them dry. Just as they were.

But the proper way is to dip the cachet in cold water for a second or two, then put it in the mouth and drink a little cold water to send it down.

If the cachet is taken dry it is apt to burst at the back of the mouth and one gets all the taste of the drugs in full force. The water softens the cachet and prevents this happening.

Another little thing I have learned is to put the cachet on the front of my tongue, not at the back of the mouth, before drinking the water.

HINTS FOR THE TABLE.

For a very delicious dish of deviled clams prepare a cupful of chopped clams and season them with cayenne, salt and the juice of a lemon. Mix them to a soft batter-like consistency with the yolks of two eggs and some powdered crackers. Put the mixture into little ramekins, broad scalloped shells or into the cups, spread the surface with soft butter and bake until well browned. For a change the mixture may be spread over crisp crackers and then browned in the oven.

TO HAND OUT FAT JOBS

Legislature to Elect U. S. Senator, State Comptroller and Other Officers.

NEW ROAD COMMISSIONER.

State School Fund and State House Commission Also Among the Many Plums for Distribution.

Besides electing a United States Senator to succeed John Kean, the Democratic majority in the Legislature will also find it their duty to choose a new State Comptroller to succeed Harry J. West, of Camden, whose term expires on February 21 next.

The Comptrollership pays a salary of $6,000 per annum and the incumbent is elected for a term of three years.

By the expiration of Comptroller's West's term of office five weeks after the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as Governor, the State House Commission will become Democratic in control. The commission is composed of the Governor, the Comptroller and the State Treasurer. Treasurer Voorhees' term does not expire for two years yet, and after the election of a Democratic Comptroller he will become the minority member of the commission.

The State House Commission has entire control of the capitol property. A change in the political complexion of the commission will ultimately result in at least three Republicans losing good berths. They will be John Weseman, of Newark, who has been the custodian of the State House for several years at a salary of $3,000 per annum; Charles Satterthwait, of Trenton, deputy custodian; and Simon Gerson, also of Trenton, who is night custodian at a salary of $1,500. Mr. Gerson originally came from Cumberland county, having secured his official berth through the influence of former Governor E. C. Stokes.

Another important change in State House affairs that will be brought about by the election of a Democratic Governor and his subsequent appointment of Democrats to office in place of Republicans concerns the trustees of the school fund. The trustees are the Governor, the Comptroller, the State Treasurer and the Secretary of State. When Governor Wilson appoints a successor to Secretary of State Dickinson the school fund trustees will consist of three Democrats. With the Democrats in control of the body, Robert Hutchinson, of Bordentown, Republican State committeeman from Burlington county, who is the secretary of the school fund at a salary of $2,500 per annum will be displaced in favor of a Democrat.

The first important office that Governor Wilson will have to fill is the Commissioner of Public Roads. Colonel Frederick Gilkyson's term expires a few days after the inauguration of the new Governor. This job pays $5,000 per year, and the incumbent is furnished with automobile and chauffeur at the expense of the State. It is considered one of the best political berths in New Jersey.

DEMOCRATIC CITY JUDGE FOR PLAINFIELD NEXT

Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson will have some important appointments to make for Union county during his term of office. One affecting Plainfield will be for judge of the district court to succeed Judge William Newcorn in 1912. The only lawyers in Plainfield who are Democrats are William A. Codington, Walter Hatfield, Sr., and John Owens. It will be up to the local Democratic committee and club to endorse one of these or some one else for the office.

County Court Judge Atwater's term expires in 1913 and a Democrat will get that highly prized position. There are a number whose names are already being mentioned for the place, among them being Robert H. McAdams, chairman of the Elizabeth city committee. District Court Judge Whittemore's term will expire the same year, and an Elizabeth Democrat will be named in his stead.

An African "U. S. A."

The "United States of America" is not the only "U. S. A." in the world. The other "U. S. A." is the "Union of South Africa," and the use of the abbreviation in foreign mail for South Africa lately has resulted in confusion. Consul Stuart M. Lupton, of Karachi, India, has notified this government that the Indian Postoffice Department has issued a notice warning persons addressing correspondence to Union of South Africa to avoid the initials "U. S. A." as this abbreviation is recognized generally as applying to the United States.

MARTINE WRITES SMITH

MR. BRODHEAD'S STATEMENT.

"Farmer Orator" Tells Newark Editor He is Amazed at Latter's Interview—The Fight.

Getting Hot.

James E. Martine, who received 48,458 votes for United States Senator at the Democratic primaries in September, Monday sent to former Senator James Smith, Jr., an open challenge to debate, either in a public hall in Newark or elsewhere, before Governor Woodrow Wilson and the Legislature, their relative claims upon the Senatorship and their respective merits for the office.

Mr. Martine's letter follows the public declaration of Senator Smith yesterday that he did not regard the primary expression as in any sense binding and that "if my friends think I should enter the fight, I will enter the race and I will win." Mr. Martine recalls how, three years ago, at the Democratic gubernatorial convention, Senator Smith sent down his lieutenant, the present chairman of the Democratic State Committee, James R. Nugent, to vote the 156 delegates from Essex county to the convention for Martine for Governor, and how he stepped aside when it was thought to be in the best interests of the party to nominate Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr. Mr. Martine's letter to Senator Smith follows:

"My Dear Senator: . I was amazed to read your public declaration of yesterday to the effect that the recent expression of the Democratic voters of the State, preferring me for United States Senator, had no meaning and was not binding. As the duly selected choice of over 48,000 Democratic voters, who went to the primaries and voted for me, I must at once protest and resent this declaration on your part. These votes were cast at the same primaries and by the same Democrats who selected the delegates that nominated our splendid leader of the anti-machine forces, Woodrow Wilson, for whose nomination and election I was ever as ardent and faithful worker as yourself.

"I say I was amazed because I had come to believe that, inasmuch as the Essex county delegation three years ago, came to Trenton at your suggestion, and without any solicitation on my part, ready to support me as the party's candidate for Governor, it would have your support at this time. It was deemed fitting at that time to nominate some other Democrat, and I cheerfully acquiesced. Again, when the Legislature, in joint session, four years ago, selected a United States Senator, I was the choice of the party and was complimented by the Democratic votes in the Legislature, you having given me your support and likewise having previously and emphatically declared on several occasions that you were entirely out of politics.

"My faith in your intention not to set aside the will of the Democratic voters was further increased by the attitude which you assumed in your Newark newspaper, just prior to the election. You came out boldly in support of the primary expression and only two days before election declared editorially: 'The conditions are all prepared for one of the most shameful chapters in legislative history in this State for the purchase or attempted purchase of a United States Senatorship.' True, you were discussing our common enemy, the Republican party; but is there any difference in Republican morals and Democratic morals?

"If the Republicans were bound by the primary result, how much more so our party, which has led the good fight for permitting the voters of the State to say who shall represent them in the United States Senate.

"As you doubtless know, no State in the union has ever witnessed the shame of its Legislature going back on the primary expression for United States Senator, with the single exception of Illinois; and I am confident that you are good enough Jerseyman and staunch enough Democrat not to want to place our beloved State and party in the category with Illinois. I entered the primary contest as a matter of principle, and I shall fight for the success of that principle. My personal defeat or victory means little; but the success of the vital principle of keeping faith with the people means much more to our party.

"You had ample time to present your name to the voters, after my petitions had been prepared and my platform of principles made public. Now you come forward and publicly declare 'How little the vote in the primary meant was shown by the fact that there were only two candidates and one of them Frank M. McDermut.' Until now I have been reluctant to offer any reproof to the widely circulated at the time that you had, directly or indirectly, influenced Mr. McDermit to enter the contest against me, for the express purpose of placing yourself in the position of *dictating the entire pri*mary vote by being able to sneer at Mr. McDermitt's candidacy. If you were guilty of that act, you seem to have accomplished your purpose.

"Again you say that during the last fifteen years of Democratic losses and struggles in this State, I have worked constantly, sometimes quite alone among the leaders, to maintain the party organization and keep it in condition to grasp the opportunity when it came.' Without taking up at this time the work you did among the leaders to elect James M. Seymour as Governor, nor your repeated declarations that you had retired from politics, permit me to say that for forty years I have been working, in and out, for the success of the Democratic party in New Jersey. That service has been given for the love of a great cause, and I am proud of it.

"You say that if your friends think you should enter the race against me for the Senate, you will do so, and if you do decide to enter it, the majority of the caucus will give you the nomination. I dispute your right to speak for the Legislature. I challenge you, either in person, or through any of your friends, to meet me in public debate to consider the reasons why the voice of the people, as expressed at the primaries, should be ignored, I will meet you anywhere in Newark or anywhere else in the State; or before a joint meeting of the Legislature, and in the presence of the new leader of our party, Governor-elect Wilson.

"I stand squarely committed and pledged to vote for and support measures intended to give the people their rights; and against any further encroachments by privilege or the special interests at Washington. Your public record as a member of the United States Senate, is of course, your platform and your claim to recognition. We can debate our relative positions, either on the rostrum, or if you prefer, we can do it through the columns of Dr. Wilson and George L. Record so successfully did in the late campaign. But I shall insist that we meet in the open. Dr. Wilson has well said 'Insist upon it that there is nothing concealed about the government that is private;' and so I insist.

"Any manner that can be devised to permit you to present your claims to the people, I will not oppose, despite the fact that people have already decided upon me as their choice.

"Awaiting your reply, I am,
Yours very truly,
JAMES E. MARTINE."

L. J. Ellis, president of the Plainfield Democratic Civic, being interviewed as to Mr. Martine and the United States Senate said:

"The question is not one of who is most fit, but one of good faith to the public. The public sentiment has demanded the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people. In deference to this sentiment the Legislature of New Jersey in 1907 passed a law providing for the determination at primary elections by the voters of the several political parties their preference, or in the language of the act, 'endorsing any member of public political party for United States Senator. Candidates of both parties availed themselves of this law and *the Democratic party by an over*whelming majority endorsed James E. Martine as its choice. The law was passed so that the people of the State could make known to the Legislature their choice. That fact has only to be borne in mind to ap*preciate the obligation of the Legis*lature in the premises.

"To ignore these obligations would do great violence to the sensibilities not only of the Democratic party but of the entire people. It would give renewed force to the claim so prevalent now that when election is over legislators too often ignore their obligations to the people and become the servants of special interests or of some strong pre-election patron. As for instance, if it should prove true as is claimed in some quarters, that ex-Senator Smith is using or will exert his influence to prevail on the legisla*ture to ignore the choice of the* party as expressed at the primaries and elect him or some protege or friend of his to the Senate, and should succeed, the entire people would feel outraged, and that the pre-election charges that Mr. Smith's activity meant control of the party for his own purposes would be justified and the very ultimate principle would commence with a great handicap and be discredited, though through no fault of his.

"It behooves every Democrat to protest against any such catastrophe. This is said without discrediting Mr. Smith, but any obligations which the Democratic organizations, and some of its candidates have been under to him in the past, make it imperative that there now be no suggestion of loss control or interference, but that Mr. Wilson be unhampered in making good his promise that the wishes of the people of New Jersey would be the guide of his administration. We do not believe the people will submit any such disregard of their wishes."

Assemblyman-elect Calvin E. Brodhead today made this statement as one who will vote for Martine:

"The Democratic party is in my judgment irrevocably committed to the election of James E. Martine to the United States Senate. To ignore him would be a violation of party pledges in spirit if not in fact. For years our party has been contending for the principle of popular government, and leading Democrats all over the country have declared themselves in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people.

"In many States it has been incorporated in the party platforms, and in New Jersey the Democratic party platform declares unequivocally for this reform. As this could not be accomplished without an amendment to the United States Constitution, the Democratic minority in 1907 introduced a bill in the Legislature to effectuate this object as nearly as practicable. This was the law under which Messrs. Murphy, Stokes, Fowler, Martine and McDermit announced their candidacy. There was a fair field offered to any aspirant for this honor to come forward and present his name for popular approval.

"To say that the vote was not conclusive is beside the question, because he became the regularly nomi*nated candidate and followed* the formula of the law in letter and spirit. To say that the members of the Legislature are not bound to follow the popular choice is also evasion of the principle involved. It must be apparent to anyone that members of the electoral college are not bound to vote for their partial choice for President, but who would think of ignoring the candidate nominated?

Mr. Martine should be regularly elected by the Legislature and the spirit of Democratic principles vindicated."

NETHERWOOD FOOTBALL TEAM DEFEATS BOROUGHITES

The Crescents, of North Plainfield, were defeated Saturday morning by the fast Netherwood eleven, by a score of 11 to 0. Through the great headwork of Holstein, quarterback, Harrington, of the Netherwoods, was able to score twice, Holstein kicking the goals.

The game started with Green, of the Crescents, kicking off. Holstein, by the great interference of Hartman, carried the ball to the 50-yard line. Harrington, Phillips and Stall were sent through for four to six yards each. Holstein then punted. The quarter ended with Netherwood in possession of the ball on Crescents four-yard line. In the second quarter, Harrington and Holstein made gains from eight to twelve yards on every down. Harrington got the ball on the thirty-five-yard line in the third quarter and rushed it through for a touchdown. By constant pounding of the Crescent line, Harrington made the second touchdown in the fourth quarter. The lineup:

Netherwood—Baldwin, lf; Hartman, lt; Weeh, lg; Huff, c; Moran, rg; Bolton, rt; Phillips, re; Holstein, qb; Stall, lhb; Marsh, fb; Harrington, rhb. North Plainfield—Green, le; Harper, rt; T. Martin, lg; Smith, qb; Coyle, rhb; Middleton, fb; Cornell, lhb. Referee, VanZandt; umpire, Moy.

JAMES FRANCIS DALY DIES IN WASHINGTON

A telegram received here early Sunday morning announced the death of James Francis Daly, formerly of this city, at North Yakima, Wash., late Saturday night. He passed away in the hospital at that place after a brief illness with pneumonia. The body will be brought here.

Mr. Daly was the son of William Daly, of Jackson avenue, and was thirty-one years old. He was engaged in the grocery business at Fourth street and Park avenue for several years and later was employed by Peter Winfeldt, of Westfield. He left Plainfield in July of last year for North Yakima, where he engaged in the real estate and insurance business according to letters received by his relatives he had met with considerable success when his illness interrupted.

Besides his father, Mr. Daly is survived by one brother, William Daly, Jr., of Summit avenue, and six sisters, all living in the borough. They are Mrs. Michael Higgins and the Misses Agnes, Catherine, Anna, Florence and Alberta Daly, of Jackson avenue.

Maps Ready for Distribution.

The State Trust Company announces that its map of Plainfield and North Plainfield is now ready for distribution. The map indicates houses, churches, schools, churches and the public buildings and to it is appended a list of the fire alarm boxes of both the city and borough. Copies may be obtained upon application at the bank.

Successful Cake Sale.

Miss May Randolph's Sunday school class of nine girls held a successful cake sale in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, Saturday afternoon and the sum of $10.25 was netted for the building fund of the church. The entire supply of cakes was disposed of during the afternoon.

W. L. HETFIELD'S FATHER.

Member of Old Union County Family Whose Ancestors Received Large Grants of Land—Funeral Private.

Squier Hetfield, one of the oldest and best known residents in Plainfield, died Monday morning at the home of his niece, Mrs. Aretta Manning, of Madison avenue. He had been in failing health for the past year, and several days ago suffered a paralytic stroke. It left him in a very weakened state and coupled with the infirmities of age, resulted in his demise. He began sinking Sunday night and passed away at 5 o'clock Monday.

Squier Hetfield was a descendant of the original Hetfield family that has been strongly identified with Union county affairs for nearly 300 years. He was born at Westfield, on October 3, 1814, his father being Isaac Hetfield, a native of the same place. The latter was a descendant of Matthias Hetfield, who came to this section from New Haven, Conn., where he took the oath of fidelity in 1660. He was the son of Thomas Hetfield, of Leyden, England, a member of John Robinson's church and a native of Yorkshire. Matthias Hetfield received large grants of land in and about Elizabeth and gave the ground for the First Presbyterian church and grave yard adjoining the county courthouse. He stipulated that it should always be used for church purposes or revert to his heirs.

Squier Hetfield had five brothers and three sisters. There is now only one surviving, Mrs. Mary Lee, of Newark, all others were long-lived. One of the brothers was the late Levi Hetfield, who was the father of Walter L. Hetfield, and grandfather of Assistant County Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. Levi Hetfield was a contractor and builder and Squire Hetfield learned the trade with him. He would never work for any one else and when his brother died about ten yars ago, he retired from work, although as hale and hearty as a man of fifty. He never married and continued to make his home with Mrs. Manning with whom he resided from the time he came to Plainfield from Westfield in 1884. He never smoked or used alcoholic beverages and often remarked that the abstainance helped to prolong his life. He was fond of the violin and spent many hours in playing his beloved instrument.

Besides Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Manning, Mr. Hetfield leaves one other niece, Mrs. Harold Serrell, of Myrtle avenue, and two nephews, Walter L. Hetfield and former Postmaster John M. Hetfield, of this city. There are also several nieces and nephews in Westfield and numerous grand nieces and grand nephews.

The funeral was private.

GIVES FORTUNE AND LIFE FOR NEEDY CHILDREN.

Mrs. Anna Steele, whom Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire characterized as "the greatest mother in America today," spoke for a few minutes at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday evening at the invitation of the pastor and told in a few words something of her work among the needy white and colored children. Mrs. Steele has mothered 1,200 little ones in her home at Chatanooga, Tenn., and several of those who have graduated from it have become eminent among the missionaries of this country.

Mrs. Steele will return some day in the near future to tell about the work in which she is so much interested and to which she has devoted her entire fortune and best life.

PLAINFIELD SOCCERS ARE IN SECOND PLACE

The Plainfield Association Football Club by defeating the American Types at Jersey City, Saturday, is now in second place, the Eurekas, of Kearney, holding first place. The final score of Saturday's contest was 2 to 1. In less than five minutes after play was called the Plainfielders scored their first goal from a nice shot by Heaume. During the first twenty minutes of play the Plainfield team held the home eleven in fine shape, preventing a score.

The Plainfield team was then awarded a corner, and, Sutton taking it, centred it nicely, and Hosie, by a nice goal on the play, breasted it through, making a second goal. There was no more scoring in this half. The second half was tame, neither side playing up to good football. The Plainfielders had the best of the play and *succeeded in scor*ing three more points, but they were not allowed, the referee declaring them offside. The game ended with a score of 2 to 1. The Plainfield lineup: Stevenson, Craig, Roxburgh, Boyle, Hosie, McComb, Braidwood, Crawford, Spalding, Heaume, Sutton.

SUDDEN DEATH OF CHARLES A. WEAVER

Charles A. Weaver, formerly of Chicago, and for a year employed in the office of F. T. Ostrom, on North avenue, died Sunday evening at Muhlenberg Hospital of heart trouble. As Mr. Weaver had no relatives here his remains are being cared for by the Masons of which Mr. Weaver was a 32nd degree member.

Mr. Weaver was 45 years old and was well known and liked among his business associates. He is survived by a brother, F. P. Weaver, of Lockport, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. Daniel E. Pomeroy, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

MONROE AVENUE CHURCH RAISES FUND IN NOVEL WAY

The congregation of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church adopted a novel method, lining in raising its annual thank offering for home and foreign work. In all $625 was raised, $400 of which will be given to foreign work, while the balance, $225, will be used for repairs to the home church. The appeal was made by Walter M. McGee, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

E. H. Beekman had previously built a turkey crate with slats, placing a card stating that those present could not see what was in the crate. Each slat represented $25 and these were sold to members of the church and congregation. When all the slots were removed there was disclosed two turkeys, one large one representing the foreign field, and the smaller one the home field.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED AT CONGRESS OF MOTHERS.

The two days' session of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers closed on Saturday afternoon in the Women's Club of Orange.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Augustus H. Reeve; first vice-president, Mrs. Alexander March, Jr.; second vice-president, Mrs. Howard R. Sharrp, of Riverton; third vice-president, Mrs. Wellington Bechtel, of Haddonfield; recording secretary, Mrs. Thomas J. Pancoast, of Merchantville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. Linton Engle, of Haddonfield; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur J. Collins, of Moorestown; auditor, Mrs. Mary H. Bell, of Haddonfield.

That the organization is financially healthy was shown in the report of Mrs. Arthur J. Collins, of Moorestown, treasurer, showed a balance on hand of $154.79. Mrs. Thomas J. Pancoast, of Haddonfield, recording secretary, reported progress in the work, stating that a large amount of literature had been distributed among the parents and school teachers, and that twenty women's clubs and teachers in the normal schools had been correspond*ed with in an effort to arouse interest* and co-operation between teachers and parents.

Further details of interest to Plainfield mothers will be published tomorrow.

WILLIAM ROCKWELL DEAD

AGED SEVENTY-THREE

William Rockwell, for sixty years a resident of this city and for thirty years a cashier of the National State Bank, 344 East Front street, of the Bank of Newark, died Sunday at a complication of diseases. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Nora L. Rockwell, two daughters, Nora L. and Lucilla D. Rockwell, and four sons, William L., A. Vincent, Bertram S., and Sidney J. Rockwell. Besides these there is a brother, George S., and three sisters, Misses Lida DeF. and Harriet D., and Mrs. Lucilla S. Dod, all of whom reside in Newark.

Mr. Rockwell was the son of the late Darwin F. Rockwell and Lucilla S. Downes, and was born at Westfield, April 12, 1827. He received his education at the College of the City of New York and was well known in Newark business circles.

P.H.S. MINSTREL SHOW A BIG SUCCESS

The High School auditorium was crowded to the doors on Saturday night to hear the P. H. S. fifth an*nual minstrel show. It was estimat*ed that 900 persons were present and it was the consensus of opinion that the affair was the best yet given. The program comprised two parts, the minstrel show in the first and a sketch and a playlet in the second, and both were admirably performed. Repeated encores to which the boys responded liberally kept the audience until a late hour. The net proceeds, which are to go to the athletic association treasury, was highly satisfactory.

Twenty-eight young men with Roy Titsworth as interlocutor made the fun in the minstrels. Miss E: Knowl*ton, the accompanist, filled her po*sition with credit. Nelson Ramsey and Sewell Ulrich created lots of fun in a sketch entitled a "Lightning Sketch Artist," while a sextet of the fellows rendered the audience with "A Thief in the House."

With Roy Titsworth as interlocutor the following formed the minstrel company: Endmen, Sewell Ulrich, Sidney Karr, Edson Woodhull and Frank Clarke; company, Messrs. Ramsey, VanZandt, Berse, Manley, Runyon, Coyle, Bristol, Banks, Goldsmith, Karr, Uhler, Jenkins, A. VanZandt, Sharkey, Hanrahan, Keeney, Mills, Allen, Bradley, Doane, Weber, Grisley, Cottrell, Ricketts, Krom, Wilson and Moore.

The characters well taken in the "Thief in the House," were by J. Nelson Ramsey, R. E. Titsworth, Sidney Karr, R. B. Berse, Sewell Ulrich and Burnett Doane. Dixon Philips was the stage manager and S. B. Howe, Jr., director and coach.

The musical numbers were given by Messrs. Ulrich, VanZandt, Woodhull, Berse, Carty, Karr, Titsworth and Clarke. The affair was a huge success.

MISS BERTHA MANNING WEDS ALBERT F. YAEGER

Miss Bertha Parkhurst Manning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Manning, of Randolph road, and Albert Francis Yaeger, of Webster place, were married Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church. The ceremony occurred on the last anniversary of the birth of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her sister, Miss Florence L. Manning, as maid-of-honor. Her gown was of white marquisette over messaline with lace and pearl trimmings and she wore a tulle veil caught up with lilies of the valley. Her bouquet was of bride roses and lilites of the valley and the pearl pendant, which was the only ornament which she wore, was the gift of the groom.

The maid of honor's gown was of pink silk chiffon with gold trimmings and she carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. Harry C. Yaeger, brother of the groom, was the best man and Miss Florence M. Yaeger, sister of the groom, played the wedding marches from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn during the ceremony.

The house was attractively decorated with palms, chrysanthemums and southern smilax, the color scheme being green and white. There were many guests from New York, Newark, Plainfield and near-by towns. The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts, including silver, cut glass, furniture and several checks for substantial amounts.

The wedding ceremony was followed by a reception and later the bride and groom departed for a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in their newly-furnished home in this city. DeMolli & Co. were the caterers.

WATCHUNG HUNT DINNER

ATE SIX LITTLE ROAST PIGS.

Program of Instrumental Music and Speech-making Enlivens the Occasion—Those who Were There.

Harry L. Finch, president of the Watchung Hunt Club, gave a jollifi*cation dinner at the club*, Saturday night, following the weekly chase after the hounds. The affair was one of the most enjoyable of the season. The dinner was served in the grill room, there being about fifty guests. During the evening there was a fine program of instrumental music by Brooks and Linton and there were also speeches by Francis Henderson, vice-president of the Knickerbocker Trust Company, New York; H. M. Stockton, S. A. Cruikshank, A. G. Hooley, H. B. Coombe, Henry S. Fullerton and William P. Burpee, of Rockland, Me., as well as President Finch.

A feature of the dinner, which was an excellent one served by Steward Sidney Richmond, was the roast suckling pigs, six of them being brought in and placed on the table. They were carved by different ones present. While this dinner was in progress, Mrs. A. G. Hooley, Mrs. C. Wesley Holland, Mrs. A. B. Davies, Mrs. H. W. Beebe, of this city; Mrs. William Clark and Mrs. William Griffith, of New York, were Mr. Finch's guests at the clubhouse.

FIREMEN RESCUE CAT FROM A LOFTY PERCH

Although it wasn't in line with his recent string of misfortunes, W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, experienced more trouble Saturday and Sunday that upset the even tenor of his way. This time the family cat was mainly responsible for the occurrence and the neighborhood became involved in it before the finish.

"Tabby" was lazily dozing on the Warnock porch Saturday afternoon when, without any warning, according to J. A. Wilson, of Grove street, came around for a friendly visit. He was no use for cats and "Tabby" knows it. So saw the enemy just in time to make a wild dash for safety, but the dog was on her trail. The only thing she could reach in time was a tall elm tree in front of the house. She went up it so fast it was impossible to stop before the topmost branches were reached. There she stuck, refusing coaxing and no amount of coaxing and calling could make her budge. She knew she was safe high in the air and she intended to stay.

"Tabby" clung to the branch all Saturday night, weowing at times just enough to disturb the sleep of the nearby residents. She was still there yesterday morning, and after the largest part of the Craig place forces had tried in vain to get her to the ground, the borough fire department was appealed to for help. The men responded with ladders and succeeded in getting high enough to rescue the cat from her tiresome perch. The neighbors breathed a sigh of relief when the rescue was effected and Mr. Warnock hastened to notified "Colonel" to pay no more visits to his home.

Prosper J. A. Berckmans.

Prosper J. A. Berckmans, a resident of Plainfield many years ago, residing on East Front street, just above Farmdale road, where the John Taylor Johnston place is now located, and after whom Berckman street was named, died on Monday, November 8, at his home in Augusta, Ga., aged eighty-one years. He was a well known horticulturist, entomologist and pomologist, and was president of the National Pomological Society vice-president of the International Pomological Society, with headquarters in Paris.

HOW IT FEELS TO FLY

Randolph Tells of His Travel. ing Through Space at 35 Miles an Hour.

IN A WRIGHT BROS. AEROPLANE

Former Plainfielder Has a Fifteen Minute Experience and He Will Stick to the Automobile.

Edward S. F. Randolph, formerly of this city, but now of Westfield, has just returned from the West, stopping at Chicago, Racine, Milwaukee and Dayton, Ohio, visiting the Wright aeroplane factory for three days. While at Dayton he made two flights in a Wright aeroplane where he met Mr. Russell, general manager.

He was enthusiastic over his experience in his flights with one of the noted aviators of the Wright Brothers' staff, Frank Coffyn, who was at the factory for a few days before starting for California.

One flight was across country, over farmland and woodland and return to the starting point. The last flight of about fifteen minutes duration was an altitude flight of over 500 feet and the remarkable part to Mr. Randolph was the fact of each landing being made within a few feet of the aerodrome entrance, where the start was made. Mr. Randolph says that the experience of flying is an enjoyable one, all fear being left behind after one is seated in the aeroplane and the motor is started. The aeroplane is mounted on wheels travels along the ground for a distance of from two to three hundred feet and just when the wheels leave the ground it is impossible for a novice to tell. The warping of the planes in turning is one of the most sensational feelings of the entire flight, but after one has made the turns and is in the straight-way, the sensation is one of sitting still with a slight sway of the immense wings, and the wind rushing by accompanied with the continual popping of the exploding cylinders of the motor, which is located at the right hand.

The Dayton Journal photographed Messrs. Coffyn and Randolph as they landed from their last flight and said:

"The accompanying picture, reproduced from a photograph, shows E. S. F. Randolph seated beside Frank Coffyn one of Wright Brothers' aviators. The picture was taken immediately after the landing from a successful flight of fifteen minutes and over 500 feet in the air. Mr. Randolph is a real estate operator in the East and an enthusiastic student of aerial navigation. He is one of the pioneers of the automobile industry in his State and a member of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club. Mr. Randolph is just closing a two weeks' trip through the large automobile factories of the Middle West with the idea of obtaining information as to the business outlook for 1911."

An average speed of thirty-five miles an hour was maintained during the flights and the Wright biplane was carrying a load not including the motor of about 340 pounds. Mr. Randolph purchased a six-cylinder 1911 Mitchell touring car while visiting the Mitchell factory in company with F. L. C. Martin, William Mazzaco and Florence Mc Carthy, which he expects to use in his real estate business next season. Mr. Randolph is the distinction of being one of the first, if not the first Jerseyman to participate in a flight in a Wright machine at their Dayton plant.

Mr. Randolph is one of the early operators of the automobile and has probably owned and operated as many cars as any one man in the State, a total of fourteen, and says that while he is in business, his experiences in flying are over. During the past five years he has built forty houses and is now opening up a new street through his tract of land at Westfield.

Work Begins on Abrams' Building.

Contractors Cormack Caulfield and son commenced work this morning on the new building to be erected by Marcus Abrams on the site of his present store on West Front street. It will be three stories in height and in dimensions thirty-two by one hundred and twenty feet. The work of construction will be carried on over and around the old building.

Passed Resolutions.

The Plainfield Bar Association has passed resolutions of condolence on the death of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, a committee consisting of William M. Stillman, Walter L. Hetfield and Harry C. Runyon, of the association, being appointed to draft the same. The resolutions will be found in another column.

Grant Leivers, of 210 Grove street, is recovering from a serious illness.

MISS COONEY'S WEDDING

Her Marriage to D. Fredrick Carpenter Takes Place Tonight.

DR. ANDERSON TO OFFICIATE.

Ceremony at the Home of the Bride's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Carpenter—Guests from Many Places.

Miss Florence Mary Cooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Cooney, of 939 Union street, and D. Frederick Carpenter, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Carpenter, of East Second street, will be married at 7 o'clock this evening at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church. About seventy-five relatives and friends have been invited to witness the ceremony.

The bride will be gowned in point applique over white silk, and will carry a bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She will be attended by Miss Leola Cool Smith, of Arlington, a classmate at the Plainfield High School, both being graduated in the Class of '06. Miss Smith will be gowned in white China silk, with rose lace trimmings, and will carry a bouquet of pink roses. The best man will be Ensign Louis Larkin, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

The house has been elaborately decorated for the affair, there being a profusion of palms, ferns and smilax in the parlor and dining-room. In the parlor, where the ceremony will take place, the palms, ferns and smilax will be banked in one corner. The wedding marches and music for the reception, which will follow, will be furnished by Prof. Andrew Carpenter, a brother of the groom.

During the reception, supper will be served by D. Demolli & Co., the caterers of this city. Later in the evening the couple will leave for a wedding trip and upon their return will make their home with the parents of the bride on Union street. Mr. Carpenter holds a position with the New York Telephone company.

The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold stick pin. The bride received a large collection of gifts, including cutglass, silverware, linen, furniture and several handsome pieces of handpainted china. There will be guests present from New York, Brooklyn, New Rochelle, Somerville, Weston, Arlington, Bowmans Town Pa., and that city.

SENATOR ACKERMAN'S AUTO DAMAGED BY FIRE.

The large touring car belonging to Senator Ernest R. Ackerman caught fire in the yard of the Ackerman residence at 1250 o'clock last night, as the chauffeur was cranking it up. A back-fire started the blaze. An alarm was turned in from box 36, but the flames had practically been extinguished when the firemen arrived.

The front part of the car was quite badly damaged, being of the enclosed type.

Funeral of Mrs. J. R. Williams.

The funeral service of Mrs. Jane R. Williams will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home of her daughter, Mrs. Cornelius Scherck, 904 West Front street, and will be private. Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate and the burial will be in the family plot near Roxborough. Mrs. Scherck, who has been quite ill, is improved, but not able to sit up as yet.

In Charge of Probation Officers.

James Kelderling, of Scotch Plains, who pleaded guilty to the charge of assaulting a trolley car conductor at Scotch Plains on May 3, last, was today put in charge of the probation officer of Union county for a period of three years, and also required to pay $1 a month to the probation officer. Charles Walpole, who was implicated in the affair, was acquitted in the county courts this week.

Birch—McCarthy.

Joseph Birch, one of the best known pattern makers of Elizabeth, was married this morning at the Church of the Holy Rosary in Elizabeth to Miss Jennie McCarthy, of Elizabeth, by Rev. James J. Smith, pastor of the church. The ceremony took place at 7 o'clock before a number of friends of the couple. After a wedding trip through the South Mr. and Mrs. Birch will reside in Elizabeth.

Eggs to Celebrate.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., will hold a social session tonight in the club room. A committee composed of brothers Firstbrook, MacClymont and Burd have had the arrangements of the entertainment in charge and will undoubtedly furnish something worth going miles to see, see and eat.

ANOTHER WOMAN VICTIM

Miss Beatrice Ryan Brutally Assaulted at 8th Street and Madison Ave.

GEORGE COONEY ARRESTED.

Identified By Mrs. Martin O'Loughlin As Her Assailant of Monday Night—Sanity Doubted.

Another assault and just as unexpected and unwarranted as that committed upon Mrs. Martin O'Loughlin, on Monday night, in which Miss Beatrice Ryan, of 16 Stone street, North Plainfield, was the victim, occurred last evening at 6 o'clock at the corner of Madison avenue and West Eighth street. Miss Ryan was severely injured and was attended by Dr. Ellis Hedges, who took several stitches in her scalp, the result of striking her head when felled by her assailant.

Miss Ryan had left her home on a visit to friends. On turning into Eighth street from Park avenue she noticed that a soft football behind her, but paid no attention to it, thinking a boy was going in the same direction, but on reaching the corner the footsteps became quicker, and suddenly she received a stunning blow on the forehead, which felled her to the sidewalk.

Miss Ryan was unconscious for several moments and had no opportunity to see the man who so viciously attacked her. A woman who declined to give her name, assisted her to the office of Dr. Hedges, where restoratives were applied and the wound dressed.

Miss Ryan is to be married today to James Tobin, by Rev. William H. Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church.

This morning Detective Sergeant John Flynn and Roundsman Maurice Higgins arrested George Cooney, of Watchung avenue, North Plainfield, on suspicion of being the assailant of Mrs. Martin O'Loughlin. Cooney has been a well known figure about town and it is said he has been an inmate of the Morris Plains asylum. His actions, when apprehended this morning, did not indicate that he realized what he had been arrested for, as a matter of fact he would say nothing about himself. The description given of her assailant by Mrs. O'Loughlin led the police to believe that Cooney was the man wanted. The fact that his heels were so worn down that he was able to walk without appreciable noise bears out Miss Ryan's statement that the man behind her appeared to have worn rubber heels on his shoes.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon, Mrs. O'Loughlin identified Cooney as the man who assaulted her and attempted to rob her on Monday night. Cooney will be examined as to his sanity and if found to be deranged will be sent to Morris Plains asylum.

The arrest will bring a feeling of relief to those who have been apprehensive about going out on the streets after dark.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY ON CHARGES OF ASSAULT.

On a pretext of wanting her to see their sick mother, Mrs. John Laurs, of Samptown, alleges that four women lured her to their home on the Samptown road, yesterday afternoon and once inside the house, proceeded to beat her with whatever came handy. Mrs. Laure's injuries were so sever that Dr. Nelson, of South Plainfield, was called to attend her.

The four women, whose names could not be ascertained this afternoon, were arraigned before Justice William H. Smith, at South Plainfield, and bound over for the action of the grand jury. They all pleaded guilty to the charge of assault.

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Mary O'Conner, of Grove street, on her sixteenth birthday Monday. Those present were: Mary O'Conner, Katherine O'Couner, Agnes Dooley, Mary P. Burke, Nellie Burke, Fredda Ritcher, Emma Hatellan, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Hatellan and Mr. and Mrs. Judge and children. The guests were from New York, Newark and Plainfield. The evening was spent in playing games. Refreshments were served.

SERGEANT DILTS DIED FROM NATURAL CAUSES

In response to telegrams sent for further information, J. V. F. Dilts, of Lenox avenue, received details last night of the death of his son, Sergeant William C. Dilts, of Troop F, U. S. Cavalry. The dispatch stated the demise occurred at Fort San Houston, Texas, and was due to acute hernia followed by peritonitis. Previous to the attack, the young man had been in the best of health and was looking forward with much pleasure to his discharge from the army in December, having planned to make his first visit home in nine years.

The telegram stated that the body had been forwarded from the fort Friday and that it would probably arrive in Plainfield Sunday or Monday. No arrangements for the funeral will be made until it reaches here.

WHY THEY SHOULD ALL BE THANKFUL TOMORROW

Tomorrow, they will be thankful: George W. V. Moy—That there are some kind hearted people who have already decided who is to be their corporation counsel.

Samuel P. T. Wilbur—That the Harding pasters ran out early on Election day.

Harry S. Sanderson—That Plainfield has so many dramatic critics.

Henry R. Depew—That he can laugh last.

Ten members of the bar, and some more—That 'while there's life, there's hope.'

Patrick S. Kiely—That the mayor's term is but three years.

William R. Townsend—That he didn't have to run for office at the last election.

William Jeffery—That now he can 'Let George Do It.'

James F. MacMurray—That the Bipartisans saved his political scalp.

F. E. Mygatt—That it's an easy matter to add some two millions to the present $700,000 bonded indebtedness when the people are 'easy.'

Thomas F. Martine—That 'Jim' Smith's record as an United States senator is still fresh in the people's minds.

Charles J. Fisk—That after Jan. 1, the knockers' brigade will exercise on another mark.

Frank H. Smith—That a majority of 67 is as good as a majority of 50,000.

Herbert Buxton—That time flies and so does talk about a clock.

Robert L. Lee—That he "came back."

DINNERS FOR POOR GIVEN BY S. S. BOYS

A large audience gathered in the Congregational church last evening, and enjoyed a musical entertainment given under the auspices of the Tuebachers class of the Sunday school for the benefit of poor families in the city. The price of admission was a parcel of something good to eat and suitable for a Thanksgiving table. It goes without saying that the boys were successful in gathering enough provender of the right kind to supply the wants of at least a dozen ordinary families. Many who were unable to be present sent money and the provisions will be distributed by the boys this afternoon.

The musical program was splendid. Mrs. Lawrence Whitall, soprano, sang several solos with infinite finish and Mrs. Theodore W. Jacobi rendered violin solos which delighted the audience. Miss Myra Emmons was an ideal accompanist at the piano. Impersonations by Thomas Duryee filled out the program nicely.

Cycle Club's New Quarters.

The Plainfield Cycle Club is making preparations to move into new quarters in the rear of Jack Horner's new store on Somerset street, formerly occupied by the Borough Bank. The place will be handsomely fitted up with mission furniture and contain al conveniences for making a cosy club room.

—Should you be looking about for a gift at this season, call at Swain's Art Store, 317 West Front street. The stock was never so varied and extensive, either in pictures, mirrors and the newest styles of framing. There is no more acceptable gift than a beautiful picture, neatly framed. It is a constant reminder of the giver. ***

REV. DR. ZELIE OFFICIATES.

Society Witness Ceremony at Crescent Ave. Church—Couple to Reside in East Orange.

Miss Frances Wolcott Cahoone, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, of Watchung avenue, and James Ward Pettit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pettit, of East Orange, were married at 8 o'clock last night in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and friends that completely filled the beautiful edifice. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the church.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Cahoone, as maid-of-honor, and Miss Catherine Knox, of this city; Miss Eudora Sullivant, of Philadelphia and Miss Elizabeth Pettit, of East Orange, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid. The best man was Ulysses Cutting, of East Orange and the ushers were Howard Norton and T. McCurdy Marsh, of East Orange; Herbert Magruder, of New York; William Hobbie, Robert Mc Crea and Walter Cahoone, of this city, the last named being a brother of the bride.

The bride's gown was of white satin, with lace trimmings, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid-of-honor was gowned in white marquisette over white satin and she carried pink carnations. The bridesmaids were gowned in pink marquisette over pink satin and carried pink carnations.

Lee K. Smith, organist of Christ Episcopal church, East Orange, an intimate friend of the groom, presided at the organ and for half an hour prior to the ceremony, rendered a fine program of music, including classical and popular selections.

The bridal party upon reaching the church was met by the ushers, who led the way to the chancel, followed by the bridesmaids, maid-of-honor and the bride, accompanied by Andrew M. Cahoone, of Brooklyn, who gave his niece in marriage. The Episcopal form of service was used. The Mendelssohn and Lohengrin wedding marches were rendered as the bridal party entered and left the church.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, there being an attractive arrangement of palms and flowers about the pulpit platform, extending to the left and right and in front of the pulpit.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride on Warchung avenue, to which four hundred guests were invited. The house was elaborately decorated with palms and the season's flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Pettit received the congratulations of their many friends and later in the evening left on an extended wedding trip. Upon their return home they will reside at East Orange.

The bride received a large collection of beautiful and costly gifts from relatives and friends. She is popular, having a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She is an enthusiastic autoist, driving a car of high speed with a master hand of an expert. Mr. Pettit is also well-known in East Orange, Newark and this city. He is in the employ of The Galard Cpmpany, a manufacturing concern in Newark.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN EPISCOPAL CHURCHES.

Services in the Episcopal churches of the city will be held on Thanksgiving Day as follows: Grace, Rev. Hugh Stevenson, rector, Communion at 7:30, morning prayer and address at 10 o'clock. Church of the Heavenly Rest, celebration of the Holy Eucharist at 8 o'clock and Matins with address at 10. Church of the Holy Cross, celebration of Holy Communion at 7:30 and morning prayer with address at 10 o'clock.

At Stephen's church there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 and 10 o'clock in the morning, with Rev. Elory G. Bowers in charge.

Remember Children's Home.

At this Thanksgiving season the Children's Home Association would ask that the kind friends of the past do not overlook the Home in their generous donations. The entire Thanksgiving dinner will be provided by the Benevolent Bead of King's Daughters, but all donations of money, groceries, fruits, etc., will be most gratefully received.

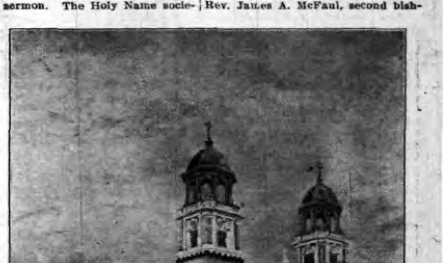
CORNER-STONE OF ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH TO BE LAID BY BISHOP M'FAUL TOMORROW

Marked by an impressive ceremony in the presence of a distinguished gathering of clergy and laymen the corner stone of the new St. Joseph's church will be laid tomorrow afternoon. Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, bishop of the diocese of Trenton, will confer the blessing and Rev. Father Dittrich, of Bound Brook, has been selected to deliver the sermon. The Holy Name societies of the city and borough, the Knights of Columbus and other organizations, together with members of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches will be in attendance.



St. Joseph's R. C. church, Jackson and Watchung avenues—As Edifice Will Appear When Completed.

The assemblage will first gather at 2:30 at the old edifice and then, with Robert McCormack as marshal, will march in a body to the northeast corner of the new structure at Jackson and Watchung avenues, where the stone is to be laid.

The walls will be blessed and a large cross erected where the altar is to be placed. During this part of the service the men's societies will sing "Onward Christian Soldiers," accompanied by a band. While the stone is being blessed, St. Joseph's choir will sing "Holy Ghost, we praise thy name." The sermon by Father Dittrick will follow and at the end the assemblage wil sing "My Country 'tis of Thee."

The corner stone is of special construction and came from Ireland as the gift of Mrs. Mary McKeown Miller, mother of Rev. Father Miller. In it will be placed a history of St. Joseph's parish the officers of the various church societies and church organization, copies of the Daily Press and Courier News of today's issue, coins and relics and a Latin parchment prepared by Father Miller with the following inscription:

"When to the Omnipotent God a larger church was to be erected under the patronage of St. Joseph, spouse of the blessed Virgin Mary and patron of the universal church and with the approval of the Rt. Rev. Ordinary of Trenton, this corner stone from Ireland, donated by Elizabeth McKeown Miller, was laid with solemn ceremony by the Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, second bishop of Trenton on the seventh day before the kalendar of December, 1910; in the pontificate of Pius X; William H. Taft was president of the United States of America; J. Franklin Fort Governor of New Jersey; Rev. William H. Miller, rector of this church and Joseph A. Jackson architect."

The new church will face on Jackson avenue and will be sixty-six feet by one hundred and twenty-eight feet in dimensions. The main portion is to be of native stone, trimmed with Indiana lime stone. The front will be graced by two imposing towers. The interior embellishment and decorative effect will be in the Renaissance style, corresponding with the general architecture scheme

At the conclusion of the ceremonies tomorrow the visiting clergy will be entertained in the basement of the present edifice by members of the Rosary society, the following committee having charge: Mrs. A. E. Kenney, Mrs. James E. Bailey, Mrs. Cormack McDonough, Mrs. Alfred Seidel and Mrs. Mary Moran. James E. Bailey will have charge of all the music.

FOREMOST 'CELLIST WILL APPEAR AT ENTERTAINMENT

The announcement of the appearance of Hans Kronold, the foremost 'cellist, at the First Baptist curch, Tuesday night, at the "evening of music," for the benefit of the building fund of the Temple Baptist church, has aroused unusual interest. It was through the efforts of Charles W. McCutchen, that Mr. Kronold has been secured for this musical and he will doubtless be greeted by a large audience. Howard M. Case will have charge of the affair.

The other part of the program will be provided by the quartet from the church choir, Miss Ruth Harris, soprano; Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor, and there will be solos, duets and quartet selections of a high order.

Gus Williams at Proctor's.

Gus. Williams, the dean of German comedians, the man with the smile that won't come off, the man who has a personal following in every city, because of his peculiar style and original method of telling stories and singing songs, will be the headliner at Proctor's theatre tomorrow. Ivy & Ivy, musical comedians; George Reeves, black face comedian; Young & Young, a clever dancing and singing pair of sisters and Kinzora Brothers, great comedy artists will complete the attractive bill.

WASHINGTON CAMP, P. O. S. of A. ENTERTAINS VISITORS.

Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., of Elizabeth, paid a fraternal visit to the local camp last night and by invitation of the Plainfielders the visitors took part in the initiation of nine candidates into the local camp. Several members of Henry Howe Drake Commandery, of Elizabeth assisted in the ceremonies.

District president, Herbert E. Wright, of the visiting camp presented the local camp with a handsome edition of the Bible on behalf of camp No. 78, which was accepted by George Couch. Brief addresses were made by Capt. Nathan R. Post, of the commandery; S. C. Lindy and others.

Ebenezer Church Concert.

There will be an entertainment in the Ebenezer Baptist church tomorrow night for the benefit of the church. The choir will furnish some special music. The entertainment will be the nature of a Thanksgiving affair.

Will Give "A Country Romance."

"A Country Romance," a clever play written by Miss Beulah Van Winkle, will be given at the Y. M. C. A. December 1, for the benefit of the Boys' Battalion of the First Baptist church.

—You can get delicious strawberries at the Hotel Waldorf for your Thanksgiving dinner.  11 23 2

UNIQUE SILVER UTENSILS.

Each season the shops offer an ever-increasing number of articles in silver, whether plated or solid, so that today the selection of a gift is really difficult because of the wide choice confronting the prospective buyer. The articles, being so numerous and their cost ranging from a very modest sum to an amount written in three figures, it is possible to find a gift quite within one's means, whether large or small.

Foodstuffs which formerly found a place on few tables, and then but seldom, are today quite well known. This has led to a demand for special dishes, and mushrooms comes a fascinating silver dish, oblong, with a bell-shaped glass cover, similar to those in cheese dishes, only higher.

In casseroles we may find every shape and size from the tiny individual, reminding one strongly of ramekins, to those large enough to serve a dozen generously.

The corncob holders, which make the eating of corn from the cob a simple pleasure, are becoming more generally known, so that one can be had in individual pairs or in sets of a dozen.

Small silver dishes suggesting an oyster shell in shape and design, are specially fashioned for scalloped oysters. A small ramekin with a handle and without a cover is for another seafood—crab—though the ingenious housewife will find other delicacies may be served in it.

Flanked steak is a dinner dish sure to be appreciated by any one at all fond of steak. The steak planks are really most sensible gifts for any housewife. Similar, yet with distinctive features, are the fish planks. These are usually provided with handles at either end. The wooden planks are easily removable.

Bar-le-duc, which comes in characteristic glass jars, has its own silver holder. The case is provided with a fork as well as a small tray, similar in all but shape to the holder for special brands of cheese.

Bottles of tabasco and various fish and meat sauces may now be fitted with holders. These quite preclude the danger of stray drops of the liquid finding a way to the spotless table linen.

A silver box, just the size and shape of the comb of honey, reminds one strongly of a jewel box. This box comb box is provided with a cover differing in this respect from the sardine tray.

The table egg boiler, with an alcohol lamp, is especially nice for breakfast in one's room. The receptacle for holding the water is egg-shaped. Lest one's watch or clock may not be at hand, it is possible to get a small silver-mounted egg-timer.

HEALTH-GIVING BATHS.

Women unfamiliar with baths, save the ordinary one of warm water and soap or a cold plunge, have a veritable treasure house of good things added to their moods and requirements.

If we resorted to baths more generally to combat bodily ills and promote general health, a stronger race would result.

Not only are baths necessary to open and cleanse the pores, but they exercise a wonderful beneficial effect upon the nerves, muscles, skin, circulation, and lastly, that exquisite constructed organ, the brain.

Delightful luxuries may be added to the bath quite inexpensively which beautify the skin and take the place of soap. Among these are dainty bath bags made from various cleansing agents which soften and whiten the skin, and in many cases agree with it, especially the complexion, better than the soap. This is true where it is inclined to be oily.

Bags of bran scented with orris root are among the simplest. The cheesecloth should be cut about six inches square and only half filled. An ounce or two of orris root to a pound of bran is sufficient. Plain oatmeal boiled fifteen minutes, the natralned, is considered. To place the grains in a bag with a little orris root.

An elaborate formula which may be used in any desired proportion contains:

One and one-half pounds of oatmeal, four ounces of powdered orris root, five ounces of almond meal and one-eighth of a pound of olive oil soap, first dried and then shaved or scraped. Mix and place in bags.

Not many women would think of a bath as a tonic for nerves, but a specific containing just the proper ingredients is wonderfully soothing and refreshing as well.

Here is an excellent one:

Two ounces of tincture of camphor one ounce of benzoin, four ounces of rectified spirits. Mix thoroughly and pour into the bath sufficient to make the water milky and have a faint odor. Soap of a very good kind may be used in this, or just step into your bath after rubbing there for fifteen minutes, frequently sponging the parts of the body above the water —the face, shoulders and arms.

Aromatic Baths—All baths should be taken slowly, relaxing the nerves and muscles and giving oneself up to the enjoyment of the moment.

Aromatic baths especially should be taken in warm weather, for their cooling properties affect the temperature of the blood most pleasantly. However, aromatic baths may be taken at any time of the year, and are not only delightfully refreshing after a period of fatigue, worry, loss of sleep or unstrung nerves, but impart a subtle fragrance to the skin—a fact which appeals very strongly to those of esthetic taster.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 27, 1910.

Topic—My favorite missionary hero or heroine and why.—Heb. xi, 32-40. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The Scriptural selection for this topic is unusually apt. In this list of famous worthies, who by faith performed deeds of heroism, the author speaks of a number in particular and then, overwhelmed by the lengthy list that still remains, exclaims, "And what shall I more say, for time would fail me to tell of Gideon and of Barak and of Samson and of Jephthe; of David also and Samuel and of the prophets!" And then he sums up the deeds and sacrifices of a great list in as few words as possible.

The great difficulty in choosing a favorite missionary hero or heroine is the host of them to be found in Christian history. Both time and space would fail us to merely mention the names of the vast number of men and women who as missionaries have performed heroic deeds. Moreover, in so great a number of splendid and equally heroic deeds and sacrifices it is no easy task to select one as a favorite. Yet many perhaps have some favorite missionary and in telling the reason for this favoritism will make many a meeting interesting and uplifting.

In the early Christian centuries there were many heroic missionaries. Leaving out the Master Himself, who was really a missionary—one sent from God—the apostle Paul was a brilliant missionary when he tried to persuade the Jews to believe in Christ? Moreover, he was a hero, dying as the first Christian martyr, yet praying God to forgive his enemies as Christ before him had done.

The twelve apostles were all missionaries. To them the great commission was first given. At the end of a century they, with Paul, had preached the gospel to practically all the Roman empire. Tradition tells us that all but one of the twelve died as martyrs. Peter being crucified with his head downward as not being fit to die as Christ did because he had basely denied his Lord. Contemporaneous with and succeeding the apostles numbers of others preached the gospel, not a few of whom suffered the death of martyrdom.

Paul, the apostle to the gentiles, was the greatest of all first century missionaries and for that matter the greatest of all time. For length of service, for hardships endured, for sacrifices made, for heroic deeds and for results accomplished Paul stands at the front rank of all missionaries and beyond all doubt if all Christians were compelled to select a favorite missionary hero his name would be Paul the apostle. His life was filled with thrilling incidents. It was in constant danger and at last was offered up in martyrdom. Any one who will closely study the life of Paul will find in it every phase of heroism and heroic every lesson possible upon the subject of missions. He has been the type of all succeeding Christian ages and the church's greatest heroic missionary.

Modern missions have not been with out their heroes and heroines, and it is for the most unpardonable ignorance to tell the story of their favorites and their heroic deeds.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. iii, 1-7; Nah. i, 15; Matt. xxvii, 19, 20; Acts i, 1-14; viii, 5-8; xiii, 1-3, 44-52; xvi, 25-40; xvii, 15-28; xix, 23-30; xxi, 8-15; xxvii, 18-25; Heb. xi, 17-19.

Fullbacks, Halfbacks and Waybacks.

In the Christian Endeavor movement the great crowd of young people and some older people, too, are "for words." They always have the grit and they press on toward it eagerly, bravely, strenuously. The growth of the cause to 71,000 societies in less than three decades is to be credited largely to the go ahead element, the young men and women of "forward" movement. Every halfback or fullback in football is a useful fellow who stands behind the "forwards" to support him and stem the onrushing tide of play should the enemy pass the front players. In Christian Endeavor, as in all rollicking games, there is room for the jolly lukewarm person that hobbles behind the crowd and is not very anxious to keep up with the procession. He tosses the forwards with his well directed murmurings and his little criticisms and his doubts and fears and at last hinders the forward in his rush. In most respects he is a splendid fellow. His great fault is that he hasn't enthusiasm enough to gallop with the crowd nor sense enough to keep out of the way. The fullback is a ponderous proposition. He has literally to be pulled along. Of course he is a good fellow. One cannot help liking the unfortunate thing is that he places his solid weight down on a back seat every time, and neither he nor the seat will move. But worse than all is the wayback. He is not in the game at all. He is among the spectators and appears to be a general coach. He is never caught in a scrimmage until it is all over, and then he suddenly appears in order to explain at length how it ought to have been done. Well I wonder where I belong? I know where I want to belong. I love the forward. I want to be among them. I will begin today. I will strive from the "fullback" seat right up to the front under the nose of the preacher in church and in front of the leader in the Christian Endeavor meeting. I will push everything that comes my way—forward, hot solde. I will suffle. I will encourage the other fellow. I will be among that host that rush on to great things with a hurrah.—Ripple in Christian Endeavor World.

THE CITY PAYS TRIBUTE PRIZE WINNING ESSAYS

HELD BY COMMON COUNCIL.

Engrossed Resolutions, Adopted Last Night, to Be Sent to His Widow —The Text of the Resolutions.

Official action concerning the death of Corporation Counsel Craig Adams Marsh was taken at a special meeting of the Common Council, Thursdayealled for the purpose. All the members were present with the exception of Councilmen C. C. Randolph, W. W. Wilson and P. L. Montgomery.

Councilman George S. Clay offered the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously, and it was ordered that a copy be spread on the minutes of the Council; also that a copy be engrossed and presented to the family of Mr. Marsh. No further action was taken regarding Mr. Marsh's death.

"Whereas, We the members of the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, have learned with deep regret and sorrow of the sudden death on November twelfth, nineteen hundred and ten, of Craig Adams Marsh, who for the last twenty-eight years has been the Corporation Counsel of the city of Plainfield: Now therefore, in order to express and record our appreciation of his able and painstaking service on behalf of the city and of his attainments and character as a man and a citizen, and our sense of bereavement, be it

Resolved, By the Common Council of the city of Plainfield meeting in special session this seventeenth day of November, nineteen hundred and ten, that in the death of Craig Adams Marsh the city of Plainfield has lost an eminent citizen, a man of sterling character, and an able and valued adviser; be it

Further Resolved, That we tender to his family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement; be it

"Further Resolved, That as a mark of respect the city buildings be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, and that these resolutions be inscribed at length on the minute book of the body; and be it

"Further Resolved, That an engrossed copy of these resolutions, signed by each member of the Common Council and the Mayor of the city, and attested by the city clerk, be transmitted by him to the widow as a memorial of the respect and esteem in which we hold his memory.

WATER AND LIGHT PLANT PLANNED FOR LEBANON.

Ira LaRue and several New York and Hunterdon county business men are at the head of a movement to install a water plant and electric light plant at Lebanon, Hunterdon county, for the use of the valley towns. Annandale has water, but no electric light. Lebanon and Whitehouse have neither. Mr. LaRue is president of a company that own the Lebanon water rights and a flour mill. The water emanating from springs give them an abundance of pure running water.

The Clinton Twice-a-Week in its last issue, says that a meeting of citizens was held at Lebanon on Friday to organize a water company. The question is agitating the people of that section, who say that they do not want an experience to that of Neshanic last fall, when a disastrous fire swept away many buildings because of a lack of water supply.

A meeting will be held soon at Lebanon regarding the erection of an electric light plant to supply light, heat and power to the towns of Whitehouse, Lebanon and Annandale. A Mr. Brown, a civil engineer who has performed extensive work for the United States government at Cape May and Fort Totten, and who has erected the electric light plant at Madison, will survey the ground and after his opinion is given a general meeting will be called.

WEALTHIEST AMERICAN HEIRESS CHICAGO BABY.

For eleven days Chicago has been the home of one of the richest heiresses in the United States. Tuesday it became known that the hurried visit to Chicago of Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, widow of the "Sugar King," and Mrs. W. Seward Webb, of New York, was not to nurse their daughter and daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Watson Webb, back to health from an attack of pneumonia, as announced, but to be present at the presentation to the world of an heiress to the Webb-Vanderbilt-Havemeyer millions.

At a little home at 155 East Division street, the heiress made her debut in the world, while Chicago society thought Mrs. Webb was seriously ill from pneumonia.

The grandmothers are still in the city and will remain for a number of days at least. The mother was able to sit up Tuesday.

White and pink are combined in many of the new evening gowns, the combination carried out in all the details, and black mousseline de soie figures on some of the pink gowns, a toll to exquisite embroidery.

Selected From Batch of 400 Communications Received Within a Week.

G. D. MERKLE WINS THE $5. Other Winners Isidore Kunzman, Miss Brancati, I. Doane and Frank Hart.

In response to the offer of prizes for essays announced Thursday the following five letters were selected by the judges in the essay contest as winners. The prizes were awarded yesterday and the winners enjoyed the production of the play "He Fell in Love With His Wife," given in the Plainfield theatre last Thursday night.

These essays were selected from among some four hundred and fifty letters as being the briefest as well as most comprehensive answers to the two questions propounded by this paper. These were the questions.

"Under what condition, if any, would a normal woman enter into a marriage contract with a man who is favorably known to her but whom she has known only a few minutes?

"Would a young and beautiful woman marry a man for social or financial reasons, or for the purpose of finding a home, ten minutes after she met him for the first time?"

Sir:

Good character, noble manhood, utmost sincerity, unscrupulous honesty, wealth and intelligence cannot be scrutinized in a few minutes. Several qualities such as personal appearance, features, and attractive personality want only a short period of time for a safe and an approximately correct opinion.

The first series of qualities are invisible, more or less, at first sight and require testimony from an individual who knows by years of personal contact and is capable of discriminating desirable essentials. The prospective bridegroom recommended satisfactorily by a party from the prospective bride has absolute trust and unquestioned faith, is a proper inducement and may result in a satisfactory marriage relation.

The officers of great corporations employ help upon the basis of a "filled in" application blank, opinions from responsible parties and a few minutes' interview. Following business principles would be the only safe course when the season for courtship is limited on the part of the prospective bride.

Finding a home is the principle motive when the period of courtship is limited to ten minutes. Wealth, independence and freedom from work do not belong to the majority. Consequently a home is a question of great import and prompts decisive action.

G. D. MERKLE,
1245 George street.

Sir:

If marriage is to be regarded, as it logically should be, a union of life companionship for better or for worse, between two persons of the opposite sex that love each other—love in the sense of a sentiment built up on the tender emotions, on the mutual and reciprocal respect for appreciation and knowledge of each other's character—a woman would not, under any circumstances, be justified in marrying a man for social or financial reasons, or for the purpose of finding a home, ten minutes after she had met him for the first time, unless such a marriage were absolutely necessary to save herself, her kin, or someone very dear to her from utter ruin, death, or dishonor.

Furthermore, since a true sentiment such as we have spoken of, cannot possibly take form or be built up in a moment, we cannot imagine that a normal woman would enter into matrimonial bonds with a man who is known to her even if favorably, for only a few minutes except for some such reason as we have meationed above.

ISIDORE KUNZMAN,
122 Plainfield avenue.

Sir:

"Would a young and beautiful woman marry a man for social or financial reasons, or for the purpose of finding a home ten minutes after she met him for the first time."

When a young woman is considered remarkably beautiful by her friends, she will look forward for the sunny side of her future life. Over and over again, she stands before her mirror, and admires her own looks. The question springs from her mouth day by day, "shall I marry for love, and to be my own housekeeper, or for the love of society and money?"

Her thoughts change like the weather, and at last her silly wandering mind, is fully determined that society shall be her leading life. She thinks of becoming noted among society people, and to have vehicles at her own command. All will seem like a dream, that was not her wish. Not long afterwards her dreams came true.

JULIA G. BRANCATI.

Sir:

The two propositions put up by The Daily Press relative to the play "He Fell in Love with His Wife" is not such a difficult one when thoroughly analyzed, and I for one believe that the consummation of a hasty marriage is desirable when the two people concerned are matched physically, endowed with brains and have the wherewithal to make existence at least bearable.

The first question is simple. A normal woman familiar with conditions of living in the present day (I refer to middle class or non-opulent women) is foolish if she turns down an honest proposal of marriage. Her intuition will tell her whether she is making a mistake before she consents. The prospective bridegroom more than five minutes and her decision in cases of the heart are both quick and accurate.

As to whether she ought to marry for social, financial, or other reasons, that of securing for herself a home, it seems to me judging from the conditions of our factories, offices, sweat shops and other industries inimical to the health of working women, she would be more than justified in marrying in ten or even a lesser number of minutes, provided, of course, she does not tie up to a drunkard.

I. DOANE.

Sir:

If a woman wants to marry a man when she has known him only for ten minutes that's her business. And if you can find me a woman who can't make up her mind fifty different ways in as many minutes I'll pay for the tickets myself. But honest, Mr. Judge, the question don't seem to me to require any further thought. It's a cinch that if she has any brains at all and has not let her innate and all-pervading instinct fool her she would know whether to accept a man or refuse him in less than ten minutes.

Given the opportunity and the circumstances being fortuitous I believe a woman is justified in securing a home and taking a chance on the love end of it. There is always that element of a gamble even after a lengthy courtship (see the divorce court records) and I believe the chances in many cases are at least equal for a happy marriage to result from a sudden determination to win a home.

FRANK HART.

ASPIRANTS FOR JOBS LOOKING TO TRENTON

Friends of former Mayor W. E. Florance, of New Brunswick, have started a boom for him for the comptrollership in place of Harry J. West, whose term of office will expire February 21 next, and whose successor will be chosen by the Legislature in joint session, where the Democrats have a majority of twenty-one. Mr. Florance is a lawyer in New Brunswick. Last winter he was the Democratic minority candidate for the State treasurership when Daniel Voorhees was re-elected to a second term by the Republican majority.

General William Heppenheimer, of Jersey City, who has been mentioned as a possible Democratic successor to Comptroller West, is quoted as saying that he does not care for the office and will not be a candidate.

One of the first appointments that Governor Wilson will have to make will be the naming of a successor to Colonel Frederick Gilkyson, of Trenton, as commissioner of public roads. This place pays a salary of $5,000 per annum, and to the encumbent belongs an automobile maintained by the State.

Andrew J. Berrien, tax receiver of Trenton, will be agreed upon for appointment as Colonel Gilkyson's successor.

Joseph S. Hoff, a merchant of Princeton, who is chairman of the Democratic county committee, is also talked about for the road commissionership under Governor Wilson.

Another local candidate for one of the good State house berths is Constable Alfred Wilson, who would like to succeed John W. Wiseman, of Newark, as custodian of the capitol.

He Asks for Damages.

Patrick O'Brien has retained Magovelect C. W. V. Moy to recover damages from the F. & M. Dairy Company for alleged injuries he received on June 28, for which he claims the company is to blame. O'Brien, it appears according to his story, was riding a bicycle on Crescent avenue, when an automobile of the company dashed into him, throwing him down and seriously injuring him. He was taken to the hospital and it is claimed that he was permanently lame.

LITERARY

It is seldom that an array of writers of fiction so notable has appeared in one magazine as is announced for the Christmas Scribner. The authors include Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Richard Harding Davis, Thos. Nelson Page, John Fox, Jr., F. Hopkinson Smith, and Katharine Holland Brown. Every article is illustrated, among the artists being N. C. Wyeth, Lucius W Hitchcock, Jessie Wilcox Smith, Frederic Dorr Steele, James Montgomery Flagg, Blendon Campbell, A. I. Keller, Fred Pegram and F. C. Yohn.

DEALERS' WEIGHTS SHORT

Research Commission Finds But 3 Out of 10 Scales Right in One City.

INVESTIGATION IS COMPLETED.

Report Made to Secretary of State Shows that in Many Cities False Weights and Measures are Used.

"It is more than likely that the money represented by the difference *due to short weights or measures be*tween what the New Jersey buyer thinks he is getting and what he actually gets is greater than the total yearly deposits by the same purchasers in New Jersey savings banks."

In these words the Robert L. Stevens Fund for Municipal Research Commission summed up in a report to Secretary of State Dickinson Thursday the result of searching inquiry they have been making all over the State as to false weights and measures. They tell of two sets of scales used by dealers, one to weigh what they buy, which takes seventeen ounces to the pound; the other used to weigh goods to their customers, which does not begin to register any weight at all until four ounces or more are put upon the scales. They tell of dents in oil cans to reduce the contents. They tell of official sealers who do not seal, and of official sealers by which the consumer is cheated out of part of the stuff he pays for.

Helped by the United States bureau they have put the operations of trades people in Atlantic City, Bridgeton, Camden, Elizabeth, Trenton, Hoboken, Newark, Orange, Montclair and New Brunswick under scrutiny and the results are startling. They say:

"Scales for weighing ice were from four to twenty-four pounds fast, cans used for selling oil were from 6 to 40 cubic inches short; balance scales were found with weights attached to beam; ice cream boxes were short from 2½ to 10 cubic inches; one dealer used fast scales in selling and slow scales in buying, thus cheating both his dealer and his customer; weights of various denominations were found with holes drilled in their bottoms, shot removed, &c.; dry measures were found to be of false bottoms often having false bottoms or indented sides; dry commodities were sold by liquid measure, entailing a loss of from 15 to 18 per cent. on each parcel bought; peach baskets containing from 12 to 14 quarts were represented as half bushels; berry baskets were found either made too small by many cubic inches or shortened by means of stuffing paper between the double surfaces of the bottom.

Of forty-eight dealers in Orange and twenty-four in Trenton, only one had correct weights and measures exclusively. Of 149 in Jersey City only three had exclusively correct weights and measures. Of 41 in Montclair only 9 in Newark, but one in each place had exclusively correct weights and measures. Eleven among 196 dealers in Hoboken and five among 46 in Camden had exclusively correct weights an measures. The report says:

"The purchaser in Jersey City and Orange may take it for granted that seven scales out of ten will give him less than he is paying for. Camden shows the lowest percentage of fast scales—nearly 55 per cent. Hoboken and New Brunswick tie for second place in this unenviable comparison with 56 per cent. of fast scales.

"Trenton follows with 63 per cent., Montclair and Newark with 67 per cent., Jersey City and Orange with 69 per cent. Again, New York, in spite of a record that alarmed its public and led to the reorganization of its Bureau of Weights and Measures by Mayor Gaynor, shows for approximately the same number of scales only about half as many which cause loss to the customer as in eight New Jersey cities.

Of fifty-one ice wagons examined, twenty-four had scales and only one of the twenty-four, the scale of which was correct, sold to the family trade by weight. The report shows that one of these ice scales was twenty-four pounds fast. Another, a double-faced scale, was four pounds fast on one side and fourteen pounds fast on the other side.

The commission recommends some legislation for the punishment of the short-weight dealers.

WILLIAM ROCKWELL'S FUNERAL HELD YESTERDAY.

The funeral of William Rockwell, whose death occurred Sunday night, was held at his late home on East Front street yesterday afternoon. The large gathering of relatives and friends included many business associates from Newark and other places. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, and two selections were rendered by Mrs. Helen Baxter, Dewey, of Newark. There were numerous floral tributes.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Charles W. Cox, Miller, John J. Hubbell and Frank S. Newark; J. Alden Clark, of Westfield, and L. V. F. Randolph, Nelson Runyon T. B. Koons, Warren Truesdell and E. B. Koons, of Plainfield.

PENSION SYSTEM FOR P. S. C. EMPLOYES

John L. O'Toole, of the Public Service publicity department, announces that the pension system upon which President Thomas N. McCarter has been working since last March, has been practically perfected, and that it will in all probability go into effect on January 1, 1911. President McCarter has spent much of his time during the past eight or nine months, Mr. O'Toole declared, in studying the systems of the United States Steel Corporation, the Pennsylvania Railroad, and other corporations having such systems, and has been able to arrange one which appears to be perfect in every way.

The announcement that a pension system was being arranged for them was made to the employes at their annual smoker in the New Auditorium, Newark, Thursday evening, and the statement was greeted with prolonged cheers. The recent statement by certain interests that the employes had organized for the purpose of demanding shorter hours and more pay, shortly after they had been given a voluntary raise by the company, was entirely been discredited. The relations existing between the officials and the employes, who met on common social ground Thursday night, was remarkably cordial, the men having nothing but praise for the manner in which they have been treated by their superiors.

Owing to the fact that they were on an inspection tour in Camden, President McCarter and Vice-Presidents Roberts and Birleigh were unable to be present. General Superintendent Richard E. Danforth came from his camp, however, in order to attend the smoker. Superintendent of Transportation Bolen, and Division Superintendents Graham, Williams and John J. Gettings, the last named from Newark, were present.

In making the announcement in behalf of President McCarter, Mr. O'Toole explained that the pension plan would provide for a life insurance, with death benefits, and also for the payments of benefits to faithful employes who became injured in service or taken sick while in the employ of the corporation.

Nearly 2,000 men in the employ of the company were present at the smoker. A large delegation from the local division went to Newark in a special car. In the afternoon an athletic conformation was given at which about 500 women and 400 children, relatives of employes, were in attendance.

The general committee of arrangements was headed by Charles Dunn, of the North Jersey Street Railway Employes' Benevolent Association. Other members were: Superintendents Bolen, Graham and Williams, John F. Healey, William Schultz, William Walsh, Joseph Siepe, Matthew Smith, John Reilly, Peter Dowd, Hugh McGuire, George Schorck, Fritz Hammond, A. Fred Hansom and Joseph Winckhoffer. The association was formed twenty-three years ago and retains the name under which it was incorporated.

TRINITY'S HOME DEPT. ENTERTAINS AT SOCIAL

The Home department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school gave its semi-annual entertainment and sociable in the Sunday school rooms last evening and as usual it was an enjoyable affair. A program of music, speaking and singing was followed by a one-act playlet entitled "How Mrs. Gaston Did Not Hire a Cook." Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the play.

The sociable was under the supervision of Mrs. Henry VanName, superintendent; Mrs. G. W. Saums, assistant superintendent, and Mrs. Julius A. Williams, of the home department, who had the following committees to assist them: Refreshment, Mrs. F. Stone, chairman; G. Honeyman, Mrs. J. Whitenack, Mrs. Helen Huff, Mrs. L. C. Sheppard, Mrs. L. M. Dunavan and Mrs. W. Schomp; entertainment, Mrs. C. M. Dolliver, chairman; Miss Lillian Force, Mrs. E. Hoagland, Mrs. J. Van Campp and Mrs. William Nelson; badge, Mrs. J. L. Dolliver, chairman; Mrs. J. Ross, Mrs. William Honeyman and Mrs. William VanDeventer; decorations, Mrs. F. W. Leibkausser, Miss George Dufford and Mrs. J. E. Williams.

The program included piano duets by Lawrence and Elmer French; vocal solos by Miss Elizabeth Dufford; short addresses were given by Rev. John Y. Brock and Superintendent F. E. Smith. Rev. Mr. Brock suggested that the Chautauqua salute be used in dismissing their gatherings and Mr. Smith gave some encouraging statistics of the Sunday school work.

Why Mrs. Gaston failed to acquire a cook was explained by Mrs. Harry Joseph, Mrs. William Kirch, Mrs. L. B. VanCamp, Mrs. C. M. Dolliver, Mrs. Elmer Wheeler, Miss Helen Crane, Mrs. A. Coddington and Elmer Wheeler. An audience of over two hundred people enjoyed the evening's entertainment.

PARKER FIELD LAID OUT

Donor Has Spent $20,000 in Improving Tract for Athletic Purposes.

PLAN OTHER PLAYGROUNDS.

Elaborate Scheme of Local Commission—Some Advice Given by Lincoln L. Rowley to be Followed Here.

What will prove interesting and pleasant news to the che children of this city is the announcement made by the Playground Commission as a result of their meeting held on Tuesday evening. The commission is planning to give the city one of the finest playgrounds in any city of its size in this country. The results obtained at the two playgrounds opened this year at Bryant and Franklin schools have demonstrated their value and amply justify the commission in planning to increase the number of playgrounds until all the city's children shall have an opportunity for play under wholesome influences and intelligent direction.

It is supposed to help additional grounds for the coming season to be located at strategic points. The use of the school grounds will necessarily be restricted to smaller children. For the older ones the newly equipped eight-acre field on Randolph road will be ready. On the development of this field incomparably the finest athletic field in this part of the county, A. McLean Parker, the donor, has spent in the neighborhood of $20,000. It has been laid out for baseball, football, track athletics, tennis and all forms of outdoor sports and room will be provided for the smaller children who cannot reach the smaller playgrounds.

All the natural advantages of the field, including a grove running the entire length of the eastern edge of the oval, will be utilized. This grove will be almost an ideal spot for rest and recreation, and because of its slight elevation above the grounds proper, affords a natural grand stand from which to view the sports. A committee consisting of George P. Mellick, George L. Babcock and Harry W. Marshall, of the playground commission, has been appointed to arrange the details in connection with the management of the field.

Last Tuesday afternoon the commission met with Lincoln E. Rowley, secretary of the East Orange Playground Commission and several of Mr. Rowley's suggestions, growing out of his experiences as the administrative head of the East Orange playgrounds, will be incorporated in the local commission's policies. Mr. Rowley congratulated the Plainfield commission on having such a plant to work with at such small expense. He said that East Orange had spent $64,000 for the purchase and equipment of its field which is considerably smaller than that donated by Mr. Parker, in addition to having to spend $4,500 a year for maintenance. Here practically the only expense will be for maintenance, Mr. Parker having given the ground for a period of ten years. Mr. Rowley also declared that the attendance at the East Orange oval had increased steadily during its three years' existence to that now an average of 1,400 children and adults attended daily.

Definite plans for the management of the new field and the extension of the school playgrounds will be formulated at the meeting of the commission next week.

WANT $10,000 DAMAGES FROM JERSEY CENTRAL

Mrs. Lucy H. D. Schenck has retained Mayor-elect George W. V. Moy to recover damages from the Jersey Central Railroad for injuries alleged to have been sustained by her through the fault of the railroad company a year ago last summer. Since the time of the accident, which is the basis for the proceedings, Mrs. Schenck has been confined to her home and because of her injuries will demand $10,000 damages.

Mrs. Schenck it appears alighted from an excursion train at the Grand avenue station, and the platform not being lighted nor protected, she fell down an embankment, receiving serious injuries.

The borough fire department was called out at 7:30 this morning for a slight fire at the home of a family named Carr on upper Duer street, near Howard. The blaze was in a heap of rags and did not amount to much.

FLOCK'S ANNIVERSARY

W[illegible]t End Tabernacle Congregation Marks its Four Years of Work.

[illegible] LOVE IN CHARGE.

Re[illegible]ora J. Shoop Delivers the Address and F. A. Duttenhofer Reads the Scriptures—The Program.

The fourth anniversary of the West End Tabernacle was celebrated [illegible]day, an excellent program having been prepared for the occasion. There was a large attendance. The program, given under the direction of Robert Love, superintendent, follo[illegible]:

Opening overture, Prof. Guest's orchestra; hymn, "All Hail the Power [illegible]" Scripture reading, F. A. Dutt[illegible]hofer; address of welcome, Robe[illegible] Love; song, "How Can I Leave Thee," chorus; dialogue, "The Farmer and the Crow," Laura Miller and Mary Norgard; baritone solo, "Face to Face," J. Lambert Smith; selection, orchestra; recitation, "The Great Guest Comes," Carrie Pennoyer; soprano solo, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," Herbert Pennoyer; song, "The Last Song," chorus; recitation, "Pilgrim's Thanksgiving," Paul Duttenhofer; address, "Jesus and Barabas," Rev. Ora J. Shoop; selection, orchestra.

After the program there was a social hour and refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society, and the orchestra rendered several selections. The address of the evening by Mr. Shoop was greatly enjoyed. The amount received from the birthday stockings was $23.14.

The West End Tabernacle was started four years ago in the home of Mrs. J. B. Stryker, of Lyman place. Later the office of the Home Realty company in the same neighborhood was used as a meeting place and it was called the Hunter Avenue Tabernacle. The increasing attendance necessitated the securing of a larger place and the present building was erected and called the West End Tabernacle. It is strictly non-sectarian. The work has been greatly blessed. The present officers are as follows:

Superintendent, Robert Love; treasurer, Mrs. Milton Miller; secretary, E. H. Pennoyer; officers of Ladies' Aid Society: President, Mrs. H. H. Pennoyer; vice-president, Mrs. Fred L. Lanesster; secretary, Mrs. John Norgard treasurer, Mrs. William Crawford

FALSELY ARRESTED HE DEMANDS DAMAGES

Mayor-elect George W. V. Moy has been retained by Daniel Thiery, of Mountainside, to recover damages from the town of Westfield for false arrest and imprisonment. According to the story told by Thiery, who boards with his cousin, Joseph Lyons, at Mountainside, he went to Westfield on Wednesday afternoon in search of work and when returning home was pulled under arrest by a policeman. The officer escorted Thiery to the police headquarters, it is alleged, despite his statement that he was a law abiding citizen.

Once at headquarters, Thiery, it is claimed, was told by Chief O'Neill that he was wanted in Newark and despite his request that Lyons be telephoned to to corroborate his story, Thiery was placed in a cell. After remaining a prisoner for nearly an hour, Thiery was released, his story having been corroborated by Lyons.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS WIN FROM NUTLEY

Both the boys and girls of the local High School won their games Friday afternoon from the representatives of the Nutley High School in the local gymnasium. The boys' score was 29 to 23 and the girls won by 22 to 5. The boys game was especially notable for its fast clean play only a few fouls. The teams alternated on the floor giving the spectators a chance to compare their work. In the girls' game Nutley was outclassed. The second half of the boys' game showed Nutley to have taken a decided brace as the locals added only 15 points to Nutley's 11 in the first half the score was 12. Misses Wean and Hiles played well for the girls and Clark starred for P. H. S. The lineup was as follows:

Plainfield	Nutley.
Woodruff, Clarke Spinney	forwards
Manley	Witbeck

"What do you expect to be when you become of age, my little man?" asked the visitor.

MORAL VALUE OF PRIDE

Its Culture Theme of Lecture by Rev. F. K. Mathiews Yesterday.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT FAULS.

Large Audience of Mothers Hears Instructive Address—Responsibility of the Adult.

"The Moral Value of Pride and its Culture" was the subject which was discussed by Rev. F. K. Mathiews before a large audience of mothers at Y. M. C. A hall Friday afternoon. The speaker quoted Fiske Terry as saying that "Vanity in woman was a weakness but pride a source of strength," and said "This is an excellent distinction for adults but not for children. Vanity in the child is the natural moral state. Vanity is the raw material. It is the husk to the seed. It is character and to pride what the disagreeable gren worm is to the butterfly. The former if properly protected will bring forth the finest beautiful product."

In showing the place or the value of pride in moral training for points were made: First, that with the awakening that comes with the early adolescent stage there comes a closer relation to self and to reverence the ego is exaggerated. Here corporal punishment is disastrous to the boy and as for the girl it should never be employed. At this age great patience is necessary. The lad with all his peculiarities should not be ridiculed. Second, this power of pride is prominent in controlling some of the elemental emotions such as modesty, shame, propriety and secrecy. Pride has a mighty place as a power of suggestion, in guiding and brining out the crude traits in the lad. This is one of the parents' great opportunities and one of their great responsibilities.

The boy can be appealed to through his heroes and it is the parents' place to learn who these heroes are and to learn the points of contact between the boy and the hero. By this means suggestion is all that is necessary to help the boy over trifling difficulties by asking him what the hero would do under similar circumstances. Where there are no heroes it is the adult's duty to create them by means of books and through daily contact and conversation. Lastly, pride has a moral purpose and brings with it moral power.

"With the culture of pride," said the speaker, "comes the one despair of motherhood. With the 'don't care' spirit, the seeming lack of shame and of pride and the carelessness in personal hygiene. Children will try in every way to get out of washing their hands and of doing many things that older people think so essential and natural. Three stages are to be handled here. Early childhood, boyhood and early adolescence. The first partakes of a kind of peacock vanity. There is an excess of physical in the body and the mind is exceedingly fanciful. Boyhood is the smart period. There is change from the fanciful to the definite. The boy is no longer a 'kid.' He falls into the way of solving problems and working out puzzles. Sometimes he takes to building things. In the early adolescent stage there is a clearer idea of self consciousness. In his reason he is apt to think that he 'knows it all.' His will is apt to be stubborn. With regard to his feelings there is apt to be bashfulness. With regard to the treatment of both the responsibility rests with the adult. With the childhood period it was the adult's duty to work on the child level and try to lift the child to the adult level. It is important that in our requests to say 'please' and 'thank you.'

"The early adolescent period is the time when the boy should be asked the opinion that he has and place made for it. He is thinking for him now, and should be encouraged. He should be approached on the ground of 'can you do it?' or 'will you do it?' Such a spirit on the part of the adult brings about the feeling of fellowship which is the surest foundation to develop this ample of the raw material of vanity."

In conclusion the speaker showed how that the young are in the hands of nature and in nature is the natural strength. He told for example of the wonderful works of Luther Burbank. Mr. Burbank has never been able to instil life or strength but he has done much to change the direction of the natural energy and make possible greater richness and beauty. The highest and best illustration that we have is life as exemplified in the Christ. hem, the boy of Nazareth, the youth First there was the baby of Bethlehem, and finally the man of God.

"Ah, God, for a man with a heart, head, hand,
Like some of the simple great ones gone
For ever and ever by.
One still strong man in a blatant land.
Whatever they call him—what care I?
Aristocrat, democrat, autocrat—one
Who can rule and dare not lie."

—Alfred Lord Tennyson.

ARGE AUDIENCES APPLAUD.

"The Wings" and "King Rene's Daughter" Presented at the Hartridge Auditorium Matinee and Night

Two immense audiences greeted the players of the College Club at their matinee and evening performances in Hartridge auditorium last Thursday. Two plays were given and in each the amateurs equaled if they did not excel the performances given last year when they were well nigh perfect. Much of the credit for the smoothness with which the plays were staged and managed was due to S. B. Howe, Jr., who coached the casts, and to C. H. Bostwick for the stage arrangements and scenery. Miss Love accompanied the singers in the incidental solos introduced in the second play.

"The Wings," a story of Northumbria in 700 A. D., was the medium for bringing out the histrionic ability of the Misses G. Isabel Ashwell, Margaret Mosher, Margaret McCutcheon and Harriet Goddard, all of whom assumed their characterizations with consummate ability. Miss Goddard was cast in the character of "Martha" in the second play, "King Rene's Daughter."

In the last named play the music of Henry Smart, from the cantata of the same name as the play, was introduced and sung by Mrs. H. R. Moyer, Miss Louise Curtis, Miss Elizabeth Goddard as well as the choruses were splendidly sung. The cast in this play included the following young women: Misses Alice Forsythe, Phebe Lovell, Harriet Goddard, Ariadne Gilbert, Louise S. Corbusier, Elizabeth Goddard, Mabelle Phillips and Louise Curtis.

CHURCH FOLKS ENJOY ANNUAL TURKEY SUPPER

Under the auspices of the Woman's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, the annual turkey supper and entertainment was held in the church parlors Thursday. The supper was the feature of the affair and it was liberally patronized by the members and friends of the church. Numerous tables were arranged about the parlors from which the excellent supper was served under the direction of a committee comprising Mrs. L. T. Titsworth, chairman; Mrs. J. D. Titsworth, Mrs. W. R. Mosher, Mrs. Alexander Vars, Mrs. F. E. Champlin and Mrs. Frank H. Smith.

The above committee was assisted by a large number of young women who served the supper. Following the supper there was an informal entertainment arranged by a committee comprising Mrs. Asa F. Randolph, chairman; Mrs. George L. Babcock and Mrs. Charles P. Titsworth.

The program comprised a piano solo by Miss Mabel Maxson, the reading of the President's Thanksgiving proclamation by David E. Titsworth, a vocal solo by Roy Titsworth. A feature was a drill for backward children, given by four young women, who appeared with their dresses and hats arranged just the reverse to the right way. This caused lots of fun. The program was concluded with a solo by Roy Titsworth.

The decorations on the tables where fancy articles were sold. This was incharge of Mrs. A. G. Negley and Mrs. Sarah Wardner. About $40 was netted at this table. As all the returns have not been made as yet the society is unable to state the general amount netted from the affair.

APARTMENT HOUSES TO BE BUILT IN WEST END

Contracts Charles Bricknell broke ground this morning for the first of a row of Philadelphia apartments that are to be built by the Brotherhood Realty Company on West Foruth street between Plainfield avenue and John street. The first section calls for a two-story structure with six two-family flats. They will be equipped with all conveniences but rent for a moderate sum. Other apartments of similar design are to be erected afterward so that within a short time all the vacant property running back to Evergreen cemetery will be occupied.

The former Vail property at Fourth and John streets, is also being built up. At present a large store is being erected directly on the corner for J. Rosenthal, who will conduct a grocery there and occupy the upper part. Between the Rosenthal store and the Brotherhood tract, two double houses have been put up by Nathan Gershenson and he will probably build two more.

M'CUTCHEN ADVOCATES MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Borough's Largest Tax Payer Endorses Hooley's Argument Against P. S. C. Lighting Rates and Service.

A SEVERE ARRAIGNMENT.

Endorsing the views expressed in this paper a few days ago by his neighbor, Edwin S. Hooley, who advocated a municipal viaduct in the borough for the electric light and other wires of utilities corporations, Charles W. McCutchen proposes public ownership of the electric lighting system. He goes even further, suggesting a municipal water plant.

In his letter to the North Plainfield Council, Mr. Hooley stated that the P. S. C. electric lighting rates were exorbitant. Mr. McCutchen, the largest taxpayer in both the city and the borough goes farther in his argument for public ownership. "Why should we hand over these benefits," he asks, "to soulless corporations, who exploit us and our community for private gain. * * * Who sell us light of a certain specified candle power, and, it is said, deliver us, both for public and private use, a poorer quality."

Mr. McCutchen, in the following letter, hints that there are men in North Plainfield who are ready to build a plant to compete with the P. S. C. and that without any thought of private gain:

Editor, The Daily Press:

I was much interested in the communication which appeared in your columns recently from E. S. Hooley, advocating the construction of a viaduct in the borough to be leased to or to carry underground the wires for telephone, telegraph and electric light and power service which are now run on hideous poles erected at the pleasure of the companies along the public highways and highways, and in front of otherwise attractive private grounds, in the borough. I approve his suggestion, which does not seem to me impracticable, particularly as such a viaduct would probably be constructed in connection with the sewer pipe line, soon to be installed.

The ease with which public utility corporations obtain valuable franchises, and get practical control of the streets of our suburban towns and cities is an unfortunate phase of the administration of the affairs of these municipalities in the State of New Jersey. They manage these things more wisely in New England. In a trip recently made through the Eastern States, particularly noticed in many towns and villages the evidence that the authorities controlled, themselves, the public highways, streets, parks, trees, streams, etc., for the beautifying of the town, and for the advantage of their own citizens, instead of passing over practical proprietary rights to utility corporations. I noticed that the charm of that lovely village —Manchester, Vermont—was not a little enhanced by the absence of any telegraph or telephone poles, or wires, along its streets. However, or wherever, the wires were strung, they did not appear, neither did the unsightly impositions of poles, on streets being entirely free from them.

If this can be done in a little mountain village in Vermont, who shall say that a similar wise course is impossible in the borough of North Plainfield?

The contention that this plan would involve too much expense is short-sighted. In my judgment a viaduct owned by the borough could be made to pay for itself by an income to be received for its use from the corporations.

But I would go even further than Mr. Hooley, and in addition to the viaduct he proposes I would advocate the municipal ownership of an electric lighting plant, and perhaps also later, if not at the same time, of a public water system. Other communities operate these utilities for the benefit and advantage of their citizens; in many cases I am informed showing a substantial profit. Why should we hand over these benefits to soulless corporations, who exploit us and our community for their private gain, and who disfigure our streets and our private property with the ugly evidences of their practical ownership of us? Who sell us light of a certain specified candle power and, it is said, deliver us, both for public and private use, a poorer quality! Who undertake to supply citizens with water and then surround them with spies to see that the poorer?

Who undertake to see that they conform to their "rules" as to its use, and upon the failure to strictly observe such "rules" discipline these American citizens by entirely shutting off the water from their premises, inconveniencing and sometimes endangering persons and property. A statement of the case is sufficient to disclose its absurdity.

Mr. Hooley's reference to the menace to life in the high voltage current carried on the poles and through the trees is timely. I would not dare to place my hands on what I have always supposed were my own trees in front of my residence, during a heavy rain, or especially in an electric storm. Who gives any corporation the constitutional right to turn my shady elms in to life-destroying instruments!

I am satisfied that private capital would be forthcoming to provide an electric power plant for the borough, which she borough itself could acquire at once or later at actual cost. I am sure there are public spirited citizens enough in North Plainfield to join such an enterprise who would spurn the thought of any profit to themselves in supplying their neighbors and their community with these necessities of modern life.

Respectfully yours,
C. W. McCUTCHEN.

REV. FRANK HIGGINS' WORK IN NORTH WEST

Rev. Frank Higgins, the missionary who spends eleven months of the year in camps among the lumberjacks of the north west as a missionary, addressed a congregation which filled the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last evening giving some interesting facts about the work the Gospel is carried to the men whose lives are spent mostly in the open and whose opportunities to hear preaching are few and far between.

Mr. Higgins' gave graphic descriptions of the difficulties attending the work among the men. It is impossible to get regularly appointed missionaries to take up the work which requires more than an ordinarily strong constitution, but his is gradually being overcome by the conversion of the men themselves and converting them into missionaries. These men once brought to a knowledge of the Christ become effective, alert and eager missionaries.

In a circular letter Mr. Higgins takes in in one section of the country numbers about 10,000 men all working in the lumber camps and there is only one circuit closed to him through the superintendent of the camps. Recently Mr. Higgins has taken an active part in destroying the influence of the saloons. They have been reduced from one in fifty to one in five hundred of the lumberjacks, a result hardly hoped for five years ago. After a heroic and strenuous struggle to get the work systematized, but it now moves along with celerity and preaching services are conducted at regular intervals.

Many small churches have been built on the work being done by the men themselves who cut the lumber, plan the edifice and put it together, later filling it up with members. Last year Mr. Higgins carried from this city funds for the supplying of another missionary and he has succeeded in securing a man to do the work successfully among the men.

Mr. Higgins will probably take in the lumber camps in Michigan during his next crusade in the west.

DRAMATIZED VERSION OF POE STORY SCORES

Why it has taken twenty-six years to draamtize so strong a story as E. P. Roe's "He Fell in Love With His Wife" will remain a mystery, but the fact that the attempts were made and made resulting in failure but adds lustre to the production last night of the version by Gus Bothner and Herbert Campbell, the latter a son of the famous Bartley Campbell, whose reputation was world wide. This play, dealing in an old theme, in a new way completely won the big audience at the Plainfield theatre last night, bringing to the competent cast many curtain calls interspersed with applause at dramatic points in the story.

The story of "Alida Armstrong" is too well known to require repetition here it therefore needs but a few words in which to tell of the work of the characters in the play. As a whole the characters were all well personated by the cast. They were competent, conscientious and fully equal to the demands of the situation. Particularly was this true of Captain Macy, who as James Holcroft, played the rural hero in manly fashion and divided the honors with Mabel Brownell, the heroine. Harry J. Lane, as "Milo Peasley" made a hit with his wonderful facial makeup and general assumption of the part of the lover of "Evangeline Hawkins" (Miss Bernice Golden).

The play will undoubtedly make a hit on Broadway and is destined for a long run.

Worth Considering.

Judge (to defendant)—You say you called the plaintiff a "cow?"

"Yes."

Judge (to plaintiff)—And you want $50 for reparation. Don't you think that a big sum?

Plaintiff (a drover)—But, judge, take into consideration the high price of cattle.

Were it not for the little spats now and then married life would be monotonous.

BIG BLAZE IN BOROUGH

Flames Destroy Kilns at Ernest Hand's Brick Yard.

THE PROPERTY UNINSURED.

Water from Green Brook Pumped by City's Steamer—Loss Approximates $3,000.

The main storage building and kiln houses at the Ernest T. Hand brick yard on Mountain avenue caught fire shortly before 4 Friday morning and were almost totally destroyed. The departments from both the city and borough were summoned but owing to the place being out of the hydrant zone the men were badly handicapped. The flames were finally extinguished after an hour and a half's work. Mr. Hand places the damage at $3,000. There is no insurance.

The blaze evidently originated from the kilns where over half a million brick are being burned. Ordinarily the fires are watched day and night, but they were unguarded early today. The flames had spread across one end of the main building when they were discovered by William Flanagan, the brick burner. He immediately telephoned North Plainfield headquarters and a few minutes later someone pulled box 18 on the city side at Front street and Netherwood avenue, the glow from the fire being plainly visible across the skies. The North Plainfield men turned in an alarm from box 134 at Mountain and Westervelt avenues on the way to the scene, realizing that they would need help.

The flames had gained great headway by the time the apparatus reached the scene, as the buildings were dry as tinder. The city steamer secured water from Green brook and it was sent through the borough's line of hose to the blaze. The first alarm was turned in at 3:50 and it was 5:19 when the recall sounded. Fully three-fourths of the yard buildings and sheds were destroyed.

Ernest T. Hand, the owner of the property, said this morning that today's fire is the first that has occurred in the yard since it was established in the present location fifteen years ago. The danger of the kiln blazes spreading is very great and for this reason the insurance rate is almost prohibitive, consequently none has ever been carried. The great quantity of brick being burned at the present time was not damaged in any way.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Runner Jim.

The Hon. James E. Martine, of Plainfield, is endeared by old habit and circulation of good and true citizens of the Congressional district in which he lives, and indeed of the whole State, to whose celebrity even the mosquito has scarcely contributed more. Farmer Jim, Plainfield Jim, the Farmer Orator, Bryan Jim, a hundred affectionate nicknames prove his nearness to the Jersey heart. Children at the breast, whose first memories are of Jim Martine's canvass, will grow up to find him running still; patriarchs of Parsippany and way stations tell their great-great-grandchildren of the early days of our country when Jim Martine was just beginning his career.

It has been hoped that Farmer Jim would be faithful to the end, ever running, never reaching, still nursing the inviolable hope, the unselfish friend of exercise. All Martinetists—and they are many—will hope still, even if it be true that 48,000 Democrats went to the primaries and voted for him for Senator. They would not have so voted if they had not supposed that Mr. Martine's candidacy was honorary and shadowy, a cockade, a medal of honor, for a veteran runner. Multitudes can get office, Jim Martine has had a higher fame, that of leading, forlorn hopes, sprinting gallantly, failing copiously, burning to run again.

In a letter to the Hon. James Smith, Jr., Bryan Jim says:

"I stand squarely committed and pledged to vote for and support measures intended to give the people their rights."

Is there a right more precious to the Jersey people than that of keeping the Hon. Jim Martine in circulation as a candidate? Beloved Wandering Jim! This is but a passing weakness. He will recover, no will be sorry to see him go. He will scorn the sedentary life of the office-holder.—The New York Sun.

The Century in 1911.

The first chapters of Robert Hichens' new novel, "The Dweller on the Threshold," which is running serially in The Century, indicates that psychical research is to be the key-note of the story. It is not the object of Mr. Hichens' story, it is said, to set forth what has been accomplished in the field of occultism; but his working out of some of the phenomena of occultism in his story cannot fail to interest all who have paid any attention to psychic problems.

The "Danger Dance" is the latest terpsichorean musical comedy sensation. The dance is a feature of "Madame Sherry," and is said to be a logical issue of one of the musical comedy situations. Danced by a young man and woman of the cast, it is described as a novelty, where the male dancer is always on the ground and his fair partner moody in the air, whither he swings, puts and tosses her, as he might a gay scarf. The younger woman who figures as the human fabric is said to wear a specially devised steel corset to protect her ribs from cracking in the clinches.

Jose Weber has cancelled all of the bookings he had arranged to have Kitty Gordon appear in the principal cities in "Alma Where Do You Live?" with John McCloskey, the brilliant young American tenor. This action was taken because of the capacity business at Joe Weber's Theatre, New York, which is exceeding even Mr. Weber's most hopeful. Although "Alma" has no chorus, it is nevertheless a musical piece and its tuneful airs are sung and whistled everywhere. The success of the English beauty in "Alma" has been assured since the opening performance when she was hailed as the most beautiful woman in musical comedy. The clean comedy and spontaneous action of the play keeps one in good humor the entire evening. The cast is capable and well balanced, winning every possible laugh from the clever lines and situations of the book. "Alma" is one of the four hits of the season.

NEW RIDING MASTER ALSO NEW BENEDICT.

Joseph Grandi, of Brooklyn, who has purchased the stables and riding school of Hugh Gormley, at 761 Kensington avenue, took possession of the same Tuesday and he plans to make extensive improvements at once. Mr. Grandi has had an extensive experience in the business and he proposes to conduct a thoroughly up to date stable and riding school, where lessons will be given.

Prior to coming to Plainfield yesterday, Mr. Grandi was married in the morning to Miss Gertrude Kirbach, of Brooklyn. Rev. Mr. Dorling, of the latter place, performed the ceremony, and the couple immediately came to Plainfield, where they will now reside.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE IN WEST END RESIDENCE.

The home of Patrick Boylan, located on the second floor of the residence at 968 West Fifth street, was slightly damaged by a fire discovered by Mrs. Boylan at 11 Tuesday morning. It originated in a closet, though from what cause is not known as there were no matches in it and no one had been near it. Mrs. Boylan tried to fight the flames with pails of water, but failing to do so, gave the alarm. The firemen were summoned from box 86 and used one tank of No. 3's chemicals in extinguishing the blaze.

The dwelling is owned by J. P. Humble, of Somerset street. The damage to it is placed at $50 and an additional $100 to the Boylan furnishings.

Montclair Defeats Plainfield.

Two picked teams of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. boys' department, engaged in a dual meet with the Montclair Association boys, on Saturday, at the latter place. There was a basketball game and four swimming events. In the swimming events the Plainfield boys were outclassed, although they did good work. They also were defeated in the basketball game by a score of 36 to 14. The Plainfield boys had the best of it in the first half, but were outplayed in the last half.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Hudson Observer (Dem.): The Democratic party is in honor bound to select James E. Martine to the United States Senate. He is the popular choice of the party and he was selected under a law which the party helped to make and the principles of which it has supported in its platforms and upon the stump. Martine, it is true, is not a multimillionaire, with a chain of powerful corporations behind him. But he is a substantial and respected resident of Union county, who has done yeoman work for his party during the past twenty years. He understands and is in hearty accord with the party's wishes with respect to the great burning question of the day—the revision downward of the tariff schedules. Though he is a man of limited means, Mr. Martine has had no money with which to debauch a Legislature or to set an army of lobbyists at work in his behalf. His election would be accepted everywhere as evidence that the old and disgraceful method of making United States Senators had come to an end in this State. His defeat, especially by a man of vast wealth and corporation backing, would at once start the party on a career of disaster such as broke the Republicans to grief, and would subject each of its representatives to well-merited suspicion.

Trenton Times (Ind.): The Democrats, both in platform declarations and in legislative performance, are committed absolutely to the policy of letting the people have a say in the selection of United States Senators. At the primary in September the party, by upward of 40,000 votes and under the law that a Democratic House of Assembly had enacted, picked James E. Martine, of Union county, as their choice for United States Senator. That choice cannot be changed now by the Legislature, save through corrupt interference. No State, with the single exception of Illinois, has ever gone back on the primary expression of the people. And we do not believe that New Jersey wants any "Billy" Lorimer scandal. Martine should be named, and without delay.

Jersey City Journal (Rep.): Edward C. Stokes had his trouble for his pains. The successor to John Kean in the United States Senate will be James E. Martine, unless the Democrats show an utter disregard for public sentiment and deliberately choose to bring disaster upon their party in this State.

Atlantic City Review (Rep.): The legislative representatives of the people of New Jersey wrote a law on the statute books permitting them to express a voting choice on this matter, and that law should be carried out to the letter and obeyed by the newly elected Democratic lawmakers.

Mt. Holly Mirror (Rep.): What a fine opportunity James Smith, Jr., will have to prove his good faith by keeping strong and adopting James E. Martine, the popular choice of the Democratic party at the recent primaries, to go to the United States Senate unopposed in his party caucus. In the face of the Democratic platform pledges for election of United States Senators by popular vote and Governor-elect Wilson's oft-repeated pledge to favor the same plan, it is hard to see how Smith can do aught but cheerfully acquiesce in hauling the prize for which he has labored for years, to some one else. Will he do it?

New Brunswick Home News (Rep.): The Democratic party is committed to the principle of direct election of United States Senators. Mr. Martine has received a majority of the popular vote of his party, and if he is not chosen by the Legislature, Democratic platform pledges will sink to a new way below par in coming elections.

Jersey City Journal (Rep.): One of the things that Governor Wilson will have to settle is whether James E. Martine or some other Democrat shall be elected as United States Senator to succeed John Kean. If Wilson stands up for the direct primary the Democratic machine will not dare oppose him.

Hudson Observer (Dem.): At the primaries September the party's voters declared for James E. Martine, of Plainfield, for United States Senator to succeed John Kean, Jr. The law providing for a popular expression of opinion on this question was passed by the Legislature of 1907, when the Senate was Republican and the House Democratic. It was a reform measure, and the Democrats voted for it as such. Among these Democrats were the majority from Essex and the twelve from Hudson.

Elizabeth Times (Dem.): Many members of the Legislature have pledged themselves to support the Democratic primary choice for United States Senator, James E. Martine in the main and no other should contest his right.

CROCODILE TEARS.

Old Legends That the Brutes Shed Them Over Their Prey.

There was an old story, to which we find constant reference in Elizabethan writers, that crocodiles wept over their prey. No doubt the legend arose because the crocodile possesses large lyr developed lachrymal glands, but it appears in various amusing forms.

As early as the fourteenth century, in "Mandeville's Travels," we find; "In that contree ben great plentee of Cokedrilles. Theise serpentes slen men, and thei eten hem wepynge."

An odd form is given to the tale by the narrator of one of Sir John Hawkins' voyages. Whether he was a married man or not we do not know, but he writes: "His nature is ever, when he would have his prey, to cry and sob like a Christian body, to provoke them to come to him, and then he snatcheth at them! And therupon came this proverb, that is applied unto women when they weep, Lachrymae crocodili, the meaning whereof is that as the crocodile when he crieth doeth them about most to deceive, so doth a woman most commonly when she weepeth."

In Fuller's "Worthies" there is the added information that "the crocodile's tears are never true save when he is forced where saffron proweth." Shakespeare, Spenser and Dryden allude to this old world fancy.

LOVELY LUCERNE.

The Tourist Center of the "Playground of Europe."

Lucerne, situated in the heart of Switzerland, stands, as it were, enshrined amid the grandest and most picturesque features of Alpine scenery and its picture, the tourist center par excellence of the "Playground of Europe," three main lines of railway converging on the famous town beside the lake. Nor could nature, indeed, have well done more for "Lovely Lucerne," as all the gifted acclaims it (declares a writer in London Sketch). On one side stands the Rigi, on the other Pilatus (7,000 feet high), with between them the fair, shimmering expanse of the Lake of the Four Cantons and beyond it again a widespread panorama of the glaciers and snow peaked ranges of the Alps.

From the Rigi (6,000 feet), easily climbed by aid of its famous "mountain train," the view takes in the Bernina, Gotthard, Unterwalden and Bernese Oberland, stretching far and wide, from the Sentis in the east to the Blumlisalp in the west, and to northward the Jura mountains, the Black forest and the Vosges barrier between Frank and Teuton. From the Rigi Kulm fourteen lakes are visible on a clear day, among them Sempach, by the shores of which was fought the famous battle where the Swiss won their freedom.

Naming a Yacht.

The naming of a book is no holiday task, and authors particularly proud of a title are tolerably sure to discover that it has been already used. But the naming of a yacht is almost a greater perplexity. Plagiarism may in this case result in practical confusion varying the most awkward consequences, and not all titles to which, in search of variety, recourse has already been had are satisfactory from all points of view. Not long ago, for instance, a very grave British cabinet minister, perhaps wishing for once to be sprightly, called his yacht Flirt. He had not consulted his family, who were, however, quite sure, he thought, to delight in his outburst of gayety. However, his disinclination to be remarried here very disagreeable it would be to go ashore with that label around their hats.

Where Ears Grow Sharp.

A French balloonist has recorded the clearness with which sounds coming from the surface of the ground can be heard at a high altitude. At the height of 5,000 feet the ringing of horses' hoofs on a hard road was clearly audible. At 4,000 feet the splashing sound made by ducks in a pond was heard. The barking of dogs and the crowing of cocks could be heard at seven or eight thousand feet. His shouts were distinctly remarked by white floor of cloud that hid the earth from sight, says Harper's Weekly. In the perfect silence of the air the investigators was startled by what seemed stealthy footsteps close at hand. It was presently found that this noise was caused by the stretching of the ropes and the yielding of the silk as the balloon continued to expand.

EXPERT'S INVESTIGATION OF WATER PROBLEM SHOWS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IS BEST SOLUTION

Exhaustive Report of James H. Fuertes Reveals That Condemnation of Private Plant Would be Unwise and That City Can Obtain Abundant Supply.

At an adjourned meeting of the Common Council, held last evening, the report of the engineer, Mr. James H. Fuertes, concerning the water situation, was presented and referred to the Special Water Investigating Committee, for examination.

The report comprises upwards of two hundred and fifty typewritten pages, and is accompanied by many tables, maps and diagrams.

His conclusions, the reasons for which are set forth at length in his report, are as follows:

1. The estimated population of Plainfield is 22,000; by 1940 this is likely to increase to 55,000.

2. The present consumption of water in Plainfield is about 2,000,000 gallons daily, or a little over 90 gallons per capita, based on the quantities of water reported as pumped into the Netherwood station; corrected for errors in the measurement of the water the consumption is probably more nearly about 80 gallons per capita daily. I have assumed, in making up the estimates, that the consumption is now actually about 85 gallons per capita daily and that this rate will increase to 100 gallons per capita by 1940, by which time the average total daily supply required will be 5,500,000 gallons.

3. The maximum rate of consumption for short periods, on occasional days, may reach twice the average rate and during large conflagrations three timesthe average daily rate.

4. Plainfield is supplied with ground water from the Netherwood pumping station of the Plainfield Union Water Company. Water from this station is also pumped to Fanwood, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle, and Elizabeth; and during the past summer the supply for a short while could be kept up only with difficulty and with help from the Robinson's Branch Pumping Station, located south of Plainfield.

5. The constantly increasing draft on the wells, at the Netherwood station, has lowered the ground water at the plant to about the lowest limit permissible, and the present rate of draft can not be maintained indefinitely; an additional supply from somewhere is, therefore, imperative. The Water Company has, as one expedient, drilled several new wells deep into the underlying shale rock at the site of the old wells and has thus secured a supply of ground water; how much can be permanently secured from the wells is unknown at present. Their yield does not, it is said, reduce the yield of the old wells.

6. The Netherwood works at present (the new wells are not yet in service) have not sufficient reserve capacity to render the service that Plainfield is entitled to. There is no storage, worthy of the name, in the system, and if a serious fire had occurred in Plainfield, during the period of shortage in July last, the Company could not have furnished water fast enough to have afforded effective fire protection. There were times during that period when the stand pipe could not be filled, because the wells, even with the help of what could be taken from the already spare supply at the Robinson's Branch Station, could not yield water fast enough to allow the pumps to force into the mains as much water as was being drawn out by the customers.

7. The proposed extensions, it the expectations of the Water Company are realized as to yield, combined with the available yield of the original wells, would be just about sufficient to take care of Plainfield's consumption for the next 25 or 30 years, providing no water reservoir holding about one day's supply were built, on the hills back of Plainfield, to furnish a reserve for extraordinary rates of consumption and for fire protection.

8. I find that the water in the gravel deposits and the water in the shale rock underlying Plainfield have different origins, come from different gathering grounds and are at different pressures; in other words, they are separate and distinct sources of supply, and taking water from one does not affect the other. I also find that the water from deep down in the shale rock underneath Plainfield shows, by its purity and freedom from organisms that it receives no pollution from the city's wastes or sewers and is safe from a sanitary point of view; that there is a sufficient supply for Plainfield and that the continuance of the Netherwood plant in the hands of an independent company would not interfere with the supply which Plainfield could acquire at its own plant.

9. I find that it would be impracticable for the City of Plainfield to acquire or purchase the Netherwood wells and pumping station, for the reason that the sum necessary to compensate the Plainfield Union Water Company for its franchises and for breaking its contracts with other municipalities which it supplies from the Netherwood sources, added to the value of the physical plant, would far exceed the sum for which Plainfield could secure an equally good supply from other sources.

10. I find that the City of Plainfield could, if it desired secure a gravity supply a pumped supply from either of three sources the waters in each case to be clear, pure and soft, the costs for construction not beyond the means of the city, and the annual cost for operation not greater than would be amply taken care of by the rates now in force.

11. The street mains in Plainfield are in good condition and the system is well laid out and proportioned. I estimate that, with all appurtenances, the street mains could be reproduced at present prices for labor and materials for $286,500.00, and that the measure of the depreciation of the present mains is a little under $39,000.00, based on an assumed life of 80 years for the cast iron pipe and about 40 years for the valves and hydrants.

12. I find that the city could, if it so desired, build a new set of street mains leaving the existing mains in the possession of the Water Company; or could attord to pay the Water Company for its mains, if it chose to sell them to the city, the sum for which the mains could be rebuilt anew.

14. The water in each of the supplies mentioned would be subjected to such treatment as would bring all to conform to the same standards, as to purity and softness, and the costs of such treatment and treatment-works are included in the estimates. The estimates of costs of construction include land, water sources, and supply-works, new street mains in Plainfield, a new elevated reservoir, and all works necessary to put soft pure water into the houses of the consumers. The estimates of annual cost of operation include interest, amounts to put into a sinking fund that will provide revenues from which to renew each part as it is worn out or replaced, all labor, fuel, supplies, ordinary repairs, administration charges and maintenance charges on all parts of the works.

15. I find, on an analysis of the advantages and disadvantages of the different sources that either Plans E. or F. could advantageously be adopted by the city in case it be decided to construct a municipal supply.

16. I am of the opinion that, the rates now charged by the Water Company being assumed to be fair, and they have been so declared by more than one investigating committee, it would be impracticable for the Water Company to carry out the desirable improvements to increase the supply and soften the water unless the rates were increased by a considerable percentage.

17. I believe that, as the city can secure a municipal supply at reasonable cost, and, therefore, is not compelled to make another contract with the Water Company, the desirability or not of making such a contract depends largely upon whether or not the city has sufficient confidence in the Water Company to accept, irrespective of contractual obligations, its promised and concede its ability to look ahead and provide for future needs in advance of the requirements. It is truly a matter of confidence, for the reason that no contract that could be drawn up in advance would protect Plainfield's interests in case the Company was not physically able, or did not feel inclined, or could not afford, to live up to its terms. Engineering ability of a high order, executive ability and foresight on the part of the management, and ample financial resources are all necessary in order to make the interests of the Company and the consumer meet, and is Plainfield, through its past experience, or through its general view o, the relations of Plainfield and all other communities now supplied with water by the Plainfield Union Water Company, is not satisfied that the present company can and will for many years in the future provide for Plainfield's needs as well, and for a total annual expense approximately as small as that for which the city could establish and operate a municipal supply, then Plainfield can and should decline to enter into another contract with the Company and proceed at once to establish a municipal supply.

18. I find that should Plainfield decide to establish municipal supply the works can be built and put in operation before May 2, 1912, the date when the present contract with the Plainfield Union Water Company expires, providing authorization is granted in time to get the work ready for contract next spring.

His finding, that there are two separate and distinct sources of supply under the City, 1 the supply in the sand strata, which is the supply heretofore drawn on by the water company, and 2 the supply in the underlying shale, from the latter of which a sufficient supply of pure, good water can be obtained without being affected by the operations of the water company, is most interesting.

The conclusion that the City can secure a sufficient supply or good water from any one of five different sources at a cost within the City's means, both as to construction and operation, is highly satisfactory and the fact that such a supply can be obtained without the necessity of acquiring the present water company's plant and the consequent capitalization of its franchises, is very encouraging.

The merits of all the suggested plans are fully analyzed and the conclusion reached that either the plan A mentioned in the conclusions , being a gravity supply from the Lamington River, or the plan E, being a pumped supply from deep wells, is most practicable.

The report was ordered printed and copies will be available for distribution in about two weeks.

Further comment on the report will appear hereafter, and it is hoped that the citizens will procure copies and be prepared to assist the Council in the solution of the problem.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Handing It to "Jim."

Farmer Martine, of Union county, has been defeated or rejected as a candidate for even a political office from councilman in his town, sheriff and State Senator in the county to Congress and the Governorship. The ascending scale of defeat and rejection winds up with the Senatorship, and after that a man ought to be ashamed that he isn't really wanted.—Newark Star.

That's a pleasant way for Mr. Smith to look at it, but the fact remains that Martine has not been defeated yet for Senator, but on the contrary bears the endorsement of 48,000 Democrats for the job. What is more, sneering at the "Farmer" won't help the Smith cause any.—New Brunswick Home News.

So Mr. Smith is deceiving the people again. Mr. Martine was elected by the Common Council many years ago and made a first-rate city father, too.

The Senatorship.

If Brown and Jones were running for political office, and Brown got many votes than Jones who would be elected?

We may suppose them both independents. We may suppose that party organizations put up no candidates against them. We may suppose that ninety-nine per cent. of the voters did not vote because of apathy, indifference or any other reason you choose to mention. But who would be elected?

The question of the Senatorial choice is not whether Martine is the ideal man for Senator.

The question is whether a Democratic Legislature will turn down a principle that it has indorsed to play a trick game of stacked cards that it has tried to get away with.

The Democratic party in its platform of 1910 and when in control of the Assembly in 1907 indorsed the principle of popular choice of United States Senators.

The law is to that extent their law. It received its first test this year. Martine was chosen.

There was nothing in the world to prevent any Democrat who did not like Martine or McDermit from nominating a candidate against them. But nobody did so. Whose fault is it, then, if Martine is the choice between the candidates nominated?

Perhaps, if more had been in the field Martine would not have been chosen. But who would? Who shall say?

Do the Democrats who profess allegiance to the principles of Democracy arrogate to themselves the right to become a board of guardians and say: "The people ought to have chosen So-and-so?"

What right has any Democrat in the Legislature to say for the people: "They would have chosen such a man?"

It is no time to talk constitutional objections, party gratitude, minority votes and the like.

The Democratic party has pledged itself to the principle of direct nominations for United States Senator.

It has not, so far, displayed any burning desire to redeem that pledge.

Are the people to be told by its action that it means that pledge or not?

And if it does not mean it, how much sincerity will the people credit it with in any other pledge it has given?

Does the Democratic party sincerely mean what it professes or does it not? Is it better than the Board of Guardians or the same thing under another name?

The first test of Democratic sincerity will be the Senatorship. And the question is, shall it be decided on the basis of principle or not?

How far are the Democrats to be trusted?—Newark News.

Two Thanksgiving Services.

A Thanksgiving service will be held at the Covenant Avenue Presbyterian church Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock, which will be independent of the union service at the First Baptist church at 10 o'clock that morning in which all the other churches will unite. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie will preach at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

TROLLEY SERVICE PLANS

REQUEST ANOTHER SWITCH.

Better Service for Netherwood Line the Object as Expressed by Corporation's Counsel, L. D. Gilmour.

The Public Service Corporation, through its assistant counsel, L. D. Gilmour, was before the Common Council at its adjourned meeting, Monday, looking for additional favors. It was really a renewal of the request to establish "Ys" at convenient points, and Mr. Gilmour explained that he believed that the proposed improvements would not only remove the congested traffic on Watchung avnue, but would give far better service.

The company desires to double track its road on Watchung avenue, part way between Fourth and Fifth streets, with the installation of a "Y" at Watchung avenue and Fourth street, which would permit the operation of the Netherwood line through Arlington avenue or Fourth street, and would take off one of the numerous lines from Front street, which he understood was desired.

The other changes desired by the company is the installation of a "Y" at Fifth and Richmond streets, which Mr. Gilmour said would entirely eliminate a tie-up of traffic which now frequently occurs. Mr. Gilmour had drafted ordinances with him, which he turned over to Mr. Myratt, chairman of the committee on public affairs. President Tolles also referred the petition presented by Mr. Gilmour to the same committee.

A resolution offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted, fixed Monday night, December 19, as the time bids will be received for the proposed sanitary sewer extension, according to plans held in the office of Street Commissioner Gavett.

CITY OFFICES' JANITOR, 'JAKE' DUNHAM, DEAD

Jacob C. Dunham, aged 49 years, colored, son of the late George Dunham, and one of the best known members of his race in this city, died at Muhlenberg Hospital Tuesday Mr. Dunham was taken to the hospital for an operation about a week ago, and owing to the seriousness of the operation, it was practically assured that he could not recover. He had been ill for several months prior to going to the hospital, being afflicted with a loss of memory and recently he failed very rapidly.

Mr. Dunham was perhaps best known as the janitor of the city offices, a position he had held since the retirement of the late W. V. Mundy, several years ago. He was faithful in the performance of his duties and won the respect of those about him. "Jake," as he was familiarly known, was also employed as a janitor in several other buildings about the city and in this way his time was well occupied. He was attendant at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, where the funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Dunham is survived by a mother, a wife and one daughter, Miss Minnie Dunham, all of whom have resided in this city for many years.

AN EVENING OF MUSIC TEMPLE CHURCH BENEFIT.

The fourth and last entertainment in the series for the benefit of the building fund of the Temple Baptist church, at the First Baptist church, Tuesday evening November 29, it will be "an evening of music," under the direction of Howard Case, organist of the First Baptist church. A feature of the concert will be the appearance of Hans Kronold, the well-known 'cellist, whose work has called forth the highest praise.

The rest of the program, which will be unusually attractive, will be given by a quartet of the church choir, Miss Ruth Harris, soprano; Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto; William Holmes, baritone and George Smith, tenor. They will give solo, duet and quartet selections, and will afford an excellent opportunity for lovers of music to hear this fine quartet in a new field of music. The program will be a varied and popular one of secular music.

Struck by Automobile.

Neil Sullane, driving a delivery wagon at West Front street near the city line at 8 o'clock last evening was run into by an automobile driven by N. G. Furman, of 131 Fourth avenue, Newark, and was thrown from his rig. Spillane received some bruises and his wagon was wrecked. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital by Mr. Furman and his injuries were dressed. Afterwards he was taken to his home in North Plainfield.

The North Plainfield Board of Education held a special meeting Monday, for the purpose of receiving a committee report relative to charges recently preferred by Judge Isaac P. Runyon to the effect that his son had not made satisfactory progress in school because of existing conditions. The complainant placed part of the blame to the alleged overcrowding of the boy's class and incompetency of the teacher. He also insinuated that superintendent H. C. Krebs was absent from the borough schools more days than is allotted him by the board to attend his duties as county supervisor.

In reporting on the charges, the committee exonerated superintendent Krebs was absent from the borough that conditions in the North Plainfield schools were equally as good and sometimes better than of other places. Judge Runyon has taken his son from the borough school and placed him in the Franklin school on the city side. In his old class there is an enrollment of forty-six and in the new forty-one, a difference of five, the same being pointed out by the committee. The full report and resolution was as follows:

"To the Board of Education:

"Gentlemen—Judge Isaac P. Runyon having made complaint to your committee a meeting was held and the Judge came before us and submitted his grievance in writing. Upon investigation we find that Mr. Kreb's assistant did not report to him that a complaint had been made and a number of days elapsed before it came to the knowledge of Mr. Krebs. This is a grave mistake and should not be allowed to occur in the future. All complaints should be brought to the attention of the superintendent at once and investigated without delay.

"While Mrs. Runyon was unfortunate in not finding Mr. Krebs at the school when she called, we find that he has not been absent more often than our agreement with him would justify. Mr. Krebs has, at our request, made a report of the number of days absent, and the dates, all of which can be verified by his reports to the State Department of Education.

"At the request of the chairman of your committee, Mr. Krebs has made a report upon the conditions in the Franklin school and we find them very similar to the conditions here, all of which you will find in his statement. While the room in which Mr. Runyon's son was a pupil has forty-six pupils enrolled, the usual attendance is forty-two or forty-three, while forty is about the average attendance in the lower grades throughout the school. In regard to the complaint that the teacher is not familiar with her work, we respectfully state that the committee on teachers and text books.

"We believe that the present arrangement, by which the superintendent is away one-fifth of, the time, is open to criticism, and should receive the further consideration of the Board. All of which is respectfully submitted.

"Signed,

"JUSTUS H. COOLEY,
"GEORGE A. WARNER,
"HIRAM A. WOODRUFF, Committee."

The resolution was as follows:

"The Board of Education of the Borough of North Plainfield, having received the complaint of Judge Isaac P. Runyon in regard to the borough schools, wishes to state that the conditions complained of have been thoroughly investigated; that the Board has received convincing testimony that the standard of work in these schools has been constantly improving during the past five years and is now equal to that of the better class of schools in this State; that the assistant principal has not been absent from school more days than are specified in the resolution of the board permitting such absence; that the conditions regarding the number of pupils in a room are even better on an average than those of neighboring schools; and that the supervising principal and teachers have the entire confidence of the Board of Education."

It All Depends.

The aviator soared aloft
As graceful as a hawk
And far below, with strained necks
The people stopped to gawk.

They wondered how a man could float
Upon the air like that,
And each one cheered him loud and long,
And wildly waved his hat.

A little gust of wind came by—
He landed with a bump,
They picked up what was left of him,
And said: "He was a chump."

Mrs. Marty O'Loughlin Victim of Foot Pad on Park Avenue Monday Night.

HER ASSAILANT GETS AWAY.

Made a Good Fight, But Was Choked Into Insensibility—No trace of Assailant.

While on her way home at 9 o'clock Monday night, Mrs. Marty O'Loughlin, the bride of a month, was attacked, beaten into insensibility and robbed of her pocketbook near the corner of Belleview and Park avenues, just outside the city line. Mrs. O'Loughlin was on her way home and had alighted from an Arlington avenue trolley car at the corner of South Enid avenue and was midway between the two thoroughfares when set upon by a man whom she could not describe. Besides having her face severely scratched and her arms bruised she suffered no serious injury.

At the spot where the assault took place there is an electric light bulb, but it evidently is broken and for that reason was taken as an ideal spot for the hold-up. Because of the lack of light Mrs. O'Loughlin got but a meager description of her assailant. Police headquarters were notified as soon as the woman reached home which was about half an hour after the robbery took place. Mrs. O'Loughlin fainted from the blows she received and fright attending her experience. Fortunately she had but little money in her pocketbook.

Chief of Police P. S. Kiely personally conducted a search for the highway man, but after beating up the country for several blocks in all directions was forced to relinquish the search. No trace of the man was found.

This morning Mrs. O'Loughlin presented a awful spectacle. Her face is black and twice its natural size, both eyes are blackened and her neck and throat are scratched and torn as though she had done battle with a wild cat. The only description that she could give of the man was that he was about twenty-eight years old, five feet seven inches tall, slender and had a fierce black mustache.

COMMON COUNCIL REPEALS CITY COUNCIL ORDINANCE

An ordinance was offered by Mr. Holt and adopted at the Common Council Tuesday night repealing the ordinance which provides for the office and appointment of a corporation counsel. The ordinance was adopted on two readings and ordered engrossed and advertised. Mr. Holt explained to the people of the action. He said that there is a State law which covers this matter and supercedes the local ordinance and to avoid any complications that might arise, it was thought best to repeal the ordinance.

As the late Corporation Counsel Marsh held this office for twenty-eight years, no question ever arose regarding the ordinance under which he was appointed. The State law fully covers any action the city may wish to take.

CROSS-COUNTRY TOURNEY THANKSGIVING DAY EVENT

There will be a cross-country competition at the Plainfield Country Club, on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day. The course will consist of nine holes, which will be announced on the morning of the play and they will be played on the same basis as a four-ball match, the best ball to count at each hole. As there will be prizes for the winning team in both Class A and Class B, it will be necessary for players to select partners according to their own class. The competition will be a handicap basis a d the handicap formula will be announced Thursday morning.

This has been an annual competition for a number of years, but heretofore it has been played with "winter rules," that is, teeing up ball except in bad lies, but this year the competition will be played under the regular rules, namely, the ball must be played from where it lies, unless lifted under the penalty stroke or stroke in accordance with the rules.

Of course, if weather should prevail between now and Thursday, or on Thursday, which makes it advisable to change the conditions, a decision will be made on the ball to be played. With good weather there should be a large field in this competition and there is a cup offered for each winning team in Class A and also for the winning team in Class B.

Women of America Reduced to Absolute Degradation She Declares.

ARGUES RIGHT TO VOTE.

Prejudice and Conservatism the Obstacles, Says Head of National Woman's Suffrage Association.

That capacity audience was gathered to listen to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who lectured "In Favor of Woman Surage" Monday before the Monday Afternoon Club in the Hartridge School auditorium with a foregone conclusion. As president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association her position and its necessary preparation qualifies her to speak with no uncertain sound on this topic of current interest.

Dr. Shaw prefaced her lecture with praise for the club calendar which she pronounced one of the best she had even seen, not only for its unbiased regime of subjects but for its comprehensive list of reference books as aids to study.

In her opening remarks, Dr. Shaw declared that the very basis of democracy and she considered woman suffrage in relation to democracy, the question being "What shall be the condition of women under a government of the people, whose compelling force is from within instead of without." She spoke of the injustice of a democracy where a part of the people are deprived of suffrage. The laws, she said, represented the will of the people, expressed by ballot. She asked the question, on what grounds do men vote? It is not, she answered, because they are men, for the right to vote has been given to different classes of men at different periods of the world's history. It is not because of intelligence, education, virtue, or prosperity, men vote, she said, because they are human beings with rights to protect and interests to serve. She thought the child who defined government as "Pa," answered as well as if possessed of the wisdom of Solomon.

Dr. Shaw said the women of America were reduced to an absolute degradation beyond that of any other nation. British women, she said, are governed by laws made by British men; French women are governed by laws made by French men and German women by laws made German men, but American women are governed by laws made by any kind of a man that comes to our shores. The lecturer received the saying "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," as being untrue. It was true, she said, as long as the child staid in the cradle, but when it went out into the world, her hand might as well be palsied. She should have the right out of the cradle as well as in it, and the only way she can gain it is by the ballot.

The changes in our government, formed an interesting part of Dr. Shaw's lecture. She said in former days a man was master in his own house, but now the government sets its seal on his food and drink, insists on medical protection, commands vaccination determine working hours of children and adults and makes education compulsory. Government, she said, is becoming the parent of the child. Women as mothers in the home and in fields of industry needed the ballot, she argued. She said no objection was made to woman's work when it became lucrative work. The exploitation of woman's work in the factories and sweat shops could be controlled if she had the ballot. She argued that all the people knew better than a part of the people what all the people need, that no class of men will trust their interests to any other class, even if they be fathers, sons and brothers. She denounced the prejudice and conservation that forbade the woman to vote as well as the false education for centuries that made the woman hesitate. For herself, she said, she knew no easier way to get her will in a lady-like manner than by putting a piece of paper in a ballot box. The depositing of the vote was but a registering of accumulated knowledge, she said, and there is no other class in this country as well qualified to exercise the franchise intelligently as the women of the United States today.

MRS. SARAH HYLER DIES AGED SEVENTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Mrs. Sarah A. Hyler, widow of the late William Hyler, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. William Nevius, 210 Elmwood place, Monday in her seventy-eight year Mrs. Hyler is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Nevius and Miss Emma Hyler, and one son, John Hyler, of 700 West Front street. The funeral services will be held at the home of Mrs. Nevius on Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiating. The interment will take place at South Branch on Friday morning.

Mrs. Hyler had been a resident of this city for the past seventeen years and during that time had made many friends. She survived her husband nine years.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS ORGANIZED WITH GEORGE L. BABCOCK AS PRESIDENT

Board of Trade and Merchants Association Unite for Better Service—Alexander Gilbert and William L. Saunders the Vice Presidents and E. M. Laing Treasurer.

A new association, one which will have much to do with the future of Plainfield, was born last night in Coward's Hall, when the Merchant's Association and the Board of Trade on a motion by William Jeffery, became merged in one large organization to be known as the Chamber of Commerce, of Plainfield. Officers serve until January 1 were elected and the constitution and by-laws of the new organization were adopted after consideration of both bodies. George L. Babcock was the unanimous choice of the meeting for president and on a motion of J. V. E. Vanderhoef Secretary Herr cast a ballot for Mr. Babcock. The other officers are first vice-president, Alexander Gilbert; second vice-president, William L. Saunders; treasurer, E. M. Laing. The secretary who will be a salaried official will later be appointed by the Board of Directors which is yet to be elected by ballot.

The Merchants Association's meeting preceded that of the trade board and after the regular routine of business had been disposed of the matter of merging with the other organization was brought up by H. P. Greenwood. Mr. Schuldenfrei suggested that the association retain its identity through a board of trustees to be appointed for the purpose of retaining the incorporation. As this is provided for in the new constitution the matter was allowed to pass. However, when Mr. Greenwood suggested that legal advice be had on the status of the present organization, W. S. Angleman promptly declared that the incoporation papers had never been filed because several signatures were still lacking on the charter.

A member of the Merchants Association put himself on record as being against the merger because of the possible loss to the retail merchants of the credit system which had safeguarded them in the past, but it was shown conclusively that the future work of the new chamber would make the system even more effective, this member withdrew his objections. The merger will bring about economies in the operation of the new association which will make it much more effective than when two organizations were operative. Herman Schwed declared that "anything that is for the benefit of the city of Plainfield is for the benefit of the merchants," and was loudly applauded for the sentiment.

F. A. Duttenhoffer made a speech in which he declared for the new chamber giving several cogent reasons why every member of both boards should be in favor of the merger and the motion to merge was carried unanimously. It was then resolved to hold a final meeting of the Merchants Association on December 29, at which time the association will be wound up and the funds left over disposed of as the meeting shall direct.

Immediately at the close of this meeting the Board of Trade was called to order by President Jeffery and Mr. Schwed reported for the executive committee in favor of merging the two associations. The report was filed. Mr. Jeffery then spoke at length on the objects the new chamber had in view saying in part: "It is proposed to incorporate a Chamber of Commerce which will give us a standing in the community and give our community a standing in the State. It will concentrate money, effort and time in the upbuilding of Plainfield, which I take it, is the desire of every business man in the city. There is work for us to do. While serving on the recent grand jury, I had the pleasure of meeting the general Passenger Agent of the Central Railroad who informed me that in 1905, Westfield had 400 commuters. Now there are 800. In 1905, Plainfield had 2,200 commuters and today the same number. Westfield has doubled while we have remained stationary. The work therefore is obvious.

"This is an auspicious occasion for civic enterprise and one that betokens a great future for Plainfield, North Plainfield and the surrounding territory. Those of us who have represented the two associations during the past year have reason to feel proud of the signal successes of both organizations and of the actual work accomplished. The questions relative to improvements which are needed in the city, notably the street lighting, police patrol, insurance rates as they relate to the efficiency of the fire department; personal taxation and brick pavements and other things, have all had our time and consideration but the results accomplished have not been altogether satisfactory. As one great powerful body we can do much more."

Mr. Jeffery enumerated the many things already accomplished and ended by saying that the coming year ought to witness the broadening of the work and the bringing of many more people to the city to enjoy the blessing of living in such a community.

In order to facilitate the business of the meeting Mr. Jeffrey called upon Judge Ulrich to take the chair. Judge Ulrich appointed A. M. Herr, secretary pro-tem, and addressed the members of both organizations. He thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him and said that in order to insure success the new organization should lay a sure foundation for the work before it. "In order to have a strong and effective Chamber it will be necessary to strengthen our membership," he said, "to the end that every citizen having the welfare of the city at heart may be identified with the organization. We ought to invite every manufacturer, every business and professional man, and more especially our representative citizens who daily come in contact with the movements and problems of the great metropolis, to unite with us, become a part of us and advise and labor with us so that our purpose to promote the welfare of the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield, by such ways and means for the commercial and municipal advancement of the city and bring citizens into closer community relationship."

Following the speech of Judge Ulrich Mr. Jeffery moved the merger of the two bodies and the motion was unanimously carried and after some discussion and a few suggestions the constitution and by-laws, as drafted by the special committee were adopted by a viva voce vote. The election of officers followed. Mr. Jeffery, in nominating the two vice-presidents, said that he was doing so without the consent of Messrs. Gilbert and Saunders, but said he hoped that neither of these public spirited men would decline. The board of directors will be elected at the meeting to be held on December 1.

THOMAS SOCCER TEAM DEFEATS PLAINFIELD A.F.C.

By superior all-round work the Thomas A. C., of Kearney defeated the Plainfield A. F. C. on the Clinton avenue grounds Saturday afternoon by the score of 3 goals to 0. The contest was an Intereity Amateur Soccer League fixture and the victory gave the Kearny eleven undisputed right to second place. A high wind bothered both teams. McDonald started the scoring by getting the ball to the net after five minutes of play.

In the second half Brady duplicated this feat after the eleven had been going ten minutes, and shortly before the end of the game E. Thomas scored. A feature of the game was the defense work of Hosle centre halfback of the local team.

The line-up:

Plainfield		Thomas
Smith	goal	Elsfeld
Craig	right fullback	Lambertson
Braidwood	left fullback	Sommers
Crawford	rigth fullback	Rentno
Hosie	centre halfback	Eadie
McComb	left halfback	Rutan
Spalding	right wing	Laird
Mackay	right wing	Arnot
Heaume	centre	McDonald

Score at end of first half—Thomas A. C. 1, Plainfield A. F. C. 0. Final score—Thomas A. C. 3, Plainfield A. F. C. 0, Referee—J. Johnson, of Nairn A. A. Linemen—J. McHeice, of Plainfield A. F. C., and J. McLaughlin, of Thomas A. C. Goals—McDonald, Brady, Thomas. Time of halves—45m.

Took An Involuntary Bath.

Charles Long, of Somerset place, who is familiarly known as "Shorty," took an involuntary bath in the freezing waters of Green brook, Sunday afternoon. He was standing on the bank in the rear of the French building, deeply absorbed in meditation, when several colored men picked him up and hurled him in the stream. He scrambled out as best he could, but no one was in sight when he cleared the water from his eye. He told his troubles to Chief Weiss and the officer is looking for the culprits.

Miss Northrop Engaged.

REV. DR. VANCE BIDS HIS FAREWELL

Again declaring that he was leaving his Newark charge under Divine direction, and asking that the same loyalty be shown his successor as had been given to him, Rev. Dr. James I. Vance preached his farewell sermon as pastor of the North Reformed church Sunday morning.

Dr. Vance and his family left for Tennessee last night, and he will occupy the pulpit of his new charge, the First Presbyterian church of Nashville, next Sunday.

A congregation which made the seating capacity of the edifice wholly inadequate and which filled the aisles, was present at the farewell services. The occasion marked the closing of Dr. Vance's ten years of service in the local pulpit.

Dr. Vance took as his text Acts xx. 32, being a portion of St. Paul's charge to the elders upon the apostle's departure for Ephesus.

"And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified."

The clergyman referred to the North Reformed church as possessing great resources in numerical strength, missionary activity and in influence among the denominations of the city. The opportunities before it were great, the retiring pastor declared, as well as the difficulties which confront it.

Referring to the church being now without a pastor, and the interval which will elapse before his successor is chosen, Dr. Vance said:

"The interim will be a testing time. Perhaps some may fall away during the period, but now is the time to show your loyalty and devotion.

"There could be no more serious reflection on my work here than for this church to be half-filled next Sunday. Do not imagine that you are paying compliments to me by growing lukewarm toward this church to which I have given ten years of my life. When my successor comes do not make him too conscious that he had a predecessor, but give him liberty that he may be himself. Let him preach not in an atmosphere, put of prayerful sympathy."

Dr. Vance added that he was going away because of an inner conviction that God was calling him to labor in Nashville.

"I am not satisfied with my career here. I have never been satisfied with my career anywhere, and I never expect to be satisfied. But I am not going away because I am dissatisfied or discouraged with my work in Newark. I have grown to love my beautiful home and church, and I doubt if I shall ever be pastor again of a congregation in so beautiful an edifice. Here two of my children have confessed Christ and partaken of their first communion, and during the last ten years I have had the joy of welcoming some 1,500 souls into the fellowship of this church."

In conclusion Dr. Vance prayed that the richest blessing of heaven might rest upon his successor.

In the evening another big congregation attended and bid Dr. Vance good-by at its close. The members of the North Reformed Cadet Corps, of East Newark, attended the evening service in full uniform.

CARNEGIE GIFT CITY'S SHAME.

At the ground-breaking for the Lincoln statue in East Orange, Saturday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Fred Clare Baldwin criticised East Orange for its failure to provide by public subscription the money still needed for the monument and incidentally scored the citizens for having allowed Andrew Carnegie to give them a free library. The immense wealth of the city constituted a good reason, he said, why Carnegie's aid should not be accepted and ample funds for the monument should have been subscribed long ago. He said there was something "unfathomable" about the people of East Orange.

Home From Western Trip.

F. L. C. Martin, William Mazzocco, F. S. McCarthy and Edward S. F. Randolph, have returned home from a western automobile business trip. While away they inspected the 1911 models in factories at Chicago, Racine, Milwaukee, Detroit and Pontiac, Mich.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

Thanksgiving Day services will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Thursday morning at 10.30 o'clock, as usual. The session of the church has decided to hold such a service every year for the members of the church and congregation, as well as others who live in that part of the city.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor, will preach the sermon, and the quartet choir will be present and take part as usual, singing anthems appropriate to the season. This service will last just one hour, giving those who desire full opportunity to attend and return to their homes in time for dinner.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

On account of an outbreak of scarlet fever in the neighborhood, the public school at Jobstown has been closed.

A fire burned over fifty acres of meadows, including several acres of cornstalks, near National Park Friday afternoon.

Pleading guilty to the larceny of two stickpins from the jewelry store of J. K. Hemmert, 504 Federal street, John H. Volker, of Buffalo, received a suspension of sentence from Judge Joline in Camden Friday.

Struck in the left eye with a brick during a street brawl between a number of boys, Joseph Di Luil, eight years old, of 322 Mechanic street, Camden, was so badly injured that physicians at Cooper Hospital said Friday night that he would probably lose the sight of the eye. His assailants escaped.

To investigate the suspicious death to William Hansman, an aged civil war veteran, who was found dead lying in a spring at the city park, Bridgeton, Coroner Henry Mater held an inquest Friday afternoon. The jury heard the testimony of three suspects who were with Hansman and returned a verdict that he came to death from exposure.

The Ocean County Board of Freeholders have accepted the ten miles of road from Lakewood to Toms River, built with money from the State Road Repair Funds, taken from automobile license fees. This completes the improved road from New York to Atlantic City along the coats, with the Lakewood detour. The road the whole way through Ocean County, from Point Pleasant to Tuckerton, one on the north line of the county and the other on the south line, is county and State road.

Bridge builders are evidently not anxious to do work for the Burlington County Freeholders, as developments this week have shown. The freeholders asked for proposals on the construction of a new floodgate bridge at Wallace's Mill, in Chesterfield township, and the rebuilding of the Race bridge in Vincentown, but when the time arrived for the awarding of the contracts there were no bids. The Chesterfield proposition has been dropped, but another effort is to be made to get bids on the Vincentown work.

Sheriff William W. Worrell is endeavoring to give the taxpayers of Burlington county an economical administration of the county jail at Mt. Holly, and during the past year the cost of the board of prisoners was $12,551.55, a trifle less than 10½ cents a day for each prisoner. A few years ago, under the fee system, the county paid 20 cents a day and it was twice advanced until it reached 30 cents a day during the term of Sheriff John J. Norcross, the last to serve under the old system. Sheriff Worrell has more than cut this cost in half, with fewer prisoners to feed.

SETS HOUSEHOLD GOODS AFIRE.

After a quarrel with his wife on Saturday morning, Daniel J. Stewart, a machinist who resides at 1027 East Grand street, Elizabeth, lugged all the household furniture into the back yard and piling it up made a big bonfire of the goods.

The fire attracted a crowd. Stewart watched the blaze until everything had been consumed and then re-entered the house. His wife, meanwhile, fearful of her life, fled to the house of a neighbor for protection.

Stewart was arrested after a fight with policemen and locked up in a cell. His wife is now with her widowed sister, Mrs. John Skillen, of 813 Oak street.

DOES ANYBODY RECALL MRS. HONORE WILLIAMS?

If there is any one in Montclair who knows where Mrs. Honore Williams lives that person will confer a great favor on the United States postal authorities by giving the address to Postmaster Herbert H. Biddulph, of that city.

Every mail-carrier in Montclair on his rounds Friday, collected from four to ten postal cards, each bearing the single address, "Mrs. Honore Williams, Montclair," the total making a stack of nearly 100. What is puzzling the postal employes is where to deliver the missives, as they never before heard of such a person.

Many Montclair women, however, heard from a "Mrs. Williams" last Wednesday morning. This was after a dairy company sent invitations to women to visit its dairies in New York State. Nearly every one getting an invitation received a letter on the day the start was to be made advising against the trip, on the grounds that such a visit would be disloyal to Montclair, as the town is in litigation with the milk producers to compel giving the tuberculosis test to cattle. When the women met on the train and compared notes each found the other had been the recipients of an identical letter and that the missive was signed by "Mrs. Honore Williams."

Members of the party decided it would be a good joke to send postal cards to "Mrs. Honore Williams," and unknowingly they made the postoffice authorities the victim of the jest.

PREVENT MILK FEVER.

May Develop Even After Precautions Have Been Taken, and Regular Outfit For Treatment Should Be on Hand.

To a great extent it is possible to prevent milk fever by using care in drying off the cow, providing she is handled up to and through the parturition period in a most careful manner. No large amount of milk should ever be left in the udder when the cow is dried off.

An excellent precaution against milk fever is to give the cow a pound of epsom salts in a half gallon of warm water a day or two prior to freshening. If the salts are given in the form of a drench great care should be taken not to strangle the cow. It is much safer and more advisable to use a probang (a long tube made for the purpose by veterinary houses), which will carry the medicine direct to the stomach.

But no system of prevention has yet been learned that is absolutely certain to guard off milk fever at all times and under every condition. Cows that give a large flow of very rich milk may and often do have milk fever even when every precaution has been taken. The only safe method of handling milk fever is to use the precautions above outlined and then have on hand a milk fever outfit, so that if the precautions fail the cure may be administered at once. The outfit consists essentially of a thin tube for insertion in the teat and a rubber bulb to squeeze the air through the tube, with some filtering attachment to purify the air thus pumped into the udder.

There was a time when 98 per cent of the cows which were attacked with milk fever died. At the present time, by the use of the simple air treatment, at least 98 per cent of the cows having milk fever may be saved if the air is pumped into their udders in a cleanly manner and thoroughly before the cases has reached advanced stages. So simple is this treatment and so certain it is a cure that dairymen are now enabled to feed their cows much better during their resting period before freshening and as a result have their cows in so much better condition of flesh, stamina and strength stored up that they are enabled to secure much better work from their cows than they were in the past, when it was necessary to keep the cows in a poor condition to eliminate the danger of losing them from milk fever.

KEEPS PAINT BRUSH WET.

Arrangement of Wire Drawn Over Top of Pail Will Keep the Brush Submerged.

The accompanying drawing illustrates a very simple device adapted to suspend a brush in a paint pail so that the bristles will be submerged in the paint and thus be prevented from drying.

It consists of a wire frame adapted to be supported on the top of the pail and bent back upon itself a number of times to form fingers, between which the paint brushes may be secured at any point desired.

Fit the Cow For Winter.

More than a day of fine weather season the milk cow now needs a plentiful supply of feed. She is preparing to go into the winter season and should do so in her best physical condition. It is much easier and more profitable to keep an animal in good condition than it is to put her in such condition.

Milk or cream that has become warm should never be poured back into the bottle of cold milk.

What filth is dissolved in the milk will remain to soil it and injure the flavor and keeping qualities.

The percentage of fat in the milk of a cow is evidently fixed by two things—her breed and individuality.

With the year around dairying good stables are necessary, where the cows can be fed and milked in a comfortable place.

When cows are given less food than they require for maintenance and production the milk production must suffer or the cow.

A cow should have at least six weeks vacation between milking periods. If she is milked constantly she will not last long.

A nervous cow is preferable to a stupid one. The chances are that she will give more and better milk than her dull, mopish sister.

It is of supreme importance that the dairy stock should be handled gently. Wild and intractable animals are usually the result of hard handling.

How to Have a Warm House

First—Install a BOYNTON "Square Pot," Patented, Furnace in the basement.

Then—in the morning before business and in the evening before retiring, step down and turn the BOYNTON clinker-less, ash-cutting grate. This clears the fire perfectly. Now put in a little coal; set the dampers for the degree of heat you wish, and leave the to do the rest. The BOYNTON is the most reliable house-heater known. It consumes less coal and gives more heat for the coal consumed, than any other heater on the market.

The BOYNTON "Square Pot" never boils dead fire. BOYNTON Boilers are now equipped with this same economical fire box and quick clearing grate. See your dealer about BOYNTON "Square Pot" furnaces and boilers.

The DAIRY

FEEDING THE DAIRY CALF.
Should Be Given Fresh Milk Warmed to Blood Heat at Regular Intervals, Preferably Three Times Daily.

The calf that is intended for the dairy should not be forced to maturity as rapidly as the one intended for beef purposes. It is an established fact that animals when young acquire the habit of taking on fat and maintaining it, which is not a desirable quality for cows in the dairy herds.

However, do not allow the calf that is to be grown for meat to lose any part of its "calf fat," which, if maintained by proper feeds and feeding, will be quite sure to make a desirable as well as profitable feeder when matured.

The young calf should be fed three times a day on milk that is fresh and sweet and warmed to blood heat or 98 degrees. This is important. Irregular feeding with milk that is too cold or too warm is sure to cause serious stomach and bowel troubles, which in some instances cannot be corrected in weeks or possibly months of treatment.

Care should be exercised as to the amount of milk given the calf. Small quantities, with regular intervals between feeds, will secure best results in gains.

Many make the mistake of not allowing the calf to take the first two or three days' milk from its dam. This contains colostrum, an element which is necessary and is provided by nature in the mother's milk to move the bowels and establish a normal action of the digestive organs. This element is only secreted by the mother in her flow of milk during the first days after giving birth to her young. The calf must have it or it will suffer for the loss in spite of good care and feeds.

A healthy calf on proper feed should make an average gain of two to three pounds per day for the first month or six weeks of its life, especially where the animal is intended for the block, and should attain a weight of 500 pounds when twelve months old. Such results are secured in many instances where the calves are given good care from the beginning and the feeds are properly balanced growing rations.

Whole milk with its expensive butter fat is too costly at present prices to feed calves after they are a week or ten days old. New milk contains a trifle less than 4 per cent of its weight in a fat or oil, which may be substituted in a measure with a combination of grain that contains fat producing elements.

There are a number of milk substitutes or calf meals on the markets that may be fed in combination with skim or separator milk, which will replace the butter fats that are naturally secreted by the cow. Flax meal is sometimes used for this purpose.

These milk substitutes should be fed in very small quantities in the beginning, say one tablespoonful and gradually increased to two or three tablespoonfuls at each feed, as the animal safely digests and assimilates the same.

A properly prepared milk substitute will make separated milk equal to whole milk in the elements of growth and fat and will cost less than one-half the price. This has been demonstrated again and again by the best stockmen in this and other countries. Send butter fat to the creamery and substitute it with a well balanced grain ration for the calves.

VALUE OF CREAM SEPARATOR
Does Away With Large Number of Receptacles For Milk, Is Easily Cleaned and Takes Up Very Little Space.

Those who have never used a cream separator do not know of its actual value in dairy work. One great economy in using the cream separator in summer is the small space required to keep the product to be saved. The separating is done immediately after milking, and all of the skimmilk not wanted for household use is fed to the calves, pigs or poultry.

There is no trouble in storing it away for the cream to rise and no large number of milk vessels to clean and handle. The separator, of course, must be cleaned, but the work of cleaning is not nearly so great as the work of cleaning all the milk vessels necessary for holding the milk it takes care of. There are brushes for cleaning which make the work easy, and there is no drying, as scalding water is used and the heat from this dries the parts without the use of a drying cloth.

ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

Graduates of Plainfield Seminary Form Permanent Society.

MRS. LEIGHTON CALKINS HEAD.

Other Officers Elected—To Give a Luncheon Once a Year—Over One Hundred Women Present.

Another organization which will take front rank among the many social societies in this city was organized permanently yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John M. Whitson, of Central avenue. The new association will be known as the Alumnae Association of Plainfield Seminary. The constitution and by-laws were adopted and officers for a year elected. The object of the association is to further the interests of the seminary and to enable those who have been members of the school to keep in touch with one another.

More than one hundred women were present yesterday all of whom were graduates of the seminary or had studied there for more than two years. Mrs. Leighton Calkins was chosen temporary chairman and the first business of the meeting was the adoption of the constitution and by-laws. These rules which had been prepared by a special committee of which Mrs. Calkins was chairman were adopted with few amendments to the original text.

The article referring to membership in the organization says: "Anyone who has completed satisfactorily a course of not less than two years of study or who has been an instructor for not less than three years shall be eligible for election to membership."

The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows:

President, Mrs. Leighton Calkins; first vice-president, Miss Florence Stuart; second vice-president, Mrs. Frank Hubbard; secretary, Miss Edith Griscom; treasurer, Mrs. W. L. Tyler. These officers also constitute the executive committee. Miss E. E. Kenyon, principal emeritus of the Seminary, is given all the privileges of the association without any of its duties. The nominating committee was composed of Mrs. L. H. VanBuren, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, and Miss Ursula Rowland.

Two names were presented for consideration for the honor of the presidential chair, Mrs. Samuel McCutcheon and Mrs. Calkins. Mrs. McCutcheon withdrew in favor of Mrs. Calkins, saying she would be unable to give the attention the position demanded. Mrs. Calkins' selection was then made unanimous and the secretary cast the one ballot. Mrs. Calkins has devoted much time and care to the work of organizing the new society and much of the success attending its completion is due to her efforts. The elections will occur annually on the second Thursday in each November, and a fixture will be the giving of a luncheon once a year in the spring.

WALPOLE ACQUITTED OF ASSAULT CHARGE

Charles Walpole, who on April 28 was accused of having assaulted Motorman Fred Skillman, of a main line trolley car, at Scotch Plains, and who was afterwards indicted by the grand jury, was put on trial Friday at Elizabeth before Judge Atwater and a jury, and after an all-day trial was acquitted. He was represented by S. S. Swackhamer. The case of the State was conducted by Prosecutor Swift.

The witnesses for the State included Tony Giolletti, who told the story of the alleged assault to the local police; Conductor Frank Glassford and Motorman Skillman. These witnesses said that Walpole had created a disturbance on the car at 11:15 at night on April 28 and that he had struck Skillman over the eye with the butt of a whip. Walpole admitted being on the car in company with one James Kitterling and that both of them were under the influence of liquor. He denied having assaulted the motorman.

On cross-examination Mr. Swackhamer drew from the witnesses the fact that they did not see Walpole commit any wrong, but that Kitterling had thrown stones at the car. Walpole produced several witnesses who testified in his favor. None of them knew anything against the character of the accused and did not see him commit the wrong with which he was charged.

The jury was out but a few minutes.

Gossip Angered Him.

For an alleged attempt to assault Louis Antibarbo, a fourteen-year-old Italian boy, Paul Richter, 21, of East End, was arraigned before Judge Kenyon in the city court this morning. Richter denied the charge, claiming he only wanted to get near enough to the boy to have him explain some gossip. Judge Kenyon warned Richter to cease annoying the boy and discharged him.

MARTINE'S TALK THRILLS

Dutch Arms Club Enthused by Prospective United States Senator.

NO LIMIT TO THE CHEERS.

Principle not Greed for Office Actuates "Farmer-Orator"—Freeholder Cutter Wishes Him Success.

If it had been within the power of the Dutch Arms, men's association, of Trinity Reformed church, James E. Martine, who aspires to a seat in the United States Senate to succeed John Kean, would have been unanimously elected Friday, when the "farmer orator" addressed the men of that organization at a social gathering, following the monthly meeting. The reception accorded Mr. Martine was a flattering one, indeed, and if there had been any doubt whatever as to the fitness and popularity for the office he seeks, it was entirely dispelled. He was continually interrupted in his remarks by great applause.

Introducing Mr. Martine, F. S. Cutter, president of the Dutch Arms, referred to the former's aspirations for the office of United States Senator, and said that he felt sure that everyone present would wish him success in his efforts. Having raised the question, Mr. Martine then took the liberty of touching upon the contest which has stirred the people of the State and has called forth newspaper comment from every part of the country. Mr. Martine did this altogether in a partisan vein, although he did say that he was a partisan and loved his party for which he had worked for years.

Referring directly to the contest in which he is engaged, Mr. Martine declared with considerable vigor that it was a principle for which he was fighting, not alone his own individual interest. He believed that the people should have the right of choice of its legislators, and inasmuch as his party had adopted such measure in its platform, he felt it the duty of the party to stand by its declaration and carry out its purpose. Mr. Martine explained in general the present system of government, how State legislatures are formed and how in turn they elect members of the United States Senate. He explained in an interesting way the duties of the executive and legislative branches of the government, giving everyone a clear idea of the same.

In conclusion, Mr. Martine described in eloquent words the greatness and grandeur of this country, of its vast resources, and of its power among the nations of the world.

The second speech was that of H. W. Herrman, teacher of the Men's Bible Conference class at the First Baptist church who gave some valuable hints and suggestions in conducting a men's organization. He interspersed his remarks with several good stories applicable to his subject, and he kept everyone convulsed with laughter. The affair was concluded with a few informal remarks by Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of the church, and the benediction by Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, of this city.

The Dutch Arms held a business meeting earlier in the evening, when an amended constitution was taken up and discussed and laid on the table for one month for adoption. Afterward all adjourned to the primary department where a clam chowder supper was enjoyed. This was served by a committee from the Dutch Arms. The most excellent chowder was made by Mrs. H. R. Maynard and was greatly enjoyed. In addition to the chowder, pumpkin pie and coffe was a pleasing addition to the menu. There were about fifty men present.

PLEASANT SURPRISE FOR MISS HELEN PEARCE.

Miss Helen Pearce, of Essex street, was given a surprise party by twenty-five of her friends last night. Games, music, refreshments formed a combination that rounded out the hours in a delightful way. The affair was arranged by the Misses Helen Ryder, Louise McCormack and Anna Lee and was a complete surprise to Miss Pearce.

Those in attendance were the Misses Agnes Leighs, Anna Lee, Ruth Stryker, Ruth Wean, May Stafford, Louise McCormack, Jeannette Neal, Gertrude Enander, Ora Bush, Evelyn Manley, Elsie Organ, Louise Praed and Messrs. Russell Cose, Fred Van Hoesen, Ernest VanZandt, Sidney Karr, Alfred Manley, Harry Sawyer, Alfred Clark, George Leighs and George [illegible].

DEMOCRATS CELEBRATED

PARADED ABOUT THE CITY.

Out-of-town Delegations Called to Arrive—Successful Leaders Ride in Auto.

The Democratic jubilee in celebration of the recent election victory, was held Thursday but did not pan out as big as expected. The invited clubs from out of the city failed to put in an appearance and when the parade got started after a half hour's delay there were only 300 men in line. There was plenty of enthusiasm and red fire, however, and the faithful trudged over a long line of march through the principal streets of the city.

The procession was headed by a platoon of police, following a band and a dozen men on horseback in charge of Stonewall Jackson. They preceded an automobile carrying the Democratic county chairman, Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, and the following successful candidates: George W. V. Moy, mayor-elect; William E. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield, Congressman-elect, and Hugh McLoughlin and Calvin E. Brodhead, Assemblymen-elect. After the auto came the rank and file bearing brooms and banners. Some of the transparencies bore such inscriptions as "Wilson, 50,000, that's all," "O, You Jim Martine," and others in the same strain. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps contributed martial music and assisted in serenading in front of the homes of prominent Democrats.

The parade was viewed by large crowds in the centre of the city, but many grew tired of waiting before it reached Front street and left for home. Only a short meeting was held in the Democratic club rooms on its return, owing to the lateness of the hour. Addresses were made by the successful candidates and several of the Democratic leaders.

ASSEMBLYMEN-ELECT TO HOLD CONFERENCES

It has been quite settled, though no official call has been sent out, that there will be a meeting of the Democratic Assemblymen-elect of New Jersey on November 29. The formal call will be issued by Assemblyman Edward Kenny, of Hudson county, who will be the dean of the Senate next he has thus far not made known when he will act.

According to Republican plans, the meeting of the minority side of the House will be held in December at the same time that the Republicans in the State will get together to plan their programme for the opening meeting of that body. The Democratic Senators and Senators-elect probably will meet at the time the Assemblymen of their side of the House will meet, late this month. It is likely that all the meetings will be held in Trenton.

The make-up of the two bodies of the Legislature, as to presiding officers, floor leaders and the most important of the offices to be filled, has been practically decided upon, and the meetings will be chiefly to ratify the tentative programme which has been unofficially arrived at through the informal meeting of members of the Legislature in Trenton and elsewhere in the State.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD A TEA AND SALE

Under the auspices of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, a tea and sale was held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, on Central avenue Friday afternoon. Home-made cake, candy and fancy articles found a ready sale among the large number of people present.

During the afternoon an enjoyable program was opened with a piano solo by Mrs. J. Harvey Buchanan. Mrs. G. H. Campbell followed with a reading from "Uncle Remus," and some of her own dialect stories from the Southland. Mrs. Chester K. Shreve, of the First Baptist church choir, then rendered two pleasing selections, accompanied by appropriate monologue by Mrs. Robert L. Lowry closed the program. These committees were in charge:

Fancy table, Mrs. Clifford Manning, chairman; Mrs. B. J. Phelps, Miss Alice Drake. Cake table, Mrs. Robin C Brown, chairman; Miss Mabelle Cubberly, Miss Carrie Dennant, Mrs. Allen VanderhoeF. In the dining room were Mrs. Gifford Cooley and Miss Anna Conant.

Miss Margaret Townsend and Miss Blanche Buttfield, of the class of 1911, have been elected members of the French club of Smith College.

MR. RANDOLPH'S LECTURE

"Ancient Carthage and Modern Tunis" Subject of Instructive Talk.

SOME EXCELLENT PICTURES.

An Absorbingly Interesting and Instructive Discourse is Heard by Several Hundred People.

Several hundred people enjoyed an intensely interesting lecture, the third in the series given in aid of the building fund of the Temple Baptist church, at the First Baptist church Thursday by L. V. F. Randolph telling the story of "Ancient Carthage and Modern Tunis." His talk, based on personal observations and historical facts, was followed by a series of stereopticon views from photographs taken by his daughter, Miss Randolph, during a motor tour through the northern part of Africa.

The photographs from which the slides were made were remarkable in that many of them were snap shots with a camera whose product measured but three-quarters of an inch square. The liliputian prints were enlarged to two inches and magnified on the screen to a twelve foot dimension and lost none of their detail in the process.

Mr. Randolph gave an outline of the early history of Carthage, its people, customs, wars and final extinction by burning which historians attribute to the Romans after the defeat of Hannibal, and lost his long fight after having victory within his grasp. Sixty years after the burning of the city which had been the home of three-quarters of a million of people its site was a naked pasture. Rome then attempted to recolonize the city but with varying success. Carthage became so prosperous and handsome that it disputed with Alexandria for the honor of being the second city in the Roman Empire in importance.

The long wars finally ended in the massacre of even the women of Carthage and the burning of the city followed. It is due almost entirely to the White Fathers, a Catholic Fraternity, that the history of ancient Carthage has been unearthed. These priests have excavated the ruins in a scientific manner and have translated from the relics some of the most essential facts relative to the last days, 800 years before Christ, of the Carthaginian form of government.

The speaker exhibited some of the pottery which has been dug up by the white fathers among the pieces being an amphorae (water bottle) a vase, a primitive lamp and a delicately made glass tear bottle. Another object which excited the curiosity of the women folks was a pair of silver earrings, bought from a woman on the road from Carthage to Tunis. The earrings, about three inches in diameter, were attached to a silver chain which the woman wore to fasten her hair while the much prized ornaments dangled from the lobes of her ears.

While motoring through and along the coast of Tripoli Mr. Randolph had an opportunity to observe the efficiency of the French police. His motor car was surrounded by a menacing crowd at one time, but a single word from the officer served to disperse the mob. This officer rules alone among thousands of Arabs and his authority is absolute.

Among the pictures exhibited were several in which the speaker appeared in his interesting costume. All these pictures were new and have never been shown before. They were admirably handled by A. V. Searing, Jr., with his modern stereopticon. Many school children attended the lecture the gallery having been reserved for them.

The next and final entertainment of the series will be a musical evening the date for which will be announced later. All the lectures have been well attended and have added a good sum to the fund for which they were given.

HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL IS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The annual harvest home festival of Muhlenberg Hospital, held at the Nurses' Home, yesterday afternoon, was the usual success. During the hours from 3 to 6 o'clock, the home was thronged with friends of the hospital and there was the usual supply of generous donations, including fruits, vegetables, cereals, canned goods, while a considerable sum of money was also donated for the use of the institution.

During the afternoon the Women's Auxiliary Board received the visitors and served tea. The social features were enjoyed by all present. The hospital larder was well filled with necessary things and the management of the institution is grateful for the generous response to the annual appeal.

Jonas Lie Honored.

During the recent visit of the Commissioner General of the United States to the exhibition of the paintings by Jonas Lie in New York city, No. 4, "Setting Out to Sea at Dawn" was invited to the International Exposition to be held at Rome in 1911. Mr. Lie is an American artist living and having a studio in this city.

UNION COUNTY RETURNS

MOY'S PLURALITY WAS 116.

Thompson Won Out for Assembly by 67 Votes Out of a Total of Over 20,000 Cast in the County.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Democratic candidate for Governor, received a plurality of 3,316 in Union county, according to the official returns completed Thursday by Union County Board of Canvassers. Governor Fort's plurality was but 542. The total vote for Lewis was 9,393, and for Wilson 12,269. The county is normally Republican by 1,600.

Judge Runyon was defeated by 903 votes in Union county as the Republican Congressional candidate. His opponent, William E. Tuttle, Jr., received 11,975, while he got 11,072 votes. Three years ago Fowler carried the county by 2,000.

One of the big surprises was the close fight between Lloyd Thompson, Republican, and Abram Morris, Democratic as the third man for the Assembly. Thompson received a plurality of but 67 votes out of a total of over 20,000 cast. Morris has not yet asked for a recount. Brodhead and McLoughlin, both Democrats, were the other two winners for the Assembly.

The total Assembly vote follows: Meisel, Rep., 10,869; Schwartz, R., 10,999; Thompson, R. 11,536; Brodhead, D., 12,048; McLoughlin, D., 11,891; Morris, D. 11,469.

George W. V. Moy, Bi-partisan and Democrat, for mayor of Plainfield, defeated Coriell, Republican, by 116 votes. Moy received a total of 1,991 and Coriell 1,875. DeMers for city Judge on all tickets received a total of 2,661 votes. J. O. Stevens, Democrat, was defeated by B. vanD. Hedges Republican, for the health board by 1,242 votes. Stevens' total being 1,331, while that of Hedges was 3,573.

The councilmanic vote follows:

For coroner, Vail, R., received 11,589 in the county and Lamy, D., 11,477.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB FOR MARTINE FOR SENATOR

The Democratic Club has passed the following resolution, copies of which have been sent to every Democratic club in the State:

"Resolved, That we the Plainfield Democratic Club, hereby approve the candidacy of James E. Martine, as United States Senator from New Jersey.

"For years the Democrats of this State have urged the selection of senators by popular vote, and three years so a law was passed to make this effective. In pursuance of this law Mr Martine received a clear majority over all competitors at recent primries. This was a vote of confidence on the part of the people and is the duty of the members of the Legislature to obey this mandate; it is the voice of the people and any party will be false to its pledg if it is not obeyed.

"Mr. Martine needs no introduction to the people of this State. He is a man of the highest honor and integrity, an orator and debator of greatability; a student of public affairs a Democrat who has lived his whole life for the success of Democratic principles, and a gentleman known throughout the whole State. If elected to this office he will be an hoor to the State of New Jersey and t the Senate of the United States"

GEBHARDT COMES OUT FOR JAS. E. MARTINE

In publicly announcing his intention to vote for James E. Martine for United States Senator, William C. Gebhardt, late Senator from Hunterdon county, made clear yesterday his position on the matter. Mr. Gebhardt said:

"I consider that the primaries settled the United States Senatorship just as much as the election in Hunterdon county last fall settled my election. It is not a question whether Mr. Martine is better fitted or less well fitted than others that might be named. The people have voted to give him this position and as one of the representatives of the people I cannot do otherwise than carry out their expressed wishes, and it seems to me that every other Democratic member of the Legislature must in honor take the same course.

When a woman loses her temper it is a safe bet that she most certainly possesses one.

PORCH CLIMBERS GET MONEY AND JEWELRY

Porch climbers, of which this newspaper printed a warning several weeks ago at the instance of Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, gained an entrance to the home of A. V. D. Honeyman, on Third place, last Thursday while the family was at church, and got away with $30.50 in money and several articles of jewelry, including some valuable stick pins. The house was gone over from cellar to garret, but the discriminating thief or thieves took care to remove nothing but what was easily concealed in the pocket.

The roguery was discovered on the return from church of Mr. Honeyman, but it puzzled him for a long time to learn how entrance had been effected. When the matter was reported to police headquarters Patrolmen McDonald and Dobson were put on the job. They found that while all the doors and windows on the first floor of the house were securely fastened, the bathroom window in the second floor was open and marks on the sill and window casing furnished ample proof of porch climbers.

There is no clue upon which to work to apprehend the intruders, but Chief Kiely would again like to emphasize the necessity of seeing to it that your windows and doors are securely fastened at night or when absent from home in the daytime.

PLAINFIELD COUPLE WED AT MIRAMAR, PORTO RICO

Many Plainfield relatives and friends have received announcements of the marriage of Miss Addie Weaver, daughter of Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, of this city, and Walter Nelson Martin, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Porto Rico. The ceremony was performed at the home of the groom in Miramar, Porto Rico, on Thursday, November 3, and the announcements reached this city yesterday. The couple will be "at home" at the above place after December 1.

The bride left Plainfield several weeks ago for Miramar, where she planned to be married to Mr. Martin. Both Mr. and Mrs. Martin are well known here. The former left Plainfield about twelve years ago for Porto Rico, where he has since been engaged in the produce and provision business and has been successful. During the past few months he erected a handsome home at Miramar, where hre and his bride will reside.

Mrs. Martin was formerly a trained nurse. She and Mr. Martin were close friends here as boy and girl and after going to Porto Rico, ey continued to correspond, until the date for the wedding was fixed.

GRAND JUROR JEFFERY PRESENTED WITH TWINS

The members of the Union County Grand Jury, together with several county officials, as guests, gave a dinner at the Hotel St. Regis, New York, last night, marking the completion of their work for this term. Those present from Plainfield included George L. Babcock, Armstrong Mulford, Thad. Doane, Jr., *William Jeffery and County Republi*can Chairman F. H. Smith.

W. C. Hope, general passenger agent of the New Jersey Central, was the efficient toastmaster, and his witticisms kept everyone in the best of humor. During the evening there was presented to Charles Ruse, of Elizabeth, foreman of the jury, a handsome silver loving cup, while William Jeffery, whose home has just been blessed by the arrival of twin girls, was remembered in an appropriate manner. He was presented with two doll babies and a suitable set of resolutions. The favors of the evening were miniature turkeys. George L. Babcock received a fountain pen for his ability to run automobiles exceeding the speed limit and not get caught.

Besides those already mentioned, there were present Judge E. S. Atwater, County Clerk J. C. Calvert, Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, Sheriff Robert Kirtland, County Chairman Frank H. Smith, Deputy Sheriff William Wright and Robert Eaton, clerk of the court.

Settled Out of Court.

The charge brought against Louise and William Locke by John A. Zeller, of South Plainfield, for alleged stealing of cabbages from Zeller's farm on October 14, has been settled out of court by the payment of the five dollars damages claimed by Mr. Zeller. The action was brought before Justice of the Peace William E. Smith.

Will Hold a Bazaar.

A fair and bazaar will be held at the Netherwood Reformed church, Thursday, December 1. This will afford an excellent opportunity to secure articles suitable for Christmas gifts.

HEPTASOPHS CELEBRATE

Class of Thirty-Five Initiated at Conclave Last Night.

DR. B. P. MUSE THE SPEAKER.

Tells of Southerners' Reverence for Flag and Urges Observance of Fraternity, Truth and Wisdom.

Protective Conclave, No. 505, Improved Order of Heptasophs, added thirty-five new members to its roster last night at the regular monthly meeting in Coward Hall, and following the initiation a general social time and entertainment were enjoyed. Brother members from Westfield, Trenton, Somerville, Morristown, Brooklyn and Baltimore helped to make the occasion a memorable one with the local lodge and some fine speaking was heard.

Dr. B. P. Muse, of Baltimore, was the principal speaker of the evening and while, as he declared, he was in an atmosphere of Republicanism he felt that away and beyond that was the spirit of brotherhood which knows neither North nor South. Dr. Muse besides being one of the members of the Supreme Executive committee of the order is superintendent of a Sunday school in Baltimore and in his practice as a regular physician says he comes into contact with all sorts and conditions of men, but never in all his travels had he met with such a representative body of men as was his good fortune to encounter in this city. "The evidences of good fellowship which I have observed here," he said, "lead me to believe that you are a fully and truly living up to your high privileges and practicing fraternity, truth and wisdom in their highest sense.

"My father wore the gray uniform of the South during the five years of the conflict between the two sections of the country and I, myself, am a Southerner through and through but I want you to know that Old Glory floats over the people of the south today who are proud to flock to its standard and answer the call to arms under its benedictions as quickly if not quicker than you splendid people of the north. ASSAULTED A HEBREW

ON ARLINGTON AVE. TROLLEY

Sunday Afternoon Diversion a Costly One for Brothers— Victim's Wounds Dressed at Muhlenberg Hospital.

The eloquent pleading of Counsellor Robert Newton Crane failed to save William Sheehan from the consequences of having enjoyed himself baiting a Hebrew peddler on an Arlington avenue trolley car Sunday and when Owen Sheehan, a brother of William saw the result of his brother's case he pleaded guilty to the same offense and both were fined $15.

The story told by Max Pugden, the Hebrew, who lives at Dog Corners and who has been in business here for six years, was that when he boarded the trolley car at the Watchung avenue stand Wm. Sheehan began to taunt him about his whiskers and when Owen Sheehan joined his brother in the pastime at Fourth and Park avenue, Pugden protested. When the car had reached and was rounding the short curve between Randolph road and Arlington Ave., it gave a lurch which threw Pugden over against Owen Sheehan who nearly fell off the car. Both men then pitched into their victim pounding his head and finally shoving it through the car window resulting in several severe cuts and a blackened eye. The Sheehans then jumped from the car and ran away.

James Geary, James Stanwich, a colored employee of Muhlenberg hospital; Earl Scott, the conductor and Miss Dorothy Ellis testified as to the occurance while the Sheehans had no witnesses to corroborate their side of the story. William Sheehan said in his own defense that he only grabbed the Hebrew after he had seen his attempt to shove his brother off the car. He asserted that the car was traveling at between fifteen and twenty miles an hour which was considered absurd by George Luhr on whose complaint the men were arrested.

Counsellor Crane asked for the dismissal of the charge against William Sheehan, but Judge Runyon instead rebuked the men for gathering to outrage an inoffensive citizen and imposed the fine. Owen Sheehan promptly pleaded guilty of the charge of disorderly conduct and was fined $15 and his brother, William Sheehan, declared the offense a more aggravate attempt to assault of a race [illegible]. PLAINFIELD HIGH FINDS SOMERVILLE HIGH EASY

Plainfield High won their game from Somerville High at Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon by a score of 22 to 0. After the first period of play, when the Somervilla lads got the ball within three yards of the home team's goal, they never had a chance. In this period when their goal was threatened P. H. S. braced up and held their opponents safe. Robinson, in the first period made a record run of the whole length of the field for a touchdown. Clark failed to kick the goal.

In the fourth period, the rest of the scoring, three touchdowns and two goals were made by P. H. S. Berse, Nash, Clarke and Bristol all took turns in rushing the ball around and through the Somerville line and the latter were demoralized.

Somerville played pluckily but Plainfield science was too much for them. The teams were evenly matched in weight.

ORGAN IN USE 40 YEARS PLAYED FOR LAST TIME

After forty years' service as an instrument dedicated to God and used to sound praises unto Him, the organ in Trinity Reformed church was silenced for ever Sunday when the congregation joined in singing "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow," Arthur L. Titsworth playing the organ. The pastor, Rev. Henry T. Brock, had drawn attention to the fact that the familiar strains of the instrument would be heard no more after that day for a large and handsome one had been given as a memorial and would be ready for use by Dec. 15 in all probability. Until such time, the grand piano of the Sunday-school room, will serve the purpose.

The organ which will be removed was placed in the edifice when it was the place of worship for the Congregationalists and has been overhauled several times. For the last quarter of a century, Mr. Titsworth has been the organist and on Christmas day he will play on the memorial organ which is being built by the Tallman Organ company of Brooklyn.

HIS NEW PHILOSOPHY.

I've done quit worrin' over things;
I've fretted over all this earth,
An' laid awake think o' kings
That had to skip for all they's worth,
I've set up nights to figger out
The way the country ought to run—
A'nothin' took th' rightabout
For all th' worryin' I've done.

I've done stopped worryin' over crops—
I got th' headache over wheat
n' corn an' rye an' oats an' hops;
I'd talk to ever'one I'd meet
About th' things that worried me,
An' how I feared hard luck would hit—
An' honest, fur as I can see
I never changed things—not a bit!

I've done stopped worryin' over how
Th' politicians play their tricks;
You don't get me to worry now
About th' nation's politics.
I reckon I've put in more time
Jest worryin' about this land,
It didn't help. I tell you I'm
A-takin' quite another stand.

I've done quit worryin' over wealth,
An' sun an' rain an' wind an' snow,
An' symptoms of my failing health,
An' where to stay an' where to go,
Why all th' things that worries us
Will stay right with us all our days—
An' most o' which we fret an' fus
Don't never happen anyways!

JAMES R. PERINE DEAD

Burial of Grand Chaplin of Sons of Temperance Here Monday.

LIVED HERE FOR MANY YEARS

Charter Member of Howell Division, S. of T.—Stationer here before Retirement—Services at Westfield.

James R. Perine, the last surviving charter member of Howell Division No. 97, Sons of Temperance, of this city, died at the residence of his son, Edward T. Perine on East Dudley avenue, Westfield, on Saturday. Mr. Perine was for a great many years a resident of this city, being engaged in the stationery business here during his early business career. For years he was actively engaged in the temperance work, being prominent in the Sons of Temperance.

Mr. Perine was a widower. After leaving Plainfield he removed to Brooklyn, where he resided for several years prior to going to Westfield to make his home with his son. He was a deacon of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, at the time of his death. When he resided here he was a member and attended the Park avenue Baptist church.

In July, 1909, Mr. Perine was chosen grand chaplain of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance, and in 1877 he was chosen grand worthy patriarch of the order and as such officer visited many sections of the State. He was taken ill at the home of his sister, in Belmar, last summer and had been confined to his son's home in Westfield for several months. Heart trouble was the cause of death.

Mr. Perine's son, Edward T. Perine, was a graduate of the Plainfield High School. He is now deputy State comptroller of New York, being appointed to that position by Former Governor Charles E. Hughes, it being in recognition of his special ability for that kind of work.

Mr. Perine's father, Joseph Perine, was a prominent contractor here in the '60s and '70s. An older brother, George E. Perine, was a noted steel plate engraver. Mrs. J. R. Gassin, of Belmar, is a surviving sister of the departed Mr. Perine was associated in early years with Jesse Hoyt, the western lumberman. Later he was a merchant here, engaging in the book and stationery business in West Front street. He was for years superintendent of Warren chapel and a deacon of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

MRS. L. R. HOWARD WRITES TO HOPE CHAPEL FRIENDS.

At the Sunday-school session at Hope chapel, yesterday, an interesting letter was read from Mrs. L. R. Howard, wife and former pastor, addressed to the committee and members of the congregation of Hope chapel and other friends, in which Mrs. Howard said that "the munificent gift and beautiful letter which was placed in Mr. Howard's hands on Sunday evening, October 30, has touched and pleased us both more than it is possible to tell.

"There is bound to be success in any separation of people who have worked happily together and our case it seemed to be made particularly hard by the necessity of giving up entirely for the time our chosen life work. A feeling that perhaps all we had lived for was proving a failure was hard to avoid. When your letter was received, and the gift and other expressions of appreciation of like spirit, such a feeling was made impossible.

"The surprise felt was only surpassed by the delight it brought to me and who can tell it one more marked evidence of your love and loyalty." In conclusion, Mrs. Howard thanked every member of the chapel and on behalf of her husband and herself wished the chapel continued success.

SAME OLD STORY.

The doctor fondly smiled a smile
And chortles to himself the while.
No more he views the latest styles
Of football with alarm
In spite of all the fans do,
To save the lives of youthful fools
This news he reads from sundry schools:
"The fullback broke his arm."

The undertaker chortles, too,
As he prepares to glue the glue,
E'en though the football rules be changed,
He cries not, "Woe is me!"
For though the football experts claim
It is a gentle, harmless game,
The weekly story reads the same:
"The tackle broke his back."

Knobs for Edam or pineapple cheese are very useful and inexpensive, as are the silver-topped corks for bottles. Grape fruit scissors, egg scissors, ice cream cone dippers, lobster crocks, lobster picks, vichy or ginger ale bottle holders, pepper mills, sandwich tongs and nutmeg graters are a few other articles to be found in silver, any one of which will surely find a hearty welcome from its happy recipient.

RUTGERS SCORES VICTORY OVER ITS OLD TIME RIVAL

Before a crowd of 3,500 wildly cheering spectators, Rutgers defeated its old rival, Stevens, at Hoboken Saturday, by the score of 8-5. A large crowd of Plainfielders witnessed the contest and a keen interest was taken in the outcome by local people. These two institutions are attended by a larger delegation of Plainfield students than any of the other men's colleges.

The fact that Stevens had won the annual football game for the past two years, seemed to put a sprint into the Rutgers players that was responsible for their victory. Stevens outplayed the wearers of the scarlet on the offensive, but the strong defensive work of the Rutgers team kept its opponents from rolling up a large score.

Rutgers scored the first touchdown in the second quarter, when by straight line-bucking, the pigskin was carried across from the 25 yard line. Alverson failed to kick the goal. In the third quarter, Stevens successfully used end runs and aided by a fumble, managed to score a touchdown. The goal was easily kicked.

In the fourth quarter, Stevens gained ground continually but was held on the forty yard line. Rutgers then gained twenty-five yards on an exchange of punts, getting the ball on Stevens' forty yard line. Alverson, who has made a name for himself as a punter, was then called on for a drop kick. The goal was at a difficult angle and the punter was handicapped by a strong side wind. Nevertheless he took the chance and sent the ball directly between the goal posts and won the game. Rutgers kept their goal out of danger for the rest of the game.

The men in the line-up, strong favorite over the Stevens' eleven until Saturday morning when it was announced that Stevens had improved 100 per cent. during the week. Rutgers has made an enviable record this season and from all dope would have beaten Stevens easily, but the Hoboken boys sprang a big surprise on their rivals. Bets were made at even money Saturday morning, while during the week, Rutgers had been the favorite.

By winning this year, Rutgers added one more victory to their long list of wins over Stevens. The New Brunswick college is well in the lead in the annual football games.

STATE TRUST COMPANY PROSPEROUS INSTITUTION

The maiden statement of The State Trust Company just published in accordance with the call of the Department of Banking and Insurance as of November 10, evidences deposits of one hundred and seventy-nine thousand dollars, a splendid showing for this young institution. The company has already on its books the names of more than one thousand depositors and this total is being added to daily.

This statement reflects the confidence that the people of Plainfield have placed in this, the newest of the city's institutions.

Its equipments, its broad facilities and its courteous treatment of patrons are all factors in this immediate success.

EVERY MAN HIS OWNICEMAKER.

Press reports of an address made by General Manager Murray, of the New York Edison Company, at the recent convention of the Edison companies says he announced there the completion of an electrical cold storage machine adapted to the needs of the average flat dweller in New York. The regular lighting current will be connected with these machines in such a way that the resident may by turning a switch have at will three different degrees of cold up to quick freezing temperature. The use of the current for this purpose will measure by a meter as it is for lighting and it is asserted that the cost of the refrigerators on this novel plan will be less than cost of ice as now delivered.

Orville Wright's Story.

Orville Wright, at a banquet in Dayton, told of an obstinate old Daytonian who, looking up one still afternoon at the Wright biplane circling smoothly and steadily through the air, said:

"When people first told me about this her flyin', I called 'em liars. Then when I read about it in the papers, I said it was a fake."

The old man watched the biplanes moving in great curves like lazy birds and shook his head thoughtfully.

"By crimus!" he said, "I ain't what ye most call convinced yet, nuther."—Exchange.

Paid the Damages.

Shortly before 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon an automobile driven by John Harplin, of 20 Vanderpool street, Newark, ran into and demolished a delivery wagon belonging to Ruth & Co., which was standing next to the curb on East Front street. As Mr. Harplin paid for the damage he had done no complaint was made against him.

AUSTRALIAN GOLFER SHOT

SAVED BY A BUNCH OF KEYS

Miscreant Who Fired Gun Makes Close Getaway—Matter Treated Lightly by Robert N. McCormack.

A dastardly attempt at murder or a hold-up occured on Saturday afternoon on the road between Iselin and Metuchen when the motor car in which were Robert F. McCormack, treasurer of the John[illegible] Johnson Co., of New Brunswick, Eric Birks, of Queensland, Australia, Eugene Ross and William Morris, of New Brunswick, was fired upon by a youth who made good his escape when he found that his bullet had not been effective.

The men in the car were on their way to New Brunswick after having spent the day at the Colonial Golf club and were going along at a fifteen mile galt when two figures suddenly appeared besides the road and a shot rang out. Mr. Birks jumped clear of the seat thinking that he had been hit. The auto sped on out of range and examination of the wounded man was made. It was found that a 32 caliber bullet had passed through the body of the car and had struck Mr. Birk on the hip. Here it had been deflected from its course by a bunch of keys which reposed in his pocket and shooting downward inflicted a slight flesh wound in Mr. Birks' leg.

All speed was made to Metuchen where the leg was bandaged and the party proceeded on their way to Mr. McCormack's home.

At Metuchen, Mr. McCormack notified Marshall Furatt of the occurrance and the police of several surrounding towns and cities were immediately notified to be on the lookout for the shooter.

As the men in the car had no idea that they were to be the target for a misguided youth no particular attention was paid to the two persons carrying guns when the car passed them, but Mr. Ross declared that one of the two was a young fellow about sixteen years old while his companion appeared to be an old man of fifty or thereabouts. Patrolman McCarthy was sent out to the city limits in an automobile to seek the two men but they had evidently made good their escape in another direction.

Mr. McCormack was inclined to treat the matter lightly, saying that he did not think any one would be foolish enough to attempt to hold up and shoot at a motor car on a road so frequently traveled as the one taken by his car. No trace of the two men has been found.

C. E. CONGRESS MEETS; RALLY DECEMBER 1.

The bi-monthly meeting of the Christian Endeavor Congress convened in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association Monday night eight societies being represented by delegates. Arrangements were completed for the union rally on Thursday, December 1 and the speaker for that occasion was announced as Rev. Dr. F. J. Morgan, pastor of the Clairmont Persbyterian church, of Jersey City. Dr. Morgan's topic will be "Bible Study, Its Place and Importance in Christian Endeavor Life."

Rev. Walter B. Greening, vice-president of the union was originally intended as the speaker on the occasion of the rally, but he found it impossible to be present and secured Dr. Morgan in his stead. A new committee was created with the title "Junior Committee." Frank Stewart president of the union suggested the formation of a union of the junoir societies of Plainfield. This matter will be taken up later.

The Union voted favorably on the application of the newly formed society of the West End Tabernacle for admission into the union. The delegates from the society extended an invitation to the Endeavorers of Plainfield to attend the Thanksgiving Day service which will be held on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at which John T. Sproull, president of the State union will be the speaker in the West End Tabernacle.

Buzzards' Club Entertains.

Open house was enjoyed by the Buzzards' Club in Buzzards' Roost, Osborn's building, Saturday night, when the members entertained invitedly members of the U-N-X-L-D club of Rahway and their women friends. The club made the trip to Plainfield by stage, the party making its presence know here by the burning of red fire, blowing horns and ringing cow-bells. The Rahways were elaborately entertained by the Buzzards, who provided various forms of amusements. The festivities of the evening were concluded by the serving of ice cream, coffee and cake.

HENRY ROSE AND HUGH GORMLEY CROPPERS IN CHASE

An even dozen members of the Watchung Hunt Club enjoyed a chase after the hounds, Saturday afternoon. They met at Melrose Manor, below Oak Tree, and covered a distance of about ten miles in the cool, bracing air. The hounds were thrown in at Melrose Manor and led a lively chase over the surrounding country. The going was rather trappy, the fences, mostly four railers, and ditches, being particularly stiff for the riders. Yet, all negotiated the jumps in clever style.

There were only two spills, Henry Rose and Hugh Gormley, going off. They quickly remounted and finished well up among the leaders. Mr. Gormley was up on "Essex B," and the sturdy hunter performed well. Those who rode were Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., C. E. S. Bellows, Charles F. Wilder, Jr., William Wilder, Fred G. Alpers, Henry Rose, Hart S. Parlee, Henry A. Bourne, Louis Ratjer, Ruppert Anderson Paul Harrison and Huntsman Henry Watkins. Thanksgiving morning the club riders will meet at Baltusrol Golf Club at 10 o'clock for a long ride.

MRS. SCHENK'S MOTHER DIES IN HER 78TH YEAR

Mrs. Jane R. Williams, aged 77 years, widow of John W. Williams, and mother of Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, died Sunday at 11:15 o'clock at the home of the latter, 904 West Front street, death being due to nervous prostration, with which Mrs. Williams had been a great sufferer for some time.

Mrs Williams was born near Roxborough, Pa., and lived there until she came to live with her daughter a year ago last May. She was ill at that time and continued to grow gradually worse. She was a devout Christian woman and was for a great many years a member of the Talmadge Memorial Reformed church, of Roxborough.

Mrs Williams is survived by two daughters, Mrs Cornelius Schenck and Mrs. W. H. Hantsch, of Baltimore, both of whom are now ill; also a son, Samuel P Williams, of Chat-

PIANO RECITAL BY YOUTHFUL PUPILS

A quartet of youthful pianists entertained a large audience in the High School auditorium Saturday afternoon all of whom awakened enthusiasm by their wonderful playing. Three were pupils of Mrs. M. A. Virgil, of the Virgil conservatory, New York, and the fourth was Miss Hazel T. Dodge, a pupil of Miss S. A. Palmer, of this city.

Lucille Oliver, not yet 12 years old; Marion Blair and Emma Lipp, of about the same age, pupils who have shown marked progress in their studies, astonished the audience with their brilliant technic and splendid memories.

Of the three younger girls, Lucille Oliver had the hardest task in illustrating the method by which she had been taught besides playing some difficult compositions. The recital accomplished its object of introducing the Virgil method of instruction which Mrs. Virgil explained in her introductory remarks.

SCHUMANN-HEINK TICKETS ARE SELLING RAPIDLY.

The women of the Musical Club find that the demand for tickets for the Schuman-Heink concert on December 2, is so great that they have changed the place for holding the same from the Plainfield High School to the Plainfield Theatre. Tickets already issued can be exchanged at the box office for reserved seats in the parquet or first balcony, without extra charge, on November 25, and others wishing tickets can get them at that time.

This recital will afford a rare opportunity of hearing this wonderful woman without the trouble and expense of a trip to New York. Since the days of Jenny Lind and Adeline Patti, no other singer has been so popular on the concert stage. Her fame is world-wide and she is as great a favorite in England and on the Continent as she is here. Her voice is wonderfully sweet and of tremendous power and yet so perfectly modulated that it fills the opera house and does not oppress one in a parlor. She should be met by a large and appreciative audience. The women of the Musical Club have been giving one public concert annually of the highest artistic character and they have shown good taste and good judgment in bringing out this great artist.

MRS. WM. SCRIBNER DIES

RESIDED HERE SIXTY YEARS.

She Was Deeply Interested in Church, Charity and Literary Work—Three Children Survive Her.

Mrs. William Scribner, wife of the late Rev. William Scribner, died early Monday at her residents 510 East Front street, in the 88th year of her age. She had enjoyed almost perfect health up to within a few days of her death. The early part of Mrs. Scribner's life was passed in New York city, and she had met on different occasions many people prominent in the life of the city, such as Jul[illegible]ard Howe, William Cullen Bryan[illegible]an Bigelow and Samuel J Tilden.

For nearly sixty years, Mrs. Scribner made her residence in Plainfield, and was always most interested in the progress and growth of the city. She was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyt[illegible] church, and took part in its [illegible]ectual and religious activities, having for many years served as secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the church.

The work of the McAll Mission in Paris, strongly appealed to her, she frequently translated letters from the Mission to the Plainfield society. Mrs. Scribner was always a great reader and student and took a keen interest in all the affairs of the day, both at home and abroad.

MISS JENSEN BRIDE OF JENS CHRISTENSEN

Saturday evening at 6:30 Miss Jensina Jensen, of Washington Valley, daughter of Mrs Dorothea M. Jensen, became the bride of Jens Christensen, of Grano, North Dakota at the home of the bride's mother, in the presence of 125 invited guests. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Nash, of Watchung.

The house was elaborately decorated for the occasion in autumn flowers and boughs. Edward Spear played Mendelssohn's wedding march. After a honeymoon trip through the south Mr. and Mrs. Christensen will go to Grano, where the groom has an extensive ranch and is well to do. The bride received a large number of beautiful and useful presents.

COL. AND MRS. C. H. BANKS WILL RESIDE IN PLAINFIELD.

Col. and Mrs. Charles R. Banks, who were married on Thursday in Windsor, Ontario, will be "at home," after December 15, at 645 Belvidere avenue. Col. Banks, has been prominent in Republican politics in Brooklyn and is also a member of the Crescent Athletic Club.

The bride was Miss Agnes Patti Holton, well-known in Windsor because of her philanthropic work. In recognition of her services the aldermen and representatives of various charitable organizations attended the ceremony. The couple have known each other for fifteen years.

DITTOS ARE NOW IN VOGUE.

Years ago when men first began to wear suits all of one cloth they were called dittos. Now we women are to wear dittos. Our shoes, stockings, gloves, petticoats, muffs, gowns and headgear are to be of one uniform hue, and there is nothing left to the economically inclined but to adopt one color, and wear no other, so that the adjuncts for one dress will do for another.

For the moment mauve is vogue, and a very lovely dress charmeuse seen recently was accompanied by one of the new tunics of shirring to match, of three short and square in front and caught up at the side with a piece of embroidery repeated at the hem, the tunic bordered with olive-shaped buttons, the bodice of mousseline de soie, the gulmpe and collar of same lace. The elbow sleeves widened at the elbow and were trimmed with bugled fringe.

Those who do not keep to one scheme of coloring might introduce a little bias on the lower portion of the skirt. Soft, blue crepe, made with bishop sleeves, admits of a band of Venetian lace across the front, the bodice over it being drawn in with fullness a la vierge.

The long skirt of such a dress dips at the back, heavy blue embroidery appearing on the underskirt. Every detail accompanies this dress is of the same lovely hue of blue, even to the fan with Watteau shepherdesses.

SUPERB MUSIC HEARD

Hans Kronold and the Assisting Artists Delighted Big Audience.

PROGRAM CHIEFLY CLASSICAL.

Miss Ruth Harris, Soprano; Miss Hazel Hatfield, Contralto, William Holmes, Baritone and Geo. Smith, Tenor.

Seldom has a Plainfield audience enjoyed a program of such uniform excellence as that presented at the First Baptist church last night, under the direction of Howard M. Case, for the benefit of the Temple Baptist church. The general arrangement of the varied numbers was such as to afford the large audience an exceptional opportunity to hear the quartet from the church choir at its best in a new field of music.

While the work of Miss Ruth Harris, soprano, and Miss Hazel Hatfield, contralto, is somewhat familiar in church music, this was the first opportunity Plainfielders have had to hear them sing in a popular program, and they delighted everyone, as did also William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor, who have been favorites with music lovers for several years.

As for the work of Hans Kronold, 'cellist, it left absolutely nothing to be desired. That he is a foremost and finished artist has long since been proved, and in the rendition of his selections last night there was a charm that won the heartiest applause. In part first he gave a group of three selections "Larghetto," and Minuet," Mozart, and "Rondo," by Boccherini, and he generously responded to an encore, all of which gave ample opportunity for the artist to display his great ability.

The program was opened with a quartet selection, "Over the Hills at Break of Day," by Geibel, which displayed in a pleasing way the harmony of the quartet. This was followed by the group of four numbers by Mr. Kronold, Miss Hazel Hatfield sang the aria from "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," in which her excellent voice was heard to best advantage. Miss Hatfield has a natural contralto voice, of wide range and purity, and the rendition was very pleasing.

In the soprano solo, "Waltz Song," aria from "Romeo and Juliet," Gounod, Miss Harris gave a delightful rendition, which at once won her audience. Miss Harris sings with perfect ease and grace, and her voice possesses a sweetness that is charming.

Mr. Holmes was well received in the rendition of a group of three numbers, "All Through the Night," Old Welsh Air; "Thy Beaming Eyes," MacDowell, and "Who is Sylvia?" in which his rich voice delighted everyone. Mr. Holmes has the happy faculty of giving the right expression and his work last night was faultless.

Another pleasing number was the duet, "Home to Our Mountain," from "Il Trovadore," Verdi, by Miss Hatfield and Mr. Smith. The voices blended in perfect harmony. Part first was concluded with two numbers by Mr. Kronold, "Kamehoi Ostrow," Rubinstein, and the "Witches' Dance,' one of his own compositions. Miss Harris opened part second, with two charming numbers, Gounod's "Serenade," and "The Year's at the Spring," by Beach, and again she pleased with the perfect rendition, as did also Miss Hatfield who sang, "His Lullaby," Bond, and "The Ould Plaid Shawl," Haynes. A notable number was the duet by Miss Harris and Mr. Holmes, which was followed with two selections by Mr. Smith, "The Last Watch," Pinsuti, and "Dainty Clare," Allison, in which this favorite singer gave a true interpretation and pleased his audience. The program was concluded with two 'cello solos, "Traumerei," Schumann, and "Fantaisie Tzigane," Mohr, by Mr. Kronold, and a selection from "Robin Hood," DeKoven, by the quartet. Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Case, the accompanist of the evening, whose work was of a high order. He was complimented publicly by Mr. Kronold for his work at the piano.

Martine Forgets Politics.

James E. Martine was one of the speakers at the banquet of the Men's club of the Emery Memorial M. E. church in Jersey City last night, and contrary to his usual custom he did not mix politics with his remarks about Plainfield's early history and his own personal connection with it as well as oratorical fireworks on this grand republic of ours. Mr. Martine was the recipient of congratulations upon his speech and was warmly received by Rev. A. C. McCrea.

WOMEN PLAY BRIDGE AT THE HUNT CLUB

"Ladies' Day" at Watchung Hunt Club, observed yesterday, proved to be a delightful occasion. Despite the disagreeable weather, the women enjoyed the afternoon playing bridge whist, which was followed by a tea. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Hart S. Farlee and Miss Mabel B. Hooley, who decorated the clubhouse appropriately for the occasion. The color scheme was pink, and this was carried out even to the color of the candles served at the tea. Mrs. H. W. Beebe and Mrs. A. B. Davies poured and they were assisted by a number of young women.

The guests included a number of women prominent in society in the city and borough and included the following:

The Misses Charlotte Finch, Maria Finch, Margaret Drayton, Caroline Martin, E. L. Brooks, Mabel B. Hooley, Kittie Curtis, Ray Hooley, Mrs. Sdgar Yule, Mrs. Leon Moran, Mrs. F. D. Ely, Mrs. W. A. Nye, Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mrs. Rutherford Towner, Mrs. F. C. Osborn Mrs. M. R. Rae, Mrs. E. M. Van Buren, Mrs. Charles Lovell, Mrs. Charles Lyman, Mrs. A. B. Davies, Mrs. William Lockwood, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, Miss Lucy Otterson, Mrs. W. W. Coriell, Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka, Mrs. C. E. S. Bellows, Mrs. Morris J. Dumont, Mrs. J. W. Baker, Mrs. Hart S. Farlee.

The prizes were many and costly.

CONCERT OF Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA IS ENJOYED

The popularity of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra concerts does not seem to wane; on the contrary the fine quality of the music provided by this orchestra continues to be a source of enjoyment increasing at each succeeding event. Last night was no exception to this statement. A large and appreciative audience gathered in the auditorium and applauded the efforts of the musicians under the direction of Martin A. Korff who had to bow his acknowledgements over and over again.

The assisting artists, Mrs. Homer B. Lewis, accompanied on the piano by Miss Margaret Leggett; Whitney Fraser, 'cello and A. Wilbur Sayer, violinist, all contributed in a large measure to the evening's pleasure. Mrs. Lewis sang "Happy Song" delightfully and was compelled to respond with an encore. Mr. Fraser's rendition of "Sing Ch Sleep" was splendidly done and Mr. Moser was greeted with enthusiastic applause for his rendition of Wagner's "Evening Star" and a reverie by Vieuxtemps.

The program was in two parts and in the intermision a silver collection was taken up, there having been no charge for admission. The entire program was well rendered and reflects credit on Mr. Kroff.

BLAZE IN STOREHOUSE CAUSED SLIGHT DAMAGE.

Spontaneous combustion started a fire in a storehouse of the Crescent Embossing Company plant on West Second street at 11:40 last night. The blaze was noticed by a neighbor and fire headquarters was notified by telephone, one of the men turning in an alarm from box 46 on the arrival of the first apparatus.

The storehouse was filled with paper cuttings and other inflammable material and the flames spread quickly. A line of hose was laid in and a tank of the chemical engine was used in addition. The damage is placed at about $150, practically all on contents as the building is a corrugated iron affair and was harmed but little.

Attended Church Banquet.

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, attended the annual banquet of the Reformed Church Union, held at the Park Avenue Hotel, New York, Monday night, at which time Captain Robert E. Peary was the chief speaker. It was "ladies' night," and there were about three hundred guests.

Successor to Craig A. Marsh.

GUSTAVE SUTTERLIN DIES IN 70TH YEAR

Gustave Sutterlin, aged 69 years, a well known resident of the borough for more than a quarter of a century, died this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Edward Mundy, 5 Harmony street, the borough, following a three months' illness with stomach trouble. Mr. Sutterlin was a native of Germany and came to this country when a young man. For a great many years he conducted a bottling place on Greenbrook road, which is now owned by Adolph Bohren.

Mr. Sutterlin was for many years a member of the Gesang and Turn Verein and had a large circle of friends among the German residents of the borough. He is survived by two sons, Charles and Albert Sutterlin; also two daughters, Mrs. Edward Mundy, of the borough, and Miss Katherine Sutterlin, of New York. The funeral will be private.

GAVE A MUSICALE AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Mrs. Frank L. Clark and her daughters, the Misses Edith and Mary Clark, of West Seventh street, gave a charming musicale at the Plainfield Country Club, yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. There were about eighty guests present to enjoy the affair. The clubhouse was tastefully decorated, pink and green being the prevailing colors throughout the dining-room and reception hall.

The program was rendered by Herman Epstein, piano; Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cello and Alexander Saslavsky, violin, all well-known artists. Mr. Dubinsky will be remembered as a former member of the McIntyre Trio. The program follows:

"Adagio," Beethoven; "Serenade," Saint-Saens, trio; "Chanson Neapolitaine," Casella, 'cello solo; "E. Major," Chopin; "F sharp Major," MacDowell, piano solos; violin solos, selected; "Scherzo," and "Elegia," Arensky, trio.

Following the musicale refreshments were served under the direction of John Hilton, superintendent of the club.

MRS. HARTLEY SURPRISED ON BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Mrs. Harry Hartley, of 476 West Front street, celebrated the forty-ninth anniversary of her birthday, yesterday, and last evening she was given a surprise party, the affair being arranged by her husband. The evening was spent in playing games and enjoying a program of music, after which refreshments were served.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Morris, the Misses Ethel and Ruth Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Laury and son, Arthur; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Smith, the Misses Gertrude Conover, Mabel Conover Lillian Conover, Mildred Conover, Augusta Rilling and John Hurley, Charles Bauman and Wilson Steininger.

HOPE CHAPEL CLASS HAS A CHOWDER SUPPER.

Fifty members and friends of the William S. Runyon Bible Class Association, of Hope chapel, enjoyed a chowder supper in the Sunday-school rooms, last night. At the conclusion of the repast, Howard Mac Williams, teacher of the class, occupied the chair and called for addresses. The principal ones were given by G. Herbert Condict and William Lindsay, while Mr. Mac Williams also spoke. Their remarks were devoted to the Sunday-school work at the chapel. Several solos were contributed by William Anderson.

The affair was in charge of the social committee of the class composed of Charles Vincent, George A. Broadbent and Adam Scott.

Miss Strappe's Funeral.

The funeral of Miss Margaret J. Strappe was held this morning in St. Mary's church, a large gathering of relatives and friends being in attendance. The mass was said by Rev. Father Bogan and burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were Robert McCormack, Frank Sweeney, Dennis O'Keefe, Patrick Kiely P. J. McLoughlin and James McLynchatey.

Epworth League Rally.

A group rally of the Epworth Leagues of the Elizabeth district was held in the Scotch Plains Methodist church last night. One hundred delegates were in attendance. The principal address was made by John Tyler, a reformed drunkard, while Miss Nellie Hollingsworth sang two solos.

HUMANE WORK INTEREST

S. P. C. A. Agent Aims to Enlist Children in the Society's Work.

PRIZES TO BE AWARDED.

Oratorical Contests of Local School Pupils Are Planned by Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen.

While the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has not recently had any cases in court to be disposed of the special agent has not been idle by any means. Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen since her return from the international congress of humane societies recently held in Washington, D. C., has been actively engaged in circulating literature relating to the work and aims of the society and has begun to work on a plan to interest the young people of the city and the children in the public schools which will enlist their co-operation in the work.

The society is anxious of enlisting the children in the world wide movement of being kind to dumb animals and in order to forward the project expects in the near future to have oratorical contests in which the subjects to be used are from matter furnished by the society and which are to be given in public in a series of eliminating contests until the final contest shall have been narrowed down to four representatives from each of the grades of the public schools and to the best speakers among the High School pupils.

The work of getting the matter put squarely before the pupils of the public schools will be placed before Superintendent Henry M. Maxson for his approval and it is hoped before many months that the matter of humane education will be taken up in the public schools as a part of the curriculum as it now exists in fourteen of the States. The American Humane Education Society is responsible for the teaching of this branch of study wherever it exists and in every instance the result has been amazing and profitable.

As the contests which the local society proposes to hold the winners will be presented with solid silver medals properly inscribed and the well worth trying for. Numerous instances of the value of this sort of education was found in the reports given at the recent meeting in Washington when upward 300 delegates from all over the world gathered to discuss the best means of educating the public up to the point of being kind to dumb animals.

Mrs. Van Hoesen said when seen this morning said that the project has been enthusiastically received wherever she had presented it and promises of co-operation by prominent people have been given.

Mrs. Van Hoesen declared that during the past year between four hundred and five hundred sick, wounded or worn out animals had been destroyed by the agents of the society in this neighborhood, many of them being horses and dogs. Instances of cruelty of the worst kind have recently come to her notice in which hunters have been the cause. Only last Saturday while walking through the woods near her home, Mrs. Van Hoesen found a squirrel and a rabbit near to each other, both wounded so badly that they could not get away. She returned to her home for a gun and put both little animals out of their misery. They had evidently been shot by hunters and had crawled away out of sight to die of their wounds.

The proposed oratorical contest will be held under the auspices of the local society and the topics will be furnished by them. The object in view is to lead every person, young or old, to treat dumb animals with kindness. All the granges of the country have taken up this important matter and the Master of the National Grange has given the project his heartiest approval. Literature relating to the work of the Humane Society is being distributed by Mrs. Van Hoesen and further information regarding the contests may be obtained from her.

Buys a Building Lot.

George W. Cole, of West Second street, closed a deal this morning for the sale of a building lot on Leland avenue, adjoining the parsonage of the Netherwood Reformed church to Enoch Berry. The latter will begin at once the erection of a double apartment house.

Young Friends to Meet.

The Young Friends' Association will meet Friday evening at the home of R. D. Williams. The subject for the evening will be George Fox.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. L. R. Ross, 306 East Seventh street.

MAKE YOUR GUESS AS TO POPULATION

Some time ago The Daily Press offered two prizes for the guessers of Plainfield and North Plainfield. The conditions were that the person guessing nearest to the actual census figures as to the population of the city and borough was to be awarded a prize of five dollars in gold, for each municipality. The time is drawing near for the distribution of these two prizes as the census bureau will shortly arrive at the correct figures.

Already hundreds of guesses have been received and they are coming in daily, but there is yet time for any who have not yet hazarded an opinion as to how many people there are in our city and borough, to send in a guess today. As a basis for your calculation these figures are given from the census of 1900: Plainfield, 15,369; North Plainfield borough, 5,009. Figure out what you believe to be the present increase and add the figures to these and you may win one of the gold pieces.

ALFRED LACEY WEDS MISS GARLINGHOUSE

Miss Flora Garlinghouse, of Scotch Plains, and Alfred Lacey, son of Mrs. Ellen Lacey, of Franklin avenue, the borough, were married at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's cousin, George Marsh, 17 Maple avenue the borough in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, of which the bride is a member, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Regnette Marsh, of the borough, as bridesmaid, and Charles Suhr, brother-in-law of the groom, was the best man, and Hervey Marsh was the usher. The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Thomas Collard, who is a principal of one of the public schools of Newark. The wedding marches were played on the piano by Mrs. Ada Dunn, of Scotch Plains, an intimate friend of the bride.

The bride was gowned in white applique over white satin. She wore a tulle veil and carried lilies-of-the-vally and brides roses. Miss Marsh's gown was of white and carried pink messaline and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Miss Josephine Marsh, a flower girl, wore an embroidered gown.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held, when the couple received the congratulations of the guests and a wedding supper was served by a Newark caterer. During the early part of the evening the couple left on a wedding trip and upon their return will reside at the home of the groom on Franklin avenue.

The house was attractively decorated for the affair, there being a profusion of flowers and smilax in the parlor, reception room and dining-room. The bride was the recipient of a great many gifts of use and value. Mrs. Lacey was a resident of Scotch Plains for several years and she made many friends both of that place and in this city. Mr. Lacey is also well-known here, where he has resided for a number of years. He holds an excellent position with Morris C. Van Arsdale, the shoe merchant of West Front street. He is an active member of St. Stephen's church, being an officer of the parish; also a member of the choir.

ANNIVERSARY OF SUPT. OF THE RESCUE MISSION.

Services marking the fourth anniversary of John LeMatty as superintendent of the Plainfield Rescue Mission, were held at the mission last night and largely attended. During the evening a purse of more than $50 was presented to Mr. LeMatty by S. T. Perrin, on behalf of the members of the mission, in appreciation of his faithful services. Mr. LeMatty responded with a few remarks thanking those who had contributed to the purse.

The meeting was in charge of William Wright, who spoke briefly of the happy occasion, after which short addresses were made by S. S. Swackhamer and Maurice E. McGrath complimentary of Mr. LeMatty's work. There were piano and violin selections by the Misses Burnet and organ selections by Mrs. John Manley and piano selections by Miss Grace LeMatty. A social hour followed and refreshments were served under the direction of Eugene Wood. During the four years Mr. LeMatty has been superintendent of the mission, there have been many converts and a number of converts have been reclaimed.

an important rale in the coming play with Miss Henrietta Crossman, taking the part of the Marques Ramon Iriarte, a Spanish grandee, which it is said, he assumes with becoming grace and fidelity.

MISS WALDRON BRIDE OF EDWARD F. M'DONOUGH

In the presence of a large number of friends, Miss Katherine Josephine Waldron, of Sycamore avenue, and Edward Francis McDonough, of South Plainfield, were married in St. Joseph's church at 3 o'clock this afternoon by Rev. Father Miller. Miss Annie Waldron sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and John J. McDonough brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Albert Waldron and M. N. Waldron, brothers of the bride. Miss Mary Smith presided at the organ, rendering the Mendelssohn march as the bridal party entered the church.

The bride's gown was of white satin over chiffon. She carried bride roses. Her attendant wore grey broadcloth and carried pink roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the new home of the couple at 443 West Fourth street, and a wedding supper was served. The decorations were green and red.

The friends in attendance were from New York, Westfield, South Plainfield and Dunellen, as well as from the city and borough. Both bride and groom received many handsome presents.

HOPE CHAPEL BOYS TO FEAST TONIGHT.

The Junior Boys' Club of Hope chapel will hold a banquet at the chapel tonight, in connection with which there will be a public initiation of forty boys and addresses by a number of prominent men. They are Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Rev. G. A. Warner, Arthur M. Harris, C. W. Bingeman, H. E. Parker, G. H. Condict and J. H. Manning. The affair will be given under the direction of Charles G. August, leader of the club, who will also speak. An orchestra of five pieces will render a program.

The dinner will be served by a committee of women comprising Mrs. Charles G. August, Mrs. Thomas Henry, Mrs. Allen Snyder, Mrs. Walter Bradford, Mrs. George M. Rittenhouse, Mrs. Donald Meinnes and Mrs. William Terry.

ELIZABETH ELKS HOLD TENTH ANNUAL RECEPTION.

The Elizabeth Lodge of Elks gave its tenth annual reception in Turn Hall, last night, more than seven hundred couples being present during the evening. Representatives from lodges in Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Montclair, Bayonne and this city were present.

Mayor-elect Alfred A. Stein and Sheriff Kirtland occupied boxes and enjoyed the music. Visiting delegations were received by County Collector Leavitt, chairman of the committee of arrangements. Luncheon was served at midnight. Dancing was the order of the night.

Will Chase the Hounds.

The weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club will be held Saturday afternoon, the members meeting the hounds at Watchung Hill at 2:30 o'clock, provided the weather is favorable. Farmers are invited to take part in all runs.

ENTERS COLLEGE AT 51

BUILT QUEENSBORO BRIDGE.

Graduate of Local High School and Prominent Resident Goes Back to the Text Books for a Degree.

Andrew McClean Parker, formerly of this city, but now of Princeton, has entered the biological dean and his matriculation has aroused unusual interest among the students of the university, chiefly because of the fact that Mr. Parker is fifty-one years of age. He is a graduate of Columbia University, Class of '80, where he was given the degree of mechanical engineer. He is the oldest student Princeton has had in a number of years.

Probably the only other college student in America today who is older is Rev. M. L. Troutman, pastor of the First M. E. church, of Athens, Ga., who entered the University of Georgia this year at the age of fifty-four and was elected president of the junior class.

Mr. Parker is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and has always had a deep interest in Plainfield affairs. This was more recently demonstrated in what was practically his gift to the city of a handsome park as a public playground and athletic field, which will be thrown open to the public next summer. Mr. Parker is a bridge builder and architect and was one of the chief engineers in charge of the construction work in Panama. He has become interested in lower animal life to such an extent that he has entered the course at Princeton and is a regular attendant on lectures and the experiments. He is occupying the house of Dr. Edmund Capps, professor of classics, who is abroad.

Mr. Parker is the son of Captain James Parker, of Perth Amboy, but who was a Plainfielder many years ago. He is also a brother of Mrs. DuBois, wife of Dr. F. E. DuBois, of Washington avenue.

DEMOCRATS TO HEAR EQUAL-SUFFRAGE TALK

Upon invitation of the Plainfield Democratic Club, members of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield will attend a meeting on Monday night, December 5. An opportunity will be given to explain why they want woman's suffrage. Among those who have been selected to speak on that occasion are Mrs. C. L. Riley and Miss Voe Russell-Batesman and it is possible that Mrs. Florence Howe Hall will be present and speak.

The invitation to the suffrage league was extended by the Democratic club through the president, LeRoy J. Ellis, who is greatly interested in the subject of woman's suffrage and he together with other men are anxious to learn the basis upon which the women desire suffrage.

MRS. A. M. DODGE TO ADDRESS CITY UNION.

The semi-annual meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters will be held in the Crescent avenue church parlors tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. All King's Daughters and their friends are most cordially invited. Those attending are asked to bring a glass of jelly for the nurse's closet.

Mrs. A. N. Dodge, president of the Federation of Day Nurseries, of New York, will make the address. She recently returned from a trip around the world and will undoubtedly have something decidedly interesting to relate. A two minute report will be presented by each of the fourteen local circles and tea will be served by the Loyal Circle of Netherwood.

Ernest Jeffery Improving.

Ernest Jeffery, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights, who is at the hospital under treatment for a gunshot wound in his left arm, is improving. The injury was the result of the accidental discharge of a gun on Thanksgiving Day morning, in the hands of Jeffery's brother, Richard Jeffery. The lad was trying to hit a turkey which lay on a table in the bungalow when the shot part of the charge entered his brother's arm.

Christmas Sale and Play.

The Unity Circle of The King's Daughters will hold a Christmas sale at Grace church parish house, Friday afternoon, from 3 to 6 o'clock, at which time "A Bachelor's Reverie" will be presented by members of the circle, of which Miss Margaret Mead is the president.

FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Borough Association Declares Itself in Favor of Public Water Plant.

WILL CONFER WITH COUNCIL.

Organization Takes up Several Matters of Municipal Interest—Mayor Smalley Gives a Progressive Talk.

After a four months' lapse of activity, the North Plainfield Association held a business meeting in the Council Chambers, Friday night. The main object was to discuss the municipal ownership of water and lights but various other matters pertaining to the welfare of the borough were taken up. President Alex-Milne was in the chair.

The committee appointed to take up the question of extending Albert street across the brook and into North Plainfield reported that the matter is under consideration and progress being made. This was the only business remaining over with the exception of one unpaid bill.

Mayor Newton A. Smalley took the floor and gave a general talk on borough matters. He expressed approval of the municipal ownership ideas recently made public by Edwin S. Hooley and Charles W. McCutchen. He said it will certainly be of benefit to the community in more ways than one. The mayor turned his thoughts in another direction and made known his disapproval of the granting of a permit by the Plainfield authorities to extend out a certain corner in the business district to enlarge a store.

"I only wish," said the mayor, "that the building was located in such a way as such a permit could be refused. It is just such acts as these that retard the growth of a place instead of helping it."

The mayor compared the two blocks on Park avenue between Second street and the railroad, to show the contrast between improvement and unimprovement. He declared that the block below Second street, with its handsome buildings, had greatly increased values in that section while the other part had not risen in proportion. He added that at the present rate of progress it would be almost impossible to bring about the needed widening of the first block of the avenue.

Mr. Smalley also took up the question of better approaches to North Plainfield from the city side. He suggested that the association confer with the new Chamber of Commerce in the hope that some thing may be accomplished. He said the matter had frequently been broached to the old Board of Trade but the communications had fallen by the wayside.

Several other members spoke after the mayor had finished and all were in favor of the public ownership of the plant and a resolution to this effect with a provision that a committee of five be appointed to confer with the Council, was passed. President Milne said he would defer naming the committee until he had time to look up what had been stated for it. He said he wanted the matter taken up properly and not allowed to dwindle away for the want of exertion.

The question of widening Somerset street from Jackson avenue north in connection with the instal lation of the sewer, came up in the meeting and it was the unanimous opinion that no time should be lost in getting the preliminary plans under way. To this effect, a committee composed of E. P. T. Smith, James E. Church and L. B. Woolston was named to confer with the proper officials.

The feeling prevailed among the members that one or two matters should be taken in hand by the association at one time. It is too often the case, comment was made, that an organization of this kind takes so much upon its shoulders that practically no progress is made and nothing is accomplished. The members agreed that it would be far better to do one thing and do it well than to make a try at a lot of things and get results from none. It was also the general idea that every meeting of the association should be one of interest and to this effect a speaker versed in civic affairs will be secured for each session.

The regular meetings will be held the third Thursday in each month and due announcement will be made previous to them.

"OAK FARM" PRESENTED BY LOCAL DRAMATIC CLUB.

The Oak Farm Dramatic Club presented its rural drama, "Oak Farm," at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday. The performance was enjoyed by a large audience. All of the members of the cast acquitted themselves creditably. A feature of the specialty numbers was the appearance of the Harmonette Trio, composed of William Frederick, Miss Typhenia Mattox and Miss Margaret Bird.

Generous and Independent.

In front of a confectioner's shop in Paris there used to sit a woman with two wooden legs. She sold pictures and songs and played well on the violin. In 1848 she was there, very pretty and dressed with a good deal of taste, and when Louis Napoleon, then merely Prince Louis, used to go through the street nearly every day, he never passed without giving her something.

She knew him and was also aware of his pecuniary embarrassments and his political ambitions. One evening she said to him, "Monsieur, I want to say a word to you."

"Say it, madame."

"They tell me that you are a good deal cramped just now. I have at my house a comfortable sum which is earning nothing. Let me offer it to you. You will return the amount when you are emperor."

Prince Louis did not accept the money, but he did not forget the kindness, and when he became emperor he offered her a small annuity. The woman was as independent as she was generous. "Say to the emperor," she replied, "that it is exceedingly good of him to remember me, but I cannot accept his offer. If he had accepted mine I would say what might have happened, but as it is, no."

A Daring Horseman.

The famous John Mytton once galloped full speed over a rabbit warren "to try whether or not his horse would fall." The horse did fall and rolled over Mytton, who, with good luck, got up unhurt. Shortly after he attained his majority Mytton gave a dealer an order for some carriage horses and went to see what the man had got for him. The dealer—of the lot in an tandem leader to "try" it and with the dealer at his side drove out on the highroad. As they drove Mytton inquired if the horse were a good timber jumper, and, the dealer giving a doubtful answer, he said he did not expect in respect of a harness horse, Mytton instantly said he must "try" him. Forthwith he drove at the turnpike gate which barred the way before him. The horse cleverly cleared it, leaving the wheeler, the gig and its occupants on the take-off side. Wonderful to relate, neither the horse nor the man was hurt. The gig, however, stood in urgent need of repairs.—London Stock Journal.

Too Rich For His Pocket.

After the war with Spain a party of Americans, including Colonel Hecker of Detroit, went to Cuba on a tour of inspection. They had with them a negro messenger named Frank. One day Frank left the place where they sell ices and cakes on the Prado, in Havana, and bought a plate of ice cream. That was 20 cents. The waiter handed around some cakes. Frank took a few. The cakes were passed around a third time. Then Frank on each occasion Frank helped himself liberally. Then he called for his check. It was $1.80, American. Colonel Hecker and some friends, who were at an adjoining table, heard Frank yell.

"What is the matter, Frank?" asked the colonel.

"Why didn't you stop me?" sobbed Frank. "Why didn't you stop me? Dem you know dis yer nigger could eat enough of dis yer stuff to bankrupt a United States mint."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Curious Remedy.

Perhaps the most curious remedy for seasickness ever prescribed was that arranged by Sir Theodore Mayern for the English princess royal when she crossed to Belgium in 1642. Cinnamon, coriander, anise, ambergris, musk and sugar were to be made up into long tubes for her to munch on the voyage; a plaster of balsam of Peru, gum mastich and laudanum was to be applied to the pit of the stomach, and in addition she was to inhale the comforting vapors arising from a hash of toast, orange and citron peel, roses, lavender and cloves mingled with wine, cinnamon water and cider flower vinegar.

The Reproof.

It was in the midst of the football season, and the students of Professor Blank's "cull, spell and write" class should have been neglected, were prepared for reproof, but not for just the way in which it came.

At the end of the hour he slammed down his book on the desk and exclaimed:

"Well, that's the worst recitation I ever listened to! Why, I've actually done nine-tenths of it myself!"—Youth's Companion.

Unanswered.

To "Anxious Inquirer," who asks us if there are rats on a catboat and whether cowcatchers were first put on milk trains, we reply that the editor who knows all about such things is busy looking up whether or not Richard the Third stopped King Henry's bier, thus became the first temperance crusader, and will not be able to answer Anxious Inquirer until he rests up a little.—Browning's Magazine.

Enlightened.

"Before I married," said Mr. Henpeck, "I didn't know what it meant to support a wife."

"I presume you know now."

"Yes, indeed. I looked up the word 'support' in the dictionary and discovered that one of its meanings is 'endure.'"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 4, 1910.

Topic—The worth while life.—Prov. x. 1-7, 22, 29. (Consecration meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The form of the poetry used by Solomon in this chapter is that of contrast. In the first lines certain moral virtues are set forth and in the second their contrary vices—for instance. (1) "A wise son maketh a glad father, but (2) a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother." The first stanzas set forth the characteristics of a life that is worth while, while the contrasting stanzas reveal the characteristics of a life that is not worth while. The worth while life might, therefore, from the references selected here be defined as one that possesses the moral virtues and is devoid of vices. And this would be a brief yet comprehensive view of the subject in Solomon's day. In our age, however, Christianity has to be taken into consideration. Solomon lived under the law, while we live under the gospel, and as a result the worth while life and the worthless life must be viewed from somewhat different standpoints. The moral law is still in effect, and what Solomon says in this chapter is still true, but Sinai has been transformed into Calvary, and the gospel now plays a great part in deciding what life is worth while and what is worthless.

From both standpoints, therefore, we may glance at the subject submitted for our study.

1. The worth while life must be moral. It must include the virtues that stand for right against wrong, for righteousness against sin, for honesty against falsehood, for the truth against error—in fact, for the law of God as summed up in the Ten Commandments. It must also include wisdom, as that word is usually used in the Scriptures—not wisdom in the sense of intellectual wisdom, but of heart wisdom, the power to discriminate between right and wrong and to do the right rather than the wrong. Moreover, personal character is not in itself sufficient. Others must be considered. Children must obey their parents, the rich must use their money with proper regard for the rights of others, and in all the various relations of life unselfishness must be practiced. With these virtues, both active and passive, possessed there will be no room in the heart or life for the contrary vices, and up to the point of the law life will be worth while.

2. The worth while life today must be Christian. It must be a Christlike life. Solomon was wise and great, but a greater than Solomon has appeared—Jesus Christ, the Son of God and the Saviour of the world. The law still stands, but today the true life must have added to its moral virtues the Christlike traits of self denial, faith, hope, charity, patience, the spirit of kindness and of forgiveness and an earnest desire to be like Christ and to lead others to become His followers. Instead of being in bondage to the law, we are living in the dispensation of God's grace in Jesus Christ. With these features supplementing the moral virtues, the life of any one is indeed worth while, not only for time, but also for eternity. The law could not save man's soul, and what it could not do, "being weak through the flesh," God has done by the gift of His Son, who died for the sins of man and obtained full pardon and ample salvation for him, including eternal life.

Men have the power to form the character of their lives. What shall we make ours? Worth while or worthless? There should be no hesitation in our choice. What is more than all is spent life? God gives it to us that we may live for Him. How sad not to do so and to present it to Him at His call wasted and ruined! To avoid such results live by His grace the worth while life.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xx. 7, 12-17; Prov. i. 10-17; xi. 1-7; Eccl. ii. 1-11; xii. 9, 13, 14; Rom. i. 18-23; Gal. v. 19-26; vi. 1-10; Rom. vi. 1-5; viii. 1, 2; Matt. v. 1-12; Phil. ii. 1-12; iv. 8, 9.

Perfection of Organization.

The perfection of the organization of the United Society of Christian Endeavor was given a test in the protest which it made against the Jeffries-Johnson prizefight pictures. In two days it organized a campaign effective in America, Great Britain, South Africa, Canada and Australia. Of late talk has been heard that Christian Endeavor has had its day. Responding to it comes this exhibition of quick action, and accompanying it is the statement that the membership is larger than ever before. At the same time the society points out that it does not seek so much to establish itself in great numbers as it does to train young people for effective service, possibly along lines outside of the societies. It expects, in fact, many of its members will leave it, for it wishes to deal with young people, training them for service, and it points out that in most of the later movements Endeavorers have employed knowledge and enthusiasm gained in Endeavor school.—Newark (N. J.) Evening News.

Set Up a Standard.

Faithfulness implies standards. No one can tell whether he is faithful or not unless he knows what he is expected to do. When a scholar has a lesson to get his fidelity is in getting that lesson. If no lesson were assigned he would have no measure of fidelity. Every successful worker sets standards for himself. This is the reason for our Christian Endeavor pledge. It is the standard of faithfulness that we have set up for ourselves.—Amos R. Wells.

Too Talkative.

The following story is told of the famous painter Makart: The artist was a very passionate chess player, but he did not like his adversary to utter a single word during the progress of a game. A stranger who was very anxious to get on intimate terms with the famous artist brought he able to achieve his object by means of the royal game. After many tries he succeeded at last in getting an introduction to Makart, and one day the latter consented to play a game with him. Being well aware of the fact that his adversary was very much averse to any talk during the game, not a word was spoken, and even the word "check" was never spoken. All the stranger dared to do was to touch his adversary's king when he put that piece in check. The game ended in Makart being mated, when the stranger quietly said "checkmate." Makart rose very excitedly, threw the pieces off the board and, giving his opponent a fierce look, got off his chair, turned his back to the stranger and exclaimed "Prattler!"

Curious Way of Cooling Water.

The average native woman in the interior of Nicaragua may appear enervated and listless, but her method of cooling water is strenuous indeed. She fills a half gallon earthenware jar about two-thirds full. The jar is made of baked clay and, not being glazed, is partially porous, so that it soon becomes moist on the outside. By means of two leathern straps firmly attached to the neck of the jar the woman causes the water to swing rapidly in the air. The mouth is wide open, but the centrifugal motion keeps the water from flying out. The endurance shown by the Nicaraguan women of the poorer class in this form of calisthenics is said to be enormous. When, in the opinion of the operator, the water is sufficiently cooled she stops the movement by a dexterous twist of her wrist and hands the jar to the person that has been waiting to quench his thirst. By this process tepid water can be produced to the temperature of a very cool mountain spring.—New York Press.

An Unmanned Lightship.

There is stationed on the island of Islay, on the west coast of Scotland, *at the Otter rock an interesting light*ship. It is unmanned, yet it can be relied on to display the warning light to guide the mariner in his dangerous course. It is a very ingeniously constructed vessel and the only one of its kind. In its two steel tanks sufficient gas can be stored to supply the vessel for several months. Experiments have shown that the light may be depended upon to burn unceasingly for four months at a time. The approximate duration of the light can always be predetermined, and there is no danger what*ever of the light being extinguished by* wind or spray. The light is visible at a distance of from eight to twelve miles. The lightship also has a bell, which is made to ring automatically by means of an ingenious device that utilizes the gas as it passes from the tanks to the burner, to work the bell clapper.—Harper's Weekly.

Always a Harvest Somewhere.

There is a harvest every month during the year, as follows: January—Australia, New Zealand, Argentine, Chile; February—Chile, Argentine, upper Egypt; April—Mexico, Cuba, lower Egypt, Syria, Persia, Asia Minor; May—North Africa, China, Japan and the southern United States of America; June—Mediterranean and southern France, central and east United States of America south of 40 degrees; July—France, Austria, Hungary, southern Russia, northern United States of America, Ontario and Quebec; August—England, Belgium, Netherlands, Germany, central Russia; September—Scotland, Sweden, Norway, Russia; October—Finland and northern Russia; November—Peru. *South Africa; Decem*ber—Burma, South Australia. It is compiled table and shows how the wheat supply comes into England during every month of the year.—English Agricultural Journal.

A Brazilian Household Pet.

Brazilians train a snake called the giboia as a rat catcher. It is fifteen feet long. It nurses on the human being, becomes quite a household pet, is lazy in the daytime, but at night roams about the house in quest of its prey—rats. These animals if promptly kills by striking their heads. When Brazilians have to pass from room to room in the dark they first put on their slippers. It would not be pleasant to plant one's bare feet on a cold, slimy snake of that size.

Made the Most of It.

A well-known French actor became involved in a discussion with an American, grew heated, drew his card from his pocket, threw it on the table with a tragic air and stalked out. The American picked the card for some moments then took out his fountain pen and wrote "Admit bearer" above the engraved line and went off to the theater.—Argonaut.

A Reproof.

"Oh, children, you are so noisy today. Can't you be a little quieter?"

"Now, grandma, you must be more considerate and not scold us. You see, if it wasn't for us you wouldn't be a grandma at all."

Inconsistent.

Guest—So your daughter belongs to the Universal Peace and Amiability society? Host—Yes, and she's rapidly fighting her way to the front of that society.

A trick is at the best but a mean thing.—Le Sage.

REVENUE CUTTERS.

Varied Duties of These Life Savers of the Seas.

No men in the employ of Uncle Sam render more efficient service than do those of the revenue cutter service. The term "revenue," which would indicate that their duties were restricted to those pertaining to the proper enforcement of the revenue laws, can give but a faint notion of the varied duties of this splendid corps of men. As a matter of fact, revenue cutters are the life savers of the seas. They patrol the coasts on regular beats, on the watch for vessels in distress. They must suppress mutinies, prevent smuggling and illicit seal hunting; they must examine ships' papers, enforce quarantine regulations, supply lighthouses and in general do all kinds of police work. Then, too, they have been dubbed "the messenger boys of the seas."

Alexander Hamilton was the father of the revenue cutter service, for it was under his administration of the treasury department that, in 1791, ten cutters were built and put in commission under rules of his own devising. In time of peace the cutters are under the supervision of the treasury department, but in times of war they are transferred to that of the navy department. Since the war of 1812 they have always rendered excellent service in the event of armed hostilities. Every one remembers the remarkable work done by the McCulloch, under Dewey, at the battle of Manila Bay.—New York Press.

A GEM OF POESY.

Maybe It Was the Heat That Made It Burst Into Being.

Stewart Edward White, William Kent and myself were hunting mountain sheep in the ranges of Mexican California. Perhaps because the savage heat of the desert which we were crossing had somewhat gone to our brains we fell to making poetry upon various aspects of desert life. White rhapsodied upon the tarantula; Kent dithyrambled over the pack mule; I sang the dispirited eye of the jack rabbit. Finally White, who was cook for the day, offered a special prize of duff with raisins (the last remnant of our stores) for the premier verse to be turned out before sunset. At noon we met up with a wandering prospector who introduced himself as J. Noel Benson, native son of California, and observed upon learning of our literary efforts that he was some poet himself. On being invited to enter the list he retired to the top of a neighboring hill, where the thermometer was something like 110 in the absence of shade, and after half an hour of self communion returned with the following gem of poesy:

THE GNAT.

The gnat he is a noisome mite.
He loves to buzz. He loves to bite.
He even loves to light on me.
I love the naughty gnat—nit—not!

The duff was awarded to him without protest from the other contestants. —Success Magazine.

How Leap Year Started.

Hampson, in his "Medii OEVI. Kalendarium," quotes the following quaint tradition from an old Saxon treatise: "Some assert that the bissextus or leap day comes through this, that Joshua prayed to God that the sun might stand still one day's length that he might sweep the heathen from the land that God had granted him and his followers. It is true that the sun did stand still for one day's length over the city of Gibeon, but the day went forward in the same manner as other days. And the bissextus is not through that, as some do think."

In France and some parts of Spain and Portugal there exists a tradition known as "Dona Aldonza's Day." Believers in this say that a marvelous monster annually appears on leap day and disarranges human affairs for the remainder of the year.

A Royal Apology.

King Edward VII. was never at a loss for a quick, suitable answer. One day he was coming around a street corner on one of his periodical walks in London when he collided with a very stout person, who, being nearsighted, did not recognize the king. took him by the lapel of his coat and gave him a longue lashing.

"Do you know, sir," finished the irate man, "that I am a member of the London council?"

"In that case I beg your pardon," replied the king, "for I am only the king of Great Britain."

Just the Other Way.

Rudyard Kipling was once visiting at a country house at which Miss Dorothy Tennant, the famous daughter of Mr. Gladstone, then a little girl, was also staying. She was sent out into the garden with the distinguished author.

Later on, when the other grownups joined them, little Miss Dorothy was asked, "I hope you didn't bore Mr. Kipling."

"No, but he bored me frightfully," was the unexpected and restrained reply.

Wait a Bit.

Guest—Look here. How long am I going to have to wait for that half portion of duck I ordered? Waiter—Till somebody orders the other half. We can't go out and kill half a duck.—Toledo Blade.

Flirtation.

"What really constitutes flirtation?" asked the young man of the woman of the world.

"Attention without intention," replied the experienced one.—Scraps.

Novel Use of Billboard.

During a recent run on a western bank a billboard was set up in the street, where the line of depositors were gathered, and its frank statement of the bank's condition did much to restore confidence. Many people dropped out of the line after reading the sign, which bore this legend: "This bank can pay every dollar on deposit. It is one of the strongest banks on the Pacific coast. It has been your friend. Lenging competitors have worked to bring you here. Every person in this line should show their loyalty by leaving at once. Your money is safe. Why, then, remain here doing an unkind and foolish thing? Break ranks." The run lasted thirty-six hours, but the bank stood the strain and remained solvent. An enterprising merchant took advantage of the incident to secure a novel advertisement for his store. It happened that he was prepared to move into the adjoining building and the picture of the crowd before the bank was the appearance of heading for his new quarters. A cut of this picture was used for his announcement, the legend reading, "Your money is safe if you follow the crowd to"—giving his name of his own establishment.—Bookkeeper.

A Cordial Welcome.

A well known American portrait painter, armed with a full length portrait study taken off the stretcher and rolled under his arm, ventured to call on Whistler one Sunday morning. His modest knock brought the great man to the door, says a writer in Great Thoughts. Opening it a little way, he thrust out his head and demanded irritably:

"What brings you here? What do you want?"

The artist stammered out that he was a student and had a study that he would much like to show Whistler.

Whistler turned round—"Just wait a minute!" and, rushing back into the room, he turned every picture with its face to the wall and removed from the easel the canvas on which he was engaged. Then, motioning the American in, he sat down and said: "Now, what do you want? You know I'm fearfully busy today, but sit down—sit down."

A Puzzled Artist.

Of unsigned paintings the Dusseldorfer Zeitung tells an amusing story, which may interest picture buyers. Achenbach, the German artist, enjoyed a vogue some years ago. A certain collector had bought from an art dealer a seascape representing what was in good faith considered a genuine Achenbach. Afterward it was pronounced to be a copy. The buyer brought an action against the dealer, who turned the tables by declaring that his picture was genuine and the other was a copy.

Achenbach himself was summoned by the courts to tell which was which. Amazed at the absolute similarity of the two paintings, he gazed at them for a long time, inspected them closely, front and back, sniffed them and then frankly admitted he could not tell which was the original and which the copy.

A Town in the Philippines.

Santo Domingo has a population of about 2,000 and is entirely different from any other town in the Philippines. In the first place, all the buildings are of stone, whitewashed. The roofs are made of cocoa grass, closely trimmed so as to afford no purchase to the severe typhoons which sweep over the islands. The streets are about twelve feet wide, many of them paved with stone. Some walls extend along both sides of the streets their full length, giving them the appearance of lanes. The walls are about three to five feet in height, broken at intervals for entrance to the yards, which in turn are separated from each other by stone walls. Most of the yards are clean and consequently neat and attractive.—Matilda Times.

The White of an Egg.

The white of an egg is made up of little cells filled with albumen. By beating the white these cells are ruptured and oxygen from the air is inclosed, which gives the white and light appearance to beaten eggs. The white of a stale egg will not inclose as much oxygen, will not be as light and as easily digested as that of the fresh egg and, of course, less valuable. The importance of beating the egg in cold, pure air is readily seen.

Complete Lives.

We should all strive to make our lives complete. Many people only half live. *Health without usefulness, intel*lect without unselfishness, pleasure without duty—these are incomplete and unsatisfying elements of living.

How They Do It.

In a hotel in a certain city is the following notice:

"Boots taken by the day, week or month. Those who do not pay promptly are taken by the neck." —Lippincott's.

A Luxury.

"But," objected the heiress, "I have been accustomed to every luxury."

"That's all the more reason why you should marry me," replied the impecunious suitor. "I'm a luxury myself."

Courage.

What one needs to cultivate is a tenacity of purpose that will not quail nor turn aside, a courage that in emergencies dares to separate from the crowd, that never recognizes defeat.

Laughter.

Laughter is recommended as a cure for indigestion. It looks easy to the person who is not afflicted with indigestion.—Toledo Blade.

DR. WILSON FOR MARTINE

HE ASSERTS HIS LEADERSHIP.

Without giving any intimation of his coming Governor-elect Woodrow

Wilson visited Assemblyman Joseph P. Tumulty at his office in Jersey City Friday, and after a conference, in which he sought to familiarize himself with the attitude of the twelve new Assemblymen toward the election of a United States Senator, went to the home of Robert Davis, where he conferred with the Democratic leader of Hudson for half an hour or so.

Neither Dr. Wilson nor Assemblyman Tumulty would discuss what took place at their conference, and Mr. Davis was equally reticent, but it is understood that Mr. Wilson was not at all pleased with the reports concerning the attitude of a number of the twelve Assemblymen-elect from Hudson and had gone to see Mr. Davis to urge him to use his good offices to prevent their voting for the selection of James Smith, Jr., as United States Senator.

Mr. Wilson, it is understood, *explained that he had no personal feel*ing against Mr. Smith, but said that he felt that the Democratic party was bound by the result of the recent primaries and should select Mr. Martine. If any other course were pursued, he is understood to have told Mr. Davis, the Democratic party would be swept out of power on next Election Day and the opportunity for which they had waited so long would be lost.

Just what Mr. Davis said could not be learned, but Mr. Wilson's words evidently set him thinking, for he soon called a conference of all his trusted political advisers to talk the matter over.

It is reliably stated that Wilson "laid down the law" to Davis and asserted himself as the party leader.

Following his conference with Davis, Dr. Wilson went to New York, where he met Assemblymen-elect Geran and Hendrickson. Monmouth, to whom he imparted in no uncertain terms his attitude on the selection of a United States Senator. Later in the evening he conferred with Senator-elect Johnson and Assemblymen-elect Sweetland and Hinson on the same subject, and imparted his views with equal vigor.

Mr. Smith has gone to Old Point Comfort for a week's vacation, and this is looked upon as a sign that there will be "something doing" in connection with the Senatorship shortly. When Mr. Smith went to the United States Senate seventeen years ago, he was enjoying himself at Old Point Comfort, when the news of his selection reached him.

Mr. Wilson is understood to have told Davis that he would not stand by and see Mr. Smith elected. When Mr. Wilson returns the end of next week it is believed he will publicly state that he is for Martine.

MISS ROBSON AND HER COMPANY ENTERTAIN.

May Robson and her company of competent artists met with a warm reception last night in the Plainfield theatre, where "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" took place to the amusement of a house of full of happy folk. Nothing that had been said in the advance notices of Miss Robson's clever impersonation of the Aunt was missing and the play with its side splitting humor seasoned with some real heart touches kept the big audience on the qui vive throughout the evening.

Paul Decker, Jack Story, Arthur Deering and Faye Childs were delightful in their parts. The former as chums and the latter as the girl of all girls for Jack Watkins.

Red Men Visit Plainfield.

The degree team of Opechee Tribe, Improved Order Red Men, of Elizabeth, accompanied by about thirty members, paid a fraternal visit to Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., of this city, Wednesday night, and conferred the warrior's degree on several candidates. Afterward the visitors obligated the chief's degree, and a collation was served. There were about one hundred Red Men present to enjoy the affair.

Pastor and Wife Celebrate.

Rev. Lester D. Leggett, formerly of this city, who has just become the pastor of the Congregational church, Asbury Park, and his wife, celebrated the twelfth anniversary of their wedding at a "get-acquainted" social-able held at the church, last Tuesday night. The couple were the recipients of a dozen beautiful bridal roses, presented by little Miss Mearns on behalf of the Ladies' Guild of the church. Mr. Leggett made a happy response to the presentation speech.

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

The regular meeting of the Board of Freeholders of Union County was held on Thursday, November 3, 1910, at 2:30 P. M.

Roll call showed all members present with the exception of Freeholders Haviland and Randolph.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur the reading of the minutes of the meetings of October 6 and October 11 was dispensed with, the minutes being approved as per printed copies on members' desks.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Communications were received as follows:

From Hyer & Armstrong regarding damage to horse and buggy in Linden Township. The matter was referred to Freeholder Krouse and the County Attorney.

From Short Hills Water Company, requesting permission to lay water pipes on Morris avenue. On motion of Freeholder Wilbur referred to County Road Committee and County Attorney.

From Short Hills Water Company, asking permission to lay pipes on Springfield avenue. On motion of Freeholder Swain referred to Road Committee and County Attorney with power.

From the Township of Cranford: Union County Board of Freeholders.

Gentlemen:—At a meeting of the Township Committee, held this date, you are hereby notified to lay a four (4) foot flagstone walk in front of property owned by you on bridges in Pittsfield street, Orchard street, and Lincoln avenue, within thirty (30) days from the date of this notice, and in accordance with that ordinance governing the laying of sidewalks in the Township of Cranford, a copy of which is printed on the reverse hereof.

A. R. DENMAN,
Township Clerk.

On motion of Freeholder Adams received and placed on files.

Gentlemen—Some three years ago Cranford Township, with the aid of the Union County Board, built a bridge to the line of Clark Township and Springfield avenue to the line of the Town of Westfield.

At the above date, under your direction, both these streets were improved by the amasite process from the point where the Cranford improvement terminated and connected with the county road systems.

This result has been that by reason of your improvement a large amount of automobile travel has been deflected to these thoroughfares not originally intended for a greater wear than ever was anticipated and which will result in an expense to the township to keep them in proper repair.

The matter was discussed at a meeting of the Township Committee held this date, and the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, The automobile travel on Walnut and Springfield avenues has been largely increased by reason of these streets having been connected to the county road system by direction of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, and

"Whereas, this township will be put to an expense to keep them in proper repair because of the additional travel caused by this connection, now therefore be it

"Resolved, That the clerk be and hereby is directed to write to the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders, requesting them to take over and maintain these as a part of the county road system and to join with the township in same, thus forming a continuous county road from Clark to Springfield township."

Respectfully yours,
A. R. DENMAN.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse received and referred to Committee on County Roads.

From W. R. Codington:—

Gentlemen—Believing that you as the board should from time to time be informed as to the litigations in connection with the county matters I take the liberty of sending you herewith a copy of the order denying injunction in the case of the Mayor and Council of the city of Rahway vs. the Board of Freeholders, in an action recently commenced by the city of Rahway against the board in which they filed a bill in the Court of Chancery seeking an injunction restraining the board from elevating the bridge over the Rahway River on Monroe street, in the city of Rahway. A rule to show cause was granted by the Chancellor in said matter. An answer was filed by me on behalf of the board, and after two postponements, the matter finally came on for argument before Vice Chancellor Garrison at Jersey City and the Vice Chancellor decided that the Board of Freeholders could not be enjoined and dismissed the rule to show cause.

The question decided was whether or not the Board of Freeholders had the authority under the law to raise the grade of the bridge and thereby necessitating the filling in and raising the approaches thereto could be done without the consent of the municipal authority of the municipality where said bridge was located, and as above stated, the court decided that the board had jurisdiction over the approaches as well as the bridge and that the judgment in said matters would not be interfered with by the courts.

Another matter in which the Board was interested and defendant was the ejection suit in the Supreme Court, brought by George B. Vanderpool and others against the Board of Freeholders of Union and Morris counties. The declaration in this case was in the first instance demurred to by me on behalf of the board and a demurrer sustained the declaration amended before coming to trial, and the agreement was made between the plaintiff and the boards of Union and Morris counties that it was satisfactory to all parties, and the suit against the county has been discontinued.

Another matter which is now under process is the matter of condemning the lands for the construction of a road running through the lands of Esther J. Foster and others in Springfield Township and the City of Summit. I find, however, upon searching the records that these lands are owned by the children of Jane A. Foster, deceased, and a petition has been prepared for the appointment of commissioners. I have seen some of the heirs, and am inclined to believe that I will be able to secure their consent and possibly avoid the necessity of having their lands condemned by the commissioners. However, I am not sure of this, and in the meantime will proceed with the condemnation proceedings.

I beg to remain,

Very respectfully yours,
W. R. CODINGTON.

Received and placed on file.

Respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH PERRY,
J. H. DOANE,
JACOB MARTIN.

On motion of Freeholder Guerener received and placed on file.

The Auditor's report was as follows:

Gentlemen—Your auditor respectfully reports: I have examined the books and vouchers of the Surrogate, Sheriff Registrar and County Clerk and find the same correct. The fees receipts are: Surrogate, $852.95; Sheriff, $374.47; Registrar, $1,948.16; County Clerk, $306.79, which amount I have turned over to the County Collector.

Yours respectfully,
BENJAMIN KING,
Auditor.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur received and placed on file.

Gentlemen—Your committee on re covering Grant Avenue and on Union avenue, Roselle Park, would report that an examination has been made of the proposed work, and your committee recommends that a new concrete and steel beam top be placed upon the bridge in Grant avenue, at Union avenue, and that a new concrete top re-enforced, be placed upon the small bridge in Union avenue, near Westfield avenue.

The cost of the work not to exceed the sum of $425 for the work on both bridges.

Respectfully submitted,
A. D. CRANE,
JOSEPH PERRY,
ELSTON DARBY.

Freeholder Swain moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted, which on roll call was so ordered.

Gentlemen—Your committee on new culverts in certain streets in Cranford, N. J., would report that the streets have been visited and conditions examined.

Your committee would respectfully recommend that a new iron cover culvert be built across Central avenue at the street for a length of about sixty feet.

Also a new iron top culvert across Cranford avenue at Southern Boulevard, of the same length, sixty feet.

The cost of the work not to exceed the sum of $400 for both culverts.

Respectfully submitted
E. K. DAVIS,
THOMAS HAVILAND,
J. H. HALL.

Freeholder Krouse moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted, which on roll call was so ordered, there being unanimous vote.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to examine into the need for and probable cost of two culverts in Bath avenue, one in Boynton avenue, Westfield, would report having examined the site of the same and find that there is in each instance a kind of ditch or gully existing, and that the Myrtle avenue which is in bad state of repair, it having originally been built, from all appearances, merely as a temporary affair and not much travel on this road and your committee recommends that a new culvert be built at this point at a cost of $275.00, and that in Boynton avenue site we find that the street has not yet been graded and we recommend that action on this culvert be deferred until next year.

C. A. SMITH,
W. J. THOMPSON,
E. K. ADAMS.

Freeholder Swain moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted, which on roll call was so ordered.

Gentlemen—Your committee on Collector's account begs leave to report that it has examined his books, vouchers, coupons, stubs and find the same, bank and check books and find that the same are correct and agree in every particular. We find that his receipts from January 1, 1910, to date amount to $1,406,284.13, and that his disbursements for the same period amount to $1,333,333.13, leaving a balance and cash of $72,950.88, which is deposited in the banks to the credit of the County Collector.

Respectfully submitted.
S. F. T. WILBUR.
W. H. GARRISON.

On motion of Freeholder Jones received and placed on file.

Gentlemen — The undersigned committee, to whom was referred the matter of the complaint of Michael Schenck against the St. Elizabeth Hospital, begs to report:

First. We find upon investigation that said matter should have been brought to the attention of this board, for the reason that the patient entered the said hospital as a private patient and not as a charity patient there appears to have been no grounds for any complaint and we find that the situation was grossly misrepresented to this board by her.

We do therefore recommend that the St. Elizabeth Hospital authorities be exonerated from any censure touching said matter and that the clerk of this board be instructed to so notify the board of governors of said hospital a copy of this report.

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY KROUSE,
W. W. SWAIN,
ADOLPH GRUENER.

November 3, 1910.

On motion of Freeholder Smith received and placed on file.

New Business.

By Freeholder Krouse.

Whereas, on November 18, 1909, the County Collector issued check No. 24089 on the National State Bank to Harry W. Leek, which check was drawn to "Wilson Woods" for services rendered in the election of 1909; and

Whereas, said Harry W. Leek died before said check was cashed;

Whereas, said check has been delivered to the County Collector; and

Whereas, Mary Dunster, mother of said deceased, has made and that no executor or administrator has been appointed and that the estate of Harry W. Leek is not sufficient to pay the funeral expenses of said Harry W. Leek, therefore be it

Resolved, That the County Collector be and he is hereby authorized to pay the same, and the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) to A. M. Runyon & Sons, funeral directors of the said city of Plainfield, to be applied on the funeral expenses of the said Harry W. Leek.

Freeholder Wilbur moved the adoption of the resolution, which was so ordered.

By Freeholder Krouse.

Resolved, That when we adjourn we adjourn until Friday, the eighteenth day of November at 2:30 p. m.

On motion of Freeholder Swain the resolution was adopted.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed with power to investigate the advisability of laying cement or stone sidewalks on the north side of Cranford, namely, Orchard street, Pittsfield street and Lincoln avenue, and should the committee decide to lay the said sidewalks it cost shall not exceed the sum of $110—total cost.

Freeholder Guerener moved the adoption, which on roll call was so ordered. The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Adams, Martin and Swain.

By Freeholder Hall.

Resolved, That a committee of three be apointed to examine the stone arch bridge on South Broad Street just to the north line of Charles French, in the Township of Fanwood, for the purpose of determining the advisability of widening.

Freeholder Swain moved the adoption, which was so ordered. The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Hall Smith and Jones.

By Freeholder Krouse.

Whereas it is deemed important that certain land values should obtain the property adjoining the Courthouse for county purposes, said property being now owned by T. J. Dillon and having about fifty feet front and rear and about 100 feet deep, and

Whereas, an effort has been made to secure the same but no agreement could be reached as to the purchase price thereof, therefore be it

Resolved, That the County Attorney be and hereby is authorized to take the necessary steps to condemn said property and purchase the same for the use of Union.

Freeholder Wilbur moved the adoption, which on roll call was so ordered, there being unanimous vote.

Freeholder Wilbur called the attention of the board to a bill of John F. Kenah, City Clerk of the city of Elizabeth, containing an item for printing ballots charged by the Elizabeth Evening Times was far in excess of other bills for the same kind of work, and moved that the clerk be instructed to return bill for correction, which was so ordered.

Freeholder Krouse moved to adjourn, which was carried. The Director declared the meeting adjourned until Friday, November 18 at 2:30 p. m.

BENJAMIN KING,
Clerk.

FUNERAL OF MRS. SARAH HYLER IS LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral service of Mrs. Sarah Hyler, widow of William Hyler, was held at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, from the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Thomas Nevius, 170 Elmwood place. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. There was also many beautiful floral tributes. Rev. John Y. Brock pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. Hyler had been a member for the past seventeen years, officiated. He read the Scriptures and referred in his remarks to the long and faithful Christian life of the departed.

The burial will be in the family plot at South Branch, today, and the bearers will be Charles Conover, Joseph Randolph, David R. Weaver, John Wyman, William Shafer and Timothy Thorn. Mrs. Hyler was born and lived at South Branch for twenty-eight years, and had been a resident of this city seventeen years.

Chinese Will Recorded.

What is said to be the first will written in Chinese characters ever filed in the office of the surrogate of New York County was deposited there Tuesday by James A. Donegan, a lawyer. It is the will of Pong Wing Wart, otherwise known as Pong Chak. He leaves his entire estate, a comfortable fortune, to Pong Sung Wing, a brother.

P. H. S. DOWNS ALUMNI BY SCORE OF 16 TO 0

That the alumni of the Plainfield High school have not mastered the new rules governing the game of football was apparent Thursday when the regular team of the school put it all over the former students by the score of 16 to 0. The game, however, was fast and clean from start to finish, only two penalties being inflicted for offside plays.

The defeat of the alumni was partly due to lack of practice and partly unfamiliarity with the new rules. They outweighted this year's team, but never put their opponents' goal in danger. The High School scored a field goal and a safety in the second period of play and two touchdowns in the last fifteen minutes. Only one goal was kicked from the two touchdowns.

The line-up was as follows:

High School.		Alumni.
Rosinson		Wilson
	left end
Terry		Carpenter
	left tackle
Moy		Thompson
	left guard
Lindsey		Fleming center
Vighte		Fountain
	right guard
Karr		VanZandt
	right tackle
Hanrahan		K. Phillips
	right end
Clarke		P. Phillips
	quarterback
Bristol		Ricketts
	left halfback
Nash		Snyder
	right halfback
Good		Bingeman
	fullback

At the last moment a game has been arranged for tomorrow between the Holy Cross team and the P. H. S. eleven at Crescent oval at 3:30 in the afternoon. The regular lineup will play for the locals.

URBAN AND SUBURBAN JERSEY.

Announcement of the census figures for Trenton definitely fixes the rank of the ten leading cities in New Jersey according to population. These ten cities with the number of their inhabitants, are:

Newark	347,469
Jersey City	267,779
Paterson	125,600
Trenton	96,815
Camden	94,538
Elizabeth	73,409
Hoboken	70,324
Bayonne	55,545
Passaic	54,778
Atlantic City	44,461

The total population of these ten cities is 1,330,718. It is probable that when the figures of the total population of the State are made public it will be found that the ten cities named contain fully one-half of the people of New Jersey, although they are located within only one-third of the counties of the State.

New Jersey is, therefore, an urban commonwealth as well as a suburban one. Our great centres of population are growing much more rapidly on the average than are the cities of the country generally. The same is true, too, of our smaller municipalities, where the commuter is largely in evidence. Ten of these places from which the census figures have been sent out from Washington show a gain in population of 24 per cent., making the total urban and suburban population of the State so far 1,436,732, with twelve whole counties to be heard from and portions of all of the nine other counties. This gives a fair idea of what the final census will add to the ratio of city dwellers in this State to those who live in the country.

The figures from Trenton qut the capital city firmly in fourth place in New Jersey. The contest between Trenton and Camden for this position had been interesting. For ten years ago Camden led Trenton by 2,628. Five years ago, in the State census, Trenton had overcome the lead and was 817 ahead of Camden. During the past five years this lead has been increased to 2,277, Trenton's percentage of growth during the decade having been 32 against 24 for Camden.

The outcome does not mean that the rivalry will cease or that Trenton an confidently expect to retain the supremacy she has gained. There is sure to be a tunnel under the Delaware River between Camden and Philadelphia in the course of a few years and that will give an impetus to the increase of population of Camden that Trenton will be forced to struggle hard to equal.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HOLD EUCHRE AND DANCE.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, gave a euchre and dance in Sebring's Hall, Wednesday night, it was attended by 150 people. Ten prizes were awarded the players and after the awards were presented dancing was enjoyed. Suhr's orchestra furnished the music.

The committee in charge was composed of J. J. Meany, chairman; C. W. Fogarty, W. F. Schaefer, C. W. Kling and Miles Wilson.

WEST END DEMOCRATS SELECT NEW OFFICERS

The West End Democratic Club does not propose to relax any in its propaganda of the true democratic faith just because of the recent victory of the party at the polls. On the contrary the members propose to become even more active, if that be possible and Friday night voted unanimously to continue in existence and work for the election of James E. Martine to the United States Senate.

W. H. Harding, Clarence Waldron and George Moore were appointed a special committee to boom the club along. A stag euchre party will be held in the club rooms on Thursday evening, December 15.

Resolutions were passed last night endorsing the candidacy of James E. Martine for the U. S. Senate and the officers elected were as follows: President, Edward Fluck; vice-president, John J. Hickey; recording secretary, Thomas J. Monsell; treasurer, John A. Connelly; sergeant at arms, Thomas J. McGrath. The executive committee consists of F. J. Shattle, W. H. Harding and P. J. Reville. The committe having the euchre in charge comprises John Connolly, John Hickey, and Clarence Waldren.

NOISY CELEBRATION ENDS IN POLICE COURT

Thanksgiving impulses aided and abetted by an over indulgence in the cup that inebriates brought about a fracas in Watchung street, Thursday evening in which the china and silverware (?) and a steaming coffee pot were hurled through the air to the imminent peril of witnesses of the hilarity. William Gray, who had gone to George Smith's house to seek one of his boarders, became the target for the missiles and while endeavoring to dodge them struck a woman bystander in the lips.

The Smiths and Mr. Grey were in court this morning and told Judge William N. Runyon all about the trouble. The magistrate listened patiently to their several tales of woe and adjucted the matter by having them all shake hands and promise to avoid each other in future.

FINED FOR TRESPASSING ON BUTTFIELD PROPERTY.

Raymond Hart, of Fairvelw avenue, and William Hudson, of Somerset street, were consigned by Recorder Dolliver in the borough court, Friday night, charged by W. J. Buttfield, of Rockview avenue, with hunting on his private ground. The defendants admitted being on the premises with guns but said they were simply making a short cut to the foot of the mountains. Mr. Buttfield's property has been stocked with various kinds of game and he has gone to great trouble and expense to maintain his privacy consequently made the complaint to protect his rights.

Recorder Dolliver explained to the men that under the law it was not necessary for an owner to post his ground to keep trespassers off and they were guilty as charged. He fined each one $2.

TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATE AT MRS. SCRIBNER'S FUNERAL.

The funeral service of Mrs. William Scribner was held at the late home on Front street, Wednesday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. Edward Fluck, of the borough, had charge of the service.

Dr. Zelie read the Sriptures and made a few remarks concerning the exemplary Christian life of the departed and of her devotion to her home and church, while Dr. Campbell offered prayer. There was a large and beautiful display of floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Leander N. Lovell John Leal, John F. Harman, William D. Murray, Dr. Ells W. Hedges and Andrew J. Gavett.

Planning for Water Plant.

A meeting was held at Lebanon Wednesday, to further the interest of the installation of a water plant for Lebanon and Whitehouse. Some New York and Hunterdon county business men and Ira L. LaRue, of this city, are at the head of this needed improvement. Mr. LaRue is president of a company that own a flour mill and the water rights at Lebanon and another mill and the water rights at Glen Gardner.

Rev. Mr. Stout to Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Peterson have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ellen Surran Peterson, and Rev. Royal Arthur Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church. The wedding will take place at the above church, Thursday evening, December 8, at 7:30 o'clock, and Rev. P. T. Fockman, of New Brunswick, will perform the ceremony. They will reside at the parsonage near the Netherwood Reformed church.

NATURE'S WAY WITH BOYS

The Little Savage by Judicious Training Becomes the Gentleman.

THE CULTURE OF COURAGE.

Whipping Bruises Heart of Lad, While a Fight Sometimes Strengthens It—Some Examples.

"The Problem of Fighting and the Culture of Courage" was the subject which Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews discussed before a large audience of mothers in the Young Men's Christian Association auditorium Friday afternoon. In addition to the lecture, Mr. Mathiews exhibited an extensive array of pictures, posters and calendars, as suggestions for a boy's Christmas gift. His remarks were the result of a special study on the question of "How can we make girls count in the moral life of the lad."

The remarks of yesterday were prefaced with a statement of the conclusions of the last discussion which showed that nature demanded first of all strength and that the study of the problem of fighting is a study of a process. It is an examination of how Nature would make a man. First the man and later the gentleman. First strength and then beauty and nobility and then the noble loyal gentleman. The speaker quoted Dr. Dallinger as saying that if he crushed the fighting instinct we get the coward; if we allow this instinct to run wild we have the bully and the brute; if we train the instinct we have the strong controlled man.

The boys are often referred to as "little savages" and from their reactions and their pastimes and their imaginations they are so called in a truthful sence. They prove over and over each day the theory of race recapitulation. In very many things the boys see in these youngsters going through in their lives the same experiences through which the race has passed. This idea is practically accepted today but what are we to do about it?

Understanding the fighting instinct Dr. Baillet has said that we get the coward but we really get more than the coward because we retard a natural sense of justice and right, and destroy this elemental moral instinct. "Fighting," said the speaker, "is nature's help in the development of the boy—it is nature's corporal punishment. The whipping that one boy receives from another brings with it a respect for the victor and often a keener sense of the weaknesses inflicted, while the vain and the stubborn boys are the ones who are punished by parents and adults. They are whipped because of the greater strength of the adult, and this is what bruises the heart of the lad.

"It is taking advantage of the youngster and he knows it. One boy meets another boy and his own level and in the defeat all that remains is the whipping but when punished by the adult there is the sting of being dealt, with in an unjust and unfair manner. We must find the boy's level. This was illustrated by a story of a group of boys who wrote on the blackboard "our teacher is a donkey." The teacher was wise enough to turn the tide in their own level and wrote after the sentence the word "driver." Continuing, Mr. Mathiews said, "The boy between the ages of ten and fifteen has physical ideals. His heroes are Indians and cowboys and pirates and gigolists. Show them what the qualities are that make the fighter: The control, the training, the judgment, the strength and the mighty qualities that are possessed by the fighter are of value.

"It is nature's way to take one thing at a time. The growth of the brain follows the strength of the body. First comes the selfish selfcentered lad 'the ego,' then the gang spirit, the boy is fighting for a team or a school. He becomes more careful of his personal appearance. He falls in love. His sympathies go out. He stands a man among men and the kind and quality of man depends largely on the kind of a boy he was."

In closing, the Christ life was held up, as the ideal life of the true, loving gentleman.

"The Educational Value of Play and Its Moral Benefits" will be the subject of the afternoon of next week. On this afternoon there will be displayed a larger suggestive collection of books as gifts for boys.

MISS GENEVIEVE CLINE THE BRIDE OF HARRY F. LUNGER.

Miss Genevieve Cline, of Phillipsburg, and Harry F. Lunger, son of Mrs. George Lunger, of Mountain avenue, were married Wednesday afternoon by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. The ceremony was performed at "The Bristol." The couple was accompanied by the groom's mother and Mortimer Cook, of Phillipsburg, a brother of the bride.

The couple will spend their honeymoon in Boston, and upon their return will reside at 15 Grove street. The groom, who has lived in Plainfield nearly all his life, is employed by the Spicer Universal Manufacturing Company.

The Constitutionalist

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., November 24, 1910

N. Y AMUSEMENTS.

The great success of Douglass Fairbanks in "The Cub," Thompson Buchanan's merry satire on the feuds of the Kentucky mountaineers, at the Comedy Theatre, New York, would warrant the continuance of the attraction at this house for an indefinite period. Previous bookings, however, compel the removal of "The Cub" to another house, and it opened at the Circle, Broadway and Sixtieth Street, next Monday evening, November 28, for a limited engagement of one week. No comedy seen in New York in recent season has created more laughing discussion than this delightful satire, and as Steve Oldham, the "cub" reporter, assigned to "cover" the feud of the White and Renlow factions, Fairbanks is inimitable. There are thirty-six people in the cast, including Millicent Evans, Charles Stanley, James A. Marcus and other well-known players.

The demand for seats for New Year's Eve at the different Shubert theatres in New York City has already become so great that special provision has been made for taking and handling the orders. Applications for New Year's Eve reservations have already come in to the various box offices, not only from people residing in New York, but also from people living in cities all over the country who expect to be in the metropolis during the holiday time. The Shubert theatres in New York City proper are Daly's, Herald Square, Broadway, Casino, Nazimova's 39th street, Maxine Elliott's, Comedy, Lyric, Hackett, Circle and West End.

When you go to New York, don't fail to see "The Girl in the Taxi" at the Astor Theatre, New York. Carlyle Conan, Frank Farrington, Jr., Jules Cluzzetti and others participate in the fast moving hilarity with which the piece is crowded. Fun is the keynote. The fun is fast and furious. It begins the moment the curtain rises on the first act, when "the girl in the taxi" and young Bertie Stewart are introduced for the first time. It continues to the second act where Bertie keeps his first midnight appointment with the "taxi girl" and endeavors to buy her a $60 supper with but $10 in his pockets. This scene is one of the screaming incidents of the piece.

FORTY HOURS' DEVOTION AT ST. MARY'S, MARCH 5

Last Sunday being the last Sunday of Advent and the beginning of the ecclesiastical year, the Rt. Rev. John J. O'Connor, bishop of the Diocese of Newark, followed the annual custom and celebrated a pontifical high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, to mark the beginning of the forty hours' devotion throughout the diocese for the coming year.

According to a rescript of February 28, 1851, Pope Pius IX, extended to the faithful of the Diocese of Newark all indulgences and other spiritual favors attached to this devotion in the city of Rome. These indulgences are as follows: A plenary indulgence is granted to those who, having made a good confession and communion, visit the church where the devotion of the forty hours is celebrated and spend some time in prayer before the blessed sacrament; a partial indulgence is granted to those who, during the exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, visit the church, renewing at each visit their intention of going to confession.

By an early rescript issued May 12, 1817, by Pope Pius VII., these indulgences are applicable to the souls in Purgatory.

According to the schedule prepared by the Rev. Charles A. Smith, chancellor of the diocese, the devotion will be held in St. Mary's church, here, on March 5.

REV. F. B. NEWMAN RESIGNS PASTORATE OF CHURCH.

Rev. Fred B. Newman, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Newman, of West Fifth street, who has been pastor of the East Trenton Presbyterian church, Trenton, has tendered his resignation, to take effect on December 1, he having accepted a call from the Presbyterian church, of Tunkhannon, Pa., a congregational meeting has been called when official action will be taken on the resignation.

Mr. Newman took the pastorate of the Trenton church, May 24, 1901, immediately following his graduation from the Union Theological Seminary. The church has enjoyed great prosperity during his pastorate in Trenton and there is deep regret over his resignation.

PARENTS HEAR SHE WAS MARRIED SECRETLY

Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, of 926 West Third street, received a letter Monday from her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Frances Porter, that she was married in New York on Saturday, to David Shay, formerly of this city, and that she and her husband were spending their honeymoon in Washington. The missive did not state by whom thy were married, or where the ceremony took place. The announcement came as a surprise, although the bride's family knew that she expected to wed in the near future.

The bride was employed as chief operator at the local exchange of the New York Telephone Company for several years and she was in her position up to Saturday noon, when she left Plainfield for New York for the purpose of getting married.

The groom is well-known here, having formerly been employed as steward at the Plainfield Country Club. Later he held a similar position in one of the coasting steamships plying between New York and the south. At present he is an assistant clerk at the Cadillac Hotel, Broadway and 43d street, New York. The couple will reside at the hotel upon their return from Washington.

VESTRYMEN CHOSEN AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Vestrymen and delegates were elected at the annual parish meeting at Holy Cross church Monday. The rector Rev. George A. Warner, presided. Dr. J. H. Carman was chosen senior warden and Charles L. Nichols junior warden. The other members of the vestry selected were William L. Saunders, J. B. Betts, J. A. VanMater, Herbert E. Langford and J. Wesley Hegeman.

These were selected as diocesan convention delegates: J. B. Betts, J. A. VanMater and H. E. Langford, with J. Oscar Stevens, H. P. Henriques and J. W. Hegeman. Douglas Anderson and Harry M. Sanderson were chosen as convocation delegates.

Great Was the Fall.

If a fellow cannot carry a stove on his shoulders on a slippery sidewalk should he not either leave the stove at home or wear rubbers? Somebody attempted the impossible feat of doing the trick last night and fell against a window of Louis Moledesky's store on Somerset street with unfortunate results. The man returned after a while and told Mr. Moledesky that he would pay for the damage he had caused.

FRANK S. NEAL DEAD; HE HAD LONG BEEN ILL

Frank S. Neal, aged fifty-seven years, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Nal, died Monday at his home, 556 West Front street, following a long illness from tubercular trouble. Although he had not been well for some time it was only since Thanksgiving Day that he was confined to his home, and since that time he failed rapidly.

Mr. Neal was a native of Plainfield and always lived here. Many years ago he was engaged in the butcher business, but during recent years he lived in retirement. He was a member of the First Baptist church, where he was an attendant. He is survived by a wife ,two sons, Frank A. and William Edward Neal and one daughter, Miss Florence Neal. The funeral service was private.

Mayor Fisk Will Take Part.

The thirty-fifth anual meeting of the New Jersey Sanitary Association will be held at The Laurel-in-the-Pines, Lakewood, Friday and Saturday, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges is chairman of the executive council and Mayor C. J. Fisk is also a member of the council. Saturday morning, Mr. Fisk will speak on the topic, "Value of Health Boards to Communities." Dr. B. VanD. Hedges is also a member of the committee on the education and training of health. By direction of the State Board of Health, the annual conference of members of health board and delegates of local boards of health will merged with the meeting at Lakewood.

Colonel Patrick in Bermuda.

Colonel Mason Patrick, U. S. A., of the Board of Engineers, who will succeed Colonel Goethal of the Maine, is the guest, while in Bermuda, of Edmund G. Vaughn, at Villa Buena Vista. Colonel Patrick is the son-in-law of Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, of Rockview terrace, and his wife and son are stopping with Mrs. Cooley during the Colonel's absence.

Rev. Maguire Pleased Them.

Rev. Gabriel Reed Maguire will lecture in Dr. Eaton's church, the Madison Avenue Baptist, New York, tonight, on "Among the Cannibals on the Upper Congo... Mr. Maguire lectured in the church some time ago and was so greatly enjoyed an invitation to return was extended.

DR. WILSON WARNS SMITH

Governor-Elect Notifies Editor-Boss That People's Will Must Prevail.

HE IS FIRMLY FOR MARTINE.

State's Next Executive Will Take the Stump if Necessary to Save the Party From Violation of Its Pledges.

Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson before leaving for Louisville, Ky., Monday to attend the conference of Governors this week, served notice upon ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., that he does not intend to consent to Mr. Smith's re-election to the United States Senate. The notice was in the form of a letter, courteous but none the less firm, which Mr. Wilson sent to Mr. Smith and the knowledge that the Governor-elect intends to take the matter into his own hands has brought both factions the friends of Smith and the friends of James E. Martine, who is the choice of the people as reflected in the recent direct primaries for the Senatorship, into the open. The fight is now on in earnest and with Governor-elect Wilson and his following solid against Mr. Smith there is every prospect that he will not go to Washington.

Dr. Wilson's attitude in deciding to take up the cudgels against Smith has cleared the political atmosphere somewhat and has made every one realize that the former President of Princeton University has now absolutely assumed the leadership of the Democratic party in New Jersey.

Dr. Wilson would not discuss either the letter which he sent Mr. Smith or the United States Senatorship for publication, but those close to him said that the Governor-elect's fighting blood was up and that he was determined to see that the will of the people as expressed at the polls shall be carried out.

Nor would either Dr. Wilson or Mr. Smith discuss the public letter.

Dr. Wilson is taking the attitude that the people of New Jersey at the direct primaries expressed themselves as being in favor of the appointment of Mr. Martine, and he doesn't propose that the Legislature shall be free to send some one else to Washington just because this person has influence at Trenton. The selection of Mr. Smith, under the circumstances, Governor-elect Wilson believes would be one of the hardest blows ever directed against popular government in the history of the country.

Mr. Smith's followers plainly let it be known last night that they would resent what they term Dr. Wilson's unnecessary interference with the powers of the Legislature. It is for the Legislature to say who shall represent the people of New Jersey at Washington, and not the Governor, they argue. In fact, they are making open threats that by fixing the stand he does, Governor-elect Wilson has thrown away any chance he might have had for obtaining the Presidential nomination in 1912.

Ex-Senator Smith, they say, was willing to throw all his prestige to-ward having Dr. Wilson made the choice of the New Jersey delegation to the National Convention if he would keep his hands off the United States Senatorship. So much, in fact, was conveyed to Dr. Wilson, but it didn't seem to impress him very strongly. In fact, he turned down the proposal coldly, and only waited for the opportunity to put himself on record regarding his feelings in the matter.

Only the other day a close friend was talking to Dr. Wilson about his attitude toward the Senatorship, and the Governor-elect told him how he had been served with a notice that the Presidential nomination might possibly go to him of he did not oppose the re-election of Senator Smith.

"I told my informant," Dr. Wilson is quoted as saying, "that I would not have another happy day as long as I lived if I went against the dictates of my reason and conscience in this matter. Not even a Presidential nomination is a large enough inducement to cause me to forsake the cause of popular government. I am against Smith and have told him so."

When the emissaries of Mr. Smith reminded the Governor-elect that he might be criticised for assuming a power which might more properly be left to the Legislature he replied that he had made up his mind that he was working for the cause of good government in opposing Mr. Smith, and he thought that if he explained this to the people they would understand his motives and back him up.

Having definitely decided to oppose Smith, Dr. Wilson does not intend to let the matter rest there. He will take the stump, it was said last night, and make speeches in every county in the State, explaining his attitude, and try and force the public to take the same view of the situation as he does, with a view of having the people insist upon the right kind of service from the legislators.

It was rumored last night that ex-Senator Smith had decided to retire from the race now that Dr. Wilson had come out in the open against him. He is down South at present, but his close friends denied the rumor. They say he has no thought of retiring.

FOR WHITE PLAGUE CAMP

Freeholders Committee Finds Site Near Scotch Plains Most Suitable.

A DECISION ON THURSDAY.

The Tract Consists of 135 Acres and May Be Purchased for $20,000—It is Considered An Ideal Location.

The committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders appointed for the purpose of recommending a suitable site for the establishment of a proposed tuberculosis camp made a tour of inspection of three proposed location Monday one on the mountains near Scotch Plains, one at Westfield and one at Roselle being viewed. J. Hervey Doane, of this city, is chairman of the committee, and he was accompanied by the other members of the committee.

It is said that a majority of the committee favors the site at Scotch Plains. This comprises 135 acres, is one mile from town. It is easy access to the trolley. Among the other advantages are a stream, two fresh water and one mineral spring on the property affording an opportunity for pure fresh water; also the making of ice in the winter time.

There is also abundant room for raising vegetable products, which is considered a big advantage. It is about 400 feet above sea level. There is now a building on the property, which, it is said, could be used for administration purposes until such time as sufficient funds are in hand to erect other structures. The committee was offered the owners $20,000 for the tract. The matter will come up for a decision at the meeting of the Board of Freeholders on Thursday.

The sites at Westfield and Roselle are not considered so favorably because the ground is low and flat and does not begin to have the advantages to be found in the one at Scotch Plains.

IMPORTANT CODICIL TO MR. MARSH'S WILL

The will of Craig A. Marsh contained an important codicil, it providing that should he and his wife die close together the estate should be divided equally between his brother and sister.

This is the provision:

"Should my wife and I both die in consequence of the same shipwreck, railway collision or other accident, or should we die within a period of six months of each other from any cause whatsoever, then the whole of my property, real, personal and mixed shall after the payment of the legacies specified in said will, be applied first to the proper support and maintenance of my said wife during such time, if any, of said six months in which she shall survive me, and next be divided equally betwen my brother Warren H. Marsh and my sister Ada Grace Marsh, share and share alike, to have and to hold the same to them their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns forever."

EFFINGHAM PINTO IN "THE DUCHESS OF SUDS"

When "The Duchess of Suds" makes her bow to a Plainfield audience next Tuesday evening, the probabilities are that she will face one of the largest gatherings of people ever congregated in the Plainfield Theatre. Henrietta Crossman, whose fame is world wide has an organization which is recognized to be the best appearing in any play now before the public. One of the actors in the Duchess is Effingham Pinto, son fo Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pinto, of West Eighth street, who has made his mark in the theatrical world.

Mr. Pinto first became prominent in this city as an amateur of undoubted ability and later in professional company secured for himself a permanent place in the affections of his townsmen by his effective work in the Weber production of "The Climax" which had such a phenomenal run in every part of the country. With Miss Crossman's company, Mr. Pinto has the part of Marques Ramon Iriarte which it is said he handles with consummate ability. Others in the cast are Herbert Johnson, Stephen Wright, Alice Baxter, Nora Donar and other favorites. The production is a sumptuous one and contains about twenty-five speaking parts.

Will Address the Elks.

Rev. O. J. Shoop, of Grace M. E. church, has accepted an invitation from the Port Jervis, N. Y., lodge of Elks, to deliver the address at the memorial exercises next Sunday night. Mr. Shoop was made an honorary members of the organization during his pastorate in Port Jervis, several years ago.

FOR TUBERCULOSIS FIGHT

Red Cross Society to Sell 100,000,000 Seals to Aid in Welfare.

A BIG ARMY IS ENGAGED.

Local Society to Put 40,000 Seals on Sale December 1.—Public and Sunday Schools to Help.

The National Red Cross Society is making efforts this year to eclipse the record for the Christmas sale of their seals made last year. There are hopes of selling at least one hundred million of the little reminders the net income from which will be devoted to fight against tuberculosis throughout the country, or at least in forty of the forty-eight States.

The allotment to this city will be about 40,000 seals (they are not stamps any more) and they will be put on sale in all the drug stores, stationery emporiums, public schools and Sunday-schools and stores. This year the local anti-tuberculosis society will be allowed to retain all but twelve and a half per cent. of all their sales for the prosecution of the warfare against the great white plague and it is hoped that the public will take enough interest in the work to make it necessary for the society to send for an additional supply of seals.

Organization along the lines of best co-operation in the sale of the seals has been perfected. The national association is sending out 75,000,000 seals which will be put on sale in forty States. Of these forty States thirty have organized for the sale of the seals and an army of 50,000 men, women and children are going to work tooth and nail to make the sale a success.

The local society is bending every effort toward a systematic activity which is bound to produce results. Notwithstanding the fact that Postmaster General Frank Hitchcock has issued an edict that the sale of the seals in the postoffices of the country, this will not be done here as, in the opinion of the society, the work can be accomplished without interfering with the business of the postoffice which such a scheme would doubtless do.

Reports from other cities all over the country show that unusual interest has been aroused among the people in the fight being waged against the disease which the National Red Cross Society is trying to stamp out. The various exhibits which have been sent to the different cities for the purpose of educating the people in cleanliness and care has awakened them to the posibilities of eradicating to a large extent the disease, especially in localities where its propagation results from indifference to personal cleanliness and lack of proper air to breathe. The statistics taken from localities where the fight has been made show that the disease can be controlled if proper measures are taken. First, preventive and then curative methods bring results which two years ago were deemed improbable.

The seals, of which the cut is a facsimile, will go on sale on Thursday, December 1, and the local society hopes that Plainfield people will be liberal purchasers. The objective point in the sale of these stamps is the $1,000,000 mark and it behooves Plainfield to do its part. Every seal bought means another bullet shot into the body of the disease.

Will Hold a Tea.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church a tea will be held Friday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Henry A. McGee, of Oddhard place. Useful articles, cake and home-made candy will be on sale and a silver offering will be received. The proceeds will go toward the fund for the improvements in Vincent chapel.

Women's Board Thankful.

The Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital wishes to thank all who sent donations to the harvest home festival, held at the Nurses' Home, November 17. The contributions from the schools of Plainfield and North Plainfield were very generous, and the board greatly appreciates the interest of teachers and pupils.

Stevenson-Van Duzen.

Miss Edith Van Duzen, formerly a school teacher in this city, became the bride of William Stephenson, of Glenns Falls, N. Y., last Wednesday, at Glenns Falls. Mr. Stephenson is a well-known business man of that city.

BARELY ESCAPES BITE FROM HUGE TARANTULA

Tony Lusardi, Jr., the well known fruit dealer, whose place of business is at Front and Somerset streets narrrowly escaped being bitten by a huge tarantula Monday afternoon He was unpacking a barrel of bananas and put his hand in the grass filling to pull up a bunch. As it came to light he discovered the poisonous spider in a recess less than an inch from his fingers. He quickly shifted his grasp and shook the tarantula to the floor, where it was dispatched.

It is not an uncommon thing to find trantulas in newly arrived bananas, but Mr. Lusardi declares that in all his experience he never encountered one as large as that of yesterday. It was just a trifle short of being the size of a small shedder crab.

If Mr. Lusardi's hand had come in contact with it serious results might have followed as the bite of the insect is deadly unless prompt medical aid is secured.

WASHINGTON, D. C. COUPLE MARRIED IN PLAINFIELD

Miss Mora Cary Mattell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mattell, and Harrington Seymoure Plager, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Plager, both of Washington, were married on Monday night at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel O. Rush, 257 Leland avenue, only the immediate relatives and a few friends being present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Royal A. Stout, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church.

The bride was attended by her aunt, Mrs. Samuel O. Rush, as matron-of-honor, and her twin-sister, Miss Lillian M. Mattell, as bridesmaid. Samuel O. Rush was the best man. The bride's gown, of plain pearl satin, belonged to her mother's trousseau, when she was a bride, and it was always the desire of the daughter that she wear this gown when she was married. The twin-sister wore a gown of white messaline, while the matron-of-honor was gowned in pink silk.

The house was attractively decorated with carnations and greens, the decorative scheme being carried out in the parlor and dining-room. Following the ceremony an informal reception was held and supper was served. The bride received a large collection of gifts. The couple will return to Washington on Saturday, where the groom holds a position as assistant manager for the Sealed Package Ice Company.

The bride has lived in Washington since a child, while the groom is a native of the Capitol City. Both enjoy a large acquaintance. The bride's parents have lived here and Mr. Rush and for that reason planned to have the wedding in this city.

POINTING TO DISTINCTION.

The man was 'mongst our foeman bold
Is the leader of the crew;
Who has their speeches well controlled,
And tells them what to do—
Though he will face the fight alone,
And let no threats appall him,
With indignation in our tone,
"A boss," we coolly call him.
But one who to our cause is bound,
Though he vociferate,
And order us like serfs around
To help him rule the State—
Although his aspect may seem grim
To you, oh gentle reader,
We have another name for him,
He is "our peerless leader."

MACHINISTS IN SESSION

Hear Lively Speech From Organizer, Stuart Reid, for Better Conditions.

NO "FULL DINNER PAIL."

Wants the Skilled Mechanic to Eat at Table Like Other Humans.

—New Members Added to Lodge.

If there are any machinists still not members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 167, I. A. M., today it is not the fault of Stuart Reid, an organizer, connected with the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Reid made an impassioned speech to local machinists Monday in the Eagles' hall in which he declared that the organization was "tired of the political buncombe of the 'full dinner pail.' What they want now and mean to get is the privilege of being civilized beings and to eat at a table."

Mr. Reid confesses to have been at one time a staff correspondent for a big New York newspaper and during his years of experience has had the newspaper instinct so developed that he observes and remembers things. He gave every evidence of the truth of this observation last evening.

The speaker was introduced by Hugh V. Reilly, a deputy district manager, who said that if any of the half hundred men present entertained any prejudices against the unions with which the various trades were connected that they lay them aside for the time being and listen carefully to the reasoning of Brother Reid, who would show them why they ought to stick together to have higher wages and shorter hours.

Mr. Reid's speech was devoted to the men who are already members of the union, but he declared that those who were outside the fold could listen, with profit to themselves and perhaps decide that they would better join and enjoy the just fruits of their labors. Several took the chance to add their names to the roll at the close of the speech.

Speaking of the beginning of the union Mr. Reid said that it started like all other things in a small way in the south in 1882, but like all good things had grown with the country. "Even the great North did not know that we had organized until I came up here and told them about it," he said. After a detailed account of his early experiences and early struggles in behalf of the machinists of the southland, Mr. Reid said that there were two classes of labor unions, those composed of union men and members of the union. He made a nice distinction between the two. The first, he declared, to be the man who kept his dues paid up and who looked for the union label on his clothing, shoes and other purchases and who always was an active participant in the deliberations of the lodge with which he was affiliated. The other class is the man who stays away from meetngs on the plea that he cannot talk. "This latter class," said Mr. Reid, "should be put in the class with wallflowers. If you are to be consistent members see to it that the men you employ also carry their cards, by that I mean see that the union label is on your coat, vest, your cigars and your shoes and anything else you buy, for by that means you are actively engaged in supporting your union as well as others.

"The machinist is an intelligent man. In fact he has more than the average intelligence. He exercises a wonderful amount of intelligence and skill every working hour of the day, but he should not put that intelligence away in his tool box when he quits work at night. He ought to use it outside working hours also for his own benefit. If he does not do this he is untrue to himself. Of course, he must and does give every bit of his skill and brain work to his employers during shop hours. He would be unfaithful to his employers if he did not, but that is no reason why his intelligence should be entirely submerged in the work he is doing for others.

"We have got beyond the stage of the 'full dinner pail.' We want to be rid of that old political buncombe. We want and will live like human beings and sit at table like other folks and you men here tonight can make this possible for yourselves if can see the wisdom of co-operation. Don't be afraid to vote for new men. Vote for the men who will do your bidding in our legislative halls and eventually you will get what we are all after, equality and justice."

Mr. Reid was frequently interrupted by applause and it was evident that he had made a great impression on his hearers.

Frauds In Measure.

J. B. R. Smith, Deputy Secretary of State, is preparing a bill for introduction into the next Legislature providing for a State Bureau of Weights and Measures. The proposed law if enacted will be aimed to remedy the conditions exposed by the recent report of the Robert L. Stevens Fund for Municipal Research. The proposed bill will provide for two State inspectors, and will supply drastic regulations to overcome the fraud and deceit in weights and measures that is alleged to prevail in all parts of the State.

TO STUDY "FIRST AID"

Ten Weeks' Course to be Given at Young Women's Christian Association.

CERTIFICATES FOR CANDIDATES

Instruction to Be Practical and Inexpensive—Local Physicians to Assist in Teaching.

A course in "First Aid to the Injured" will be given at the Young Women's Christian Association, beginning immediately after the holidays. Women or girls who are interested in such a course are requested to have their names at the association rooms so that a convenient day and hour may be appointed for the meeting.

The course will cover about ten weeks and will consist of lectures by local physicians, with practice-work and demonstrations by each student. At the end of the course there will be an examination prepared by the American Red Cross Society. Successful candidates after trying this examination, will be awarded a joint certificate of the American Red Cross and the National Board of the Y. W. C. A.

The course has been carefully outlined by Major Lynch, of the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army, and is designed to provide for demonstrations and frequent oral tests in addition to the necessary lectures.

The aim is to qualify girls and women to act in cases of injury, accident or sudden illness in absence of a physician or trained nurse; and to give such working knowledge of emergency treatment as may be needed daily in the home, office or workroom.

The cost of the course will simply be enough to cover the cost of examination paper, a small first aid outfit and the small edition of the National Red Cross text book on first aid.

The course is to be very practical and, in brief, will take up the following subjects in lectures and practical work:

I. The Object of First Aid—"The anatomy of the digestive apparatus" (in brief); relief for acute indigestion, colic, cramp, vomiting, etc; use of internal remedies. II. Emergency in circulatory and respiratory mishaps, choking croup, drowning, bleeding, etc. III. Anatomy of circulation and respiration; wounds in general, infections, etc.; dressing of wounds. IV. The skeleton and muscles; fractures, dislocations, sprains, etc.; application of splints and bandages. V. The Nervous System—Unconsciousness fits, sunstroke, hysterical attacks, etc.; emergency treatment of each. VI. Common emergencies; burns, scalds, swallowing of poisons; stings, bites, etc. VII. The sick room; preparation for surgeon, warming and mittstring pulse, feeding, baths, disinfection, etc.

Many physicians have already expressed their approval and willingness to assist in such a course. The arrangements are in the hands of the chairman of the physical committee, Miss Margaret McCutcheon, and Dr. Clara Krans, and the physical director of the local association. It is hoped that many women and girls of Plainfield will avail themselves of this opportunity and make known their desire to register in an afternoon or evening class.

ELIZABETH UNITED DOWN PLAINFIELD SOCCER TEAM

The fast team work of the Elizabeth United was too much for the Plainfield F. C. eleven Saturday in a close soccer match played on the Walnut street grounds at Elizabeth. The home team defeated the visitors by a final score of 2 to 1. Plainfield's backs put up a very clever defensive game and time and again managed to repulse the driving attack of the swift United forwards. Henderson made the first score for the Uniteds by bounding a pass into the goal with his head just before time was called for the first half. Stirruck made the other tally for the home team. The Plainfield goal was scored by Sutton. The line-up:

United F. C.		Plainfield F. C.
Crombie	goal	F. Smith
Thomas	right fullback	Craig
Mitchell	right halfback	Crawford
Kershaw	centre halfback	Hoole
G. Elliott	left halfback	McCombie
Crouthers	right wing	Spaulding
Hemphill	right wing	Briedwood
Henderson	centre	Hearne
Savage	left wing	Mackie

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF MT. OLIVE CHURCH

The fortieth anniversary of the Mt. Olive Baptist church began Sunday and will be continued for one week. The opening service yesterday morning was marked by an able sermon by the pastor, Rev. M. W. Vaughan, upon the stability of the church. In the evening, Rev. Dr. William P. Lawrence, pastor of the Union Baptist church, Orange, and president of the Afro-American Baptist Sunday-school Convention of New Jersey, delivered an excellent address, taking for his subject, "Does the Church Keep Pace With the Twentieth Century?" after which Prof. Clarence C. Clark sang a solo.

A history of the church was then read by William A. Kline, church clerk; also calling the roll of the charter members of which Smith V. Wyckoff, of Plainfield avenue, is still an active member. The pastor had Mr. Wyckoff come forward and he spoke of the many hardships that the Mt. Olive Baptist church have passed through. Mr. Wyckoff was congratulated by the pastor and all present upon his loyalty to principle. The pastor predicted that all bodies which have stood the test formerly experienced are at an end and the gospel from now on would be preached as never before. He also praised the members for remaining faithful.

The historical sketch of the church showed that a recognition council convened in the First Baptist church, April 5, 1870, and publicly constituted the Mount Olive Baptist church, of Plainfield, N. J., with the following named persons, the original number being nine:

Rev. Joseph Carey, Marshall Brown, from Yorktown, Va.; Charlotte Brown; Celia Brown, of New York city; Robert Randolph, Lot Manning, Sarah A. Manning, Jeremiah Blair, of Samptown; Elmira Blair, of New Market.

The following persons constituted the council for the purpose of organizing the Mount Olive Baptist church: Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, pastor; Deacon Elston March and William White, of the First Baptist church; Rev. C. E. Young, Deacon Reune Runyon, of the Second Baptist church; Rev. S. L. Cox, of the Samptown church; Rev. Peter L. Quicksville, of the New Market Baptist church; Rev. R. L. Perry, of New York city. Rev. Mr. Young was made moderator of the council and Rev. Dr. Perry, clerk.

After examination and recognition vote had been agreed to by the council, a sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. R. L. Perry; recognition prayer by Rev. Mr. Yerkes; hand of fellowship by Rev. L. O. Grenelle. Since that time the following pastors have been in charge of the church:

Revs. John Carey, William A. Birch, R. N. Fairfax, J. W. Mitchell, F. G. Warnock, P. H. Gibson, E. E. Jackson, M. A. Alexander, and the present pastor, Rev. M. W. Vaughan, who during his two years as pastor here, has built up a fast growing interest in all branches of the church.

The following members of the First Baptist church were dismissed on April 6, 1840 and the next day united with the Mt. Olive Baptist church:

MISS EVELYN HILLMAN DIED OF HEART TROUBLE

Miss Evelyn Hillman, aged about 17 years, daughter of Mrs. Sarah K. Hillman, of 425 Madison avenue, died at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, following a long illness with heart trouble. She frequently suffered severe attacks and yesterday morning she was taken with convulsions, one following another, until the young woman was completely exhausted and became unconscious.

Miss Hillman was born here and always lived in this city. She was talented as a musician and singer and had a large circle of friends. She attended the public schools, going as far as the grammar school, when on account of ill-health she was compelled to give up her studies. Miss Hillman was a member of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school, being a regular attendant at both. Last summer she spent about a month at Lake Hopatcong and the change seemede to be beneficial. She is survived by her mother and one brother, Herbert Hillman. The funeral services will be held at the residence of her mother, 425 Madison avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Declares for Martine.

The Woodrow Wilson Democratic Association of Trenton, has passed resolutions requesting the Democratic majority in the Legislature to vote for James E. Martine as the popular primary choice for United States Senator.
